

5.25.04.

Library of the Theological Seminary,
PRINCETON, N. J.

Presented by President Patton

Division BS2420

Section 2.348

1.) 2

THE GOSPEL HISTORY:

BEING

A Complete Connected Account

OF

THE LIFE OF OUR LORD,

WOVEN FROM THE TEXT OF THE FOUR EVANGELISTS,

WITH NOTES, ORIGINAL AND SELECTED; AND INDEXES OF TEXTS AND TOPICS.

BY

JAMES R. GILMORE,

("EDMUND KIRKE,")

Author of "The Life of Jesus according to His Original Biographers," "Among the Pines," etc., etc.,

AND

LYMAN ABBOTT, D.D.,

Author of "Jesus of Nazareth, His Life and Teachings," and a Series of "Commentaries on the New Testament."

NEW YORK:

FORDS, HOWARD & HULBERT.

1881.

Copyright, A.D. 1880.

By JAMES R. GILMORE.

PREFACE.

THIS volume has grown up in the following manner : Many years since, to acquire a more connected view of the life of Christ than can be gained by a separate reading of the four Evangelists, the writer made for his personal use a monotessaron of the four Gospels, arranging them so as to relate the same events only once, but to include all the teachings and all the historical incidents in one narrative. This compilation, crude and imperfect, and rudely put together in an ordinary scrap-book, was his only gospel reading for many years, and from it he obtained so vivid an idea of the daily life of Him who not only "spake as never man spake," but who lived as never man lived, that he could almost see Him walking the roads, or sitting by the lake-shore of Galilee ; and until one does this, he cannot know the wonderful beauty of His most wonderful life.

That rude compilation was accidentally seen by a clergyman, whom the writer has the honor to count among his friends, and he recommended that—a few brief notes being added to explain local and historical allusions—it should be given to the public. This was done in 1867, and the book was favorably received, passing rapidly through two editions, and being introduced into many Sunday-schools throughout the country.

This satisfied the writer that the work had met a public want ; but it had many imperfections—some important omissions, and many errors in the true order of events ; therefore its further publication was suspended till more careful study should have remedied these defects. The present volume is an attempt to do this, and it is now given to the public after the patient labor of many years, at intervals snatched from active and engrossing business pursuits.

The plan pursued in compiling the work has been to embody every teaching and every statement of fact in the four Gospels, adding or subtracting nothing, yet giving each scene or statement but once ; to employ the exact language of the authorized version, even at the expense of elegance of expression; to divide the work into sections, giving in side lines the central thought of each, and at the top of the page the exact chapters and verses that make up the matter of the page; and to arrange the whole in chronological order. About this last there are, and probably always will be, differences of opinion: the arrangement generally followed in this volume is that adopted by Andrews in his very admirable "Life of our Lord."

The selected notes are drawn from the whole field of English literature, and they present something from nearly every eminent Christian writer of the past eighteen centuries. The passages chosen are those which look at truth in its moral and spiritual aspects, not in its abstract and doctrinal relations; and the aim has been not only to enlighten the intellect, but to quicken the conscience and purify the heart.

Says the author of an excellent harmony of the Gospels, "The importance of studying the four Gospels in connection cannot be too highly estimated or too earnestly enforced. No clear and well-defined image of the Saviour's life can be formed in the mind without it." And, it would seem that the best mode of presenting this image is by a connected narrative, which, while it presents every incident, shall avoid the repetition which is involved in four separate narratives.

The share which has been taken by the Rev. Dr. LYMAN ABBOTT in editing this work he has himself stated in his Introduction. It may be said in brief that the writer edited the book in manuscript and Dr. ABBOTT re-edited it in proof-sheets—his additions and suggestions for elision or modification, having uniformly commended themselves, as indeed do his scriptural commentaries generally, by their clear good sense, accurate scholarly knowledge, and genuine spirituality—a very needful element in these days of materialism.

It is hoped that with this double strain of editorial influences—the practical Bible study of a business man, and the careful scholarship of a professional scholar and theologian—this little book may help many to realize the beauty and strength of the life and teachings of our Lord Jesus Christ.

NEW YORK.

JAMES R. GILMORE.

INTRODUCTION.

SEVERAL years ago there fell by chance into my hands a "Life of Jesus, according to His Original Biographers," by Edmund Kirke (Mr. J. R. Gilmore)—a book now out of print. It was a simple harmony of the four Gospels woven into one continuous narrative, and in the words of the Gospels, except that mere verbal differences between the narratives of the Evangelists were disregarded, and in some instances modern forms were substituted for the antiquated English of the King James version. Of all harmonies this seemed to me, and still seems to me, the best for popular use; I have twice read it through at family prayers, and often turn to it to get a picture of some scene, incident, or occasion in our Lord's life,—as, for example, to read connectedly during Passion week the story of Christ's death, or on Easter the events connected with and immediately following his resurrection. It is accompanied with a few notes which give compactly useful information concerning the manners and customs of Palestine in the first century, and which are wholly free from all sham and shallow scholarship.

When therefore Mr. Gilmore asked me to assist him in the preparation of this new book—based on the idea of the former one, but more comprehensive and elaborate in plan—I was already prepossessed in its favor, and careful study of the material, as it has been going through the press, has confirmed that prepossession. The arrangement of the text and the original preparation and selection of the notes are Mr. Gilmore's work; my care has been to revise this matter, not changing the text, but modifying the notes according to my own views for Mr. Gilmore's consideration, suggesting here the elimination of some explanation which modern scholarship had shown to be erroneous, and there the supply of criticisms that seemed material. Mr. Gilmore has in all cases adopted my suggestions, and I believe that the commentary may be trusted, and will be found useful, both to the reader and to the student of the life of our Lord.

The notes are, as the reader will readily see, selected from many sources. They are not, therefore, always consistent with each other. In some instances the contrasted views of different commentators have been given together, leaving the reader to compare and choose between them—an admirable plan to stimulate thought and study. They are sometimes explanatory, sometimes spiritual, occasionally critical. They are selected from a very wide range—not only of commentators and theological writers, but from authors in other fields of literature. In many instances these gleanings from other literature are exceedingly suggestive, while some will be found either merely poetical or merely dogmatic, and will be taken for what they are worth in themselves. Even in instances where the student may not agree with them, they will present views of interpretation or application that are at least probable and worth consideration.

In some few instances I do not agree with the harmony which Mr. Gilmore has adopted in his arrangement of the text : but all harmonies are hypothetical ; some scholars are even of the opinion that no harmony is possible ; and in a difference of mere conjectures what seems plausible to one may well seem less probable to another.

The heart of the Bible is the life of Christ ; for that all the Old Testament is a preparation ; of that all the epistles are an interpretation. That this volume may be found useful in helping many readers to a clearer understanding and a truer appreciation of that life, I devoutly hope, and believe.

LYMAN ABBOTT.

LIST OF AUTHORS QUOTED IN THIS WORK.

- ABBOTT, JACOB. Presbyterian clergyman and author. America. 1803-1879.
- ABBOTT, LYMAN. Congregational clergyman, editor, and commentator. Born in Roxbury, Mass., 1835.
- ADAMS, THOMAS. Clergyman. England. 1701-1784.
- ADDISON, JOS. Poet and essayist. England. 1672-1719.
- AKERMAN, LUCY. Poet. America. Living.
- ALEXANDER, JAMES WADDELL. Presbyterian minister and professor. America. Born 1804.
- ALEXANDER, JOSEPH A. Theological professor. America. 1809-1860.
- ALFORD, HENRY. Dean of Canterbury. Professor of Divinity, University of Oxford. England. 1810-1873.
- ST. AMBROSE. Archbishop of Milan. Famous for his zeal in the cause of Christianity. Was the author of the "Te Deum." 340-397.
- ANDREWS, LANCELOT. Bishop of Winchester. Devotional writer and translator of the Bible. England. 1565-1626.
- ANDREWS, SAMUEL J. Author. America. Living.
- ARNOLD, THOMAS. Professor of History, Oxford, England, also Master of Rugby and author. Born at the Isle of Wight. 1796-1842.
- ARNOT, WILLIAM. Clergyman. Living.
- ARTHUR, W. English writer. Living.
- ATKINSON, MARY E. American poet. Living.
- ST. AUGUSTINE AURELIUS. Theologian. Bishop of Hippo. "Greatest of the Latin Fathers." Africa. 354-430.
- AYRE, JOSEPH W. Clergyman. England. Living.

- BACON, FRANCIS VERULAM. Lord High Chancellor, courtier, politician, and writer. England. 1561-1626.
- BABINGTON, GERVASE. Bishop of Worcester. England. Died 1610.
- BAILLIE, JOANNA. One of the most distinguished writers of Great Britain. Scotland. 1764-1851.
- BARNES, ALBERT. Presbyterian divine and commentator. America. 1798-1870.
- ST. BASIL. Surnamed "The Great." A celebrated father of the Greek Church. Originator of the three monastic vows. 329-379.
- BATES, WILLIAM. Puritan divine. England. 1625-1699.
- BAXTER, RICHARD. A Nonconformist divine. England. 1615-1691.
- BEDE or BEDA. Called the "Venerable." A monk. An ecclesiastical writer. England. 672-735.
- BEECHER, HENRY WARD. Congregational minister. America. Born 1813.
- BENGAL, JOHANN ALBRECHT. Theologian and commentator. Germany. 1687-1752.
- ST. BERNARD. Called the "Mellifluous Doctor," and his writings "The River of Paradise." Known as one of the "Fathers of the Church." Burgundy. 1091-1153.
- BEZA, THEODORE. Theological professor. Calvin's successor. Burgundy. 1519-1605.
- BLAIR, JAMES. Founder and first president of William and Mary College, Virginia. Missionary. Scotland. Died 1743.
- BLOOMFIELD, S. T. Biblical critic. England. Born 1790.
- BONAPARTE, NAPOLEON. Emperor of France. Corsica. 1769-1821.
- BONAR, HORATIUS. A religious poet. England. Born 1808.
- ST. BONAVENTURA. JOHN FIDAUZA. Called "The Seraphic Doctor," because of his partiality for speaking and writing on mystical subjects. Cardinal to Gregory X. 1221-1274.
- BRADFORD, JOHN. Divine. Burned at Smithfield 1555. England.
- BRAUNIVS, JOHN. Professor of Theology. Germany. 1628-1709.
- BRIDGE, WILLIAM. An eminent Puritan divine. England. 1600-1690.

- BROWN, JOHN. A self-educated Scotch divine. Compiler of the Bible Dictionary. Scotland. 1722-1787.
- BROWN, THOMAS. Distinguished metaphysician. Scotland. 1778-1820.
- BROWNE, SIR THOMAS. Medical author and physician. England. 1605-1682.
- BROWNING, ELIZABETH BARRETT. Poet. England. 1809-1861.
- BRYANT, WILLIAM CULLEN. Poet and journalist. America. 1794-1878.
- BUCK, CHARLES. Author of Theological Dictionary. England. 1771-1815.
- BUNYAN, JOHN. Author of "Pilgrim's Progress." England. 1628-1688.
- BURCKHARDT, JOHN LEWIS. Explorer and traveller in Syria, and author of "Travels and Life Among the Bedouins." 1784-1815.
- BURDER, SAMUEL. Clergyman of the Church of England. Author of "Oriental Customs in Illustration of Scripture."
- BURGON, JOHN WILLIAM. Poet. England. Born 1820.
- BURKE, EDMUND. Statesman and orator. Ireland. 1730-1797.
- BURKITT, WILLIAM. Theologian. England. 1650-1703.
- BUSHNELL, HORACE. Theological writer. America. 1802-1878.
- BUTLER, JOSEPH. Bishop of Durham. An eminent theological writer. England. 1692-1752.
- BUXTORF, JOHANN. A learned Hebraist. Professor at Basel. Germany. 1564-1629.
- CALMET, AUGUSTINE. An useful and laborious monk of the Benedictine order, an erudite divine and critic, and voluminous author. Lorraine. 1672-1757.
- CALVIN, JOHN. Theologian and commentator. France. 1509-1574.
- CAMPBELL, GEORGE. Divine and commentator. Scotland. 1719-1796.
- CARYL, JOSEPH. Independent divine. England. 1602-1673.
- CARLYLE, THOMAS. Historian and essayist. Scotland. 1795.
- CATO, MARCUS. Illustrious orator. Rome. Committed suicide B.C. 45.

- CECIL, RICHARD. Clergyman. England. 1748-1810.
- CHALMERS, THOMAS. Theologian and preacher. Scotland. 1780-1847.
- CHANDLER, EDWARD. Bishop of Litchfield, England. Died 1750.
- CHANNING, WILLIAM ELLERY. An eminent Unitarian minister and author. America. 1780-1842.
- CHARDIN, SIR JOHN. Celebrated traveler. France. 1643-1713.
- CHEMNITZ, MARTIN. Theologian. Germany. 1522-1586.
- CHRYSOStOM, ST. JOHN. Bishop of Constantinople and one of the most illustrious Fathers of the Church. Called the "Golden Mouthed." Asia. 354-407.
- CICERO, MARCUS TULLIUS. Orator and philosopher. His eloquence in the Roman forum and elegance of writing placed him among the renowned men of antiquity. Apinum. 105 B.C. 42.
- CLARKE, ADAM. A distinguished Methodist preacher. Ireland. 1763-1832.
- CLARKE, JAMES FREEMAN. Unitarian minister and writer. America. Born 1810.
- COLERIDGE, SAMUEL TAYLOR. Poet and philosopher. England. 1772-1834.
- COLET, JOHN. Dean of St. Paul's. England. 1466-1519.
- COLLIER, JEREMY. Famous English theologian. 1630-1726.
- COLLYER, ROBERT. Unitarian minister. England. Living. 1823.
- CONFUCIUS. Moral philosopher. China. B.C. 551-478.
- COOKE, JOSEPH. Theological essayist and preacher. Living.
- COWPER, WILLIAM. Poet. England. 1731-1800.
- CRASHAW, RICHARD. Catholic priest and poet. England. Died 1650.
- CROLY, GEORGE. Clergyman and author. Born in Dublin, Ireland. Settled in England. 1780-1860.
- CROSBY, HOWARD. Chancellor of New York University. America. Born 1826.
- CUDWORTH, RALPH. Theologian. England. 1617-1688.
- CUMMING, JOHN. Distinguished popular preacher. Native of Aberdeenshire, Scotland. Settled in London, England. Born 1810.
- ST. CYPRIAN. Christian Father. Third century. Africa.

- DAMASCENE, JOHN. Theologian. Greek Church. Damascus. 700-756.
- DEEMS, CHARLES F. Methodist minister, editor, and educator. America. Born 1820.
- DE FOE, DANIEL. Author of "Robinson Crusoe." England. 1661-1731.
- DE PRESSENSÉ, E. Religious writer. France. Living.
- DE QUINCEY, THOMAS. Eminent essayist. England. 1785-1859.
- DE SALES, FRANCIS. Jesuit theologian. Savoy. 1567-1622.
- DE TOCQUEVILLE, ALEXIS. Statesman. France. 1805-1859.
- DE WETTE, WILLIAM MARTIN LEBRAICHT. Theologian and commentator. Germany. 1780-1849.
- DODDRIDGE, PHILIP. Presbyterian divine and commentator. England. 1702-1751.
- DONNE, JOHN. Clergyman and poet. England. 1573-1631.
- DWIGHT, TIMOTHY, D.D. President of Yale College. Theologian and man of letters. 1753-1817.
- EBRARD, JOHANN H. A. Theologian. Germany. Born 1818.
- EGGLESTON, EDWARD. Methodist minister and novelist. America. Living.
- ELLCOTT, C. J. Clergyman. England. Living.
- ELIOT, GEORGE. Literary name of Mrs. Marian Evans Lewes. England. Born 1820.
- EMERSON, RALPH WALDO. Philosopher and poet. America. Born 1803.
- ERASMUS, DESIDERIUS. Eminent reformer. Holland. 1467-1536.
- ST. EUTHYMIUS. An Armenian priest. Converted the Empress Eudocia. 377-473.
- EVELYN, JOHN. Gentleman and scholar. England. 1620-1706.
- EUSEBIUS, PAMPHYLUS. Bishop of Cesarea. About 270-340.
- FABER, GEORGE STANLEY. Clergyman and poet. England. 1773-1854.
- FARADAY, MICHAEL. Chemist. England. 1794-1872.
- FARINDON, ANTONY. Famous preacher. England. 1596-1658.

FARRAR, FRANCIS W. Son of a clergyman. Born in Bombay 1831. Master of Marlborough College in 1871. Also is chaplain to the Queen of England.

FENELON. Archbishop of Cambray. France. 1651-1715.

FICHTE, JOHN THEOPHILUS. Celebrated German philosopher of the modern school. 1762-1814.

FLAVEL, JOHN. Clergyman. England. 1627-1691.

FORD, JAMES. Clergyman. England. Living.

FOSTER, JOHN. Eminent essayist. England. 1770-1843.

FULLER, ANDREW. Baptist divine. 1754-1815.

FURNESS, WILLIAM HENRY. America. Unitarian clergyman and writer. Born 1802.

GARRETT, EDWARD. English author. Living.

GEIKIE, CUNNINGHAM. Clergyman. England. Living.

GILPIN, WILLIAM. Clergyman and author. England. 1724-1804.

GILL, JOHN. Commentator. England. 1697-1771.

GODET, P. Biblical commentator. Living.

GOETHE, JOHN WOLFGANG VON. An eminent author and a romantic poet and philosopher. Frankfort-on-the-Main. 1749-1832.

GRAVES, RICHARD. Dean of Ardagh in 1813. Professor of divinity. 1763-1829.

GREELEY, HORACE. Editor. American. 1811-1873.

GREGORY, OLINTHUS. Professor of mathematics. England. 1774-1841.

GRESSWELL, WILLIAM PARR. Clergyman and author. England. 1766-1854.

GRESLEY, WILLIAM. Popular writer. 1800. England.

GROSSE, ALEXANDER.

GROSER, W. H. Religious author. America. Living.

GROTIUS, or DE GROOT, HUGO. Theologian and jurist. Holland. 1583-1645.

GURNALL, WILLIAM. Clergyman. England. 1617-1679.

GURNEY, JOSEPH JOHN. Banker, philanthropist, and Quaker preacher. England. 1788-1847.

GUTHRIE, THOMAS. Theologian. Scotland. 1803.

GUYON, JEANNE B. DE LA MOTTE. A noble French lady, famous for her writings, and friend to Fenelon. 1648-1717.

- HACKET, JOHN. Bishop of Coventry. England. 1592-1670.
 HACKETT, H. B. Professor of Biblical literature. America.
 Born 1808.
 HALE, SIR MATTHEW. Jurist. England. 1609-1676.
 HALES, JOHN. Famous scholar and divine. England. 1584-1656.
 HALL, JOSEPH. Bishop of Norwich, and poet. England. 1574-1656.
 HALL, ROBERT. Baptist minister. England. 1764-1831.
 HAMERTON, PHILIP GILBERT. Artist and author. England.
 Born 1834.
 HAMILTON, JAMES. Clergyman. England. Born 1814.
 HANNA, WILLIAM, LL.D. Born in Belfast, Ireland, 1808.
 HARE, AUGUSTUS W. Clergyman. England. 1794-1834.
 HARRIS, T. M. Unitarian clergyman and author. America. 1769-1842.
 HAWKINS, ERNEST. Religious writer. England. Living.
 HAY, WILLIAM. Miscellaneous writer. England. 1695-1755.
 HEINSIUS, DANIEL. An eminent scholar, who at the age of eighteen was appointed Professor of Greek. Ghent. 1580-1655.
 HELPS, SIR ARTHUR. Essayist. England. Born 1818.
 HENRY, MATTHEW. Biblical commentator. Wales. 1662-1714.
 HERRICK, ROBERT. Lyric poet. England. 1591-1662.
 HEWLETT, JOHN. Chaplain to George IV.
 HILL, ROBERT. Clergyman. England. Pub. from 1592-1617.
 HILL, ROWLAND. Celebrated preacher. England. 1744-1833.
 HITCHCOCK, EDWARD. Geological and religious writer. 1793-1864.
 HOOKER, RICHARD. Called the "Judicious." Church historian; England. 1553-1600.
 HOPKINS, JOHN HENRY. Bishop of Vermont. America. 1792-1868.
 HOPKINS, MARK. Eminent divine and philosopher. Late President of Williams College. Born 1802.
 HORNE, R. H. Poetical and critical writer. England. Born 1803.
 HORSLEY, SAMUEL. Bishop of Asaph. England. 1783-1866.

INGELOW, JEAN. Poet and writer. England. Living. 1830.
 IRENÆUS. Bishop of Lyons. France. Christian writer of the second century. Greek by birth. A disciple of Polycarp, Bishop of Smyrna.

ISADORE OF PELUSIUM. Hermit. Egypt. 360-450.

JACKSON, HELEN HUNT ("H. H."). Poet. America. Living.
 JACOBUS, MELANCTHON W. Professor of Oriental and Biblical Literature. America. Born 1816.

JAHN, JOHN. Professor of Theology. Moravia. 1750-1816.

JAMIESON. Biblical commentator. England. Living.

JEBB, JOHN. Bishop of Limerick. Ireland. A learned and scholarly prelate. 1775-1833.

JABLONSKI, PAUL ERNEST. Professor of Theology. Germany.
 1693-1757.

JENKS, WILLIAM. Editor of "Comprehensive Commentary." America.

JENNINGS, DAVID, D.D. Author of "Jewish Antiquities." 1691-1762.

ST. JEROME. Learned Latin Father. Dalmatia. 340-420.

JERROLD, DOUGLAS. Wit and writer. England. 1803-1857.

JEWELL, J. S. Medical professor. America.

JOHNSON, SAMUEL. Lexicographer, poet, essayist. England.
 1704-1784.

JONES, WILLIAM. Called "Jones of Wayland." Clergyman.
 England. 1626-1800.

JONSON, BEN. Dramatist. England. 1573-1637

JOSEPHUS, FLAVIUS. Historian. 37-95.

KEBLE, JOHN. Divine and poet, writer of sacred hymns. 1792-1866.

À KEMPIS, THOMAS (or HAMERKEN). Theologian. Germany.
 1480-1571. -

KENDRICK, ASAHEL C. Professor of Greek, University of Rochester, New York. Living.

KING, THOMAS STARR. Unitarian minister. America. 1824-1864.

KIRKE, EDMUND. Merchant and author. America. Living.

KITTO, JOHN. Biblical writer. England. 1804-1854.

KNOX, ALEXANDER. Secretary of Castlereagh. Scotland. Died 1831.
 KUINOEL, D. C. J. Professor of Divinity at Leipsic. Germany. Born 1768.

LAKE, JOHN. Bishop of Chichester. England. 1624-1690.
 LANDOR, WALTER SAVAGE. Poet. England. 1775-1864.
 LANGE, JOHN PETER. Theologian and commentator. Germany. Living.
 LAW, WILLIAM. Religious writer. England. 1686-1761.
 LEIGH, EDWARD. Lawyer. 1686-1761.
 LEIGHTON, ROBERT. Archbishop of Glasgow. Scotland. 1612-1684.
 LIGHTFOOT, JOHN. An eminent divine and Hebraist. England. 1602-1675.
 LONGFELLOW, HENRY W. Poet. America. Born 1807.
 LONGFELLOW, SAMUEL. Brother of the poet. America. Living.
 LONSDALE, JOHN D. Bishop of Litchfield. Commentator. England.
 LOWMAN, MOSES. Commentator. England. 1680-1752.
 LUTHER, MARTIN. Reformer. Germany. 1483-1546.

MACAULAY, THOMAS B. (Baron). Historian and essayist. England. 1800-1859.
 MCCLINTOCK, JOHN. Methodist theologian. America. 1814-1870.
 MACDONALD, GEORGE. Novelist and poet. Scotland. Living.
 MACLEOD, NORMAN. Dissenting clergyman. Published 1855.
 MACKENZIE, HENRY. Novelist. Scotland. 1735-1831.
 MACKNIGHT, JAMES. Presbyterian clergyman and commentator. Scotland. 1721-1800.
 MACGREGOR, JOHN D. Author of "Rob Roy on the Jordan."
 MANN, ISAAC. Bishop of Cork and Ross. Ireland. Died 1789.
 MANT, RICHARD. Bishop of Down O'Connor. Joint author with D'Oyley of the Bible published in 1814. 1776-1848.
 MARKLAND, JEREMIAH. A learned critic and classical writer. England. 1693-1776.

- MARTYN, HENRY. Distinguished missionary. England. 1781-1812.
- MASSILLON, JEAN BAPTISTE. Celebrated pulpit orator. France. 1663-1742.
- MAUNDRELL, HENRY. Traveller and author of "A Journey from Aleppo to Jerusalem." 1650-1710.
- MAURICE, FREDERICK DENISON. Clergyman and essayist. England. 1805-1872.
- MEDLEY, JOHN. Bishop of Frederickton. England. Published 1845.
- MEDE, JOSEPH. Learned divine. England. 1586-1638.
- MELANCTHON, PHILIP. Reformer. Germany. 1497-1560.
- MEYER, GOTTLIEB WILLIAM. Professor of Theology. 1768-1816.
- MIDDLETON, THOMAS F. Bishop of Calcutta. England. 1769-1822.
- MILTON, JOHN. Poet. England. 1608-1674.
- MIMPRISS, ROBERT. Biblical commentator. England. Living.
- NEANDER, JOHANN A. W. Church historian and theologian. Germany. 1789-1850.
- NELSON, ROBERT. Devotional writer. England. 1656-1715.
- NEWMAN, JOHN HENRY. Distinguished convert to Roman Catholicism. Cardinal, theologian, and writer. England. Born 1801.
- NEWTON, ISAAC. Eminent philosopher. England. 1642-1727.
- NEWTON, JOHN. Clergyman and writer. England. 1725-1807.
- NORTON, ANDREWS. An American scholar and professor in Harvard University. 1786-1853.
- NOVARINI, LUIGI. An ecclesiastic of Verona; wrote commentaries on the Four Gospels. 1594-1650.
- OLSHAUSEN, HERMAN. Commentator. Germany. 1796-1839.
- ORIGEN. One of the Fathers of the Church. Theologian and commentator. 185-253.
- OVERBERG, B.

- PALEY, WILLIAM. Theologian and philosopher. England. 1743-1805.
- PASCAL, BLAISE. Jansenist divine. France. 1622-1662.
- PATRICK, SYMON. Bishop of Ely. England. 1626-1707.
- PAULINUS PONTUS MEROPUS. Saint. Convert to Christianity. Bishop of Nola, Italy. Bordeaux, France. 367-431.
- PAXTON, GEORGE. Clergyman and writer. Scotland. 1762-1837.
- PELOUBET, F. W. Clergyman and commentator. America. Living.
- PIERCE, WILLIAM. Bishop of Peterborough, England. 1679.
- POPE, ALEXANDER. Poet. England. 1688-1744.
- POOLE, MATTHEW. Nonconformist minister. England. 1624-1679.
- PORTER, J. L. Clergyman and traveller. Author of "Murray's Hand-book for Palestine." England. Living.
- PORTEUS, BEILLY. Bishop of London. England. 1731-1809.
- PRIME, W. C. Author and traveller. America. Born 1835.
- QUARLES, FRANCIS. Sacred poet. England. 1592-1644.
- QUESNEL, PASQUIER. Jansenist theologian. France. 1634-1719.
- RALEIGH, SIR WALTER. Historian, statesman, soldier, courtier, and poet. England. 1552-1618.
- RENAN, ERNEST. Member of the Institute. France. Living.
- RIDDLE, MATTHEW B. Professor of Theology and commentator. America. Living.
- RIDLEY, NICHOLAS. Bishop, reformer, and martyr. Burned 1555.
- RIPLEY, HENRY J. Professor of Theology and commentator. America. Born 1798.
- ROBERTS, DAVID. Traveller. England. 1796.
- ROBERTSON, F. W. Clergyman. England. 1816-1853.
- ROBINSON, C. S. Presbyterian clergyman. America. Living.
- ROBINSON, EDWARD. Biblical scholar. America. 1794-1863.
- ROSENMUELLER, JOHN GEORGE. Celebrated theologian. Germany. 1736-1815.
- ROSENMUELLER, ERNEST F. C. Oriental scholar. 1768.

- RUPERTUS, called also RUPRECHT. One of the early apostles of Christianity in Germany. Lived in the seventh century.
- RUSH, BENJAMIN. Medical writer. America. 1745-1813.
- RUTHERFORD, SAMUEL. Presbyterian theologian. Scotland. 1600-1661.
- RYLAND, JOHN. Baptist clergyman. England. 1753-1825.
- RYLE, JOHN CHARLES. Clergyman and commentator. England. Born 1816.
- SA, EMMANUEL. Jesuit theologian. Portugal. 1530-1596.
- SANDERSON, RICHARD. Bishop of Lincoln. England. 1587-1662.
- SANDYS, EDWIN. Archbishop of York. England. 1519-1588.
- SCHAFF, PHILIP. Biblical scholar and commentator. Switzerland. Living in New York.
- SCHILLER, JOHANN CHRISTOPH F. Poet. Germany. 1759-1805.
- SCOTT, THOMAS. Biblical commentator. England. 1747-1821.
- SCOU GAL, HENRY. Theologian. Scotland. 1650-1678.
- SCOTT, SIR WALTER. Poet and novelist. Scotland. 1771-1832.
- SECKER, THOMAS. An eminent and pious prelate. England. 1693-1768.
- SEED, JEREMIAH. Clergyman. England, Died 1747.
- SEELEYE, JOHN ROBERT. Author of "Ecce Homo." Professor of History, Cambridge. England. Living.
- SELDEN, JOHN. Statesman. England. 1584-1654.
- SENECA, LUCIUS ANNÆUS. Stoic philosopher. Spain. B.C. 5; A.D. 65.
- SHAKSPEARE, WILLIAM. Dramatist. England. 1564-1616.
- SHAW, SAMUEL. Clergyman. England. 1635-1691.
- SHERLOCK, THOMAS. Bishop of London. England. 1678-1761.
- SHENSTONE, WILLIAM. Poet. England. 1714-1763.
- SIGOURNEY, LYDIA M. H. Poet. America. 1791-1865.
- SILESIUS, ANGELUS. Poet and philosopher. Germany. 1624-1677.
- SLEIGHT, MARY B. Poet. America. Living.
- SMILES, SAMUEL. Physician and author. England. Living.

- SMITH, SIDNEY. Clergyman and wit. England. 1768-1845.
- SMITH, WILLIAM. Editor of Bible Dictionary. England
Born 1814.
- SOUTH, ROBERT. Eminent preacher. England. 1633-1713.
- SOUTHEY, ROBERT. Poet. England. 1774-1843.
- SPENER, PHILIP T. Lutheran divinc. Germany. 1635-1705.
- SPURGEON, CHARLES H. Baptist clergyman. England. Born 1834.
- STANHOPE, GEORGE. Dean of Canterbury. England. 1660-1728.
- STANLEY, ARTHUR P. Dean of Westminster. England. Born 1815.
- STERNE, LAURENCE. Author of "Tristram Shandy." England.
1713-1768.
- ST. GREGORY NAZIENZEN. Greek Father, surnamed the "Theologian." Cappadocia. 328-389.
- STIER, RUDOLPH. Biblical commentator. Germany.
- STOCKTON, THOMAS H. Methodist clergyman. America.
1808-1868.
- STOWE, HARRIET BEECHER. Novelist, poet and devotional writer. America. Born 1812.
- STUART, MOSES. Biblical scholar. America. 1780-1852.
- SUETONIUS. Latin historian. Rome. About A.D. 100-150.
- SUIDAS. Greek lexicographer. Birth and death unknown.
- SVETCHINE, SOPHIE SEYMONOF. Devotional writer. Russia.
1782-1857.
- SWING, DAVID. Clergyman. America. Living.
- SWINTON, WILLIAM. Miscellaneous writer. Scotland. Born 1834.
- TACITUS, CAIUS CORNELIUS. Historian. Rome. About A.D.
56-135.
- TAIT, ARCHIBALD CAMPBELL. Archbishop of Canterbury.
Scotland. Born 1811.
- TAYLOR, JEREMY. Bishop. Dromare, England. 1613-1667.
- TENNYSON, ALFRED. Poet. England. Born 1810.
- TERSTEEGEN, GERIARD. Poet and weaver. Germany. Born 1697.
- TERTULLIAN, SEPTIMUS. Christian Father and writer. Africa.
160-245.

- THEODORET. Bishop of Cyrus. Syria. About 393-457.
- THEOPHYLACT. Greek ecclesiastic. Bulgaria. 1070-1112.
- THOLUCK, FRIEDRICH A. G. Theologian and commentator. Germany. Born 1799.
- THOMSON, JAMES. Eminent descriptive poet. England. 1700-1748.
- THOMSON, W. M. Missionary to Syria. America. Living.
- THORNTON, JOHN. Religious writer. England. 1811-1850.
- TILLOTSON, JOHN. Archbishop of Canterbury. England. 1630-1694.
- TITTMAN, CHARLES C. Professor of Theology. 1744-1820.
- TOPLADY, AUGUSTUS MONTAGUE. Clergyman and poet. England. 1737-1778.
- TOWNSON, THOMAS. Clergyman. England. 1715-1792.
- TRENCH, RICHARD C. Archbishop of Dublin. Ireland. Born in England 1807.
- TURNER, SHARON. Historian. England. 1768-1847.
- USHER, JAMES. Archbishop. Dublin. 1580-1656.
- VAN OOSTERZEE, J. J. Commentator. Holland. Living.
- VAN LENNEP, HENRY. Clergyman and traveller. America. Living.
- VINET, ALEXANDER. Divine and philosopher. Switzerland. 1797-1847.
- VOLTAIRE, MARIE FRANCIS. Eminent writer. France. 1694-1778.
- WALTON, IZAAK. Biographer and essayist. England. 1593-1683.
- WARBURTON, WILLIAM. Bishop of Gloucester. England. 1698-1779.
- WARWICK, ARTHUR. Clergyman. England. Pub. 1634.
- WATSON, RICHARD. Bishop Llandaff. England. 1737-1816.
- WATSON, RICHARD. Wesleyan clergyman. England. 1781-1823.
- WAYLAND, FRANCIS. President of Brown University. America. 1796-1845.

- WEBSTER, JOHN.
- WESLEY, JOHN. Founder of Methodism. England. 1703-1791.
- WETSTEIN JOHN JAMES. Biblical critic and philosopher. Germany. 1693-1754.
- WHEDON, DANIEL D. Methodist theologian. America. Born 1808.
- WHICHCOT, BENJAMIN. Clergyman. England. 1609-1683.
- WHITBY, DANIEL. Theologian. England. 1638-1726.
- WHITTIER, JOHN G. Poet. America. Born 1808.
- WILBERFORCE, SAMUEL. Bishop of Winchester. England. Born 1805.
- WILLIAMS, ISAAC. Theologian. England. Living.
- WILLIAMS, WILLIAM R. Baptist clergyman. America. Born 1804.
- WITHROW. Clergyman.
- WOLFE, CHARLES. Clergyman and poet. Ireland. 1791-1823.
- WOODWORTH, SAMUEL. Poet. America. 1785-1842.
- WOOLMAN, JOHN. Quaker preacher. England. 1720-1772.
- WOOLSEY, THEODORE D. Late president of Yale College. America. Born 1801.
- WORDSWORTH, WILLIAM. Poet. England. 1770-1850.
- YOUNG, JOHN. Author of the "Christ of History." England. Living.
- ZOROASTER. Ancient philosopher. Persian. Supposed contemporary of Abraham.
- ZWINGLE, ULRICH. Theologian and reformer. Switzerland 1484-1536.

 John 1 : 1-5, 9-13.

THE ETERNAL WORD.

IN the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. The same was in the beginning with God. All things were made by him ; and without him was not any thing made that was made. In him was life ; and the life was the light of men. And the light shineth in darkness ; and the darkness comprehended it not. That was the true Light, which lighteth every man that cometh into the world. He was in the world, and the world was made by him, and the world knew him not. He came unto his own, and his own received him not. But as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name : which were born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God.

In the beginning.—"Before the world was" (John 17 : 5). "Fix any assignable point as the beginning, and the Word was, and still was. That is, the Word is absolutely eternal."—Whedon.

Was the Word.—In the Chaldee Paraphrase, the oldest Jewish writing now known, this term is used to denote the Thought or Wisdom of God (Prov. 8 : 22-36), and is applied to Him who gave the law on Mount Sinai, and who by all the inspired writers is styled Jehovah. Thus, He who gave the law came to fulfil the law (Matt. 5 : 17). "As we express our thoughts by our words, God reveals his will by his word—the Lord Jesus Christ."—Eggleston.

The light of men.—Christ was predicted by the prophets and described by himself as the light to "illuminate all nations," and "the light of the world" (Jer. 9 : 2; 51 : 4; 42 : 6, 7; Matt. 4 : 16; John 8 : 12; 9 : 5; 12 : 46).

In darkness, should be rendered "in the darkness."

The true light, which, etc.—This clause should read, "The true light, which lighteth every man, came into the world."

John I : 14, 16, 18.

The Word made Flesh.

And the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us, (and we beheld his glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father,) full of grace and truth. And of his fullness have all we received, and grace for grace. For the law was given by Moses, but grace and truth came by Jesus Christ. No man hath seen God at any time ; the only begotten Son, which is in the bosom of the Father, he hath declared him.

The Word became flesh.—God, the uncreated, the incomprehensible, the invisible, attracted few worshippers ; a philosopher might adore so noble a conception, but the crowd turned away in disgust from words which presented no image to their minds. It was before Deity, embodied in a human form, working among men, partaking of their infirmities, leaning on their bosoms, weeping over their graves, bleeding on the cross, that the prejudices of the synagogue, and the doubts of the academy, and the pride of the portico, and the fasces of the lictors, and the swords of thirty legions, were humbled in the dust.—Macaulay.

GENEALOGY OF JESUS CHRIST.

ACCORDING TO LUKE.

JESUS being (as was supposed) the son of Joseph, which was the son of Heli, the son of Matthat, the son of Levi, the son of Melchi, the son of Janna, the son of Joseph, the son of Mattathias, the son of Amos, the son of Nahum, the son of Esli, the son of Nagge, the son of Maath, the son of Mattathias, the son of Semei, the son of Joseph, the son of Juda, the son of Joanna, the son of Rhesa, the son of Zorobabel, the son of Salathiel, the son of Neri, the son of Melchi, the son of Addi, the son of Cosam, the son of Elmodam, the son of Er, the son of Jose, the son of Eliezer, the son of Jorim, the son of Matthat, the son of Levi, the son of Simeon, the son of Juda, the son of Joseph, the son of Jonan, the son of Eliakim, the son of Melea, the son of Menan, the son of Mattatha, the son of Nathan, the son of David, the son of Jesse, the son of Obed, the son of Booz, the son of Salmon, the son of Naasson, the son of Aminadab, the son of Aram, the son of Esrom, the son of Phares, the son of Juda, the son of Jacob, the son of Isaac, the son of Abraham, the son of Thara, the son of Nachor, the son of Saruch, the son of Ragau, the son of Phalec, the son of Heber, the son of Sala, the son of Cainan, the son of Arphaxad, the son of Sem, the son of Noe, the son of Lamech, the son of Mathusala,

Which was.—There is nothing answering to these words in the original. For the sake of brevity they are omitted.

Son of God.—"If men were not the offspring of God, the incarnation would have been impossible."—Godet.

Matt. 1 : 1-16.

the son of Enoch, the son of Jared, the son of Maleleel, the son of Cainan, the son of Enos, the son of Seth, the son of Adam, which was the son of God.

ACCORDING TO MATTHEW.

THE book of the generation of Jesus Christ, the son of David, the son of Abraham.

Abraham begat Isaac, and Isaac begat Jacob, and Jacob begat Judas and his brethren ; and Judas begat Phares and Zara of Thamar ; and Phares begat Esrom, and Esrom begat Aram ; and Aram begat Aminadab ; and Aminadab begat Naasson ; and Naasson begat Salmon ; and Salmon begat Booz of Rachab ; and Booz begat Obed of Ruth ; and Obed begat Jesse ; and Jesse begat David the king ; and David the king begat Solomon of her that had been the wife of Urias ; and Solomon begat Roboam ; and Roboam begat Abia ; and Abia begat Asa ; and Asa begat Josaphat ; and Josaphat begat Joram ; and Joram begat Ozias ; and Ozias begat Joatham ; and Joatham begat Achaz ; and Achaz begat Ezekias ; and Ezekias begat Manasses ; and Manasses begat Amon ; and Amon begat Josias ; and Josias

The book of the generation.—The view that of the two genealogies, one (Matthew's) is that through the father, and the other (Luke's) is that through the mother, is entertained by some scholars ; the view that Luke traces the genealogy through David's son Nathan, while Matthew traces it through Solomon (one giving the natural, the other the regal descent, the two coming together in Salathiel), is entertained by others. That Jesus was a descendant of David does not rest wholly upon these genealogies. Psalm 132 : 11, Luke 1 : 32, and Rom. 1 : 3 show very clearly that Mary also was of the family of David. Those interested in the question will find it fully stated in Greswell's Dissertations, vol. ii.-xvi., pp. 82-107 ; Smith's Bible Dictionary, art. "Genealogy of Jesus Christ ;" and Andrews' "Life of Our Lord," pp. 55-60.

Matt. 1 : 17.

begat Jechonias and his brethren, about the time they were carried away to Babylon.

And after they were brought to Babylon, Jechonias begat Salathiel ; and Salathiel begat Zorobabel ; and Zorobabel begat Abiud ; and Abiud begat Eliakim ; and Eliakim begat Azor ; and Azor begat Sadoc ; and Sadoc begat Achim ; and Achim begat Eliud ; and Eliud begat Eleazar ; and Eleazar begat Matthan ; and Matthan begat Jacob ; and Jacob begat Joseph the husband of Mary, of whom was born Jesus, who is called Christ.

So all the generations from Abraham to David are fourteen generations ; and from David until the carrying away into Babylon are fourteen generations ; and from the carrying away into Babylon unto Christ are fourteen generations.

Of whom was born.—"The form 'begat' here changes in accordance with the miraculous conception and birth of Jesus."—Schaff.

CHAPTER I.

THE ANNUNCIATIONS.

THERE was a man sent from God, whose name was John. The same came for a witness, to bear witness of the Light, that all men through him might believe. He was not that Light, but was sent to bear witness of that Light.

John bare witness of him ; and cried, saying, This was he of whom I spake, He that cometh after me is preferred before me ; for he was before me.

There was in the days of Herod, the king of Judea, a certain priest named Zacharias, of the course of Abia, and his wife was of the daughters of Aaron, and her name was Elisabeth. And they were both righteous before God, walking in all the commandments and ordinances of the Lord blameless. And they had no child, because that Elisabeth was barren ; and they both were now well stricken in years.

And it came to pass, that, while he executed the priest's office before God in the order of his course,

For a witness.—Read “for witness,” or “for testimony.”

Zacharias.—This venerable priest had spent his whole life in the quiet offices of religion. Both he and his wife were ‘saints’ after the Old Testament pattern, and blameless in observing all the precepts and ceremonials of the Mosaic law. The promise to Abraham (Gen. 22 : 18) was about to be fulfilled, and the first revelation of it was made to a man of Abrahamic character.

In the order of his course.—The priesthood was divided by David into twenty-four courses. The several courses began on the Sabbath, and each served for one week. The course of Abijah was the eighth in order, and its service began in the fourth month of the Jewish year answering to our July. “The heads of these courses were the chief priests so often mentioned in the Bible.”—Abbott.

Chap. I.

Luke I : 9-11.

2 B.C.

according to the custom of the priest's office his lot was to burn incense when he went into the Temple of the Lord. And the whole multitude of the people were praying without at the time of incense. And there appeared unto him an angel of the Lord standing on the right side of the altar of

An Angel appears to Zacharias.

His lot was to burn incense.—The various duties of the priests were divided among them by lot. By the first lot was designated who should cleanse the outside of the altar ; by the second, who should sacrifice the lamb, sprinkle the blood, and burn and scatter the incense ; and by the third, who should ascend the high altar, and lay upon it the members of the victim. Only the high-priest, who belonged to no particular order, was allowed to enter the Holy of Holies ; and Zacharias, therefore, must have been in the Holy Place, or the sanctuary, in which incense was burned, and the people in the court without, probably in " the court of the women."

Incense.—That which is ordinarily so called is a fragrant gum, issuing from the frankincense tree. The incense used in the Jewish offerings, at least that which was burnt on the altar of incense, and before the ark, was a mixture of sweet spices, stacte, onycha, galbanum, and pure frankincense, beaten very small. None but priests were to burn it ; nor was any, under pain of death, to make any like it. This incense was burnt twice a day on the golden altar (Ex. 30 : 7, 8, 34-8). Among the various offices distributed by lot, the most honorable was this of burning incense ; so much so, that no priest was allowed to burn it more than once. There is something very beautiful in that idea of the Jewish service which supposes the prayers of the devout to be wafted to heaven in fragrant wreaths of incense. David makes use of it in Ps. 141 : 2 : " Let my prayer be set forth before thee as incense, and the lifting up of my hands as the evening sacrifice."

The Temple.—That is, the Holy Place. Beyond this none but the high-priest could go.

Were praying without.—In the outer court. These prayers were perfectly silent ; and it is probably to the deep silence which prevailed throughout the Temple during the time of offering incense and of prayers that there is an allusion in Rev. 8 : 1-3 : " There was silence in heaven about the space of half an hour."

An angel.—There had been no appearance of an angel for about four hundred years.

Chap. I.

Luke I : 12-16.

2 B.C.

incense. And when Zacharias saw him, he was troubled, and fear fell upon him. But the angel said unto him :

Fear not, Zacharias : for thy prayer is heard ;
 And thy wife Elisabeth shall bear thee a son,
 And thou shalt call his name John.
 And thou shalt have joy and gladness ;
 And many shall rejoice at his birth.
 For he shall be great in the sight of the Lord,
 And shall drink neither wine nor strong drink ;
 And he shall be filled with the Holy Ghost, even from his mother's womb.
 And many of the children of Israel shall he turn to the Lord their God.
 And he shall go before him in the spirit and power of Elias,
 To turn the hearts of the fathers to the children,

Altar.—The altar of incense was a small table of Shittim-wood, overlaid with gold, about 22 inches in breadth and length, and 44 in height. Its top was surrounded with a cornice of gold ; it had spires or horns at the four corners ; and was portable by staves of Shittim-wood, overlaid with gold. It stood in the sanctuary, just before the inner veil ; and on it was burned the sacred incense and nothing else. The altar of incense and the altar of burnt-offering were solemnly consecrated with sprinkling of blood and unction of oil, and their horns yearly tipped with the blood of the general expiation. The altar of burnt-offering stood in the open court, at a small distance from the east end of the Tabernacle, or Temple ; on it were offered the morning and evening sacrifices, and a multitude of other oblations. To it criminals fled for protection.

John.—This name signifies in Hebrew the “ grace or mercy of God,” or “ God graciously gave,” and is used to express joy or rejoicing.

Strong drink.—Greek, Sikera. The East Indians have a drink they call sikkir, which from the similarity of name is supposed to be that here referred to. It is made by steeping fresh dates in water till it is sweetened, and is highly intoxicating. All fermented liquors were prohibited to the Nazarites, and to priests during the week they officiated in the Temple.

The spirit and power of Elijah.—“ These are the last words of the Old Testament, there uttered by a prophet, here expounded by an angel ; there concluding the law, and here beginning the Gospel.”—Lightfoot. The Jews expected a literal fulfilment of the prophecy in Malachi 4. 5. . . . John had the characteristics of Elijah.

Chap. I.

Luke I : 17-21.

2 B.C.

And the disobedient to the wisdom of the just ;
To make ready a people prepared for the Lord.

And Zacharias said unto the angel, Whereby shall I know this ? for I am an old man, and my wife well stricken in years. And the angel answering said unto him, I am Gabriel, that stand in the presence of God ; and am sent to speak unto thee, and to show thee these glad tidings. And, behold, thou shalt be dumb, and not able to speak until the day that these things shall be performed, because thou believest not my words, which shall be fulfilled in their season.

And the people waited for Zacharias, and marvelled that he tarried so long in the temple. And when he

To turn the hearts of the fathers to the children.—An expressive phrase, representing the hearts of the patriarchs, alienated from their children, the Jews, by their disobedience, as about to be turned again to them by the influence of John. It is an evident allusion to the prophecy in Mal. 4 : 5, 6.

I am Gabriel.—This name denotes in Hebrew, "The might of the strong God." He was the angel who, five hundred years before, appeared to Daniel, with tidings of the coming Messiah. He announced the time of Christ's birth, his death, and the overthrow and final restoration of the Jewish nation (Dan., ch. 7-12). He was a favorite minister of the Almighty ; for, to stand in the presence of God denotes that he was peculiarly honored. It is an image borrowed from the customs of oriental courts, where he is said to stand before the king, who has always access to the royal presence. So to stand before God signifies that he was favored by God, permitted to come near him, and to see much of his glory (1 Kings 17 : 1).

Because thou didst not believe.—In commenting on this passage, Francis Quarles (1620) says quaintly : "In the hearing of mysteries keep thy tongue quiet. Five words cost Zacharias forty weeks' silence. In such heights convert thy questions into wonders ; and let this suffice thee—the reason of the deed is the power of the doer."

Waited for his coming out, to be blessed by him, as was the custom (Num. 6 : 23-26).

They marvelled that he remained so long ; for the priest did not ordinarily continue in the temple more than half an hour—long enough to burn the incense.

Chap. I.

Luke I : 21-26.

2 B.C.

came out, he could not speak unto them : and they perceived that he had seen a vision in the temple ; for he beckoned unto them, and remained speechless. And it came to pass, that, as soon as the days of his ministration were accomplished, he departed to his own house.

And after those days his wife Elisabeth conceived, and hid herself five months, saying, Thus hath the Lord dealt with me in the days wherein he looked on me, to take away my reproach among men.

The Angel appears to Mary.

And in the sixth month the angel Gabriel was sent from God unto a city of Galilee, named Nazareth, to a virgin espoused to a

His own home in the hill country of Judea. Many cities have contended for the honor of giving birth to John. Some suppose his native place to have been Hebron ; others, among whom are Dr. Robinson, identify it with Jutta, one of the priestly cities, about five miles south of Hebron. An ancient tradition designates a small village, called now Ain Karim, four miles west of Jerusalem (Porter's Hand-Book, vol. i., p. 233). The site of the house of Zacharias is here pointed out, and a grotto, beside a fountain, is shown where John was accustomed to rest and meditate. See "Early Travels," pp. 287 and 461.

Hid herself.—Continuing probably at home, but withdrawing herself from visitors.

My reproach among men.—The Jewish women regarded it as a peculiar happiness to be the lawful mother of children (Isa. 4 : 1; 44 : 3, 4; Lev. 26 : 9).

A city of Galilee.—"As Joseph and Mary were both of the family of David, the patrimonial estate of which lay in Bethlehem, it seems as if the family residence should have been in that city, and not in Nazareth ; for we find that even after the return from the captivity, the several families went to reside in those cities to which they originally belonged" (Neh. II : 3).—Adam Clarke. The residence in Galilee seems an indication of the fallen state of David's royal house. Its members were now among the humblest of the people—too humble to arouse the jealousy of the Idumean usurper. Herod seems to have taken no precautionary measures against any of the descendants of David. They appear to have sunk wholly out of public sight. The expectation that the Messiah should, about that time, spring from the house of David was strong and general and yet Joseph, the carpenter man whose name was Joseph, of the house of David ; and the virgin's name was Mary. And the angel came in unto her, and said, Hail, thou that art highly favored, the Lord is with thee : blessed art thou among women. And when she saw him, she was troubled at his saying, and cast in her mind what manner of salutation this should be. And the angel said unto her, Fear not, Mary : for thou hast found favor with God. And, behold, thou shalt conceive in thy womb, and bring forth a son, and shalt call his name JESUS.

of Nazareth, and Mary his wife, who were known to be of the royal line, lived unhonored and unnoticed.

Nazareth.—See note on page 57.

Came in.—This was not a dream, but a real appearance to Mary, while in possession of her waking senses.

She was greatly troubled.—More correctly, agitated. "Of all miracles, there was none more sacred, congruous, and grateful to a Hebrew than an angelic visitation. A devout Jew, in looking back, saw angels flying thick between the heavenly throne and the throne of his fathers. The greatest events of national history had been made illustrious by their presence. Their work began with the primitive pair. They had come at evening to Abraham's tent. They had waited upon Jacob's footsteps. They had communed with Moses, with the judges, with priests and magistrates, with prophets and holy men. All the way down from the beginning of history the pious Jew saw the shining footsteps of these heavenly messengers. Nor had the faith died out in the long interval through which their visits had been withheld. Mary could not, therefore, be surprised at the coming of angels, but only that they should come to her."—Beecher.

He shall be great.—As the son of the Most High, and as the King foretold by Daniel (2 : 24) : "And in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed : and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever." (7 : 27) : "And the kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him."

Chap. I.

Luke 1 : 33-35.

1 B.C.

He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest ; and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David : and he shall reign over the house of Jacob for ever ; and of his kingdom there shall be no end.

Then said Mary unto the angel, How shall this be, seeing I know not a man ?

Shall be called—"The phrase, to be called, seems to signify in Scripture, not only that the thing shall really be what it is called, but also that it shall be taken notice of in that view. Compare Isa. 1 : 26 ; 9 : 6 ; 35 : 8 ; 47 : 1, 5 ; 56 : 7 ; 61 : 36 ; Matt. 5 : 9, 19, 21 : 13 ; Mark 11 : 17 ; 1 John 3 : 1."

The throne of his father David.—For a right understanding of the human life of Christ, it must be borne in mind that he was a descendant of David, and as such entitled, by what is called "divine right," to David's throne. No Messiah would be accepted by the Jews but one of the seed of David, and born in Bethlehem, where David was (John 7 : 42). "Christ's language to Pilate, in John 18 : 37, interprets the language of the angel here, and indicates the nature both of his kingdom and of the allegiance that is due to him—the allegiance of the heart and life in absolute trust."—Abbott.

Of his kingdom there shall be no end.—"Cæsar is not Cæsar still, nor Alexander Alexander still ; but Jesus is Jesus still, and shall be forever."—Dr. Donne. "You speak of Cæsar, of Alexander, of their conquests, and of the enthusiasm which they enkindled in the hearts of their soldiers ; but can you conceive of a dead man making conquests, with an army faithful, and entirely devoted to his memory ? Can you conceive of Cæsar as the eternal emperor of the Roman Senate, and from the depth of his mausoleum governing the empire, watching over the destinies of Rome ? Such is the history of the invasion and conquest of the world by Christianity ; such is the power of the God of the Christians ; and such is the perpetual miracle of the progress of the faith, and of the government of his Church. . . . Whose is the arm which, for eighteen hundred years, has protected it when so many storms have threatened to engulf it ? . . . Alexander, Cæsar, Charlemagne, and myself founded empires ; . . . but we are forgotten—our names college themes, our exploits tasks given to pupils by tutors, who sit in judgment, awarding censure or praise. . . . What an abyss between my deep misery and the eternal reign of Christ, which is proclaimed, loved, adored, and which is extending over all the earth !" —Napoleon Bonaparte.

Chap. I.

Luke 1 : 36-42.

I B.C.

And the angel answered and said unto her, The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee : therefore also that holy thing which shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God. And, behold, thy cousin Elisabeth, she hath also conceived a son in her old age ; and this is the sixth month with her, who was called barren. For with God nothing shall be impossible.

And Mary said, Behold the handmaid of the Lord ; be it unto me according to thy word. And the angel departed from her.

And Mary arose in those days, and went into the hill country with haste, into a city of Juda : and entered into the house of Zacharias, and saluted Elisabeth. And it came to pass, that, Mary visits Elisabeth. when Elisabeth heard the salutation of Mary, the babe leaped in her womb ; and Elisabeth was filled with the Holy Ghost : and she spake out with a loud voice and said, Blessed art thou among women, and blessed is the fruit of thy womb. And

The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee.—This evidently means that the body of Jesus should be formed by the direct power of God. The Holy Spirit is the creative power of God (Gen. 1 : 2).

Son of God.—The angel does not apply this title to the divine nature of Christ, but to that " holy thing " which was to be begotten of the virgin.

Mary went into the hill country.—Nazareth is eighty miles from Jerusalem. The journey would, therefore, occupy four or five days.

Filled with the Holy Ghost.—Her soul was so exalted by the divine influence that she uttered these words in the spirit of prophecy. " The Hebrews were accustomed to express their joy or affliction in irregular hymns without metre."—Grotius. The song of Elisabeth is a counterpart to that of Hannah in 1 Sam. 2 : 1-10, and many of the phrases in the hymn of Mary are from the same song. In the later prophets are frequent instances of repetitions of the phraseology of earlier predictions.

Chap. I.

Luke 1 : 43-56 ; Matt. 1 : 18.

I B.C.

whence is this to me, that the mother of my Lord should come to me ? For, lo, as soon as the voice of thy salutation sounded in mine ears, the babe leaped in my womb for joy. And blessed is she that believed : for there shall be a performance of those things which were told her from the Lord. And Mary said :

My soul doth magnify the Lord,
And my spirit hath rejoiced in God my Saviour.
For he hath regarded the low estate of his handmaiden :
For, behold, from henceforth all generations shall call me blessed.

For he that is mighty hath done to me great things ;
And holy is his name.

And his mercy is on them that fear him
From generation to generation.

He hath shewed strength with his arm ;
He hath scattered the proud in the imagination of their hearts.

He hath put down the mighty from their seats,
And exalted them of low degree.

He hath filled the hungry with good things ; and the rich he hath sent empty away.

He hath holpen his servant Israel, in remembrance of his mercy ;
As he spake to our fathers, to Abraham,
And to his seed forever.

And Mary abode with her about three months, and returned to her own house.

Now the birth of Jesus Christ was on this wise : When as his mother Mary was espoused to Joseph, before they came

The Angel appears to Joseph.

He hath showed strength with his arm.—Or gained the victory—a metaphor derived from putting to flight a defeated enemy. The word translated “strength” is used for “victory” by Homer, Hesiod, and Sophocles. Grotius remarks that God’s efficacy is represented by his finger (Ex. 8 : 9) ; his great power by his hand (Ex. 3 : 20) ; and his omnipotence by his arm (Ex. 15 : 16).

Espoused.—Espousing was a solemn engagement, or contract of marriage, made before witnesses, and after it the parties were accounted husband and wife (Matt. 1 : 20). “No woman of Israel,” says Lightfoot, “was married unless she had been first espoused.” This espousal was at her own or her father’s house ; and gen-

Chap. I.

Matt. I : 19-21.

I B.C.

together, she was found with child of the Holy Ghost. Then Joseph her husband, being a just man, and not willing to make her a public example, was minded to put her away privily. But while he thought on these things, behold, the angel of the Lord appeared unto him in a dream, saying, Joseph, thou son of David, fear not to take unto thee Mary thy wife : for that which is conceived in her is of the Holy Ghost. And she shall bring forth a son, and thou shalt call his name JESUS: for he shall save his people from their sins.

erally some time elapsed before she was taken home to that of her husband (Deut. 20 : 7 ; Judg. 14 : 7, 8). "The contract," says Selden, "could not be broken, but by a regular divorce. If, during the time of it, the bride should trespass against the fidelity she owed to her bridegroom, she was treated as an adulteress."

A public example.—The punishment to which Mary was liable was death by stoning. See Lev. 20 : 10 ; Ezek. 16 : 38, 40 ; John 8 : 5. "The best reading seems to be not to 'make her an example,' but, as Eusebius points out, 'reveal her condition to the world.'"—Farrar.

Privily.—Divorce was not necessarily a public transaction. It could be private, without specifying the cause, and by this the offending wife would not be defamed.

In a dream.—Matthew is the only evangelist who makes special mention of dreams or visions, as that of Pilate's wife, of the wise men, and those of Joseph. "In the earlier ages of Judaism, God often revealed his will by dreams or visions, not only to his own people, but to the nations at large. The ancients in general much regarded them ; and rules for their interpretation were formed, both among Jews and Gentiles."

Of the Holy Ghost.—On the theory that Christ had a human father, his absolute sinlessness cannot be accounted for. Sin is propagated by generation, and therefore the Saviour of men could not come into the world by the operation of ordinary laws. To be sinless, he must be begotten by a new creative act of God,—by the same agency that made the first man a living soul (Gen. 1 : 7). He was the beginning of a new creation of God (Rev. 3 : 14).

Jesus denotes "Saviour." The name appears among the Hebrews also under the forms Oshea, Hoshea, Jehoshua, Jeshua, and Joshua, meaning Whose help is Jehovah, or, God the Saviour. The Greek Jason and Jesus are the same name. For several

Chap. I.

Matt. I : 22-25 ; Luke I : 57-61.

I B.C.

Now all this was done, that it might be fulfilled which was spoken of the Lord by the prophet, saying, Behold, a virgin shall be with child, and shall bring forth a son, and they shall call his name Emmanuel, which being interpreted is, God with us.

Then Joseph being raised from sleep did as the angel of the Lord had bidden him, and took unto him his wife : and knew her not till she had brought forth her firstborn son : and he called his name JESUS.

Now Elisabeth's full time came that she should be delivered ; and she brought forth a son. And her neighbors and her cousins heard how the Lord had shewed great mercy upon her ; and they rejoiced with her. And it came to pass, that on the eighth day they came to circumcise the child ; and they called him Zacharias, after the name of his father.

And his mother answered and said, Not so ; but he shall be called John. And they said unto her, There is none of thy kindred that is called by this name.

striking points in which Joshua, who succeeded and completed the work of Moses, may be regarded as a type of Jesus, whose Gospel succeeded and completed the Law, see Smith's "Bible Dictionary," art. "Joshua."

That it might be fulfilled.—The prophecy here quoted is Isa. 7 : 14. It was spoken about 740 B.C. "These events were not fulfilled because they were predicted ; but because they were assuredly to take place, therefore they were predicted."—Chrysostom. "The objections to this part of the narrative have arisen mainly from prejudice against the remarkable facts it states. Yet the wonderful Person of the historical Christ is the best and only satisfactory explanation of these remarkable antecedents. All other explanations leave the historical problem greater than ever."—Schaff.

Circumcise.—To distinguish the descendants of Abraham from all other people, God appointed that every male child should be circumcised on the eighth day (Gen. 17 : 10-27 ; 21 : 4).

None of thy kindred.—"As the Jewish tribes and families

Chap. I.

Luke I : 62-69.

I B.C.

And they made signs to his father, how he would have him called. And he asked for a writing table, and wrote, saying, His name is John. And they marveled all. And his mouth was opened immediately, and his tongue loosed, and he spake, and praised God. And fear came on all that dwelt round about them : and all these sayings were noised abroad throughout all the hill country of Judea.

And all they that heard them laid them up in their hearts, saying, What manner of child shall this be ! And the hand of the Lord was with him.

And his father Zacharias was filled with the Holy Ghost, and prophesied, saying :

The Song of Zacharias.

Blessed be the Lord God of Israel ;
For he hath visited and redeemed his people.
And hath raised up a horn of salvation for us were kept sacredly distinct, it appears the very names of the ancestors were continued among their descendants, partly through reverence for them, and partly to avoid confusion in the genealogical tables, which, for the sake of distinguishing the inheritances, were carefully preserved in each of the families. It seems to be on this account that the neighbors and relatives objected to a name which had not before existed in any branch of the family."—Adam Clarke. The first-born son was commonly called after his father.

A writing tablet.—Before the invention of paper a small tablet, covered with wax, was used for ordinary writing. The pen was an iron stile, with which characters were traced in the wax. At the present time, children in Barbary are taught to write on a smooth thin board smeared over with whiting, which may be rubbed off or renewed at pleasure.

Sayings.—Rather, things, including all that was said and done.

Prophesied, is to be here understood in its proper meaning of predicting future events.

And redeemed.—The literal translation is, "He hath made redemption (or ransom) for his people." Ransom was the price paid for the redemption of a captive taken in war.

Horn of Salvation.—The horn is the emblem of power, for in it lies the strength of an animal. It is probable that allusion is Chap. I.

Luke 1 : 70-80.

I B.C.

In the house of his servant David (As he spake by the mouth of his holy prophets, which have been since the world began) :
 That we should be saved from our enemies,
 And from the hand of all that hate us ;
 To perform the mercy promised to our fathers,
 And to remember his holy covenant ;
 The oath which he sware to our father Abraham,
 That he would grant unto us,
 That we, being delivered out of the hand of our enemies,
 Might serve him without fear,
 In holiness and righteousness before him, all the days of our life.
 And thou, child, shalt be called the prophet of the Highest :
 For thou shalt go before the face of the Lord to prepare his ways ;
 To give knowledge of salvation unto his people
 By the remission of their sins,
 Through the tender mercy of our God ;
 Whereby the dayspring from on high hath visited us,
 To give light to them that sit in darkness and in the shadow of death,
 To guide our feet into the way of peace.

And the child grew, and waxed strong in spirit, and was in the deserts till the day of his showing unto Israel.

here made to the horns of the altar. Whoever laid hold of them was, by the law of Moses, regarded as under divine protection.
 The figure points to a powerful defender.

The dayspring from on high might be more strictly rendered "The dawning of the day from heaven." The daybreak seems to arise from on high to those situated in a valley or dell, as the valley of the shadow of death.

And was in the deserts, probably denotes no more than that John lived a secluded life among his kindred, in the mountain region near Jerusalem, till his public appearing at the age of thirty, before which age the law permitted no one to enter upon a public ministry. The phrase probably also denotes that John did not mingle in the ordinary pursuits of men ; but held himself aloof from the throng, pondering his coming work, and fully impressed with his great destiny (Matt. 11 : 2).

CHAPTER II.

THE BIRTH AND BOYHOOD OF JESUS.

AND it came to pass in those days, that there went out a decree from Cæsar Augustus, that all the world should be taxed (and this taxing was first made when Cyrenius was governor of Syria). And all went to be taxed, every one into his

The Birth of Christ.

In those days.—The chronology of the life of Jesus can only be approximated, not fixed. The present reckoning of the Christian Era was introduced during the sixth century by Dionysius Exiguus, a Roman abbot. It is now known to be about four years too late, so that A.D. 1 is really the fourth "year of our Lord." The dates at the head of the following pages have been noted according to the year of Christ's life as J.C. 1, J.C. 30, etc.

A decree from Cæsar Augustus.—In the year B.C. 63 Pompey made Judea tributary to the Roman Empire, and though Herod was styled King, he was altogether dependent on the Emperor. It had been predicted, ages before, that the Messiah should be born at Bethlehem (Mic. 5 : 2 ; Matt. 2 : 3-6), yet the mother of Jesus resided at Nazareth, eighty miles from that city ; and she continued there till near the expected birth. Nor was she directed to go to Bethlehem ; but the Roman Emperor, in pursuance of his own purposes, issued a decree that an account should be taken of the number and degree of all the subjects in his extensive empire, commonly called "all the world," or the whole habitable earth. Such an account used to be taken of the citizens of Rome every fifth year, for which they had officers called censors. Their business was to make a register of all Roman citizens, their wives and children, with their age, occupations, and estates, real and personal. Augustus first extended this to the provinces. The decree concerning it was issued three years before Christ was born. No payment of any tax was made (on this survey) till the twelfth year after ; till then Herod, and after him Archelaus, his son, reigning in Judea. But when Archelaus was deposed, and Judea put under the command and government of a Roman procurator, then first were taxes paid the Romans for that country.—Schaff ; and Smith's Bib. Dict.

Cyrenius.—Undoubtedly Publius Sulpicius Quirinius, Proprætor, or Roman Governor of the Imperial Province of Syria, within which Herod's Jewish kingdom was included.

own city. And Joseph also went up from Galilee, out of the city of Nazareth, into Judea, unto the city of David, which is called Bethlehem (because he was of the house and lineage of David), to be taxed with Mary his espoused wife, being great with child.

And so it was, that while they were there, the days were accomplished that she should be delivered. And she brought forth her first-born son, and wrapped him in swaddling-clothes, and laid him in a manger ; because there was no room for them in the inn.

To be taxed would be more correctly rendered "to be enrolled," as the taxation was not till afterwards.

Own city.—Because there his family belonged. In Italy the edict required even Roman citizens to be enrolled, not at Rome, but "all in their own cities."

Bethlehem is one of the oldest towns of Palestine, and has now a population of about 3000, though in the time of Christ it was an inconsiderable hamlet. It is about six miles south of Jerusalem, and is built on a long ridge of pure limestone, with a deep valley at the North and another at the South. Its houses have a substantial appearance, and over the cave where tradition locates the birth of Jesus is a church and convent, in whose vaults lamps are kept continually burning. Here St. Jerome, who made the Vulgate translation of the Bible, lived thirty years, from A.D. 386 to 420, when he died. The adjacent country is of great fertility, and celebrated for the variety and richness of its productions. Here by the roadside is the tomb of Rachel, the great ancestress of Israel, and in the valley below the town is the field of Boaz, "where Ruth gleaned for grain and harvested a husband."—Abbott. This was the "City of David," where he was born and anointed king, and here the three brave men broke through the ranks of the Philistines to bring him water from the well of his childhood (2 Sam. 3 : 15-17.)

Swaddling-clothes.—The new-born child among the Jews was washed in water, rubbed with salt, and then wrapped in swaddling-clothes, i.e., not garments, but bands or blankets that confined the limbs closely (Eze. 16 : 4). See Van Lennep's Bible Lands, p. 569.

Manger.—The word in the original signifies the place where cattle or camels are lodged, or fed. Justin Martyr, in the second century, spoke of Christ's birth as having taken place "in a certain cave very close to the village ;" and though there is little to sustain the supposition that the cave now covered by the Church of the Nativity is the true locality, there is no improbability in the idea. That Christ was born in a cave is likely enough, for, at the present day, the limestone caves of Palestine are often used as stables, and also as house and stable together. Dr. Thomson thus speaks of the manger, which he identifies with the "crib" mentioned by Isaiah (1 : 3) : "It is common to find two sides of the one room, where the native farmer resides with his cattle, fitted up with these mangers, and the remainder elevated about two feet higher for the accommodation of the family. The mangers are built of small stones and mortar in the shape of a box, or rather of a kneading-trough, and when cleaned up and whitewashed, as they often are in summer, they do very well to lay little babes in. Indeed, our own children have slept there in our rude summer retreats on the mountains."

And there were in the same country shepherds abiding in the field, keeping watch over their flock by night.

The inn was not one with a host (as in Luke 10 : 34, 35), but a place where travellers lodged, providing their own food. Such places are called caravanserais, or khans, and are still common all over the East. "The enrollment had drawn so many strangers to the little town that 'there was no room for them in the inn.' In the rude limestone grotto attached to it as a stable—among the hay and straw spread for the food and rest of the cattle . . . in circumstance so devoid of all earthly comfort or splendor that it is impossible to imagine a humbler nativity—Christ was born. . . . The fancy of poet and painter has revelled in the imaginary glories of the scene . . . but all this is wide of the reality. Such glories as the simple shepherds saw were seen only by the eye of faith. . . . And the Gospels, always truthful and bearing on every page that simplicity which is the stamp of honest narrative, indicate this fact without comment. . . . Of many another wonder which rooted itself in the earliest tradition there is no trace whatever in the New Testament. The inventions of man differ wholly from the dealings of God."—Farrar.

In the same Country.—At a little distance from Bethlehem there now exists a small hamlet called the Village of the Shepherds, and near it tradition points out the field where these shepherds were tending their flocks.

Shepherds abiding in the field.—The Jews usually sent their sheep into the mountains during the summer, and took them up when the cold and rainy season began—late in October, or early in November. The fact that these shepherds were then "abid-

And lo, the angel of the Lord came upon them, and the glory of the Lord shone round about them ; and they were sore afraid. And the angel said unto them, Fear not ; for behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all ing in the field" would seem to show that the birth of Jesus was prior to the month of December. But about this there is great diversity of opinion. Lange quotes Rauwolf to the effect that towards the end of December, "after the rainy season, the shepherds lead out their flocks again." Both the day and the year when he was born are uncertain. "Fabricius gives a catalogue of no less than one hundred and thirty-six different opinions concerning the YEAR of Christ's birth ; and as to his birth-DAY, that has been placed by Christian sects and learned men in every month of the year."—Bloomfield. In the fourth century Pope Julius II. designated December 25th as the day, and the power of the Latin Church fixed it unalterably, so that all Christendom has since accepted and will not be likely to change it. The exact date is not a thing of much importance. "The keeping of Christmas is a pleasant custom that would not be any more pleasant if we knew it to have a solid historical foundation. The Christian religion is not a religion of holy days, or of holy places, or of sacred observances. Christianity will have nothing less than holy lives. Every thing outward is of value only in so far as it tends to accomplish this end."—Eggleston.

Keeping watch.—The night was divided into watches of three hours, and shepherds took turns, some watching while others slept. Banditti were numerous and dangerous. As to exposure, the Scotch herdsman lies out upon the coldest nights with no covering but his plaid, and in the mild climate of Palestine a night in the open fields, even in December, would not be disagreeable.

The glory of the Lord was a common figure among the Jews to raise the import of any thing to the highest degree.—Campbell. It denotes here probably such a luminous appearance as is supposed to radiate from angelic intelligences ; such as was seen in the faces of the angels at the Sepulcher and round about the Lord at his transfiguration, and when he appeared in the way to St. Paul ; but commentators generally regard it as the Shekinah, or brightness, of God's presence so often spoken of in the Old Testament.—Schaff, and Farrar. It appeared at his transfiguration (Matt. 17 : 5), at his ascension (Acts 1 : 9), and will appear again at his second coming (Matt. 24 : 30 ; 26 : 64).

Chap. II.

Luke 2 : 10-21.

J.C. I.

people. For unto you is born this day, in the city of David, a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord. And this shall be a sign unto you ; Ye shall find the babe wrapped in swaddling-clothes, lying in a manger.

And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God, and saying,

Glory to God in the highest,
And on earth peace, good will toward men.

And it came to pass, as the angels were gone away from them into heaven, the shepherds said one to another, Let us now go even unto Bethlehem, and see this thing which is come to pass, which the Lord hath made known unto us.

And they came with haste, and found Mary and Joseph, and the babe lying in a manger. And when they had seen it, they made known abroad the saying which was told them concerning this child. And all they that heard it wondered at those things which were told them by the shepherds. But Mary kept all these things, and pondered them in her heart. And the shepherds returned, glorifying and praising God for all the things that they had heard and seen, as it was told unto them.

And when eight days were accomplished for the circumcising of the child, his name was called JESUS, which was so named of the angel before he was conceived in the womb.

A multitude of the heavenly host.—"No sooner did one angel of the Lord announce the manifestation of God in the flesh than the whole multitude of the heavenly host immediately are on the wing, breaking forth into harmonious praises of their Creator."—The Venerable Beda.

And when the days of her purification according to the law of Moses were accomplished, they brought him to Jerusalem, to present him to the Lord (as it is written in the law of the Lord, Every ^{The Babe in the Temple.} male that openeth the womb shall be called holy to the Lord) and to offer a sacrifice according to that which is said in the law of the Lord, a pair of turtle doves, or two young pigeons.

And, behold, there was a man in Jerusalem whose name was Simeon ; and the same man was just and devout, waiting for the consolation of Israel : and the Holy Ghost was upon him. And it was revealed unto him by the Holy Ghost, that he should not see death, before he had seen the Lord's Christ. And he came by the Spirit into the temple : and when the parents brought in the child Jesus, to do for him after the custom of the law, then took he him up in his arms, and blessed God, and said, Lord, now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace, according to thy word : for mine eyes have seen thy salvation, which thou hast

Her purification.—For forty days after the birth of a male child, the Jewish mother was considered ceremonially impure, and not allowed to enter the Temple, or to engage in public religious exercises, but required to remain in the house.

To present him to the Lord.—After the first-born of Egypt were smitten, and the first-born of Israel spared, the eldest male child of every Jewish family was regarded as holy to the Lord (Ex. 13 : 2), " God's special property" (Lange), and an offering was required for his redemption from the service of the Temple.

A pair of turtle-doves was the offering of the poor ; from those who were able, a lamb was required for a burnt-offering, and a dove for a sin-offering. That turtle-doves were now offered shows that Joseph and Mary were among the poor. The payment of five shekels of the sanctuary (about $3.75 of our money) was also a part of the redemption offering.

The consolation of Israel.—The Messiah, who was now universally expected.

Chap. II.

Luke 2 : 31-36.

J.C. I.

prepared before the face of all people. A light to lighten the Gentiles, and the glory of thy people Israel.

And Joseph and his mother marveled at those things which were spoken of him. And Simeon blessed them, and said unto Mary his mother, Behold, this child is set for the fall and rising again of many in Israel ; and for a sign which shall be spoken against (yea, a sword shall pierce through thy own soul also) : that the thoughts of many hearts may be revealed.

And there was one Anna, a prophetess, the daughter

The fall and rising again of many.—Not for humiliation because of sin, and exaltation because of righteousness ; such humiliation before God is not a fall but a rising. This, however, appears to be Luther's interpretation. "The man whom he chooses to make truly godly he causes first to feel himself almost a despairing sinner ; whom he chooses to make wise, he makes first a fool ; whom he chooses to make strong, he first renders weak. . . . This is that wonderful King who is nearest to those from whom he seems most remote."—Luther. Rather for the overthrow of those who expected in the Messiah a temporal prince, and a rising to those who were able to accept by faith God's plan of a universal redemption ; a fall to Judas Iscariot and a rising to Peter and John. So in all time Christ is a stone of stumbling to the proud, but a foundation stone to the humble.

Sign.—The word seems here to be used for a mark to shoot at, which finely intimates the malice and artifice with which the character and person of Christ were assaulted, while he endured the contradiction of sinners against himself (Heb. 12 : 3.)

A sword shall pierce.—The original word denotes the thrusting through with a javelin or dart. This was verified when Mary witnessed the crucifixion of Jesus, and she must have felt also most keenly his rejection by the people, desertion by his disciples, and the fierce persecution of the Pharisees throughout his public life. "The sword did not pierce Mary's soul for the first time, but only for the last, and the most deeply, on Golgotha."—Lange.

A prophetess.—Not necessarily one who could foretell future events, but a holy woman. Lange, however, thinks that the "appellation must have been caused by some earlier and frequent utterances dictated in the spirit of prophecy." Her long of Phanuel, of the tribe of Aser ; she was of a great age, and had lived with a husband seven years from her virginity ; and she was a widow of about four score and four years, which departed not from the temple, but served God with fastings and prayers night and day. And she coming in that instant, gave thanks likewise unto the Lord, and spake of him to all them that looked for redemption in Jerusalem.

Now when Jesus was born in Bethlehem of Judea in the days of Herod the king, behold, there came wise men from the east to Jerusalem, saying, Where is he widowhood is mentioned, because young widows who did not re-marry were held in especial honor.

Departed not.—A hyperbolical phrase, denoting that she was in constant attendance at the stated times of public worship by day and night. There were night services of sacred music at which the priests sung anthems (Ps. 134 : 1, 2), to which David perhaps alludes in Ps. 119 : 62.

Wise men from the East.—The Septuagint translation of the Old Testament Scriptures was made at Alexandria about 280 B.C., and it spread far and wide the expectation of the Messiah ; but before this there was a general impression among the Eastern nations that a remarkable personage was to appear about this time in Judea. The Roman writers, Tacitus and Suetonius, distinctly state that a mighty king was generally expected about this time to arise in Judea, the conviction being founded on ancient priestly prophecies throughout the East ; the Chinese Confucius had predicted the coming of a great teacher from the West, the Greek Socrates with his dying words urged his disciples to “ seek a charmer ” who should deliver them from the fear of death, and in many ways this same anticipation of some kind of a mighty Saviour showed that the Messiah was the expected, as well as the “ desired of all nations.” But, as related to this visit of the Magi, who are supposed to have been Persian or Median priests, learned in astrology, medicine, and other sciences of that day, it is noticeable that Zoroaster, the founder of the Persian religion, and a supposed contemporary of Abraham, had most clearly predicted the coming of the Great King. He foretold the coming of a prophet who should be begotten in a supernatural way, should make a new revelation, conquer the spirit of evil, and found a kingdom of everlasting righteousness. Later tradi-

Chap. II.

Matt. 2 : 2-3.

J.C. I.

that is born King of the Jews? for we have seen his star in the east, and are

The Star in the East.

tions, learned probably from the Jews during their captivity (such as the predictions of Daniel and the prophecy of the heathen prophet, Balaam), led the Zoroastrians to look for this Mighty King among the Jews, and to expect his appearance to be heralded by "a star out of Jacob" (Num. 24 : 17). It is natural, therefore, to suppose that they were acquainted with the Jewish predictions.

His star.—"We learn from astronomical calculations that a remarkable conjunction of the planets of our system took place a short time before the birth of our Lord. In the year of Rome 747, on the 20th of May, there was a conjunction of Jupiter and Saturn, on the 20th degree of the constellation Pisces, close to the first point of Aries, which was the part of the heavens noted in astrological science as that in which the signs denoted the greatest and most noble events. On the 27th of October, in the same year, another conjunction of the same planets took place in the 16th degree of Pisces, and on the 12th of November a third, in the 15th degree of the same sign. On these two last occasions the planets were so near that an ordinary eye would regard them as one star of surpassing brightness. Supposing the Magi to have seen the first of these conjunctions, they saw it actually in the east; for on the 20th of May it would rise shortly before the sun. If they then took their journey and arrived at Jerusalem in a little more than five months (the journey from Babylon took Ezra four months, see Ezra 7 : 9), if they performed the route from Jerusalem to Bethlehem in the evening, as is implied, the November conjunction in 15 degrees of Pisces would be before them in the direction of Bethlehem, coming to the meridian about 8 o'clock P.M. These circumstances would seem to form a remarkable coincidence with the history in our text."—Alford. The common belief among the astrologers of the Orient, as well as among the Jews, that remarkable events were signalized by the peculiar conjunction of important planets; the widespread expectation of strange signs in the heavens, and great events on earth about this time, and the certainty that such a phenomenon as the repeated conjunction of the two brilliant bodies, Jupiter and Saturn, must have been noted by these eager watchers of the stars "in the East," give color to the supposition that what the Magi called "His Star" was this very appearance. In the fifteenth century Abarbanel, a learned Jewish Rabbi, wrote: "The most important changes in this sublunary world are portended by the conjunctions of Jupiter and Saturn. Moses was born in the third year after such a conjunction in the come to worship him. When Herod the king had heard constellation Pisces, which is the constellation of Israel, and a similar conjunction will herald the advent of Messiah." This is notable as being written by a man who did not believe in Jesus as the Christ, and who lived a century before the day of Kepler, the pious astronomer, who discovered that the conjunction described had actually occurred just before the birth of Jesus. Kepler's calculations have recently been confirmed at the Greenwich Observatory. The "star" has also been supposed to be one of those brilliant bodies that flash out for a while and then disappear; and of course the purely miraculous theory has also always had its adherents. For still another hypothesis, that the star was one then first created, and that the guiding was due to a supernatural diversion of its rays, see Upham's monograph on "The Star of our Lord." Whatever it was, it must have been seen by the Eastern Magi, been connected by them with the familiar prophecies, and been the attraction that drew them to the little village of Judea.

Herod.—This Herod was of Idumean descent, and the second son of Antipater—made procurator of Judea B.C. 47. When but fifteen years old he received the government of Galilee, and when Antony came to Syria, six years later, was, with his older brother, appointed tetrarch of Judea. Forced to abandon Judea the next year by the invasion of the Parthians, he fled to Rome, where he was well received by Antony and Octavian (afterwards famous as Augustus Cæsar), and by the Roman Senate was made King of the Jews. In the year B.C. 37, with the aid of the Romans, he took Jerusalem, and established his authority throughout his dominions. His reign was not disturbed by external troubles, but his domestic life and internal administration were stained with the foulest crimes. He put to death, with many others, his wife Mariamne, her grandfather, her mother, and two of his own sons, one of whom he caused to be executed only five days before he himself died. He practised barbarities on his subjects, and the monstrous acts of cruelty which are recorded of him show that he was fully capable of the slaughter of the children at Bethlehem. While on his death-bed he attempted the simultaneous execution of all the nobles of Judea, that every Jewish family, though unwillingly, should mourn at his death. He died of a most painful and loathsome disease at Jericho, between two and four years, as is supposed, after the birth of Christ. Then the scepter "departed from Judah," and it was ruled by tetrarchs, without the power or royal magnificence of Herod.

Chap. II.

Matt. 2 : 5-11.

J.C. I.

these things, he was troubled, and all Jerusalem with him. And when he had gathered all the chief priests and scribes of the people together, he demanded of them where Christ should be born. And they said unto him, In Bethlehem of Judea : for thus it is written by the prophet, And thou Bethlehem, in the land of Juda, art not the least among the princes of Juda, for out of thee shall come a Governor, that shall rule my people Israel.

Then Herod, when he had privily called the wise men, inquired of them diligently what time the star appeared. And he sent them to Bethlehem, and said, Go and search diligently for the young child ; and when ye have found him, bring me word again, that I may come and worship him also. When they had heard the king, they departed ; and, lo, the star, which they saw in the east, went before them, till it came and stood over where the young child was. When they saw the star, they rejoiced with exceeding great joy. And when they were come into the house, they saw the young child with Mary his mother, and fell down, and worshipped him : and when they had opened their treas-

All Jerusalem was agitated—Herod for fear of a rival, the people in hope of the birth of the coming Deliverer. Jerusalem, like an uneasy volcano, was always on the eve of an explosion.

By the prophet.—The prophecy was so well known that Micah's name is not given (Micah 5 : 2).

The house.—Probably not the stable where he was born, but temporary lodgings in which Joseph and Mary remained until after the forty days of purification. The situation of the child must have seemed to the Magi ill-befitting one born to the dominion of the world.

Worshipped him.—Prostrated themselves with their faces to the ground, as is still the custom in Eastern countries. They doubtless regarded him as a divine being, and accorded to him "more than the usual reverence to kings." The worship of the

Chap. II.

Matt. 2 : 11-15.

J.C. I.

ures, they presented unto him gifts ; gold, and frankincense, and myrrh.

And being warned of God in a dream that they should not return to Herod, they departed into their own country another way. And when they were departed, behold, the angel of the Lord appeared to Joseph in a dream, saying, Arise, and take the young child and his mother, and flee into Egypt, and be thou there until I bring thee word : for Herod will seek the young child to destroy him. When he arose, he took the young child and his mother by night, and departed into Egypt : and was there until the death of Herod : that it might be fulfilled which was spoken of the Lord by the prophet, saying, Out of Egypt have I called my son.

Magi has been regarded in the Church as the first token of the regeneration of heathen nations, and the ecclesiastical Feast of the Epiphany celebrates Christ's "manifestation to the Gentiles."

Opened their treasures, their caskets, or other receptacles, and presented unto him gifts, as is still the custom in the East when appearing before a king or other great personage.

Frankincense was a yellowish white resin or gum, of a bitter taste. It was obtained from a tree by making incisions in the bark, and suffering the gum to flow out. It was highly odoriferous when burned, and was therefore used in worship (See Ex. 30 : 78. See note, Incense, p. 29).

Myrrh.—A precious gum, procured, in the same manner as frankincense, from a tree growing in Egypt, Arabia, and Abyssinia. Its name denotes bitterness ; but its smell, though strong, is not disagreeable. Among the ancients it entered into the composition of the most costly ointments ; and as a perfume appears to have been used to give a pleasant fragrance to vestments, and was much used to embalm the dead. (John 19 : 39).

Egypt, "as near, and as a Roman province, independent of Herod, and much inhabited of Jews, was an easy and convenient refuge."—Alford. The place of sojourn is not known, but an old tradition locates it near the city of Heliopolis, on the way to Cairo, and not far from the site of the temple built for the Jews under the priesthood of Onias.

Then Herod, when he saw that he was mocked of the wise men, was exceeding wroth, and sent forth, and slew all the children that were in Bethlehem, and in all the coasts thereof, from two years old and under, according to the time which he had diligently inquired of the wise men. Then was fulfilled that which was spoken by Jeremy the prophet, saying, In Rama was there a voice heard, lamentation, and weeping, and great mourning, Rachel weeping for her children, and would not be comforted, because they are not.

Slew all the children . . . from two years old and under.—

All the male children . . . According to Jewish reckoning, a child which has just entered its second year would be called two years old. Townsend, allowing the inhabitants to be 2000 (which is probably an over-estimate), calculates fifty children to have been slain. "Some would reduce the number to ten or fifteen. Voltaire, after an old Greek tradition, would make it 14,000! In peaceful times such an act as this, even if executed, as this probably was, in secrecy, would have excited general indignation when it became known; but now the Jewish people had so long 'supped with horrors,' and were so engrossed in the many perils that threatened their national existence, that this passed by comparatively unnoticed."—Andrews. No direct mention is made of the event by Josephus, and it is possible that it may never have come to the knowledge of the Jewish historian writing so many years after the event, although some have thought references to it were discoverable. It is notable, however, that Josephus makes nowhere any allusion to Jesus or his career, except in a single brief passage which is not believed to be genuine. This Jewish writer, born a year or two after Christ's death, a Pharisee by education, and of much ability and learning, was prominent in defence of his land when attacked by the Roman Vespasian and conquered by Titus. He was then taken to Rome, where he spent his last days in the imperial favor and in literary labor; but he was a renegade Jew, and a flatterer of the Romans and other heathen. His omissions as to Christ and the Christians, therefore, are not significant.

Coasts.—The adjacent hamlets or settlements. The word comes through the Latin costa, a rib, a side, and is the same as the French côte, side. Here it means the borders.

But when Herod was dead, behold, an angel of the Lord appeareth in a dream to Joseph in Egypt, saying, Arise, and take the young child and his mother, and go into the land of Israel : for they are dead which sought the young child's life. And he arose, and took the young child and his mother, and came into the land of Israel. But when he heard that Archelaus did reign in Judea in the room of his father Herod, he was afraid to go thither : notwithstanding, being warned of God in a dream, he turned aside into the parts of Galilee : and he came and dwelt in a city called Nazareth : that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the prophets, He shall be called a Nazarene.

And the child grew, and waxed strong in spirit, filled with wisdom ; and the grace of God was upon him.

When Herod was dead.—Herod died about March at Jericho, in the 37th year of his reign, U.C. 751, B.C. 3, and in his seventieth year.

Archelaus.—Herod having put Antipater to death in consequence of a conspiracy formed against him of which Antipater was the author, altered his will and disposed of his dominions in the following manner : The tetrarchy of Galilee and Perea to his son Antipas ; the tetrarchy of Gaulonitis, Trachonitis, Batanea, Paneadis, to his son Philip ; and left Judea to his eldest remaining son, Archelaus. This son inherited the blood-thirsty disposition of his father, and is properly styled the "heir of Herod's cruelty." In the tenth year of his reign he was banished by Augustus to Vienne in Gaul (on a complaint alleged against him by the chief of the Jews for his various cruelties), where he died.

Into the parts of Galilee.—Galilee was not within the government of Archelaus, but of his brother Herod Antipas.

He shall be called a Nazarene.—These exact words are not found in any of the Prophets. Reference is doubtless made to the general scope of the Messianic predictions, which are that the Christ would be of humble life and "despised and rejected of men" (Isa. 53 : 2, 3, 7-9 ; Ps. 22). The people of Nazareth were universally despised and contemned (John 1 : 46).

Chap. II.

Luke 2 : 41-44.

J.C. 12.

Now his parents went to Jerusalem every year at the feast of the passover. And when he was twelve years old, they went up to Jerusalem after the custom of the feast. And when they had fulfilled the days, as they returned, the child Jesus tarried behind in Jerusalem; and Joseph and his mother knew not of it. But they, supposing him to have been in the company, went a day's journey; and Feast of the Passover.—This was the first of the three great annual feasts of the Jews. It continued eight days, and took place at the full of the moon which occurred at the vernal equinox. It was instituted to commemorate the passing-over of the houses of the Israelites when the first-born of the Egyptians were destroyed, and at it the first-fruits of the barley harvest were offered. The Pentecost occurred seven weeks, or fifty days, later, and commemorated the giving of the law; at this feast the first-fruits of the wheat harvest were offered. The Tabernacles occurred near the end of September or beginning of October, when the produce of the fields and vineyards had been gathered; it commemorated the sojourn of the Israelites, in tents or tabernacles, in the desert, and was observed as a thanksgiving for the blessings of the year. Every adult Jew dwelling in Judea was obliged to attend at each of these feasts, and the numbers at such times assembled at Jerusalem, according to Josephus, often exceeded two millions.

Twelve years old.—It was at this age that male children became "sons of the law," and were required to go up to the feasts.

Fulfilled the days.—The eight days of the Passover: one day for killing the paschal lamb, and seven days for the feast of unleavened bread.

Went a day's journey.—The people on their way to and from the festivals traveled in caravans, for greater safety against robbers, whole neighborhoods often going together; and it was no doubt among one of these caravans that Mary and her husband sought the boy Jesus, sorrowing. They carried tents for their lodging at night; and in the day time, as circumstances might lead them, would probably mingle with their friends; but in the evening, when about to encamp, every one would join the family to which he belonged. As Jesus did not appear, his parents first sought him where they supposed he would most probably be, among his relations and acquaintance.

they sought him among their kinsfolk and acquaintance. And when they found him not, they turned back again to Jerusalem, seeking him. And it came to pass, that after three days they found him in the temple, sitting in the midst of the doctors, both hearing them, and After three days.—The first day was spent in their journey homeward, the second in their return to Jerusalem, and the third, in searching after Jesus there.

The Doctors, elsewhere called Scribes, were the authorized expounders of the sacred books of the Jews. Though the law made it the duty of parents to teach their children its precepts and principles, the education of the common people was very simple. There was, however, "a parochial school in every village. Common-school education we have borrowed from Judaism, though we have improved the pattern. A far larger proportion of the people could read and write in Palestine in the days of Christ than in England in the days of Henry the Eighth. The unlearned fishermen by the Sea of Galilee were not absolutely illiterate."—(Abbott's "Jesus of Nazareth.") Of the Scribes, however, a higher sort of erudition was required. At five years of age the child destined for this office was taught to read, at ten he began the study of the Mishna, and at thirteen was expected to enter the school of some Rabbi at Jerusalem. If poor, he was supported at this school by the synagogue of his town or village. Physical science formed a part of the course of instruction, but much more attention was given to the Scriptures, and to the written "traditions of the elders." At the age of thirty the pupil was solemnly inducted into the "chair of the Scribes," by the imposition of hands, and then was given tablets on which to note down the sayings of the wise, and the "key of knowledge" (Luke 11 : 52) with which he was to open and shut the treasures of Divine wisdom. The Scribe might rise to the high places, become an arbitrator of family disputes (Luke 12 : 14), the head of a school, a member of the Sanhedrin ; or he might sink into a humble transcriber of the Scriptures, or into a still humbler notary, writing out contracts of sale or espousals, and bills of repudiation. The more distinguished of the order occupied the highest social position, and in the time of Christ their passion for distinction was insatiable. Combining within themselves nearly all the energy and thought of Judaism, the close hereditary caste of the priesthood was powerless to compete with them ; and unless a priest became also a Scribe, he remained in obscurity. Under these influences the character

Chap. II.

Luke 2 : 46-51.

J.C. 12.

asking them questions. And all that heard him were astonished at his understanding and answers. And when they saw him, they were amazed ; and his mother said unto him, Son, why hast thou thus dealt with us ? behold, thy father and I have sought thee sorrowing.

And he said unto them, How is it that ye sought me ? wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business ? And they understood not the saying which he spake unto them.

And he went down with them, and came to Nazareth, of the order was marked by a deep and incurable hypocrisy, which merited the scathing invectives of Jesus. See Smith's "Bible Dictionary," and Adam Clark.

In the midst of the doctors.—When teaching in public, the Scribes sat on benches of a semi-circular form, raised above their auditors and disciples, so that Jesus was no doubt literally seated "in their midst."

My Father's business.—The word "business" is supplied according to the frequent necessity in translating from the Greek, which leaves something to be understood from the connection, as, "He came unto his own [things or possessions], and his own [people] received him not." Strong, in his "Harmony and Exposition of the Gospels," says : "There is here apparently a studied ambiguity in the original, where, instead of "business," should rather be supplied "in the [courts] of my father," namely, the Temple, in distinction from the home of his reputed father." The usual reading, however, is "things," "affairs," and hence "business."

Nazareth "was a little town situated in a fold of land broadly open at the summit of the group of mountains which closes on the north the plain of Esdraelon. The population is now from three to four thousand, and it cannot have varied very much. It is quite cold in winter, and the climate is very healthy. Like all the Jewish villages of the time, the town was a mass of dwellings built without pretension to style, and must have presented that poor and uninteresting appearance which is offered by villages in Semitic countries. The houses, from all that appears, did not differ much from those cubes of stone, without exterior or interior elegance, which now cover the richest portion of the Lebanon, and which, in the midst of vines and fig-

trees, are nevertheless very pleasant. The environs, moreover, are charming, and no place in the world was so well adapted to dreams of absolute happiness. Antoninus Martyr, at the end of the sixth century, draws an enchanting picture of the fertility of the environs, which he compares to paradise. Some valleys on the western side fully justify his description. The fountain about which the life and gayety of the little town formerly centred has been destroyed ; its broken channels now give but a turbid water. With the exception of something sordid and repulsive, which Ismalism carries with it everywhere, it did not, in the time of Jesus, differ much from what it is to-day. We see the streets in which he played when a child, in the stony paths, or the little squares, which separate the dwellings. The house of Joseph, without doubt, closely resembled those poor shops, lighted by the door, serving at once for the work bench, as kitchen and as bedroom, having for furniture a mat, some cushions on the ground, one or two earthen vessels, and a painted chest. The horizon of the town is limited, but if we ascend a little to the plateau swept by a perpetual breeze, which commands the highest houses, the prospect is splendid. To the west are unfolded the beautiful lines of Carmel, terminating in an abrupt point which seems to plunge into the sea. Then stretch away the double summit which looks down upon Megiddo, the mountains of Gilboa, the picturesque little group with which are associated the graceful and terrible memories of Solam and of Endor, and Thabor with its finely-rounded form, which antiquity compared to a breast. Through a depression between the mountains of Solam and Thabor are seen the valley of the Jordan and the high plains of Perea which form a continuous line in the east. To the north, the mountains of Safed, sloping towards the sea, hide St. Jean d'Acre, but disclose the gulf of Khaifa. Such was the horizon of Jesus. This enchanted circle, the cradle of the kingdom of God, represented the world to him for years. His life, even, went little beyond the limits familiar to his childhood ; for beyond, to the north, you almost see upon the slope of Hermon, Cesarea Philippi, his most advanced point into the Gentile world ; and to the south you feel behind these already less cheerful mountains of Samaria, sad Judea, withered as by a burning blast of destruction and of death."—Renan.

"These are the natural features which for nearly thirty years met the almost daily view of Him who 'increased in wisdom and stature' within this beautiful seclusion. It is the seclusion which constitutes its peculiarity and its fitness for these scenes of the Gospel history. Unknown and unnamed in the Old Testament, Nazareth first appears as the retired abode of the humble carpenter. Its separation from the busy world may be

Chap. II.

Luke 2 : 51.

J.C. 12-30.

and was subject unto them : but his mother kept all these sayings in her heart.

the ground, as it certainly is an illustration, of the evangelist's play on the words, 'He shall be called a Nazarene.'"—Stanley. "Amid these romantic mountains and fertile vales Jesus spent his boyhood. Here he often wandered, picking the wild flowers, gratifying that love of nature which so characterized his after-life and teachings. Into the mountain solitudes with which this rural region abounds he loved to retreat from the distasteful crowd and bustle of the great cities. Here he commenced his ministry. Here he wrought most of his miracles. First in the synagogue and then in the valleys and on the hillsides of Galilee, he preached most of the discourses which have been preserved and handed down to us. From the simple fishermen who lived and labored on the shore of Lake Tiberias he selected most of his companions and apostles. Among these mountains he organized his little Church, and sent his followers forth to preach 'the kingdom of heaven is at hand.' And at the setting of the sun, in the quiet wooded glades of Galilee, rather than in the synagogue and the temple, he sought that solitude for which his heart yearned, that he might commune with his Father and his God."—Abbott.

Subject unto them.—The early years of Jesus are veiled in obscurity. It is known that his parents were poor (Luke 2 : 24), that his reputed father was an artisan, that he himself wrought at his father's trade (Mark 6 : 3), and that he was not trained in any of the higher schools of the Jewish nation (John 7 : 15 ; Matt. 13 : 54) ; but beyond this all is conjecture. He probably understood no other language than the Syro-Chaldaic (or Aramaic) and the ancient Hebrew, and had no other learning than that of the parish school, where the subordinate officer of the synagogue taught the children to "read, write, and cipher, instructed them in their national history and the requirements of the law, and catechized them on the Jewish Scriptures." "The influences which surrounded Christ in his childhood certainly could have contributed but little to the greatness of his ripened character. The inhabitants of Galilee were a simple, humble peasantry, industrious, but plain ; unpretending in their appearance, untutored in their habits. Their pursuits and modes of life were very simple. They caught fish on the lakes ; they reared flocks and herds on the mountain sides ; they cultivated corn and olives in the valleys and on the slopes of the hills. They had little wealth. They had not the culture and refinement which belong to the richer and more luxurious inhabitants of Judea."—Ab- bott. To attempt to trace the secret of his power to the influence of his time, or the culture of the schools of his nation, as has been done, is worse than useless, for he rises above all times and all schools, and in his world-creative and world-transforming power stands alone in history. Like the New Jerusalem which he founded, "he descended from God out of heaven."

And Jesus increased in wisdom and stature, and in favor of God and man.

Increased in wisdom and stature.—This implies that, whatever was the character of the indwelling soul by which, in his earliest years, he recognized God as, in a peculiar manner, his father, that soul became united to his human nature in an orderly way—was gradually developed, as other men are developed, by the gradual unfolding of his powers. Indications of this development are seen all through the Gospel history. His power was not so great at the beginning of his Galilean ministry, when he could do no mighty work at Nazareth, "because of their unbelief," as when, in the closing hours of his life, he prostrated by a look a band of Roman soldiers, who were not only unbelieving but positively hostile, and seeking his death. It was not until he had risen from the dead that he said, "All power is given unto me in heaven and on earth." "Perfect-innocence developed into complete holiness of life during this real childhood and youth ripening into manhood. Human means are not to be excluded, but they will not account for this. Hence the silence of Scripture is an impressive proof of the divine-human person of Christ. Education in Nazareth will not explain his character as it afterward appeared. Nor can he be ranked with self-made men of genius; for we can trace the energy with which they have struggled against their surroundings, and overcome them. Of this there is no trace here. His knowledge was not of a kind to be obtained by study or by self-culture. He speaks rather from divine intuition. He became what he afterward was by a force that was 'preternatural and divine.' The favor with God implies his work of obedience, during which the great passive virtues were displayed. And though in favor with men, as yet not hated by the world, we must believe that his knowledge of his fellow-men made him in youth 'a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief.' The occurrence at Nazareth suggests that the envy of his townsmen began before that attempt to kill him. Here, too, we learn both of the person and the work of Christ. The example of submission, of quietly waiting for the full time to begin public labors, needs to be inculcated upon all children and

Chap. II.

Luke 2 : 52.

J.C. 12-30.

youth. He was no 'boy-preacher,' but as a boy and young man obeyed and endured, and was thus fitted to teach and to save."—Riddle. "How full of meaning is the fact that we have nothing told us of the life of our blessed Lord between the twelfth and thirtieth years! What a testimony against all our striving and snatching at hasty results, our impatience, our desire to glitter before the world, against the plucking the unripe fruit of the mind, and the turning of that into a season of stunted and premature harvest, which should have been a season of patient sowing, of earnest culture and silent ripening of the powers."—Archbishop Trench. "We are apt to forget that it was during this time that much of the great work of the second Adam was done. The growing up through infancy, childhood, youth, manhood, from grace to grace, holiness to holiness, in subjection, self-denial, and love, without one polluting touch of sin, this it was which, consummated by the three years of active ministry, by the Passion and by the Cross, constituted 'the obedience of one man,' by which many were made righteous. We must fully appreciate the words of this verse in order to think rightly of Christ. He had emptied himself of his glory. His infancy and childhood were no mere pretence, but the Divine Personality was in him carried through these states of weakness and inexperience, and gathered around itself the ordinary accession and experience of the sons of men. All the time the consciousness of his mission on earth was ripening—'the things heard of the Father' (John 15 : 15) were continually imparted to him; the Spirit, which was not given by measure unto him, was abiding more and more upon him, till the day when he was fully ripe for his official manifestations—that he might be offered to his own, to receive or reject him—and then the Spirit led him up to commence his conflict with the enemy."—Alford.

PART II.

FROM THE BAPTISM OF JESUS
TO THE
BEGINNING OF HIS MINISTRY IN GALILEE; OR FROM
SUMMER, J.C. 30, TO APRIL, J.C. 32.

Chap. III.

Luke 3 : 1.

Summer of J.C. 30.

CHAPTER III.

THE BAPTISM OF JESUS.

Now in the fifteenth year of the reign of Tiberius

Introductory.—"His boyhood and youth and early manhood had passed away in humble submission and holy silence, and Jesus was now thirty years old. That deep lesson for all classes of men in every age, which was involved in the long toil and obscurity of those thirty years, had been taught more powerfully than mere words could teach it; and the hour for his ministry had now arrived. He was to be the Saviour, not only by example, but also by revelation, and by death. There was a general expectation of that 'wrath to come,' which was to be the birth-throe of the coming kingdom—the darkness, deepest before the dawn. The world had grown old, and the dotage of its Paganism was marked by hideous excesses. Atheism in belief was followed, as among nations it has always been, by degradations of morals. Iniquity seemed to have run its course to the farthest goal. Philosophy had abrogated its boasted functions except for the favored few. Crime was universal, and there was no known remedy for the horror and ruin which it was causing in a thousand hearts. Even the heathen world felt that 'the fullness of the time' had come."—Farrar.

Tiberius Cæsar was now at the head of the Roman Empire. He was the second Roman Emperor, step-son and successor of Augustus Cæsar. The usual Christian era (A.D.) coincides with the year of Rome (A.U.C.) 754. Tiberius was associated with Augustus as ruler from and after January A.U.C. 765, but the "fifteenth year" (the time mentioned as that of the appearance of John the Baptist) is usually reckoned from his first accession to sole power, two years later, at the death of Augustus. This brings the fifteenth year to A.U.C. 781—that is to say, A.D. 27; when Jesus was in his 30th year. In B.C. 63 Pompey had conquered Judea, which in the time of the first Herod was held as one province, but now was divided into three departments and governed by officers styled Tetrarchs and Procurators, in whose hands was the whole civil government. Their will was absolute law. They removed and appointed the Jewish high-priests at their pleasure; held the power of life and death; and from their decisions, except in the case of Roman citizens (Acts 25 : 11), there was no appeal. The Jews, it is true, held a shadow of authority. In every synagogue was a local tribunal, in the larger towns a council (Matt. 10 : 17) of

Chap. III.

Luke 3 : 1.

Summer of J.C. 30.

Cæsar, Pontius Pilate being governor of Judea, and twenty-four, and in Jerusalem the Sanhedrin, or great council of seventy ; but these tribunals had cognizance of none but ecclesiastical questions, and could punish only by fine, excommunication, or scourging. Over all civil and criminal cases the Roman officials held exclusive jurisdiction. A centurion, or captain of a hundred, was quartered in every considerable town, and administered an irregular sort of justice, governed altogether by his own will, and accountable only to the Roman tetrarch or procurator. These centurions were generally corrupt and avaricious, permitting all sorts of extortion and excess among their underlings, and could be propitiated only by bribes which well-nigh beggared the litigant. Palestine was a military province of the Romans. "The Roman provinces were of two kinds, imperial and senatorial, the former ruled over by a proconsul or deputy, the latter by a procurator or governor. This distinction dates from the reign of Augustus. Under show of administering a republic, he organized a military empire. As a part of this plan, he made a division between such provinces as required military control and such as only required civil authority ; the latter he left to the senate, the former he assumed the care of himself. His avowed object was to relieve the senate of all the anxiety of military proceedings, his real object to secure the unlimited control of the army."—Abbott. This political subjection was peculiarly irksome to the Jews. As they read the prophecies they were the chosen people of God. They believed that, though now down-trodden, they would yet trample their enemies under foot, and under the lead of the Messiah obtain universal dominion. Of his coming they were now in daily expectation, and hence, when John announced him "at hand," he struck a chord which thrilled the nation from centre to circumference.

Pontius Pilate being governor.—"During the time which elapsed between Christ's childhood and his baptism, the political constitution of Palestine had undergone a radical change. On the death of Herod the Great his kingdom had been apportioned between his three sons : Archelaus, with the title of Ethnarch, received one half of his father's dominions—Judea, Samaria, and Idumea ; but after a reign of ten years he was banished, in consequence of complaints by his subjects, and his dominions were added to the province of Syria. Pontius Pilate, its fifth governor, arrived there A.D. 25, 26—that is, a little prior to the commencement of John's public ministry. Herod Antipas remained tetrarch of Galilee and Perea forty-two years, and therefore throughout the whole ministry of our Lord.—Abbott."

Chap. III.

Luke 3 : 1, 2.

Summer of J.C. 30.

Herod being tetrarch of Galilee, and his brother Philip tetrarch of Iturea, and the region of Trachonitis, and Lysanias the tetrarch of Abilene, Annas and Caiaphas being the high priests, the word of God came unto John the son of Zacharias

His brother Philip was not the same as the first husband of Herodias spoken of in Mark 6 : 17, and alluded to in Matt. 14 : 3. He was disinherited by his father, and remained a private citizen. Philip the tetrarch was the youngest son of Herod the Great, and the best of the family. He reigned thirty-six years.

Annas and Caiaphas being the high-priests—more literally, in the high-priesthood of Annas and Caiaphas. The Jews recognized but one high-priest, who held his office originally for life. His functions were, however, sometimes divided, one officer presiding over the Sanhedrin, the other supervising the matters of religion ; and some traces of this division are found in the early history of the Jews (2 Kings 25 : 18). Annas was the father-in-law of Caiaphas, and was removed by the Roman government, and Caiaphas appointed by Pontius Pilate in his place. It is probable that the Jews did not recognize this substitution, but continued to regard Annas as their real high-priest, a fact which would explain the language here, and in Acts 4 : 6.—Abbott.

John " was of the priestly order by both parents, for his father Zacharias was himself a priest of the course of Abia (1 Chron. 24 : 10), and Elizabeth was of the daughters of Aaron (Luke 1 : 5). The divine mission of John was the subject of prophecy many centuries before his birth, for Matthew (3 : 3) tells us it was John who was prefigured by Isaiah (40 : 3) and by Malachi (3 : 1). His birth—a birth not according to the ordinary laws of nature—was foretold by an angel sent from God, who assigned to him the name of John (the grace of the Lord), to signify either that he was to be born of God's especial favor, or perhaps that he was to be the harbinger of grace. The angel Gabriel, moreover, proclaimed the character and office of this wonderful child even before his conception, foretelling that he would be filled with the Holy Ghost from the first moment of his existence, and appear as the great reformer of his countrymen ; another Elijah in the boldness with which he would speak truth and rebuke vice ; but, above all, as the chosen forerunner and herald of the long-expected Messiah. A single verse contains all that we know of John's history for a space of thirty years—the whole period which elapsed between his birth and the comin the wilderness of Judea. And the same John had his raiment of camel's hair, and a leathern girdle about his loins ; and his meat was locusts and wild honey. And he came into all the country about Jordan, mencement of his public ministry (Luke 1 : 80).”—Earnest Hawkins. His history was short, but intensely dramatic. “His was one of those lives which are lost to themselves that they may spring up in others. He came both in grandeur and in beauty like a summer storm, which, falling in rain, is lost in the soil, and reappears neither as vapor nor cloud, but transfused into flowers and fruit.”—Beecher.

Wilderness.—This was a rough, mountainous, and sparsely settled region, lying along the western margin of the Dead Sea and the river Jordan. It contained some villages, and also many scattered inhabitants ; but a considerable portion of it would properly be called a wilderness (1 Sam. 25 : 1, 2). Josephus relates that about this time many devout men among the Jews, disgusted with the wickedness of the age, retired to desert places, and there, becoming teachers of a purer morality, gathered disciples about them ; he mentions by name, however, none but the Baptist.

Camel's hair.—A coarse, cheap cloth is still made in the East, from the long, shaggy hair of the camel, and is extensively worn by the poorer classes. It was the common dress of the Jewish prophets, and is the sackcloth referred to in the Scriptures.

Leathern girdle.—Girdles formed a regular part of the dress, and were usually of linen or silk. Their use was to keep the outer garment close to the body. The austerity of John was shown by his girdle being of leather.

Locusts and wild honey.—Burckhardt says : “The Bedouins of Arabia are accustomed to eat locusts. At Medina and Tayf are locust shops where these animals are sold by measure. In Egypt and Nubia and Syria they are eaten by only the poorest beggars, and are generally regarded with disgust. When eaten, they are sometimes fried in butter, and mixed with wild honey, and this honey is still plentifully gathered from the trees and rocks of the desert in which the Baptist sojourned. In form and general appearance locusts are not unlike grasshoppers. They are still very numerous in the East, often appearing in such numbers as to darken the sky, and devour in a short time every green thing. The whole earth is sometimes covered with them for a distance of leagues.

Chap. III. Luke 3 : 3-6 ; Matt. 3 : 2-5 ; Mark 1 : 2. J.C. 30.

preaching the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins ; saying, Repent ye, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand. As it is written in the prophets, saying, Behold, I send my messenger before thy face, which shall prepare thy way before thee. The voice of one crying in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight. Every valley shall be filled, and every mountain and hill shall be brought low ; and the crooked shall be made straight, and the rough ways shall be made smooth. And all flesh shall see the salvation of God.

Then went out to him Jerusalem, and all Judea, and Baptism of repentance.—Baptism was in use among the Jews before the time of John, as the rite of initiation for Gentile proselytes into Judaism. It was regarded as a typical washing away of the defilements of heathenism. The baptism of John was a sign to the people that a thorough renunciation of sin and real amendment of life were necessary for admission into the kingdom of heaven.

Prepare ye the way of the Lord.—It was the custom of Eastern monarchs, when setting out on an expedition, or undertaking a journey through a desert country, to send messengers before them, to open the passes, level the ways, and prepare all things for their passage. The roads in Palestine are wretched at their best estate ; but the custom of the farmers to gather up the stones from the fields and cast them into the highways renders them dangerous, and, at times, almost impassable. Dr. Thomson relates that when Ibrahim Pasha, some years ago, proposed to visit the Lebanon, the emeers and sheikhs sent forth a general proclamation, somewhat in the style of this passage, directing all the inhabitants to assemble along the proposed route, and prepare the way before him. The same was done in 1845, on a grander scale, when the Sultan visited Brusa. The stones were gathered out of the roads, "the crooked ways were made straight, and the rough places smooth."

All Judea, etc.—An indefinite expression, indicating great multitudes. It shows the profound impression which John had produced. The nature of his announcement, together with the expectation of the time, was enough to produce this effect.

Chap. III.

Matt. 3 : 5, 6 ; Luke 3 : 7. Summer of J.C. 30.

all the region round about Jordan, and were baptized of him in Jordan, confessing their sins.

But when he saw many of the Pharisees and Saddu-

Confessing their sins.—"The confession of evil works is the first beginning of good works."—Augustine.

Pharisees.—The most numerous and influential class of religionists among the Jews, supposed to have originated about three centuries before Christ, when the national institutions of Judea were threatened with destruction from the influx of Greek manners and opinions, their object being to keep the Jews a separate people. Hence their name, which denotes separated. Their intense patriotism made them at once popular, and they soon acquired a controlling influence in the nation. They were the religionists of their age, and held themselves to a strict observance of ecclesiastical rules, mainly drawn from the numberless "traditions of the elders," which had accumulated about the law of Moses, and some of which were of the most trivial and ridiculous character. They were proud, formal, and self-righteous, but not generally wealthy, or given to luxury. Their besetting sin appears to have been hypocrisy. According to Josephus, they believed in the immortality of the soul, and the resurrection of the body at the last day. They held, too, that the soul of a good man might pass (transmigrate) into another body, but that the soul of the bad underwent eternal torment ; and that some, but not all, things are the work of fate : that angels, good and bad, interfere in human affairs, and that they were justified by their own observance of the law, and by the merits of Abraham, who, by his obedience, had secured the peculiar favor of God to his descendants. The Pharisees were not a distinct sect, but represented simply a phase of religious thought. They were themselves divided into numerous sects.

Sadducees.—The Sadducees are supposed to have originated with Zadok, a Jewish doctor, who lived about two hundred and fifty years before Christ, and their leading tenet seems to have been the denial of all that the Pharisees affirmed ; they, however, accepted the five books of Moses. They were few in number, but powerful from their wealth and social position. They were of the priestly class, but skeptical of the truths which they should have preached, and which the best men of their age cherished. Not popular like the Pharisees, they were not leaders of the masses, nor in sympathy with the common people. Self-indulgent, proud, and ambitious, they used the national religion simply as a means to promote their political power and

Chap. III.

Luke 3 : 7-9.

Summer of J.C. 30.

cees come to his baptism, he said unto them, O generation of vipers, who hath warned you to flee from the wrath to come? Bring forth, therefore, fruits worthy of repentance, and begin not to say within yourselves, We have Abraham to our father : for I say unto you, that God is able of these stones to raise up children unto Abraham. And now also the axe is laid unto the root of the trees : every tree therefore which bringeth importance. Thoroughly worldly, selfish, and infidel, they lacked even the one virtue which redeemed the Pharisee—patriotism. Speaking of the Pharisees and Sadducees, Geikie says (vol. i. 68) : “The one were the High Churchmen of their nation, the others the Rationalists.”

Generation of vipers.—More literally, “offspring of vipers.” This is addressed to the Pharisees and Sadducees, and John probably means to imply that they are of the “seed of the serpent,” notwithstanding their boasted descent from Abraham. They were thus classed among those who should be bruised by the seed of the woman (Gen. 3 : 15). The serpent among the Jews was a symbol of the devil, and the phrase may be interpreted by John 8 : 44. On this passage Calvin remarks : “He calls them a generation of vipers, rather than vipers, that he may set a mark on the virulent malignity of their whole order ; for his object was not merely to reprove the few of those who were present, but rather the entire body ; as if he should have said that both their sects brought forth nothing but serpents.” Vipers are a serpent of peculiarly malignant temper and venomous bite.

Wrath to come.—The impending doom of the Jewish nation foretold by Malachi (3 : 2 ; 4 : 5) in connection with the fore-runner of the Messiah.

Bring forth fruits.—“John did not demand tears. He did not require they should sit for weeks on an anxious seat, or that they should frequent inquiry meetings for months. If you are sorry, show it by doing better, he said. Let honester, purer, and kindlier lives be proof of the sincerity of your penitence.”—Eggleston.

We have Abraham to our father.—The especial pride and greatest blunder of the Jewish nation—the imputation of Abraham's righteousness to their credit. John preached individual “repentance,” and the judging of each tree “by its fruit,” as his Master did after him.

Chap. III.

Luke 3 : 9-13.

Summer of J.C. 30.

not forth good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire.

And the people asked him, saying, What shall we do then ? He answereth and saith unto them, He that hath two coats, let him impart to him that hath none ; and he that hath meat let him do likewise.

Then came also publicans to be baptized, and said unto him, Master, what shall we do ? And he said unto them, Exact no more than that which is appointed you.

Two coats.—"Two tunics. The inner garment worn next to the skin, generally with sleeves, and reaching usually to the knees, sometimes to the ankles. Two tunics indicate but small wealth. Even the poor can spare something for the still poorer."—Abbott.

Publicans.—As early as the second Punic War, the Roman senate found it convenient to farm the direct taxes and customs of the empire to capitalists, who undertook to pay a given sum into the public treasury, and so received the name of publicani. These capitalists generally resided in Rome, and had subordinates living in the provinces, who had under them customs officers, usually natives of the districts in which they lived, employed in the actual collection of the taxes from the people. These agents and their underlings were encouraged in the most fraudulent and vexatious exactions ; they overcharged systematically (Luke 3 : 13), brought false accusations of smuggling in hopes of obtaining hush-money (Luke 19 : 8), and resorted to every possible mode of extortion. The Jews bore the Roman yoke with great impatience, and were told by many of the Scribes, that the paying of tribute was unlawful (Matt. 22 : 17). The native tax-gatherer was therefore held in great detestation. He was not only an extortioner, but a traitor and apostate, defiled by intercourse with the heathen, and the willing tool of the Roman oppressor, and so was cast out of society, and classed with sinners—thieves, adulterers, and other abandoned characters. He is said by some to have been forbidden to enter the temple, or any synagogue, and not to have been allowed to engage in public prayer, to hold judicial office, or to give evidence in courts of justice. The same method of raising taxes is pursued at the present day in Turkey, and was the immediate cause of the rising in European Turkey, which brought on the recent war.

Chap. III.

Luke 3 : 14-17 ; Matt. 3 : 11.

J.C. 30.

And the soldiers likewise demanded of him, saying, And what shall we do ? And he said unto them, Do violence to no man, neither accuse any falsely ; and be content with your wages. •

And as the people were in expectation, and all men mused in their hearts of John, whether he were the Christ, or not ; John answered, saying unto them all, I indeed baptize you with water unto repentance ; but one mightier than I cometh, the latchet of whose shoes I am not worthy to unloose : he shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost and with fire. Whose fan is in his Soldiers.—Probably Romans. The wages of this class were about three cents a day, with a meagre ration in addition. Mutinies on account of pay were frequent, especially among the soldiers of dependent kings. And in that age, when soldiers looked with contempt upon civilians, acts of violence were common on the part of the military. John, like Paul, enjoins upon every man the duties suited to his station.

Whether he were the Christ.—"This shows the deep impression made by John, as well as the general expectation that the Messiah would speedily come. John's humble declaration shows his moral greatness."—Riddle.

One mightier than I cometh would be more literally rendered, "There cometh He that is mightier than I."

The latchet of whose shoes.—At first, in order to keep the feet from the sharp stones, or the burning sand, small pieces of wood called sandals, were bound by thongs upon the soles. Leather, or skins of beasts dressed, afterwards were used. It was the business of the lowest servants to remove the master's sandals on his entering his dwelling. The same custom still exists among the Mohammedans. The idea is that John considered himself unworthy to perform the most humble office for so exalted a personage as the Messiah. When Dr. Bonar went to the Turkish mosque in Jerusalem, which stands where once the temple stood, a poor Arab boy followed him as shoe-bearer, untying the doctor's shoes at the gate of the mosque, and then bearing them after him, from place to place, until he came out into the street again.

With the Holy Ghost, and with fire.—The descent of the Holy Spirit on the day of Pentecost was a fulfilment of this prediction. But this baptism applied to comparatively few. John's

Chap. III.

Luke 3 : 17, 18.

Summer of J.C. 30.

hand, and he will thoroughly purge his floor, and will gather the wheat into his garner ; but the chaff he will burn with fire unquenchable. And many other things in his exhortation preached he unto the people.

language denotes a general benefit. It therefore refers to the Spirit of Truth promised by Christ in John 16 : 13 and 15 : 16. Rev. W. Arthur compares the baptism of fire to the operation of an army against a besieged fortress. The army has cannon, powder, and ball, with which to batter it down ; but of themselves these are powerless. But put this powerless powder and ball into the powerless cannon, and apply one spark of fire ! Instantly the powder is a flash of lightning, and the cannon ball a thunderbolt, which smites as if it were sent from heaven.

His fan.—Threshing, among the Jews, was done in an open space, without walls or covering, called a threshing-floor, trodden down hard, and usually on elevated ground, to take advantage of the wind in winnowing. The grain was trodden out by oxen or beaten with flails, and was then separated from the chaff by a fan—a fork with several prongs, or a broad shovel, which was held in the hand, and used to throw up the mingled heap against the wind, when the chaff was blown away.

Shall thoroughly purge would be better rendered, “ Shall cleanse his floor from one end to the other.”—Alford. “ Very little use is now made of the fan, but I have seen it employed to cleanse the floor of the refuse dust, which the owner throws away as useless.”—Thomson.

Garner.—Usually a dry subterranean vault for storing grain ; the emblem of the kingdom of God on earth and in heaven.

Unquenchable fire.—“ There was danger lest, after they had been separated, the chaff should be blown again among the wheat by the changing of the wind. To prevent this, fire was set to the chaff on the windward side, which crept on, and never gave over, till all was consumed (Isa. 5 : 24).”—Burder.

Many other things preached he.—“ The foregoing passages are not the report of a single sermon, but a summary embodying the spirit of John's teaching at this time. After the baptism of Jesus the character of his ministry changed, and he proclaimed the ‘ Lamb of God that taketh away the sins of the world ’ (John 1 : 29-36). Now he was not proclaiming the Messiah, but preparing the way for the Messiah ; thence the difference between his answer here and that of Jesus in John 6 : 29, and of Paul in Acts 16 : 31, to the question, What shall we do ? Theirs was the answer of the New Testament ; this was the answer of the last of the Old Testament prophets.”—Abbott.

Chap. III. Matt. 3 : 13-16 ; Mark 1 : 9 ; Luke 3 : 21, 22. J.C. 31.

Then cometh Jesus from Nazareth of Galilee to Jordan unto John, to be baptized of him. The Voice from Heaven.
But John forbade him, saying, I have need to be baptized of thee, and comest thou to me? And Jesus answering said unto him, Suffer it to be so now : for thus it becometh us to fulfill all righteousness. Then he suffered him.

And Jesus, when he was baptized, went up straightway out of the water ; and lo, while he was praying, the heavens were opened unto him, and he saw the Spirit of God descending in a bodily shape like a dove, and light-

To be baptized of him.—"There is no more strangeness in his having been baptized by John than in his keeping the passovers. The one rite, as the other, belonged to sinners ; and among the transgressors he was numbered."—Alford.

Suffer it to be so now.—"He received it as ratifying the mission of his great forerunner—the last and greatest child of the Old Dispensation, the earliest herald of the New ; and he also received it as the beautiful symbol of moral purification and the humble inauguration of a ministry which came not to destroy the Law, but to fulfil. . . . He does not say, 'I must,' but 'Thus it becometh us.' He does not say, 'Thou hast no need to be baptized of me,' but, 'Suffer it to be so now.'"—Farrar.

Fulfill all righteousness.—John was aware of Christ's divine dignity ; but Jesus makes this reply. He was circumcised, kept the Passover and Jewish Sabbath, and observed the other laws of Moses. It then became him to submit to the initiatory rite of John's dispensation as an introduction to his own.—Condensed from Scott.

The heavens were opened.—Stephen speaks of a similar appearance in Acts 7 : 56. Livy, alluding to a supposed like phenomenon, says (Lib. xxii. c. 1) : "The heavens appeared to be rent with a wide chasm, and where it was opened a great light appeared."

Like a dove.—Not necessarily a dove, but a dove-like, radiant appearance. So Milton says :

"with mighty wings outspread, Dove-like, sat'st brooding on the vast abyss."

Par. Lost, i. 20.

Chap. III.

Matt. 3 : 16, 17 ; Luke 3 : 23.

J.C. 31.

ing upon him ; and lo a voice from heaven, saying, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased.

And Jesus himself began to be about thirty years of age.

" The dove was historically connected in the Jewish mind with the abatement of the waters after the flood, and has become, as well as the olive-branch, a symbol of peace among all Christian people ; and it is referred to by Christ as a symbol of harmlessness and gentleness."—Abbott.

A voice from heaven.—" As true a voice, with as true an articulation, as ever came from human or superhuman organs of utterance "—Whedon. The phrase would be more literally rendered, " From out the heavens."

This is my beloved son, or, according to the best authorities, " This is my Son, the beloved." " Christians are called ' Sons of God ' (1 John 3 : 2) ; but nowhere is the term ' beloved Son ' applied by God to any one but Jesus Christ, to whom it is given both here and in the hour of his transfiguration" (Matt. 17 : 5). —Abbott. We know not what opening of soul came upon Jesus with this divine light. We know not what cords were loosed and what long-bound attributes unfolded—as buds held by winter unroll in the spring. But from this moment Jesus became " THE CHRIST ! He relinquished his home and his ordinary labors. He assumed an authority never before manifested, and moved with a dignity never afterward laid aside."—Beecher. " The appellation THE CHRIST indicates that he to whom it belongs is the anointed prophet, priest, and king—not that he was anointed with material oil, but that he was divinely appointed, qualified, commissioned, and accredited to be the saviour of men. . . . As to his being accredited, every miraculous event performed in reference to him or by him may be viewed as included in this species of anointing—especially the visible descent of the Spirit on him in his baptism."—Kittó.

CHAPTER IV.

THE TEMPTATION.

THEN was Jesus (being full of the Holy Ghost as he returned from Jordan) led up of the Spirit into the wilderness to be tempted of the devil. And he was there Jesus was led up.—The expression, the “ Spirit driveth him,” employed by Mark, is stronger than this of Matthew’s taken as the text. It denotes some such irresistible impulse as often acted on the minds of the ancient prophets (Ezek. 40 : 2).

Wilderness.—No doubt a more secluded part of the desert in which John was preaching. Tradition locates the scene of the Temptation on the eastern slope of the mountain chain of Judea, north of Jericho, and near the Jordan, in a very desolate region, uninhabited and the haunt of wild beasts. Here is an “ exceedingly high mountain,” which, in allusion to the forty days’ fast, is called Quarantania. Thomson says that “ the side facing the plain is as perpendicular, and apparently as high, as the rock of Gibraltar ; and upon the very summit are still visible the ruins of a very ancient convent.” Robinson speaks of it as “ a perpendicular wall of rock twelve or fifteen hundred feet above the plain.” Stanley thinks the scene was east of the Jordan. It is impossible to locate it with certainty, nor is it important to do so.

To be tempted.—The word means to try the nature of a thing, as metals are tried by fire ; to test moral qualities, to see if they will endure ; and to entice away from virtue by suggesting motives to evil. “ The probation of the desert was only an outburst, more than usually violent, of that which had attended him all through, as a condition of his humanity. There are, however, supreme moments of trial, victory in which decides the color of our life, and breaks the force of future temptations in the same directions ; and such was that of the wilderness retirement.”—Geikie.

The Devil.—The Greek word denotes slanderer, or accuser. In the Old Testament he is called Satan, or “ the adversary.” In Jude he is spoken of as the leader of those angels who “ kept not their first estate.” Everywhere in Scripture he is characterized as full of subtlety, art, envy, and hatred to mankind. By some he is regarded as simply the personification of the evil powers who tenant the nether world, it being supposed that no one spirit could hold absolute and continued dominion in a realm whose essential element is disorder.

Chap. IV. Matt. 4 : 2-6 ; Mark 1 : 13 ; Luke 4 : 2, 9. J.C. 31.

forty days and forty nights with the wild beasts ; and in those days he did eat nothing : and when they were ended, he afterward hungered.

And when the tempter came to him, he said, If thou Temptation
of Want. be the Son of God, command that these stones be made bread.

But Jesus answered and said, It is written, Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God.

Then the devil taketh him up into the holy city, and setteth him on a pinnacle of the temple, and saith unto him, If thou be the Son of God, cast thyself down from Wild beasts.—This graphic touch, peculiar to Mark, enhances the desolate character of the scene. Jesus was not only alone, but in bodily danger, surrounded with mortal perils.

Did eat nothing.—"The body is subject to the mental states, and the forty days were doubtless spent in a state of spiritual excitement that rendered hunger impossible."—Eggleston. Both Moses (Ex. 34 : 38) and Elijah (1 Kings 19 : 8) fasted forty days.

He afterward hungered.—"The wants of His human body were no longer overborne. Here, for the first time, the Gospel presents our Lord as sharing our physical needs. Even when weakest physically, when the temptation would be strongest, He overcame in our nature what enslaves our unaided nature."—Schaff.

If thou be the Son of God.—The demons whom Jesus cast out invariably recognized him as the Son of God. This eminent spirit of evil must have known his true character. His words therefore do not imply doubt, but are a taunt. They display the audacity of the Evil One in thus presuming to tempt Divinity.

Man shall not live by bread alone.—Satan reminds Jesus of his present destitution, and is answered by these words, which are a direct allusion to Deut. 8 : 3, where the Israelites, without food and in a perilous situation in the Wilderness, were supplied with manna from heaven. He thus tells Satan that in no strait, however desperate, should man lose his confidence in God.

Cast thyself down.—The first was a temptation to distrust Providence ; this is to presume upon it. And to aid this assault the Devil quotes Scripture, not literally, but as accurately as could be expected from one of his character and for his purposes.

Chap. IV.

Matt. 4 : 6-11 ; Luke 4 : 10, 5, 6.

J.C. 31.

hence : for it is written, He shall give his angels charge concerning thee, to keep thee : and in their hands they shall bear thee up, lest at any time thou dash thy foot against a stone.

Temptation
of Fanaticism.

Jesus said unto him, It is written again, Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God.

Again, the devil taketh him up into an exceeding high mountain, and sheweth him in a moment of time all the kingdoms of the world, and the glory of them ; and saith unto him, All these things will I give thee (for that is delivered unto me ; and to whomsoever I will, I give it), if thou wilt fall down and worship me.

Temptation
of Ambition.

Then saith Jesus unto him, Get thee hence, Satan: for it is written, Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve.

Then the devil, when he had ended all the temptation,

All the kingdoms of the world.—"To Jesus, who as man must conquer the world through suffering and death, this was a real temptation."—Schaff. "Our Lord conquered in the first temptation Want, in the second Fanaticism, in the third Ambition—three enemies that we have to fight. He conquered the flesh, the devil, and the world, and became the Captain of our Salvation. He will help us in trial. We shall not be tempted beyond our strength."—Eggleston.

Get thee hence.—Some authorities add the words "behind me;" as the same word, signifying "Get thee away," is used in Matt. 16 : 23, where Jesus speaks to Peter, and says, "Get thee behind me, Satan."

The Temptation.—Commentators have vexed themselves to determine the precise part of the temple referred to as the pin-nacle, and to locate the "exceeding high mountain" from which Jesus was shown "all the kingdoms of the world, and the glory of them ;" but all such inquiries would seem to be unnecessary. It cannot be supposed that Jesus was transferred by the Evil One to Jerusalem, and from no mountain in Judea could he have seen a tenth part of the then Roman Empire. The account therefore cannot be taken literally, but must be understood as a symbolic representation of Christ's mental experience in the Desert.

Chap. IV.

Matt. 4 : 11 ; Luke 4 : 13.

J.C. 31.

Jesus remains without Sin.

leaveth him for a season, and, behold, angels came and ministered unto him.

Viewed in this light, it is not only divested of all improbability, but presents internal evidence of being historically true. What more suitable than this silent, solitary preparation for the great work before him—a work no less than the re-creation of a world? and what more natural than his trial by the powers of Evil—powers which every man, even if he deny a personal devil, must allow to exert an active and powerful influence in all human affairs? The following are the different views which theologians have taken of the Temptation : That it is (1.) An external history in which appears a personal devil. (2.) An inner experience, a soul-struggle with the powers of darkness. (3.) A vision, like that of Peter, and of Paul. (4.) A parable in the form of a narrative. (5.) A myth, or poem, true in idea, but not true in fact. “The practical benefit of this mysterious and obscure passage in the life of Jesus does not depend upon our ability to reduce it by analysis to some equivalent in human experience. It is enough that the fact stands clear, that he who was henceforth to be the spiritual leader of the race came to his power among men by means of trial and suffering. The experience of loneliness, of hunger, and of weariness for forty days, of inward strife against selfishness, pride, and the glittering falsities of vanity, brought him into sympathy with the trials through which must pass every man who seeks to rise out of animal conditions into a true manhood. . . . Suffering has slain millions ; yet, of all who have reached a true moral greatness, not one but has been nourished by suffering. Perfection and suffering seem, in this sphere, inseparably joined as effect and cause.”—Beecher. “Into the exact nature of the Temptation it seems at once superfluous and irreverent to enter—superfluous, because it is a question in which any absolute decision is for us impossible ; irreverent, because the Evangelists could only have heard it from the lips of Jesus, or of those to whom he communicated it, and our Lord could only have narrated it in the form which conveys at once the truest impression and the most instructive lessons. . . . The one essential point is that the struggle was powerful, personal, intensely real—that Christ, for our sake, met and conquered the tempter’s utmost strength.”—Farrar.

For a season.—He was afterwards subjected to many temptations, not only in the betrayal of Judas, the agony in Gethsemane, and the abandonment on the cross, but throughout his whole life, battling with the same evil influence, embodied in the Pharisees and Jewish rulers. He not only “tasted death for every man,” but “was tempted in all points as we are.”

Chap. V.

John 1 : 19.

Jan.-Feb. J.C. 31.

CHAPTER V.

THE FIRST FOLLOWERS.

AND this is the record of John, when the Jews sent

The record of John.—It is evident from the first three gospels that the Temptation followed immediately upon the Baptism of Jesus. During the interval John had remained at Bethany preaching and baptizing, and it was at its close that he bore the testimony given in this chapter. His reputation had now spread far and wide, and attracted the attention of the rulers at Jerusalem. Confused accounts of his proclamation of the new Kingdom had no doubt come to them, and, acting probably in an official manner, the Sanhedrin sent delegates to inquire who he was, and by what authority he was baptizing. The Sanhedrin was the great council of the nation, a body composed of seventy-two judges, drawn from the chief-priests, the scribes, and elders of the people, and presided over by the ruling high-priest. The tribunal was instituted about two hundred years before Christ, and, till the time when Judea was subjected to the Romans, held the power of life and death. It still had cognizance of all ecclesiastical affairs, and retained the power of trial and sentence in capital cases, but not the right of execution. That was reserved to the Roman governor. The widespread reputation of John is spoken of by Josephus, and, in view of the excitement he was creating, it was natural that the Sanhedrin should desire to know his true character. They had authority to inquire into the pretensions of prophets (Ezek. 44 : 24), and they now sent priests and Levites to question John. The chief duties of the priests were in connection with the service and sacrifices of the temple. In addition they instructed the people, and decided in cases of divorce, leprosy, vows, and ceremonial uncleanness. The Levites were subordinate to the priests, and conducted the music of the sanctuary. They were the porters of the temple—prepared the shew bread, wine, and oil for the sacrifices, opened and shut the gates, and attended as a police force to keep order in the various courts. That this subordinate class is mentioned as sent to John shows that none of the rulers, or leading Pharisees, would condescend to wait personally on this herald of the Almighty. They were the elect children of Abraham, and if the Lord had sent any word to the people it was proper that his messengers should wait upon them in Jerusalem. Thus arrogant, their bitter enmity must have been excited by John's contemptuous declaration that God could of the stones raise up children to Abraham.

Chap. V.

John I : 19-26.

Jan.-Feb. J.C. 31.

priests and Levites from Jerusalem to ask him, Who art thou ? And he confessed, and denied not ; but confessed, I am not the Christ. And they asked him, What then ? Art thou Elias ? And he saith, I am not. Art thou that Prophet ? And he answered, No. Then said they unto him, Who art thou ? that we may give an answer to them that sent us. What sayest thou of thyself ? He said, I am the voice of one crying in the wilderness, Make straight the way of the Lord, as said the prophet Esaias.

And they which were sent were of the Pharisees. And they asked him, and said unto him, Why baptizest thou then, if thou be not that Christ, nor Elias, neither that Prophet ?

John answered them, saying, I baptize with water :

The Christ ; Elias ; that Prophet.—Daniel had, five hundred years before, so definitely fixed the date of Christ's advent that the Jews were now in daily expectation of his appearance. By some it was supposed that Elijah, risen from the dead, would precede him, and by many that the Prophet spoken of by Moses in Deut. 17 : 15 would also attend his coming.

I am the voice.—As if he had said, "Far from being the Messiah, or Elias, or one of the old prophets, I am only a voice, a sound that, as soon as it has expressed the thought of which it is the sign, dies into air, and is known no more."—Fénélon. They supposed that Elijah would personally appear. John denies that he is that prophet, but asserts he is the Elijah foretold in Malachi 4 : 5.

Why baptizeth thou ?—Baptism was practised as an initiatory rite, symbolical of cleansing, upon Gentile proselytes to Judaism. It could be administered only by order of the Sanhedrin, or three local magistrates, and was never practised upon Jews, or those born of proselytes ; for, being born under the covenant, they were already the children of promise. John, no doubt, baptized all who came to him, Jews and Gentiles indiscriminately ; hence the question.

Baptize with water.—The delegates having told John that he had no right to baptize, he answers, "I baptize only with water, but there is one already here who will give you a baptism of fire."

Chap. V.

John I : 26-32.

Jan.-Feb. J.C. 31.

but there standeth one among you, whom ye know not ; he it is, who coming after me is preferred before me, whose shoe's latchet I am not worthy to unloose.

These things were done in Bethabara beyond Jordan, where John was baptizing.

The next day John seeth Jesus coming unto him, and saith, Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world ! This is he of whom I said, After me cometh a man which is Behold the Lamb of God. preferred before me ; for he was before me. And I knew him not ; but that he should be made manifest to Israel, therefore am I come baptizing with water.

And John bare record, saying, I saw the Spirit de-

Bethabara.—Bethany is the name given to this place by the oldest MSS. It was located on the Jordan, about twelve miles north of Jericho, and was probably, as the etymology of the word denotes (house of the ford), a small hamlet near a ferry.

The Lamb of God who taketh away the sins of the world.—A lamb was offered in the Temple every morning and every evening as a part of the daily worship (Ex. 29 : 38). "In such words John embodied a conception which he had heard from the Rabbis since his childhood, for the daily sacrifice, on whose head the sins of Israel were laid by a formal act, was their favorite type of the Messiah, who was hence known by the endearing name of the 'Lamb of God.'"—Geikie. Just as he baptized Jews and Gentiles alike, however, so he extended this sacrificial salvation from Israel to "the world." Even if the allusion was to the Paschal Lamb of the Passover, the figure of the mediatorial sacrifice is the same. Seely gives still further import to the phrase. He says : "The Psalmist describes himself as one of Jehovah's flock, safe under his care. . . . It is the most complete picture of happiness that ever was or can be drawn. It represents that state of mind for which all alike sigh, and the want of which makes life a failure to most ; it represents that Heaven which is everywhere if we could but enter it, and yet almost nowhere because so few of us can. The Baptist was no Lamb of God. He was a wrestler with life. . . . He was the shepherd's dog, not one of the lambs of the flock. He recognized the superiority of him whose confidence had never been disturbed, whose steadfast peace no agitations of life had ever ruffled. He did obeisance to the royalty of inward happiness."

Chap. V.

John 1 : 32-38.

Jan.-Feb. J.C. 31.

scending from heaven like a dove, and it abode upon him. And I knew him not ; but he that sent me to baptize with water, the same said unto me, Upon whom thou shalt see the Spirit descending, and remaining on him, the same is he which baptizeth with the Holy Ghost. And I saw, and bare record that this is the Son of God.

Again the next day after, John stood, and two of his
The First Disciples. disciples ; and looking upon Jesus as he walked, he saith, Behold the Lamb of God ! And the two disciples heard him speak, and they followed Jesus.

Then Jesus turned, and saw them following, and saith unto them, What seek ye ?

They said unto him, Rabbi (which is to say, being interpreted, Master), where dwellest thou ?

I knew him not.—John means that he did not know him as the Messiah. His hesitation to baptize Jesus before learning his true mission shows that he recognized his moral superiority, and it implies a previous personal acquaintance, which is rendered the more probable by the near relationship of Mary and Elizabeth.

The Son of God.—Exactly what meaning John attached to this phrase we do not know, but he distinctly affirms the pre-existence of Christ, his own great inferiority to him, and the fact that he was the promised Messiah.

Two of his disciples.—Commonly supposed to be Andrew and John the Evangelist, to whom we owe the only account of the notable events immediately following the Temptation—viz., the testimony of John the Baptist to the Messiahship of Jesus, and the calling of the first disciples. Farrar thinks that John may have been employed in selling at Jerusalem the fish caught in the Lake of Galilee by his father Zebedee and his brother James, who owned their boats and hired numbers of servants, while Andrew was enabled immediately to find his own brother Simon, who must have been with him attending on the preaching of John the Baptist.

Rabbi.—A title signifying teacher, or, as in the text, master. The term seems to have come from Assyria. Ahasuerus set a Rab, or governor, over every table of his splendid feast (Est.

Chap. V.

John 1 : 39-42.

Jan.-Feb. J.C. 31.

He saith unto them, Come and see.

They came and saw where he dwelt, and abode with him that day : for it was about the tenth hour. One of the two which heard John speak, and followed him, was Andrew, Simon Peter's brother. He first findeth his own brother Simon, and saith unto him, We have found the Messias (which is, being interpreted, the Christ).

And he brought him to Jesus. And when Jesus beheld him, he said, Thou art Simon the son of Jona : thou shalt be called Cephas (which is, by interpretation, A stone).

1 : 8). Among the Jews of to-day Rab is a more dignified title than Rabbi, and Rabban more exalted than either. The same degrees seem to have existed in the time of Christ. Mary addresses Jesus by this latter name at the tomb, and Gamaliel was one of the seven Rabbans of his time.

The tenth hour.—The Jews reckoned the day from six in the morning ; the Romans, as we do, from midnight. The tenth hour, therefore, might have been either ten A.M. or four P.M., but probably it was the latter, and the two disciples were led by Jesus to one of the temporary booths under which the multitudes who had gone out to John's preaching and baptism found shelter—it being a sort of primitive "camp-meeting."

Thou shalt be called Cephas.—"Cephas" is the Aramaic, as "Peter" is the Greek, form of the word "rock." In Matt. 16 : 18 Jesus explains why he gave this name to Simon, by saying, "upon this rock I will build my church." Peter, though during the lifetime of Jesus impulsive, hasty, and unstable, showed, after his death, all the strength, firmness, and endurance of a rock. But the application of this name to him shows not only that Jesus possessed that knowledge of men which is the birthright of all royal natures ; it also shows that then—at the very beginning of his public career—he had formed the plan, and foreseen the progress, of a kingdom which should endure forever. "His quick perception of the character and capabilities of Peter is a fine illustration of the prediction of Isaiah (11 : 2, 3), 'And the Spirit of the Lord shall rest upon him, the spirit of wisdom and understanding. . . . And shall make him of quick understanding,' etc."—Eggleston.

Chap. V.

John I : 43-48.

Jan.-Feb. J.C. 31.

The day following, Jesus would go forth into Galilee, and findeth Philip, and saith unto him, Follow me.

Now Philip was of Bethsaida, the city of Andrew and Peter. Philip findeth Nathanael, and saith unto him, We have found him, of whom Moses in the law, and the prophets, did write, Jesus of Nazareth, the son of Joseph.

And Nathanael said unto him, Can there any good thing come out of Nazareth ?

Philip saith unto him, Come and see.

Jesus saw Nathanael coming to him, and saith of him, Behold an Israelite indeed, in whom is no guile !

Nathanael saith unto him, Whence knowest thou me ?

Jesus answered and said unto him, Before that Philip called thee, when thou wast under the fig-tree, I saw thee.

Nathanael was of Cana in Galilee, a town only nine miles from Nazareth, and that he did not know Jesus shows that the latter had till now lived a very obscure life. "There seems no reasonable doubt that Bartholomew, who is always coupled with Philip by the other evangelists, is the Nathanael of John. Bartholomew is not a name, but signifies the son of Tolmai."—Eggleston.

Can any thing good come out of Nazareth?—The Nazarenes, and indeed all the Galileans, were a mixed race, partly of Gentile origin, and were contaminated with many vices. They were proverbially boorish and stupid, and had produced no teachers or prophets (John 7 : 52). They were held in great contempt by the Jews of Jerusalem.

Fig-tree.—In the warm Eastern countries this tree grows much larger than in our Southern States, and its broad leaves and thick-spreading branches afford a pleasant shade from the heat of the day. Numerous passages in the rabbinical writers indicate that its shade was a favorite resort for reading, conversation, and prayer. "It was the custom of pious Jews . . . to study their crishma, or office of daily prayer, under a fig-tree. . . . There are moments when the grace of God stirs sensibly in the human heart, when the soul seems to rise upon the eagle wings of hope and prayer into the heaven of heavens. . . . And such a crisis of emotion must the guileless Israelite have known as he sat and prayed and mused in silence under his fig-tree. To the consciousness of such a crisis—a crisis which could only be

Chap. V.

John I : 49-51 ; 2 : 1, 2.

April, J.C. 31.

Nathanael answered and saith unto him, Rabbi, thou art the son of God ; thou art the King of Israel.

Jesus answered and said unto him, Because I said unto thee, I saw thee under the fig-tree, believest thou ? thou shalt see greater things than these. And he saith unto him, Verily, verily, I say unto you, Hereafter ye shall see heaven open, and the angels of God ascending and descending upon the Son of man.

And the third day there was a marriage in Cana of Galilee ; and the mother of Jesus was there : and known to One to whom it was given to read the very secrets of the heart—our Lord appealed.”—Farrar. It was this plain reading of his inmost soul that pierced Nathanael’s heart with instant and intense conviction, and he cried, “Rabbi, thou art the Son of God, thou art the King of Israel !”

King of Israel.—The Jews, understanding the prophecies literally, expected a temporal Messiah who should free them from the Roman yoke, and give them dominion of the world.

The angels of God ascending and descending.—Nathanael should see such supernatural manifestations as would fully show that nature was subject to Christ’s commands, and he in direct communication with heaven.

Cana of Galilee.—Kana, the place of reeds. Thomson is satisfied that the Cana of the Gospel was a village site now called Kefr Kenna, five miles north-west of Nazareth ; Farrar agrees with him. Dr. Robinson thinks it to have been the present Kana el-Jalil, twelve miles north of Nazareth ; Geikie agrees with him. Both views are ably supported. The latter place is now called Kânâ, and travelers describe it as situated on an isolated hill, facing to the south-east, and rising boldly from the margin of a wide plain, called Bûttauf. Deep ravines are on two of its sides, and almost shut it off from the surrounding country. The houses are built of limestone, cut and laid up in a rude fashion, and fragments of water-jars and the ruins of ancient cisterns are scattered about its streets, but the place is deserted, and has not had a human inhabitant within fifty years. It is now the home of the leopard and the wild boar, and its immediate neighborhood is covered with a thick jungle, and is so wild that it is the favorite hunting-ground of the Bedouins. Galilee at this time included all the country south of Phenicia, and north of Samaria, which lay between the Jordan and the Mediterranean.

Chap. V.

John 2 : 2-7.

April, J.C. 31.

both Jesus was called, and his disciples, to the marriage.

Jesus at the Wedding.

And when they wanted wine, the mother of Jesus saith unto him, They have no wine.

Jesus saith unto her, Woman, what have I to do with thee ? mine hour is not yet come.

His mother saith unto the servants, Whatsoever he saith unto you, do it.

And there were set there six waterpots of stone, after the manner of the purifying of the Jews, containing two or three firkins apiece. Jesus saith unto them, Fill the

The marriage.—The wedding feast among the Jews often lasted seven or eight days (Gen. 28 : 27 ; Judg. 14 : 14). The marriage took place at the house of the bride ; the feast which followed, at the house of the bridegroom. The guests were of two classes—those invited, and those who came without invitation. The latter were expected to bring presents. The governor was a person appointed to preside over the feast, and to superintend the servants, and was required to taste the wine previous to setting it before the guests.

Woman.—A form of address used in the East as the word "Madam" is with us. It was applied to ladies of rank, even by their servants ; and Jesus when on the cross used it in addressing his mother. In this answer to her, as rendered in the common version, there is an apparent harshness which is not warranted by the context. Her direction to the servants shows that in his apparent denial she understood a real granting of her request, and it seems also to imply that, though this was his first public miracle, she was already acquainted with his extraordinary powers.

Six water-pots.—These vessels were to supply water for the washings usual at feasts (Mark 7 : 4). There could be no collusion or imposture here, as they were water-vessels, and could have no remnants of wine in them (Mark 5 : 10) ; and the large quantity which they held could not have been brought in unobserved.—Alford.

Firkins.—The Hebrew bath, a measure of about seven and a half gallons, is supposed to be intended. If this be so, and if we suppose that all the water in the jars was converted into wine, the quantity of wine was fully a hundred and twenty gallons.

Chap. V.

John 2 : 7-10.

April, J.C. 31.

waterpots with water. And they filled them up to the brim. And he saith unto them, Draw out now, and bear unto the governor of the feast. And they bare it.

When the ruler of the feast had tasted the water that was made wine, and knew not whence it was (but the servants which drew the water knew), the governor of the feast called the bridegroom, and saith unto him, Every man at the beginning doth set forth good wine ; and when men have well drunk, then that which is worse : but thou hast kept the good wine until now.

Purifications.—The Jews were unclean if they did not wash both before and after eating. This was done in a formal manner, and was, with the washing of cups, pots, and brazen vessels, a ritual observance on which the Pharisees laid great stress.

Water made wine.—"We see no reason for supposing that the wine of the present occasion was of that kind upon which Scripture places its strongest interdict (Prov. 20 : 1 ; 23 : 31 ; Isa. 22 : 13), rather than of that which is eulogized as a blessing (Ps. 104 : 15 ; Isa. 55 : 1)."—Whedon. This idea of two kinds of wine is one view ; on the other hand, Smith's Bible Dict. (Art. WINE), in the course of an elaborate discussion of original terms and passages, says : "In the condemnatory passages no exception is made in favor of any other kind of liquid, passing under the same name but not invested with the same dangerous qualities. Nor again in these passages is there any condemnation of the substance itself. . . . The condemnation must be understood of excessive use in any case." The practical Christian view seems this : "Jesus, by his life and teachings, does not directly solve the temperance, rather let us say the total abstinence, problem . . . the question of use or abstinence of wines is to be settled by no particular precepts or plain example, but by the application of the general principles that Jesus inculcated to the facts and circumstances of modern society."—Abbott. "He that made wine on that day at the marriage feast in those six water-pots which he commanded to be filled with water, does every year the like in vines. For as what the servants put in the water-pots was changed into wine by the operation of the Lord, just so what the clouds pour forth is changed into wine by the operation of the same law. But at the latter we do not marvel, because it happens every year ; by constant use it hath lost its wonder."—Augustine.

Chap. V.

John 2 : 11, 12.

April, J.C. 31.

This beginning of miracles did Jesus in Cana of Galilee, and manifested forth his glory ; and his disciples believed on him.

After this he went down to Capernaum, he, and his mother, and his brethren, and his disciples ; and they continued there not many days.

A miracle, as the etymology of the word denotes, is simply a wonder, or a wonderful work, but, as commonly used, the term is made to mean "an event or effect contrary to the established constitution and course of things."—Webster. This is doubtless an incomplete definition, and, as so defined, the miracle meets a natural incredulity, because Nature observes certain uniform laws from which, to our eyes, she never appears to deviate ; and as she acts uniformly, so far as we see, we have a right to infer that she acts so universally. But might not a miracle be better defined as the action of a higher law on a lower one, by which the lower is for the time suspended, or made to act in an unusual manner ? Thus, whenever we lift a hand, we overcome the law of gravity—that is, our will suspends for the time the natural action of matter. We know that spirit always controls matter. The extent of its control must depend solely on the strength of the will ; and may we not suppose that the will of the man who by a single look prostrated a band of Roman soldiers, and by a few simple thoughts, scattered here and there among an ignorant people, revolutionized a world, was strong enough to have unlimited control over dead matter ? In this view, the conclusion of Webster's definition of miracle as "a supernatural event," appears more accurate—being an event effected by a power superior to what we are accustomed to call "nature." But similar miracles to some of those of Christ have been done by other men, and this shows that he acted, not in opposition to, but in accordance with, real, but as yet unknown, laws of nature. "Jesus declared that, if the soul were opened up to the Divine presence, this power would be greatly augmented ; that man's higher spiritual elements had natural authority over the physical conditions of this world ; and that faith, prayer, and divine communion in a fervent state would enable his followers to perform miracles that he himself performed."—Beecher. Wherein the miracles of Jesus differed from those of others was in their being freer, greater, and done by the natural action of his own will. Peter says, "In the name of Jesus of Nazareth, rise up and walk." Christ says, "Lazarus, come forth ;" and, "Young man, I say to thee, arise !"

Chap. VI.

John 2 : 13.

April 11-18, J.C. 31.

CHAPTER VI.

THE FIRST PASSOVER.

AND the Jews' passover was at hand, and Jesus went

The Jews' Passover was at hand.—According to the reckoning of Greswell, this passover occurred on the ninth of April, A. D. 28, or in the 31st year of the life of our Lord. An interval of several months had elapsed since the baptism of Jesus ; but with this passover his public work may be said to have begun. The hour had now come (John 2 : 4) when he was to manifest himself to the nation. Three times a year every male inhabitant of Palestine, who was not hindered by sickness or infirmity, was required to be present at the national festivals, and, consequently, on these occasions vast multitudes congregated in Jerusalem. Josephus states that at the passover A.D. 65, there were three millions in attendance, and on one occasion, in the reign of Nero, two million seven hundred thousand. Even larger numbers have been recorded. Though some suppose these numbers to be exaggerated, the attendance must have been large, for it included a majority of the entire male population. To these festivals the Jews came, not only from every part of Palestine, but from every quarter of the world (Acts 2 : 9, 10) ; for, lured away by the greed of gain, or driven from their homes by the iron-handed oppression of the Romans, they were now scattered far and wide over the face of the earth. Jerusalem was the heart of Judaism, and to and from it, set in motion by these festivals, coursed every year the life-blood that kept alive in the Jews, however widely dispersed, the laws and traditions of their forefathers. It was also the brain of the nation, and any thought originating there was quickly borne by the returning pilgrims to the most distant lands where they were scattered. It was therefore the appropriate place, and the passover was the opportune time, for the Messiah to make his first appearance to the waiting nation. (See note, "Feast of the Passover," on p. 55.)

John had proclaimed his coming, and pointed him out to the delegation sent by the rulers, and Jesus would now, in the presence of those rulers, confirm John's testimony by acts asserting his divine authority, and by miracles attesting his Messianic character. The rulers were the appointed representatives of the people. If they should accept him as the Messiah, the nation would follow their example, and every Jew would become a missionary—another Paul—to carry the tidings of salvation to the ends of the earth. Then might be fulfilled what had been promised through Moses, "If ye will obey my

Chap. VI.

John 2 : 13, 14.

April 11-18, J.C. 31.

up to Jerusalem ; and found in the temple those that voice, ye shall be unto me a kingdom of priests, an holy nation" (Ex 19 : 6), and the world might have been subdued by the Jews as a nation, and not by the handful of Galilean fisherman, who went out from among them.

Jesus went up to Jerusalem.—For a time he had sojourned at Capernaum, and had there doubtless been in frequent intercourse with Peter and Andrew, James and John, who had their permanent residence in that city. As they had attached themselves to him at the Jordan, it was natural they should now accompany him to this festival. Joining, probably, one of the many caravans of pilgrims that were now passing through Capernaum, they went up together to the great city.

Jerusalem.—Cæsarea was the residence of the Roman governor, but Jerusalem was the capital, and most noted city, of Palestine. In the time of Christ it covered an area of about one hundred and fifty acres, and is variously estimated to have had a permanent population of from fifty to eighty thousand, but this number affords no adequate idea of the multitudes that crowded its houses and streets, and covered with their tents the surrounding glens and hillsides during the celebration of the annual festivals. Its external aspects at that time did not probably differ greatly from its present appearance. Crowded within an irregular encircling wall, its plain, flat-roofed, windowless houses were huddled together along a network of crooked and narrow streets, without any regard to either symmetry or order. This was the general character of the greater part of the city ; but its blank ugliness was now and then relieved by some magnificent edifice, or broken along the deep ravine of the Tyropœon Valley, which skirted the hills of Zion and Moriah by long ranges of tall buildings, rising one above another, as picturesque and unsightly as the many-storied houses in the old town of Edinburgh, when they are looked at from the Prince's Gardens. The streets were in many places so narrow that three persons could scarcely walk abreast, and, from the absence of sewers, were very filthy ; though in the rainy season, owing to their generally steep and broken surface, they were easily washed by the descending torrents. In summer the offal was gathered in low-wheeled carts, and dumped into the valley of Hinnom, to be consumed by the fire that was there kept continually burning. With the one exception of pure water, brought by aqueduct from Bethlehem and distributed in numerous pools and reservoirs, the city had none of the comforts of our modern towns. There was no interval between the squalid misery of the poor and the redundant luxury of the rich, and even the rich were destitute of many of the conveniences that are deemed indispensable necessities to modern civilization. They had no windows, no cooking-stoves, no chimneys ; a brazier filled with burning coals was the best substitute that wealth could find for our glowing grates and open fire-places, our stoves and ranges and furnaces.

Chap. VI.

John 2 : 13, 14.

April 11-18, J.C. 31.

But though the interior aspect of Jerusalem would have been repulsive to modern eyes, its exterior, then as now, was " beautiful exceedingly." Seen from the Mount of Olives, seated upon its twin hills, the one crowned by the temple, the other by the palace and tower of David, it was more magnificent than any city of the ancient world. Zion is the larger, and, in many respects, the more interesting of these hills. It occupied the whole south-western portion of the city, and its western and southern sides rose abruptly from the valley of Hinnom, in a series of rocky precipices, one above another, like huge stairs, to a height of from one hundred and fifty to three hundred feet. It was higher and larger than Mount Moriah, and its southern and western slopes touched the city walls, high and battlemented, and furnished with towers of such massive dimensions that they seemed absolutely impregnable. Hence the language of David, " Walk about Zion, and go round about her : tell the towers thereof, mark ye well her bulwarks." At the foot of Olivet lies the Kedron, the deep and narrow glen so often crossed by the Saviour ; and near the base of the Mount is the Garden of Gethsemane, to which he so frequently resorted with his disciples. On the opposite side of this glen, and rising from it nearly two hundred feet, in places almost perpendicularly, is Mount Moriah, on which stood the magnificent temple. It occupied with its various enclosures an area of nineteen acres, and a large part of its surface was made artificially level by stupendous walls of stone, built up from the valley below. On the northern side of this area, and overlooking the entire temple courts, was the castle of Antonia, where was quartered the Roman garrison, which was a perpetual reminder to the Jew of the servitude and degradation of his nation. Here were stationed the soldiers who led Jesus away to execution, and, at a later time, rescued Paul from the hands of his infuriated countrymen. At the north-east angle of Antonia a square tower is still standing, whose enormous stones—many of them more than twenty feet long—and the peculiar moulding of their edges, show that the building was of the time of Herod, if not of an even earlier period. It was one of the external defences of the castle, and in it was the Judgment Hall of Pilate, where Jesus was condemned. At the south-east angle of the temple area is also remaining a most interesting relic of ancient Jerusalem, which doubtless dates back to the very days of Solomon. It is a structure nearly eighty feet in height, its lower part

Chap. VI.

John 2 : 13, 14.

April 11-18, J.C. 31.

formed of sixteen courses of beveled stones, their joints so close, and moulding so perfect, that when new it must have produced the effect of relievo-paneling. It was perhaps to these that the disciples pointed when they said, "Master, see what manner of stones, and what buildings, are here." The corner-stones surpass the others in size and finish, measuring twenty feet by six, and seeming designed alike for strength and beauty. It may be that from them Isaiah drew one of his most striking figures : "Behold, I lay in Zion for a foundation, a stone, a tried stone, a precious corner-stone, a sure foundation." The angle springs from the very brow of the valley ; and upon its summit stood in the time of Christ a splendid tower, which united the royal cloisters along the southern side of the temple court to the porch of Solomon, which occupied the eastern side, and overlooked the valley of the Kedron. Josephus thus speaks of the stupendous height of this tower : "If any one looked down from the top of the battlements, or down both those altitudes, he would be giddy, while his sight could not reach to such an immense depth." The site of Jerusalem was unique, and it was itself unlike any city known to ancient or modern history.

The Temple.—Perhaps no building in the world has excited so much attention as the temple which Solomon built at Jerusalem, and its successor, which was rebuilt by Herod just prior to the beginning of the Christian era. To ingratiate himself with the Jewish people, he inaugurated his reign by measures for rebuilding the ruined temple. Multitudes of workmen were gathered from the various parts of Palestine, and a thousand priests were instructed in the arts of stone-cutting and carpentering before the work was begun ; and it was forty-six years before the busy hum of the workmen ceased to be heard, and the edifice was considered completed. The result was a structure whose architectural magnificence has, perhaps, never been surpassed in ancient or modern times. It was not so much a building as a series of structures—one quadrangle within another, each inner standing upon higher ground than the outer, and the innermost, or temple proper, upon a position highest of all. On the very summit of the hill it crowned the city, to which, by its presence, it gave the name of Holy. It was a kind of sacerdotal citadel, of which the temple proper, though its most splendid part, and rising high above the rest, was but a small portion. The material was white marble ; the roof, cedar. Huge gates, magnificently ornamented, admitted the worshiper who ascended the hill to its outer courts, which was called the Court of the Gentiles, not because it was set apart for them, but for the reason that Gentiles, excluded from every other portion of the temple enclosure, were permitted to enter there. Even this outer quad-

Chap. VI.

John 2 : 14.

April 11-18, J.C. 31.

sold oxen, and sheep, and doves, and the changers of range was remarkable for its magnificence. Its walls were considerably elevated, yet, standing upon a lower level, they did not hide the interior courts with their gates and adornments. The largest of these courts was the Stoa Basilica, or Royal Porch. It consisted of a nave and two aisles, six hundred feet in length, and formed by four rows of white marble columns, forty columns in each row. The breadth of the central space was forty-five feet, and its height one hundred. The floor was a mosaic of many-colored stones. This building was wholly open on the side towards the temple, and was connected with the city and the king's palace by a bridge thrown across the ravine. It was the Jewish exchange, a resort for all persons of leisure, who repaired to the temple, as well as a place for the transaction of public, literary, or professional business. But the privileged Jew, ascending a flight of steps, and passing through one of the richly-ornamented doors which gave admission to the sacred inclosure, found himself in the true temple, with its terraced Courts of the Women, of Israel and the Priests, rising one above another with carved doors of cedar and brass, treasury boxes for the gifts, golden and marble tables for the shew-bread, and a silver table covered with gold for the sacred utensils. Within was the inmost temple—the Holy of Holies—veiled from even priestly gaze by the curtain so strangely rent in the hour of Christ's crucifixion. To the outer court of the temple, known as the Court of the Gentiles, persons of all religions and nationalities might resort. Here the people gathered for religious discussion; the scribes taught the law; Christ preached to the people in the last days of his ministry; and here the Christians assembled daily after their Lord's ascension. The temple, from being the centre of Jewish worship, had become the centre of Jewish trade. Thus the great feast-days became market-days. At first, probably, money-changing was conducted quietly in the vestibule, but by degrees it crept into the outer court. It was from this outer court that Jesus drove the cattle and the money-changers.

Changers of money.—For the convenience of those from a distance, booths were erected in the outer court of the temple, at which every thing necessary for the offerings was kept, and where the money-changers had stands to exchange the Roman coin for the Jewish money required for the temple tribute. The leading Pharisees are supposed to have been interested in this traffic. Josephus says that no less than two hundred and forty-six thousand animals were sacrificed at one passover; and as great extortion was practised, both in the prices charged and in the exchange of moneys, large profits must have arisen to the traffickers.

Chap. VI.

John 2 : 14-18.

April 11-18, J.C. 31.

money, sitting : and when he had made a scourge of small cords, he drove them all out of the temple, and the sheep, and the oxen ; and poured out the changers' money, and overthrew the tables ; and said unto them that sold doves, Take these things hence : make not my Father's house an house of merchandise. And his disciples remembered that it was written, The zeal of thine house hath eaten me up.

Then answered the Jews, and said unto him, What Small cords.—The original implies that this scourge was made of twisted reeds, which probably was the ancient material for ropes. The cords were no doubt the same which had been used to tether the oxen ; and Henry remarks, " He did not make a scourge to chastise the offenders, but only to drive out the cattle. He aimed no further than at reformation."

Overthrew the tables.—There was something in the manner of Jesus that awed the money-changers, and made them submit without resistance. The spirit of greed is seldom brave.

" Thus conscience doth make cowards of us all."

Them that sold doves.—Doves were the offering of the poor. " When he drove out the sheep and oxen, the owners might follow them ; when he poured out the money, they might gather it again ; but if he had turned the doves flying, perhaps they could not have been retrieved ; therefore he said, ' Take these things hence.' He did not needlessly destroy property." —Henry.

My Father's house.—By this Jesus plainly asserted his Messianic character, and his authority to cleanse the temple.

The Jews.—Reference is here probably had to some of the members of the Sanhedrin. Among them at this time were men of great learning and ability—Gamaliel, the preceptor of Paul, and grandson of the celebrated Hillel ; Joseph of Arimathea, who " did not consent to the counsel and deed " of his colleagues in the death of Jesus : John (Acts 4 : 6), who is identified with the celebrated Jochanan Ben Zaccai of the Talmud, a very learned man ; Alexander, a brother of the eminent Philo Judeas, so often mentioned by Josephus ; Caiaphas, the high-priest ; and Annas, his father-in-law, perhaps the most influential man in the nation. Annas was himself high priest from A.D. 7 to A.D. 14, and he had five sons who successively attained to sign shewest thou unto us, seeing that thou doest these things ?

Chap. VI.

John 2 : 18-22.

April 11-18, J.C. 31.

Jesus answered and said unto them, Destroy this temple, and in three days I will raise it up.

Then said the Jews, Forty and six years was this temple in building, and wilt thou rear it up in three days ?

But he spake of the temple of his body. When therefore he was risen from the dead, his disciples remembered that he had said this unto them ; and they believed the Scripture, and the word which Jesus had said.

that dignity. The four persons last named seem to have had at this time a preponderating influence in the Sanhedrin, and their hostility to Christ, which was afterwards to vent its fatal fury on his life, appears to have begun with this cleansing of the temple. Their sittings were held in a hall called Gazzith, supposed by Lightfoot to have been in the south east corner of one of the temple courts. It being the time of the Passover, they were doubtless now in session, and therefore could not have been ignorant of the action of Jesus.

What sign shewest thou ?—This question implies a previous question and answer, in which Christ had asserted his divine authority. In proof of this authority they demand now, as they did afterwards, some visible sign from heaven. This Jesus does not give, but, instead, makes the enigmatical reply which follows.

Destroy this temple, etc.—The meaning of this passage, which has greatly perplexed commentators, is perhaps best given by Alford. The substance of his remarks, somewhat differently stated, is as follows : 1. The temple was a type of the church. 2. The body of Christ was also a type of the church. 3. The saying of Christ implied that if the whole temple and its service should be destroyed (as it was virtually when his body was slain), he would, by the resurrection of his body, build up a spiritual temple, infinitely more glorious. This saying, perverted, was used against him on his trial.

Temple of his body.—The word temple was in use among the Jews to denote the body as the dwelling-place of the spirit.

His disciples remembered.—"Believed both the Old Testament prophecy, which foretold this very cleansing (Mal. 3 : 1), and his own prophecy of his resurrection."—Eggleston.

Chap. VI.

John 2 : 23-25 ; 3 : 1. April 11 18, J.C. 31.

Now when he was in Jerusalem at the passover, in the feast day, many believed in his name, when they saw the miracles which he did. But Jesus did not commit himself unto them, because he knew all men, and needed not that any should testify of man ; for he knew what was in man.

There was a man of the Pharisees, named Nicode-

The miracles which he did.—From this passage, and from John 4 : 45 and 6 : 2, it is evident that Jesus wrought many miracles that are not recorded in the sacred writings.

Did not commit himself unto them.—The original denotes to put trust or confidence in. Jesus did not rely upon them, because their belief rested on the exhibitions of power they had seen, and not on the moral character of his teachings—was external, not the vital and internal faith required of his disciples. The purification of the temple was an open assertion by Jesus of his divine authority. Done in the presence of the ecclesiastical rulers, as well as of the multitudes who had flocked to the festival, it must have awakened general inquiry as to who he was, and by what authority he acted. But this act, as well as the miracles he performed, so far from satisfying the rulers of his divine character, only excited their animosity. This purification seems a different one from that mentioned by the Synoptists (Matt. 21 : 12-16 ; Mark 11 : 15-19 ; Luke 19 : 45-48). This occurred at the beginning ; that at the end of his ministry. The act, in all its essential outward features, must have been the same ; but its significance varied with the time. As now performed, it was a plain and open avowal of his divine authority. It is, however, held by some that the two records refer to the one act, and that it occurred during his last days at Jerusalem.

Nicodemus was one of the Sanhedrin, and reference to him as the teacher implies that he was a prominent doctor. He came to Jesus by night perhaps to avoid observation and to escape the enmity of his colleagues, which had doubtless been excited against Jesus by the casting out of the traffickers from the temple ; but it may have been to secure the quietest and least disturbed time for conference. Jesus told him at once that he must "be born of water"—must make an open profession of his belief in the new religion—if he would enter the kingdom of God. Thus early he announced the necessity of "confessing him before men." In the Rabbinical writings Nicodemus is described as a man of great wealth, large liberality, and ardent piety ; but

Chap. VI.

John 3 : 1-4.

April 11-18, J.C. 31.

mus, a ruler of the Jews. The same came to Jesus by night, and said unto him, Rabbi, we know that thou art a teacher come from God : The New Birth. for no man can do these miracles that thou doest, except God be with him.

Jesus answered and said unto him, Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God. Nicodemus saith unto him, his splendid fortunes, those writings say, were attended with as great reverses as were those of Job. By some he is identified with a certain Nicodemus Ben Gerion, spoken of in the Talmud. If he was the same person he must have survived the destruction of Jerusalem. Tradition states that after the resurrection he became an open follower of Christ, and received baptism at the hands of Peter and John. The reference to him in John 19 : 39 renders this entirely credible.

We know thou art a teacher come from God.—The use by Nicodemus of the word we indicates that there was already a difference of opinion among the rulers in regard to Jesus, and that some of his colleagues also regarded the new prophet as divinely commissioned. He had accepted Christ's miracles as evidence of his authority as a teacher ; but Jesus cuts his adulation short. He is no mere teacher come from God, but the life of the world ; and proceeds to open to Nicodemus the fundamental philosophy of religion. Just as he embodied "all the Law and the prophets" in his command of love to God and our neighbor, so he condensed the essence of the Gospel in his dictum, "That which is born of the flesh, is flesh ; that which is born of the spirit, is spirit." It has been said that the doctrines taught by Jesus were gradually developed as his own spiritual power was gradually unfolded, just as truth is in the growing minds of other men. But in this conversation with Nicodemus all that Jesus subsequently taught may be found outlined in this, the first week of his ministry.

Except a man be born again.—Rather, be begotten anew, or, perhaps, from above ; either rendering is possible. The new birth was a familiar metaphor with the rabbis, who held that no Gentile could become a child of God without being born anew. What surprised Nicodemus was not the enunciation of this general doctrine, but the declaration that he, a Jewish theologian, must undergo the same change that a hated Gentile must undergo.

Chap. VI.

John 3 : 5-14.

April 11-18, J.C. 31.

How can a man be born when he is old ? can he enter the second time into his mother's womb, and be born ?

Jesus answered, Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God. That which is born of the flesh is flesh ; and that which is born of the Spirit is spirit. Marvel not that I said unto thee, Ye must be born again. The wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh, and whither it goeth : so is every one that is born of the Spirit.

Nicodemus answered and said unto him, How can these things be ?

Jesus answered and said unto him, Art thou a master of Israel, and knowest not these things ? Verily, verily, I say unto thee, We speak that we do know, and testify that we have seen ; and ye receive not our witness.

If I have told you earthly things, and ye believe not, how shall ye believe, if I tell you of heavenly things ?

Christ's
Salvation. And no man hath ascended up to heaven, but he that came down from heaven, even the Son of man which is in heaven. And as Moses Verily.—Truly, without mistake or uncertainty. The frequent use of this emphatic term was a peculiar characteristic of Jesus. It is recorded of him twenty-nine times in Matthew, fifteen times in Mark, eight times in Luke, and twenty-four times in John. This little word is a water-mark by which we can see the fidelity of the Gospel historians. Its frequent repetition by all the evangelists is an incidental but strong proof of their own trustworthiness.

A Master of Israel.—The word here translated "master" is the same that Nicodemus applies to Jesus—teacher ; it is also the same as the Hebrew "Rabbi (which is to say, being interpreted, Master)"—i.e., Teacher. John 1 : 39. In the original the definite article is used—"the teacher of Israel."

Chap. VI.

John 3 : 14-21.

April 11-18, J.C. 31.

lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of man be lifted up, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have eternal life. For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life. For God sent not his Son into the world to condemn the world ; but that the world through him might be saved. He that believeth on him is not condemned : but he that believeth not is condemned already, because he hath not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God. And this is the condemnation—that light is come into the world, and men loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds were evil. For every one that doeth evil hateth the light, neither cometh to the light, lest his deeds should be reprov'd. But he that doeth truth cometh to the light, that his deeds may be made manifest that they are wrought in God.

For God so loved the world, etc.—By some, what follows to the end of this account (John 3 : 16-21) is supposed to be the words of John, and not those of Jesus ; but the close and logical connection it has with what precedes does not countenance this supposition.

To condemn should be rendered "to judge ;" Is not condemned, "Cometh not into judgment ;" and condemnation, "judgment." Light and darkness, also, should be "the light," and "the darkness," and truth should be "the truth."

Chap. VII.

John 3 : 22-24.

April-Dec., J.C. 31.

CHAPTER VII.

THE FIRST JUDEAN MINISTRY.

AFTER these things came Jesus and his disciples into the land of Judea ; and there he tarried with them, and baptized.

Jesus goes into Judea.

And John also was baptizing in Enon near to Salim, because there was much water there : and they came, and were baptized. For John was not yet cast into prison.

After these things.—The eight days of the Passover having expired, it is probable that Jesus left Jerusalem, and going into the adjacent country, began his work. We have no details of his preaching, but it must have produced a profound impression, for it is said that he made more disciples than John. How long the work in Judea continued we cannot certainly know ; but we conclude that it lasted for more than half a year ; for, supposing that he began to preach early in April—directly after the Passover—he apparently did not leave Judea to pass through Samaria until December, when it was “yet four months to the harvest.” It is suggested by Andrews that during this time He went up to Jerusalem to attend the two great feasts during this period—that of Pentecost and of Tabernacles, and if so he must have come more or less in contact with the priests and Pharisees. It does not appear, however, that he went about from place to place to teach, or that he taught in any of the synagogues.

His disciples.—Probably the five who had joined him at the Jordan. They had probably again joined him at Capernaum, and witnessed his miracles at the Passover.

Land of Judea.—The country adjacent to Jerusalem, and in the territory of Judea ; here, the country in contrast to the city.

Enon.—The true site of this place is not known. The original of the phrase—“much water”—denotes “many springs,” or “fountains.” “John chose a place abounding in these, when he removed from the banks of the Jordan, in order that the multitude who flocked to him might be accommodated.”—Prof. Stuart. “We best meet the scope of the narrative if we suppose that Jesus and John were not very far distant from each other, and both in the region of the Jordan.”—Andrews.

Chap. VII.

John 3 : 25-30.

April-Dec., J.C. 31.

Then there arose a question between some of John's disciples and the Jews about purifying. And they came unto John, and said unto him, Rabbi, he ^{Last Testimony of John.} that was with thee beyond Jordan, to whom thou barest witness, behold, the same baptizeth, and all men come to him.

John answered and said, A man can receive nothing, except it be given him from heaven. Ye yourselves bear me witness that I said, I am not the Christ, but that I am sent before him. He that hath the bride is the bridegroom : but the friend of the bridegroom, which standeth and heareth him, rejoiceth greatly because of the bridegroom's voice : this my joy therefore is fulfilled. He must increase, but I must decrease.

A question.—A controversy ; a dispute. It was raised by the Jews, or a Jew, which phrase throughout John's gospel denotes an inhabitant of Judea in contrast to a Galilean.

Purifying among the Jews included all ceremonial washings and baptisms. The methods varied in form, but all "purifications" symbolized a cleansing of the conscience and life.

He that hath the bride, etc.—"This is the first New Testament allusion to Christ as the bridegroom, though the figure of Israel's marriage to God is often used by the Old Testament prophets, and often in the gospels, epistles, and apocalypse, it is used of Christ and the church. The friend of the bridegroom was the one who conducted all the arrangements for the bridegroom. He rejoiced in the completion of his mission. This is a most appropriate figure, for John never really entered the kingdom. He was the friend of the bridegroom who introduced him to his bride, the church. Like Moses, he led others to the promised possession, but never entered himself."—Eggleston.

But the friend, etc.—The voice of the bridegroom and bride, a phrase frequently used in the Old Testament as symbols of festivity and joy (Jer. 7 : 34 ; 16 : 9 ; 25 : 10 ; 33 : 11).

I must decrease.—The office of the bridesman, to whom John compared himself, lasted for but seven days ; the bridegroom became the husband. The morning star that ushers in the day is lost in the beams of the rising sun.

Chap. VII.

John 3 : 31-36.

April-Dec., J.C. 31.

He that cometh from above is above all : he that is of the earth is earthly, and speaketh of the earth : he that cometh from heaven is above all. And what he hath seen and heard, that he testifieth ; and no man receiveth his testimony. He that hath received his testimony hath set to his seal that God is true. For he whom God hath sent speaketh the words of God : for God giveth not the Spirit by measure unto him. The Father loveth the Son, and hath given all things into his hand. He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life : and he that believeth not the Son shall not see life ; but the wrath of God abideth on him.

He that cometh from above, etc.—Some insist that these are the words, not of the Baptist, but of the Evangelist. But Alford and others think that it is the Baptist who speaks throughout, and who points out the superiority of Christ's origin.

No man receiveth his testimony.—John had already heard how few of the leading Jews received Jesus, and he foresaw, probably, that few, comparatively, of the nation would ultimately accept the great spiritual truths of the Gospel. "His disciples, looking at the outside present appearance, said, 'All men.' John, with prophetic insight, said, 'No man.' Each is a strong statement, not meant to be mathematically accurate, for John at once makes an exception."—Eggleston.

Hath set to his seal.—To seal an instrument is to make it sure, to acknowledge it as ours, to take it as ours, and to pledge our veracity that it is true and binding, as when a man seals a bond, a deed, or a will. Thus the meaning is : "He who accepts Christ's testimony, by the witness of divine grace in his own life attests the truth of God in the fulfilment of his promises."

The words of God.—The truth : the substance of all previous revelations, with the added truths of Christianity.

By measure.—Not in a limited degree. Probably an allusion to the opinion of the Rabbis who regarded the prophets as inspired only in a limited way. The law itself they regarded as only a partial revelation which was to be made perfect by the coming Messiah.

All things into his hand.—The same truth was afterwards expressed by Jesus, "All power is given unto me in heaven, and in earth" (Matt. 28 : 18).

Hath everlasting life.—"He who with his heart believeth in the Son is already in possession of eternal life ; he, whatever

Chap. VII.

John 4 : 1-4.

April-Dec., J.C. 31.

When therefore the Lord knew how the Pharisees had heard that Jesus made and baptized more disciples than John (though Jesus himself baptized not, but his disciples), he left Judea, and departed again into Galilee. And he must needs go through Samaria.

Jesus goes to Galilee
through Samaria.

may be his outward profession, whatever his theoretic or historical belief, who obeyeth not the Son, not only does not possess eternal life, he does not possess any thing worthy to be called life at all."—Bishop Jebb. Here, as elsewhere throughout the Gospels, eternal life is represented as a present as well as a future possession. We look forward to the ineffable bliss, or unutterable woe, of another life, and forget that, as to our spirits, we are already in that life, already dwellers in the spiritual world, which is hidden from us only by the "muddy vesture of decay" in which we are encased. "This is life eternal, to know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent" (John 17:3).

He left Judea.—From the "last testimony of John" it is evident that the Pharisees of Jerusalem had jealously watched Jesus, and attempted to hinder his work by sowing dissension between his disciples and those of John. His increasing popularity only brought out more strongly their envy and dislike, and increased their hostility. "To have continued his work could, therefore, have answered no good end, since it was not now the gathering of a body of disciples around him at which he aimed, but the repentance of the priests and leaders of the people. We conclude, therefore, that he now left Judea because the moral conditions for the successful prosecution of his baptismal labors were wanting. . . . Great numbers had resorted to Jesus, and been baptized. But these were the common people, without reputation or authority. Those who ruled in all religious matters, and gave direction to public opinion—the priests, the scribes and Pharisees, the Sadducees, and the rich and influential—held themselves almost aloof. Hence, as regarded the nation at large, the baptismal work failed of its end. The true and divinely appointed representatives of the people, the ecclesiastical authorities, who sat in Moses' seat, were not brought to repentance, and therefore could not receive the Messiah."—Andrews.

Must needs go through Samaria.—In the following chapter Jesus, with a few of his disciples, is on his way from Jerusalem and the hill country of Judea to Galilee. The way through Samaria was the direct and usual route, but many travellers fol-

Chap. VII.

John 4 : 5.

April-Dec., J.C. 31.

Then cometh he to a city of Samaria, which is called lowed the more circuitous one to the east of the Jordan. Josephus says the former was usually taken in going to and from the festivals, because by it Jerusalem could be reached in three days from Galilee, although the enmity of the Samaritans was often manifested to the Jews on such occasions.

Samaria lay between Judea and Galilee, and included the region bounded on the north by the range of hills which begins on the west at Mount Carmel and runs east to the valley of the Jordan, and on the south by the northern possessions of the tribe of Benjamin. It thus comprised the territory formerly occupied by the tribe of Ephraim, and the half-tribe of Manasseh. When the ten tribes were carried away captive to Babylon, the Assyrian king sent other nations to inhabit their country, and so Gentiles were placed "in the cities of Samaria, instead of the children of Israel" (2 Kings 17:6, 23). These people at first worshiped idols; but being troubled with lions—because, as they supposed, they had not honored the God of the country—they asked the King of Assyria to send them one of the captive priests to teach them "how they should fear the Lord." The priest was sent, and henceforth they "feared the Lord, and served their graven images," their religion becoming a mixture of Judaism and idolatry. When the Jews returned from Babylon, and began the rebuilding of the temple, the Samaritans offered their assistance; but the Jews rejected it on the ground of their idolatry and Assyrian descent. Then a bitter feeling arose between the two people, which was increased by renegade Jews who, from time to time, took refuge with the Samaritans. One of these renegades—Manasseh, a man of priestly lineage, who had been expelled from Jerusalem by Nehemiah for an unlawful marriage with the daughter of Sanballat, the Persian satrap—about 409 B.C. obtained leave from the Persian king to build a temple on Mount Gerizim. The building of this temple increased the feud between the Jews and Samaritans, and many Jewish criminals and refugees from justice being afterwards received and protected by the Samaritans, an irreconcilable hatred sprang up between the two nations. This continued till the time of Christ, when the Jews regarded the Samaritans as the worst of the human race, and had no dealings with them. Notwithstanding their Assyrian origin, the Samaritans claimed to be descended from Jacob (John 4:12), and to have possession of the only authentic copy of the Pentateuch. They rejected the other Old Testament writings, and held that Mount Gerizim had been designated by Moses as the place where "men should worship." When Abraham first entered Canaan he encamped in the plain

Chap. VII.

John 4 : 5.

April-Dec., J.C. 31.

Sychar, near to the parcel of ground that Jacob gave of Moreh (Valley of Shechem), and built an altar to the Lord, who there appeared to him (Gen. 12 : 6). This was also Jacob's first encampment on his return from Haran (Gen. 33 : 18, 20). Here Moses directed to be convoked the first national assembly of Israel when they should renew their covenant with the Lord on taking possession of the promised land, and Joshua fulfilled the command, ranging six tribes on the slopes of Mount Ebal, and six on those of Mount Gerizim, to respond Amen to the curses and blessings respectively. Gerizim was the "Mount of Blessing." And this gave to Manasseh, centuries later, a pretext for his new temple and his attempt to set up an opposition to Jerusalem.

Samaria had also for ages been the battle-ground of Palestine. Its every hill and valley recalls some famous conflict or great event linked with the history of the chosen nation. But all the great events of which it has been the theatre dwindle into insignificance beside one simple incident that it witnessed—the casual meeting of a "Jewish peasant" with an abandoned woman of Samaria at the well of Sychar. This wayside traveller, though a Jew, announced that God is not a local or national divinity, but a Universal Presence : a Spirit, whom men must worship in spirit and in truth. This thought, uttered at a chance interview, interprets Christianity as a universal religion which shall cover the earth as the waters cover the sea.

The present people of Samaria are rude, insolent, and dangerous to strangers ; and the former inhabitants, according to the prophets, were of quite as bad a character.

Sychar.—The true name of this place was Shechem, but Sychar—a Syriac word signifying a drunkard and a liar—was an opprobrious term applied to it by the Jews. It was forty miles north of Jerusalem, and fifty-two north-west from Jericho, and one of the oldest and most populous cities of Palestine. It received the name of "Neapolis" from Vespasian, and on coins still extant is called "Flavia Neapolis." Its present name, Naplous, is an Arabic corruption of Neapolis. It is situated in a narrow valley between Mount Gerizim on the south and Mount Ebal on the north, and its environs are described as being surpassingly beautiful. Gerizim rises eight hundred feet above the town, and a lofty range of mountains bounds its horizon on all sides. Streams, issuing from numerous springs, flow down the mountain slopes, spreading verdure and fertility in every direction. Dr. Robinson says : "The whole valley is filled with gardens of vegetables, and orchards of all kinds of fruits, watered by fountains. It burst upon us like a scene of fairy enchant-

Chap. VII.

John 4 : 5, 6.

April-Dec., J.C. 31.

to his son Joseph. Now Jacob's well was there. Jesus therefore being wearied with his journey, sat thus on the well : and it was about the sixth hour.

ment. We saw nothing to compare with it in all Palestine. The streets of the city are narrow, and vaulted over, and mulberry, orange, and pomegranate trees grow in among the houses, and load the air with perfume. The gardens are the homes of numerous nightingales, and other birds, and from them the valley takes the name of 'the musical vale of Palestine.' The city has now a population of about two thousand, only two hundred of whom are Samaritans."

The parcel of ground.—Bought by Jacob from Hamor, father of Shechem (Josh. 24 : 32).

Jacob's Well is located about a mile and a half east from Naplous, at the foot of Mount Gerizim, and near a wretched hamlet called Balâta. It is excavated in the solid limestone rock, is perfectly round, with sides hewn smooth and regular, and is nine feet in diameter by about eighty in depth. Formerly the opening was vaulted over in a small chamber under the surface of the ground, and surrounded by a terrace of rude masonry, on which, probably, Jesus sat ; but this is now fallen in, and nothing can be seen below but a shallow pit nearly filled with stones and rubbish. There is no mention of this well in the Old Testament, and it may have received its name only from the fact of being near the field which Jacob gave to his son Joseph. In this field, a quarter of a mile to the north of the well, is "the tomb of Joseph." This is a small square enclosure, with whitewashed walls, surmounted by a dome. A rough pillar, black with fire, is at its head, and another at its foot, and on the walls are two slabs with Hebrew inscriptions. There is no doubt that this is the resting-place of the bones of the Patriarch. At this well Jesus arrived about midday, and being wearied with his journey, sat down upon it, while his disciples went away to the city to buy food. How far he had journeyed that day we do not know ; but the fact that he was too weary to go on, while his disciples could walk three miles—a mile and a half, and back—before taking rest or food, indicates that he must have had a more than ordinarily delicate physical constitution. This is also shown by his inability to bear his cross, and by his surviving the torture of crucifixion only a few hours when ordinary natures often endured it for two or three days.

About the sixth hour.—By Jewish reckoning, this would be twelve o'clock, or noonday ; by Roman computation, six o'clock in the morning, or evening. It is generally taken to have been noonday. "If we remember that this was in December, travel-

Chap. VII.

John 4 : 7-12.

April-Dec., J.C. 31.

There cometh a woman of Samaria to draw water : Jesus said unto her, Give me to drink (for his disciples were gone away unto the city to buy meat). Then saith the woman of Samaria unto him, How is it that thou, being a Jew, askest drink of me, which am a woman of Samaria? for the Jews have no dealings with the Samaritans.

Jesus and the Woman at Jacob's Well.

Jesus answered and said unto her, If thou knewest the gift of God, and who it is that saith to thee, Give me to drink ; thou wouldest have asked of him, and he would have given thee living water.

The woman saith unto him, Sir, thou hast nothing to draw with, and the well is deep : from whence then hast thou that living water ? Art thou greater than our ing at midday will not appear strange. Noon was not indeed the time for general resort to the well, but such resort must be determined in particular cases by individual need ; and that the woman was alone, and held so long a private conversation uninterrupted, shows that it was an hour when the well was not generally visited. At this hour the Jews were accustomed to take their principal meal."—Andrews.

A woman of Samaria.—It was the custom of the country for women to work in the fields, and this woman was probably thus employed in the neighborhood of the well.

No dealings.—No friendly or social intercourse. "It appears from the Talmud that it was held lawful for the Jews to make purchases of the Samaritans ; but not to receive kindness from them, or to drink of their water, or eat of their morsels."—Dr. Whitby. A Jewish axiom was, "A bit of the Samaritan's bread is swine's flesh." Robinson says : "If of old the Jews had no dealings with the Samaritans, the latter at the present day reciprocate the feeling, and neither eat, nor drink, nor marry, nor associate with the Jews ; but only trade with them." The woman repels the request of Jesus with scorn.

Living water.—Running water, as from a spring or fountain that never fails.

Nothing to draw with.—"No bucket" is a correct rendering of the original. Wells in the East are not furnished with drawing apparatus, and travelers provide themselves with small leathern buckets, which they carry on their journeys.

Chap. VII.

John 4 : 12-21.

April-Dec., J.C. 31.

father Jacob, which gave us the well, and drank thereof himself, and his children, and his cattle ?

Jesus answered and said unto her, Whosoever drinketh of this water, shall thirst again : but whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him, shall never thirst ; but the water that I shall give him, shall be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life.

The woman saith unto him, Sir, give me this water, that I thirst not, neither come hither to draw.

Jesus saith unto her, Go, call thy husband, and come hither.

The woman answered and said, I have no husband.

Jesus said unto her, Thou hast well said, I have no husband : for thou hast had five husbands ; and he whom thou now hast is not thy husband : in that saidst thou truly.

The woman saith unto him, Sir, I perceive that thou art a prophet. Our fathers worshiped in this mountain ; and ye say, that in Jerusalem is the place where men ought to worship.

Jesus saith unto her, Woman, believe me, the hour

His children.—His household. This extended sense of the word is a striking relic of the ancient simplicity of manners, by which all, children and servants, were counted as of the family.

But whosoever drinketh, etc.—Whoever is accustomed to drink of it, and to rely upon it.

Give me this water.—She speaks jeeringly ; but he is not repelled by her speech, any more than by a knowledge of her life, from going on with the conversation. He is the friend of “ publicans and sinners.”

Hast had five husbands.—The lax laws of divorce permitted this ; but she was now living in open sin.

In this mountain.—A little body of a hundred and fifty or two hundred Samaritans remain to this day, and still worship on Mount Gerizim, and these are all that are left of that once great people ; while the Jews, though scattered over the earth, are as numerous now as in the time of Christ.

Chap. VII.

John 4 : 21-27.

April-Dec., J.C. 31.

cometh, when ye shall neither in this mountain, nor yet at Jerusalem, worship the Father. Ye worship ye know not what : we know what we worship ; for salvation is of the Jews. But the hour cometh, and now is, when the true worshipers shall worship the Father in spirit and in truth : for the Father seeketh such to worship him. God is a Spirit ; and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth.

The woman saith unto him, I know that Messias cometh, which is called Christ : when he is come, he will tell us all things.

Jesus saith unto her, I that speak unto thee am he.

And upon this came his disciples, and marveled that he talked with the woman : yet no man said, What seekest thou ? or, Why talkest thou with her ?

For salvation is of the Jews.—That is, the divine salvation promised in the prophecies of the Old Testament proceeds from the Jewish nation.

I know that Messias cometh.—This remark shows the universality of this expectation. He was looked for by all classes, both Jews and Samaritans.

I that speak unto thee am he.—These words, like his other words—"Peace, be still," "I will, be thou clean," and "Lazarus, come forth"—enable us to realize the amazing majesty of character which impressed all so powerfully. Words of such grandeur were never before uttered by man. "His birth had been first revealed by night to a few unknown and ignorant shepherds ; the first full clear announcement by himself of his Messiahship was made by a well-side in the weary noon to a single, obscure Samaritan woman."—Farrar.

Talked with the woman.—It was considered by the Jews highly indecorous to converse with women in public, and the Rabbis held that to discourse with them on any important or serious subject was wholly unsuited to the dignity of a doctor of the law. But this woman was a Samaritan, and that added to the astonishment of his disciples. Though surprised at this, they forbore to speak to him of it. This shows the awe which he inspired even in those whom he admitted to the closest intimacy. It is Christianity alone which has elevated woman to her true position as the equal of man.

Chap. VII.

John 4 : 28-36.

April-Dec., J.C. 31.

The woman then left her water-pot, and went her way into the city, and saith to the men, Come, see a man which told me all things that ever I did : is not this the Christ ? Then they went out of the city, and came unto him.

In the mean while his disciples prayed him, saying, Master, eat.

But he said unto them, I have meat to eat that ye know not of.

Therefore said the disciples one to another, Hath any man brought him aught to eat ?

Jesus saith unto them, My meat is to do the will of him that sent me, and to finish his work. Say not ye, There are yet four months, and then cometh harvest ? behold, I say unto you, Lift up your eyes, and look on the fields ; for they are white already to harvest. And he that reapeth receiveth wages, and gathereth fruit unto Left her water-pot.—He has aroused the conscience of the woman ; but, at the same time, has excited her reverence and love. She would communicate this to others, and in her haste forgets her errand to the well, a natural effect of her strong emotion. This is a touch of nature indicating the truth of the narrative.

Four months.—No doubt a Jewish proverb, that time being the usual interval between seed-time and harvest : but the word “yet,” in the context, indicates the statement to be literal, in which case it was now December.

The fields are white.—The effect of his words on the woman leads him to speak of the spiritual harvest for reaping which his disciples will receive wages, and gather fruit to life eternal. In this conversation he quotes the proverb, “one soweth and another reapeth,” and reminds them that he had sent them to reap where John had labored, and they had entered into his labors. “As the agricultural laborer receives his wages, whether for ploughing and sowing, or for reaping and gathering the corn, so shall ye receive your reward for gathering men unto the kingdom of God ; and whether your labor be only preparatory, or such as consummates the spiritual harvest, ye shall alike be blessed with an ample recompense.”—Bloomfield.

Chap. VII.

John 4 : 36-42.

April-Dec., J.C. 31.

life eternal : that both he that soweth and he that reapeth may rejoice together. And herein is that saying true, One soweth, and another reapeth. I sent you to reap that whereon ye bestowed no labor : other men labored, and ye are entered into their labors.

And many of the Samaritans of that city believed on him for the saying of the woman, which testified, He told me all that ever I did. So when the Samaritans were come unto him, they besought him that he would tarry with them : and he abode there two days. And many more believed because of his own word. And said unto the woman, Now we believe, not because of thy saying : for we have heard him ourselves, and know that this is indeed the Christ, the Saviour of the world.

The Samaritans receive Jesus.

We believe, for we have heard him ourselves.—The reception he met with from this despised people was in striking contrast with that he had received from the self-righteous Pharisees of Jerusalem ; and yet, here he did no miracles. "Despite all their intense prejudice they besought him to remain and preach, the first and only instance in which a Samaritan company has been known to request religious instruction of their hereditary foes, the Jews."—Abbott. "The Samaritans—in all the gospel notices of whom we detect something simpler and more open to conviction than the Jews—instantly flocked out of the city" to see and hear this wonderful Jewish teacher.—Farrar.

The Saviour of the world.—"Jews might have acknowledged him as the Messiah, but only Samaritans, with their far more generous conceptions of the Messianic kingdom, could have thought of him as the Saviour of mankind."—Geikie. "In the temple, between the Court of the Gentiles and the next inner court . . . was a marble screen or curiously-carved fence some two feet high, beyond which no Gentile could venture. Had a Samaritan put his foot inside of that "wall of partition," he would have been whirled away in a fury of rage and stoned to death in the twinkling of an eye. But Jesus was treading down that partition wall. . . . This visit in Samaria is of singular importance, at the opening of Christ's ministry, in two respects : first, as a deliberate repudiation and rebuke of the exclusiveness of the Jewish church ; and secondly, and even more significantly,

Chap. VII.

John 4 : 43-47.

April-Dec., J.C. 31.

Now after two days he departed thence, and went into Galilee. For Jesus himself testified, that He proceeds a prophet hath no honor in his own to Galilee. country. Then when he was come into Galilee, the Galileans received him, and having seen all the things that he did at Jerusalem at the feast : for they also went unto the feast.

So Jesus came again into Cana of Galilee, where he made the water wine. And there was a certain nobleman, whose son was sick at Capernaum. When he as to the humane manner of his treatment of a sinning woman. . . . It was the text from which flowed two distinguishing elements of his ministry—sympathy with mankind, and the tenderest compassion for those who have sinned and stumbled.”

 —Beecher.

After two days he went into Galilee.—“Avoiding Nazareth, with a wise instinct that a prophet had no honor in his own country, he continued his journey to Cana, across the green pastures and cornfields of Buttauf.”—Geikie.

The Galileans received him with honor, because they had seen the miracles he did at Jerusalem. “It was his miracles and works abroad that gave him fame and favor at home.”—Alford.

He came again to Cana.—His home was still at Nazareth ; but he goes to Cana, perhaps on the invitation of Nathanael, who, we are to suppose, had been with him during his stay in Judea. His other disciples, probably, now disperse to their homes ; for directly after the next passover, in the following April, Peter, Andrew, and John are found engaged in their former avocations on the Lake at Capernaum.

A certain nobleman.—An officer of the court of Herod Antipas. He seems to have had his usual residence at Capernaum, and it is not an improbable supposition that he was Chusa, Herod's steward, whose wife afterwards attended on Jesus. His title denotes that he was a man of wealth and consideration. The narrative implies that he went to Jesus soon after his return from Judea, having heard of his arrival, perhaps, from the disciples who had returned to Capernaum. That he had confidence in his power to heal shows that the fame of the miracles of Jesus had already spread widely in Galilee.

Capernaum was distant twelve or fourteen miles from Cana. It was down from Cana, the whole route being a continued descent. The latter place was located in the hilly region at the

Chap. VII.

John 4 : 47-54.

April-Dec., J.C. 31.

heard that Jesus was come out of Judea into Galilee, he went unto him, and besought him that he would come down, and heal his son : for he was at the point of death.

Heals the Nobleman's Son.

Then said Jesus unto him, Except ye see signs and wonders, ye will not believe.

The nobleman saith unto him, Sir, come down ere my child die.

Jesus saith unto him, Go thy way ; thy son liveth.

And the man believed the word that Jesus had spoken unto him, and he went his way. And as he was now going down, his servants met him, and told him, saying, Thy son liveth.

Then inquired he of them the hour when he began to amend. And they said unto him, Yesterday at the seventh hour the fever left him.

So the father knew that it was at the same hour, in the which Jesus said unto him, Thy son liveth : and himself believed, and his whole house.

This is again the second miracle that Jesus did, when he was come out of Judea into Galilee.

south-west of Capernaum. This is an instance of the truthful local coloring that abounds in the gospels.

Except ye see signs, etc.—The verb in the original is in the plural, which indicates that this remark was addressed not so much to the nobleman, who showed a becoming faith, as to those who were standing about Jesus. In his anxiety the father is impatient of any delay, and not dreaming that Christ's word could cure at so great a distance, he says, "Sir, come down ere my child die." Then Jesus answers, "Go thy way, thy son liveth," and the narrative adds, "the man believed," without stating why ; but we must infer it was something in the manner of Jesus that impressed him with his power and truth.

Began to amend.—He expected only a gradual recovery ; but at the stated hour "the fever left" his son suddenly and altogether.

CHAPTER VIII.

BETHESDA.

AFTER this there was a feast of the Jews ; and Jesus went up to Jerusalem.

Now there is at Jerusalem by the sheep market a pool, which is called in the Hebrew tongue Bethesda, having five porches. In these lay a great multitude of impotent folk, of blind, halt, withered, waiting for the moving of the water. For Healing of the Impotent Man.

an angel went down at a certain season into the pool, and troubled the water : whosoever then first after the

A feast.—It is entirely uncertain what feast this was.

Sheep gate.—The word market is not in the original. This was no doubt the sheep gate mentioned by Nehemiah (3 : 1-32, and 12 : 039), and was probably near the temple, for greater convenience in conveying the sacrifices into the sacred building. The place which tradition locates as the pool of Bethesda is a little to the north-east of the ancient site of the temple, and Maundrell (1697) describes it as "about one hundred and twenty paces long, forty broad, and at least eight deep, with at one end the remains of three or four arches which are regared as the ruins of the five porches, in which lay the blind, halt, and withered." In the time of Sandys (1611), the spring which fed the pool was running ; but Maundrell says it was dry when he saw it ; and more recent travelers describe the pool as now destitute of water. It is supposed that the spring, which formerly filtered through the rocks, has become dammed up by the ruins and rubbish. Dr. Robinson identifies Bethesda with the Fountain of the Virgin, or upper pool of Siloam, whose gaseous waters bubble up at intermittent periods. He himself witnessed this. Other travelers argue in favor of other localities, and among them all it can only be said that the true site of Bethesda is still unknown.

Troubled the waters.—This passage in the common version, referring to an angel "troubling the water," is not in the oldest MSS., and is rejected as spurious by the most careful scholars. It was probably a Jewish superstition or poetical legend which, from being originally written as a note in the margin, finally, by the hand of some careless copyist, crept into the text of some of the more recent MSS. That this is a legendary, not an inspired troubling of the water stepped in was made whole of whatsoever disease he had. And a certain man was there, which had an infirmity thirty and eight years.

Chap. VIII.

John 5 : 4-7. Mar. 30-Apr. 5, J.C. 32.

When Jesus saw him lie, and knew that he had been now a long time in that case, he saith unto him, Wilt thou be made whole ?

The impotent man answered him, Sir, I have no man, when the water is troubled, to put me into the pool : but while I am coming, another steppeth down before me.

interpretation, will hardly seem doubtful to any one who considers how inadmissible is the supposition that " God would thus miraculously interpose to throw down from time to time a single boon among a company of cripples, to be seized by the most forward, selfish, and eager, leaving those most discouraged, helpless, and miserable to be overwhelmed again and again with bitter disappointment."—Jacob Abbott.

Porches.—Porticos, or cloisters ; covered walks to screen from the excessive heat.

Impotent folk.—Sick ; enfeebled by disease.

Had an infirmity.—" The disorder was probably paralysis : not only was such the constant tradition of the primitive ages, but no less than six medical reasons for supposing so are given by Bartholin."—Bloomfield. There could have been no collusion in the case. The man's affliction having lasted so long, it must have been known to very many.

Wilt thou be made whole ?—" The question has its purpose. This impotent man probably had waited so long, and so long waited in vain, that hope was dead or well-nigh dead, within him, and the question is asked to awaken in him anew a yearning for the benefit which the Saviour, compassionating his hapless case, is about to impart."—Trench. And this was Christ's usual method. He acted on the body through the mind. The life-giving power was all in him ; but it seems to have required for its full operation on human subjects a certain openness of mind, or confiding trust on the part of the recipient. This appears to have been so even when he unconsciously exercised his power, as in the case of the afflicted woman in Matt. 9 : 20, whose "faith made her whole." He sought to stimulate the will of the diseased person, and this he did the more readily when that person was rendered sensitive to his influence by confidence in his power to heal.

Chap. VIII.

John 5 : 8-14. Mar. 30-Apr. 5, J.C. 32.

Jesus saith unto him, Rise, take up thy bed, and walk.

And immediately the man was made whole, and took up his bed, and walked : and on the same day was the Sabbath. The Jews therefore said unto him that was cured, It is the Sabbath day : it is not lawful for thee to carry thy bed.

He answered them, He that made me whole, the same said unto me, Take up thy bed, and walk.

Then asked they him, What man is that which said unto thee, Take up thy bed, and walk ?

And he that was healed wist not who it was : for Jesus had conveyed himself away, a multitude being in that place. Afterward Jesus findeth him in the temple,

Bed.—Either a portable pallet : a simple strip of canvas laid upon stretchers, and with only a skin or rug for a covering (see Mark 2 : 4) ; or a thick mat, which travelers in the East say is rolled up and carried under the arm.

The Jews.—"Not here the multitude, but some among the spiritual lords of the nation, whom it is very noticeable that St. John continually characterizes by this name" (John 1 : 19 ; 7 : 1 ; 9 : 22 ; 18 : 12, 14).—Trench.

It is not lawful to carry thy bed.—The carrying of burdens on the Sabbath was expressly forbidden among the Jews (Neh. 13 : 15-19 ; Jer. 22 : 21). But the Pharisees had gradually piled up ingenious refinements, and frivolous restrictions, and absurd commands, until their Sabbath, from being a "day of rest," had become a ridiculous and senseless, but at the same time oppressive, burden, a mass of formalism and hypocrisy combined, which Jesus never hesitated to "violate" in the interest of man's well-being.

Had conveyed himself away.—A crowd being in the place, Jesus mingled with and passed through them, and so was lost to sight directly. He never courted observation except when some end was to be accomplished.

In the temple.—The man may have gone there to return thanks for the mercy he had received ; but the temple was the common place of resort for all classes ; great crowds were gathered there, and this man, so long bedridden, would naturally want to mingle again among his fellows.

Chap. VIII.

John 5 : 14-19. Mar. 30-Apr. 5, J.C. 32.

and said unto him, Behold, thou art made whole : sin no more, lest a worse thing come unto thee.

The man departed, and told the Jews that it was Jesus, which had made him whole. And therefore did the Jews persecute Jesus, and sought to slay him, because he had done these things on the Sabbath day.

But Jesus answered them, My Father worketh hitherto, and I work. Therefore the Jews sought the more to kill him, because he not only had broken the Sabbath, but said also, that God was his Father, making himself equal with God.

Jesus, the Son of God.

Then answered Jesus, and said unto them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, The Son can do nothing of himself, but what he seeth the Father do : for what things soever he doeth, these also doeth the Son

Sin no more.—This shows the man's infirmity to have been the result of his own transgression. The remark of Jesus shows that the man's whole life was open before him, even things done before his own earthly life commenced. He warns him of a "worse thing" than those thirty and eight years of pain and infirmity. This infirmity had found him a youth, and left him an old man ; it had withered up all his manhood, and yet a worse thing would come upon him should he sin again.—Trench, condensed.

The Jews persecuted Jesus.—The language indicates not a legal persecution, but a malicious pursuit ; Norton renders it : "Came in pursuit of Jesus."

My Father worketh hitherto.—"The speaker puts his own work of power, in the miraculous cure which he had effected, on the same footing of consideration as the works of the Deity in the conservation and government of the universe ; and upon this parity he grounds his right thus to work on the Sabbath day."—Bloomfield. "The Lord does not, as in another case (Luke 13 : 15, 16), appeal here to the reasonableness of the deed being done on the Sabbath, but takes altogether loftier ground, as being One greater than the Sabbath. The whole kernel of this incident is, not that it is lawful to do works of mercy on the Sabbath, but that the Son of Man is Lord of the Sabbath."—Alford.

Verily, verily.—"If it be lawful to say so, this is in some sense his oath."—Augustine. (See note on p. 98.)

Chap. VIII.

John 5 : 19-27. Mar. 30-Apr. 5, J.C. 32.

likewise. For the Father loveth the Son and sheweth him all things that himself doeth : and he will shew him greater works than these, that ye may marvel. For as the Father raiseth up the dead, and quickeneth them ; even so the Son quickeneth whom he will. For the Father judgeth no man ; but hath committed all judgment unto the Son : That all men should honor the Son, even as they honor the Father. He that honoreth not the Son, honoreth not the Father which hath sent him. Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that heareth my word, and believeth on him that sent me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation ; but is passed from death unto life. Verily, verily, I say unto you, The hour is coming, and now is, when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God : and they that hear shall live. For as the Father hath life in himself, so hath he given to the Son to have life in himself ;

Quickeneth.—"Giveth life." The raising of Lazarus and the widow's son, which fulfilled his promise to show them "greater works," were effected by the action of his will. There is some uncertainty as to the meaning to be attached to Christ's language here ; it may be regarded as a reference to Christ's work in raising the spiritually dead into a new and divine life. (See Abbott's commentary on John here.)

Hath committed.—"The whole work of judgment, the whole moral government of the world, the whole course of divine Providence, as regards the nation, the church and the individual, is entrusted to the Son" (see Psalm 2 ; Rev. 1 : 5).—Abbott.

So hath he given to the Son.—No created being can have life in himself. But this power has been given to the Son. "It is evident that the office of "Judge of all men" must require omniscience, omnipotence, infinite justice, truth, and perfection : these are absolutely incommunicable to any mere creature ; and "the Son of Man" cannot be conceived capable of having this work absolutely committed to him, and of properly executing it, but upon the supposition that he is "the Son of God" (Matt. 25 : 34-46 ; 1 Cor. 4 : 3-5, v. 5 ; 2 Cor. 5 : 9-12, v. 10, 2 Thess. 1 : 5-10 ; Rev. 20 : 11-15).—Scott.

Chap. VIII.

John 5 : 27-36. Mar. 30-Apr. 5, J.C. 32.

and hath given him authority to execute judgment also, because he is the Son of man. Marvel not at this : for the hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth ; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life ; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation. I can of mine own self do nothing : as I hear, I judge : and my judgment is just ; because I seek not mine own will, but the will of the Father which hath sent me.

If I bear witness of myself, my witness is not true. There is another that beareth witness of me, and I know that the witness which he witnesseth of me is true. Ye sent unto John, and he bare witness unto the truth. But I receive not testimony from man : but these things I say, that ye might be saved. He was a burning and a shining light : and ye were willing for a season to rejoice in his light. But I have greater witness than that of John : for the works which the Father

The Son of Man.—The definite article is wanting in the original. The same idea is expressed in Hebrews 4 : 15. "For we have not a high-priest who cannot be touched with a feeling of our infirmities ; but one who was tempted in all points as we are, yet without sin." Christ is appointed to be judge because he has taken on him human nature, and so knows how to judge sympathetically.

If I bear witness of myself.—The words "you say" may perhaps be here supplied ; that is, we may suppose that Jesus is repeating a remark of the Pharisees. Or the passage may be rendered as suggested by Bloomfield : "If I were to bear witness of myself—i.e., if I had no other evidence than mine own testimony, my witness would not be trustworthy. Thus there is no discrepancy between what is said here and in John 8 : 14, 7."

John bare witness unto the truth.—The Forerunner testified that Jesus was the Messiah.

Greater witness.—Stronger, more decisive evidence, which is the reason why he needs no human testimony.

Chap. VIII.

John 5 : 36-44. Mar. 30-Apr. 5, J.C. 32.

hath given me to finish, the same works that I do, bear witness of me, that the Father hath sent me. And the Father himself which hath sent me, hath borne witness of me. Ye have neither heard his voice at any time, nor seen his shape. And ye have not his word abiding in you : for whom he hath sent, him ye believe not. Search the scriptures ; for in them ye think ye have eternal life : and they are they which testify of me. And ye will not come to me, that ye might have life.

I receive not honor from men. But I know you, that ye have not the love of God in you. I am come in my Father's name, and ye receive me not : if another shall come in his own name, him ye will receive. How

The same works.—The very works or miracles that I do.

Ye have neither heard his voice, etc.—Two interpretations are possible : either (1) the witness of the Father is that of an invisible and inaudible spirit, and therefore not recognized by the Jews who have not his word in them ; or (2) they have shut their eyes and ears to the divine witness that they might not hear and be converted.

Search the Scriptures, Or, Ye search the Scriptures ; it may be read either as a command or as a statement. On this passage Chalmers remarks : "The Bible is like a wide and beautiful landscape, seen afar off, dim and confused ; but a good telescope will bring it near, and spread out all its rocks and trees and flowers and verdant fields and winding rivers at one's very feet. That telescope is the Spirit's teaching."

I receive not honor from men.—Love of human applause, and its cognate sin, hypocrisy, were characteristic of the Pharisees. "No one, in my opinion, has a higher esteem for virtue, nor is more thoroughly devoted to its service, than he who has lost the credit of being thought by others a good man, in order to preserve, within his own bosom, the consciousness of his really being one."—Seneca.

Ye have not the love of God in you.—"As a man loveth, so he is ; for the lover is in the thing loved more properly than in himself ; wherefore, if a man love earthly things, he may be called an earthly man ; but if he love heavenly things or God, he may be called an heavenly or a godly man."—Dean Colet.

Chap. VIII.

John 5 : 44-47. Mar. 30-Apr. 5, J.C. 32.

can ye believe, which receive honor one of another, and seek not the honor that cometh from God only? Do not think that I will accuse you to the Father : there is one that accuseth you, even Moses, in whom ye trust. For had ye believed Moses, ye would have believed me : for he wrote of me. But if ye believe not his writings, how shall ye believe my words?

From God only.—More correctly, "From the only God."

Had ye believed Moses.—Their avowed reasons for persecuting Jesus were two—their love of God, whom they accused Jesus of blaspheming ; and their reverence for the law of Moses, which they said Jesus violated. Jesus had shown (John 5 : 42) that they had no true love of God, and in this passage he asserts that they did not really believe Moses, for if they did, they would believe him.

His writings ; my words.—The peculiar argumentative style of the discourses of Jesus as reported in the Gospel of St. John will strike the most careless reader as being different from the terse aphorisms and picturesque parables reported by the three other Evangelists, and these differences have been used as an argument against its genuineness as a book written by the Apostle. But the contrast of style may easily be accounted for by the fact that the Evangelists took the sense of their Master's teachings each from his own point of view, and according to his own nature, and while the practical-minded tax-gatherer Matthew, the graphic Mark (who is supposed by some to have been the recorder of Peter's memoirs), and the clear-eyed physician Luke, were attracted more by the simpler utterances of the great Teacher, John took to heart and pondered also his higher, more spiritual, and, perhaps one might say, more mystical discourses. Doubtless, too, as John's gospel was written when he was well advanced in years, and after all the others—as tradition says, by request of the Christians of Asia, mainly for the purpose of adding matters omitted or lightly passed over by the others, who had had less long and intimate communion with the Master than he—his own nature must have digested and assimilated these memories of the doings and sayings of the Lord, and his record would naturally take somewhat the color of his own individuality. For a full discussion of the authority and value of John's Gospel, see Smith's Bible Dict.

Chap. VIII. Matt. 4 : 12 ; 14 : 3, 4 ; Mar. 6 : 17, 18. J.C. 32.

When Jesus had heard that John was cast into prison, he departed into Galilee ; for Herod had laid hold on John, and bound him, and put him in prison for Herodias' sake, his brother Philip's wife; for he had married her. For John had said unto him, It is not lawful

When Jesus had heard.—This shows that Jesus was still in Judea when he heard of the Baptist's imprisonment ; and the allusion he makes to John in his address to the Jews would seem to indicate that it was a recent event which had just come to his knowledge. John's voice was now silent. He could no longer call the nation to repentance ; and the bitter hostility the rulers now showed must have convinced Jesus that any further effort to secure their acknowledgment of himself as the messenger of God would be futile.

Departed into Galilee.—It was no longer safe for him to appear openly in Judea. What action was now taken by the Jews is not stated ; but from John 7 : 1 it is evident that they determined to seize upon and put him to death if he was found in Judea. He therefore retires into Galilee, to there gather about him, and instruct, a body of disciples, who should, after his death, preach his gospel. "This is the turning point in the Gospel history. Up to this time the preaching of our Lord at Jerusalem and in Judea had met with a certain degree of toleration, and in many cases even of acceptance ; but after this all becomes changed. Henceforth the City of David is no meet or safe abode for the son of David ; the earthly house of his Heavenly Father is no longer a secure hall of audience for the preaching of the Eternal Son."—Ellicott.

Herod.—This was Antipas, tetrarch of Galilee, and a son of Herod the Great. He was weak and dissolute, but cunning and superstitious (Mark 8 : 15 ; Luke 13 : 32), and inherited all the vices of his father. His conduct at Jerusalem when Jesus was sent to him by Pilate displayed utter heartlessness. Josephus relates that on a journey to Rome he stopped at his brother Philip's house, and there falling in love with Herodias, his brother's wife and his own niece, determined to repudiate the daughter of Aretas, king of Petrea (2 Cor. 11 : 32), whom he had married, and to marry Herodias. Herodias was the daughter of Aristobulus, half-brother of Antipas, and wife of the Philip who had been disinherited by his father, and lived a private citizen. By him she had one daughter—the Salome who danced before Antipas. Herodias was a violent, ambitious woman, and, dissatisfied with the position of Philip, no doubt entrapped Antipas into this alliance. Incensed with Herod's perfidy, Aretas made for thee to have her, and reproved him for all the evils he had done. Therefore Herodias had a quarrel against him, and would have killed him ; but she could not : for Herod, when he would have put him to death, feared the multitude, because they counted him as a prophet, and he feared John, knowing that he was a just man and a holy, and observed him ; and when he heard him, he did many things, and heard him gladly.

Chap. VIII. Luke 3 : 19 ; Matt. 14 : 4 ; Mark 6 : 19, 20. J.C. 32.

John cast into prison.

war upon him. In the course of this war Herod captured Machærus, a strong fortress east of the Dead Sea. Here he imprisoned John. Machærus was subsequently retaken by Aretas, who overthrew Herod, and would have dethroned him but for the interference of the Romans, A.D. 37. At the instigation of the ambitious Herodias, Herod afterwards went to Rome to compete for the kingly power bestowed on Agrippa ; but he was there arrested and banished by the Emperor Caligula. He died in Spain a disappointed and ruined man. Herodias shared her husband's exile, and there history leaves her in merited oblivion. This incestuous marriage greatly scandalized the Jews, and in denouncing it John only echoed the public opinion. Josephus says that his countrymen considered the defeat and overthrow of Herod as the just judgment of God for his murder of John. The founding of the city of Tiberias, on the Lake of Galilee, was the most conspicuous act of the long reign of Herod Antipas.

It is not lawful.—The original implies that John said this not only once, but habitually. He was not "a reed shaken by the wind," but a bold preacher of righteousness ; and to this he owed his death. By the law of Moses the marriage was incestuous (Lev. 18 : 16 ; 20 : 21).

Had a quarrel against him.—The expression in the original is very strong. She fastened her fangs upon him, determined not to let him go till she had destroyed him.

But Herod feared the multitude.—"The character of John also restrained him ; but the political motive was needed to overbear the influence of Herodias. . . . Without the political motive the moral one would not have sustained Herod against the will of the woman he had adulterously married."—Schaff.

From that time Jesus began to preach, and to say, Jesus begins The time is fulfilled, and the kingdom of to preach. God is at hand : repent ye, and believe the Gospel.

The time is fulfilled.—"The time here spoken of," says Campell, "is that which, according to the predictions of the prophets, was to intervene between their days, or between any period assigned by them, and the appearance of the Messiah. This had been revealed to Daniel as consisting of what in prophetic language is denominated seventy weeks—that is (every week being seven years), four hundred and ninety years, reckoning from the order issued to rebuild the temple at Jerusalem. However much the Jews misunderstood many of the other prophecies relating to the reign of Messiah, what concerned both the time and the place of his first appearance seems to have been pretty well apprehended by the bulk of the nation." (Comp. Gal. 4 : 4 ; Eph. 1 : 10 ; and see Dan. 9 : 25.)

Believe the gospel.—"Peculiar to Mark. The message of John the Baptist did not include this. As yet our Lord does not preach faith in himself ; that must come later. Yet even here is the germ of faith in a personal Redeemer. The Jews all hoped for the kingdom of God. Jesus proclaims it, but adds something they do not seem to have expected—repentance and faith in order to enter it."—Schaff. "From that time—that is, from the imprisonment of John, and the departure into Galilee, that immediately followed it, Jesus began to preach. His earlier appearance in Judea, though full of striking incidents and proofs of his divine legation, was preliminary to his ministry or preaching, properly so called, which now began. Luke seems plainly to intimate that the first teaching of the Lord in the synagogues was that which he records at Nazareth. That his enemies at Jerusalem regarded his labors as first taking positive form and character in Galilee, appears from their accusation (Luke 23 : 5), 'he stirreth up the people, teaching throughout all Jewry, beginning from Galilee to this place.' (See also the words of Peter, Acts 10 : 37, 'That word which was published throughout all Judea, and began from Galilee.') And as God had ordered that Galilee should be the chief theater of his teaching, so he providentially overruled the political arrangements of the time, that there he could labor without hindrance, since the tetrarch Herod Antipas did not trouble himself concerning any ecclesiastical movements that did not disturb the public peace. And here also the people were less under the influence of the hierarchy, and more open to his words."—Andrews.

PART III.

FROM THE
BEGINNING OF THE MINISTRY IN GALILEE

TO THE
DEATH OF JOHN THE BAPTIST.

APRIL, J.C. 32, TO APRIL, J.C. 33.

TIME, ONE YEAR.

CHAPTER IX.

THE PROPHET AT HOME.

AND he came to Nazareth, where he had been brought

He came to Nazareth.—"Alford and Olshausen regard the incident here identical with that recorded in Matt. 13 : 53-58 ; in this they differ from most harmonists ; and though the chronology is difficult, it seems to me that the reasons for supposing that Christ was twice rejected by the Nazarenes outweigh those for identifying this rejection with that recorded by Matthew. There is nothing incredible in the supposition that Christ, once rejected, returned a second time to bless his home ; that the first rejection should have been followed by a second, less vehement, because tempered by a natural pride in the increasing fame of their fellow-townsmen ; and that he marveled at their persistence in unbelief (Mark 6 : 6). On the other hand, variations in the two accounts are so considerable as to suggest two analogous incidents. In Luke Jesus appears to be alone ; in Mark (6 : 1) his disciples accompany him : in Luke he is attacked by a mob, and barely escapes threatened death ; in Mark (6 : 5) he remains and heals some sick : in Luke the incident is apparently introduced partly to explain his change of residence from Nazareth to Capernaum, stated by Matthew without explanation (ch. 4 : 13) ; in Mark he leaves Nazareth only to teach in the villages round about (Mark 6 : 6)."—Abbott. "The mention of the healing of the sick by Mark clearly shows the visits to have been distinct, for this could not have taken place before his first teaching in the synagogue on the Sabbath, and immediately afterwards he was obliged to flee from their rage. The wrath of the people, so unprovoked, and their effort to kill him, seem sufficiently to justify the opinion of Nathanael in regard to Nazareth. From this incident it is plain that they were fierce and cruel, and ready from mere envy to imbrue their hands in the blood of one who had lived among them, a neighbor and friend, all his life. It is not improbable, however, that they may long have been conscious that, though dwelling among them, he was not of them, and thus a secret feeling of dislike and ill-will have been slumbering in their hearts. This is the only instance recorded of the Lord's reading in a synagogue, and he may have been asked so to do as having been for many years a member of the congregation, or because of the reputation he had already acquired. Elsewhere he preached in the synagogues, permission being everywhere given him, apparently in virtue of his prophetic claims."—Andrews.

Chap. IX.

Luke 4 : 16.

April, J.C. 32.

up : and, as his custom was, he went into the synagogue

As his custom was.—From this it would appear that Jesus had from his youth up regularly attended the services of the synagogue. Farrar remarks that “ Even though it were his custom to stand up and read, Luke’s words do not necessarily imply this, and hence do not prove that the visit occurred later in his ministry. He had never before taught in that synagogue, and hence the allusion to his early habits of piety is more suggestive.” —Schaff.

The Synagogue.—The word means congregation, or house of gathering, and was used to denote the local places of worship, of which there were one or more in nearly every town of Judea and Galilee. In Jerusalem, according to Josephus, there were four hundred and eighty. They were of considerable antiquity, and were the principal means of keeping the religion of their fathers alive among the Jews. The building was frequently erected on the model of the temple, with a central structure, surrounded by a court, and supported by pillars, and it varied in size with the population of the locality. It generally stood on the highest ground, in or near the town to which it belonged, and was so constructed that the people on entering, and when standing up for prayers, had their faces towards Jerusalem. It was commonly built at the cost of the district ; but sometimes was erected by a rich Jew, or a friendly proselyte (Luke 12 : 5). Its internal arrangement was copied after the tabernacle. At the upper, or Jerusalem end, was the ark, a chest containing the sacred books, and here were the “ uppermost seats ” (Matt. 23 : 6) so much desired by the Pharisees. The people sat around, facing the pulpit, which was farther towards the centre of the building, on a raised platform, upon which several persons could stand at once. At this pulpit the reader stood to read the Scriptures, or sat down to teach. The congregation were divided, the men on one side, the women on the other, a partition, four or five feet high, running between them. In small towns there was often only one rabbi, or teacher ; but in larger places there was a college of elders (Luke 7 : 3), presided over by “ the Chief of the Synagogue ” (Luke 8 : 41, 49. Acts 18 : 8–17). The prominent officer in the larger synagogues was known as the officiating minister, and he read the prayers in the name of the people ; but the minister referred to in the text was a subordinate officer, employed to open the doors and prepare the building for service. Forms of prayer were used in the worship (Luke 11 : 1), and the books of Moses and the Prophets were read every Sabbath, portions being read consecutively, and the whole being gone through every three years. These were followed by the sermon, or expo-

Chap. IX.

Luke 4 : 16, 17.

April, J.C. 32.

on the Sabbath day, and stood up for to read. And Jesus teaches there was delivered unto him the book of at Nazareth. the prophet Esaias. And when he had opened the book, he found the place where it was sition from the rabbi. The officers of the synagogue exercised in certain cases judicial power (Matt. 10 : 17. Mark 13 : 9). They did not, however, descend to the trivial disputes of daily life, but attended to the graver offences against religion and morals. See, for a fuller account of the synagogue, Smith's Bible Dictionary.

Stood up for to read.—"The Saviour's rising served as a token that he also wished to make use of this liberty. The public reading of the Law had already taken place, and that of the Prophets was about to begin. He therefore receives from the hand of the attendant the roll out of which on that day, according to the customary sequence, the lesson was to be read. It was that of Isaiah; and, after he had unrolled this holy book, he finds, certainly without seeking, yet not without special higher guidance, the prophetic passage referred to."—Van Oosterzee. "The service of the synagogue commenced with praise and prayer; then a portion of the Law was read aloud, and after this a portion of the Prophets. The reader and congregation, out of respect to God's word, stood while it was read; they sat while the subsequent discourse was delivered."—Whedon. "As there were no ordained ministers to conduct the services—for the office of priests and Levites at Jerusalem was wholly different—these lessons might not only be read by any competent person who received permission from the rôsh hak-kendseth, but he was even at liberty to add his own midrash, or comment."—Farrar.

The book.—In ancient times, books were written on rolls of papyrus, parchment, or vellum.

Of the prophet Esaias.—The prophecy of Isaiah was generally on a separate roll, or "book."

When he had opened, or unrolled. "These scrolls were rolled on a roller like a map, and if they were long they were on two rollers, rolled up from each end of the scroll to meet in the middle. They could be held, one in each hand, and unrolled as far as one pleased either way, and then held at the place and read. They were bound with a string and easily scaled."—Jacobus.

Found the place.—The Scroll of the Law had two rollers, and as the lesson was read it was unrolled from one side, and rolled up on the other, so that the appointed portion was always con-

Chap. IX.

Luke 4 : 17-19.

April, J.C. 32.

written : The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, because he hath anointed me to preach the gospel to the poor ; he hath sent me to heal the broken-hearted, to preach deliverance to the captives, and recovering of sight to the blind, to set at liberty them that are bruised, to venient. The Scroll of the Prophets had but one roll, and it was necessary to " find the place."

The Spirit of the Lord.—See Isa. 61 : 1, 2. " The length of the haptarah, or passage, read might be from three to twenty-one verses ; but Jesus only read the first and part of the second, stopping short in a spirit of tenderness before the stern expression, " The day of vengeance of our God," so that the gracious words, " The acceptable year of the Lord " might rest last upon their ears, and form the text of his discourse."—Farrar. " The meaning of this prophetic citation may be better seen when we remember that it stands in the middle of the third great division of the book of Isaiah (chs. 49-66), that, viz., which comprises the prophecies of the person, office, sufferings, triumphs, and church of the Messiah ; and thus by implication announces the fulfilment of all that went before in him who then addressed them."—Alford.

Hath anointed me.—" By the ceremony of anointing, priests, kings, and prophets were designated to their office (see Ex. 28 : 41 ; 40 : 15 ; 1 Kings 19 : 16 ; 1 Sam. 10 : 1). Hence the term anoint might be used metaphorically to express the circumstance of having been divinely appointed."—Ripley. (See note on p. 74, " My beloved Son.")

To preach the Gospel.—" The meaning of ' Gospel ' is ' good tidings.' The corresponding language in Isaiah is, ' preach (proclaim) good tidings.' Our Lord intended to convey the thought that the time so long expected had now arrived—the time for announcing the Messiah had come."—Ripley.

Deliverance to the captives.—" This is a figure originally applicable to those in captivity in Babylon. The Gospel does not literally open the doors of prisons, but it releases the mind, captive under sin ; it gives comfort to the prisoner ; and it will finally open all prison doors, and break off all chains of slavery, and, by preventing crime, prevent also the sufferings that are the consequence of crime."—Barnes.

To set at liberty them that are bruised.—" The clause is from Isaiah 58 : 6, and was probably made by our Lord a part of his text for preaching. The beautiful passages combined show that the jubilee, when the bondmen of Israel were to be emancipated, was held by him to be a type of the Gospel dispensation.

Chap. IX.

Luke 4 : 19-23.

April, J.C. 32.

preach the acceptable year of the Lord. And he closed the book, and he gave it again to the minister, and sat down. And the eyes of all them that were in the synagogue were fastened on him. And he began to say unto them, This day is this Scripture fulfilled in your ears.

And all bare him witness, and wondered at the gracious words which proceeded out of his mouth. And they said, Is not this Joseph's son ?

And he said unto them, Ye will surely say unto me this proverb, Physician, heal thyself : whatsoever we Freedom is the spirit of the Gospel ; emancipation from the bonds of slavery on the limbs, of ignorance on the mind, of sin upon the soul."—Whedon.

The acceptable year of the Lord.—“ This is the Gospel time, called in 2 Cor. 6 : 2 ‘ The accepted time.’ The allusion is to the year of jubilee, when liberty was proclaimed to all in the land (Lev. 25 : 8, 10). It was every fiftieth year. It was a time of forgiving debts, and of redeeming forfeited estates. This Gospel jubilee had come.”—Jacobus.

And the eyes of all in the synagogue, etc.—“ The man brought up among them was about to address them for the first time ; the report from other places had preceded this visit ; the passage read was remarkable, and doubtless there was something in the appearance of our Lord, especially under these circumstances, which would command unusual attention.”—Schaff.

He began to say.—“ Implying that the following words are merely the substance of a more expanded discourse which our Lord uttered to that effect.”—Alford.

Bare witness unto him.—“ They admired not only what, but the way in which, the Saviour spoke, especially when they remembered his humble origin, which would have given occasion to no such expectation. This passage, as well as John 7 : 46, is noteworthy, since it gives an unimpeachable evidence of the irresistible impression which the graciousness of the manner of Jesus in his discourse and preaching produced, even in the case of imperfectly developed, or hostilely disposed, persons.”—Van Oosterzee.

Heal thyself.—The application is immediately explained. “ Do for your own Nazareth what you have done for Capernaum, and so prove yourself the very Messiah to us.” He had just

Chap. IX.

Luke 4 : 23-25.

April, J.C. 32.

have heard done in Capernaum, do also here in thy country. And he said, Verily I say unto you, No prophet is accepted in his own country. But I tell you of a truth, many widows were in Israel in the days of Elias, when the heaven was shut up three years and six months, when great famine was throughout all the land ;

before healed the nobleman's son at Capernaum (John 4 : 46-54)."—Jacobus.

No prophet.—"Proverbs are of course general rules, to be taken with exceptions. The present proverb is founded on one of the evil propensities of our nature—namely, the envy which arises from our seeing former equals outstrip us in life. This is a special characteristic of coarser natures, like the men of Nazareth."—Whedon.

But I tell you, etc.—"The Jews of old, regarding the Lord's prophets as peculiarly theirs, and themselves as peculiarly his people, might have thought that, especially in seasons of distress, it would be they who would be particularly favored, rather than persons not belonging to the chosen people ; and that those who lived beyond the boundaries of the sacred territory would not be preferred to themselves in the distribution of divine bounties. Yet, on two memorable occasions, related in their sacred books, it was Gentiles, not Jews, who were distinguished by the favor of God ; it was Gentiles, not Jews, to whom miraculous power was manifested, and for whom the actions of a prophet were performed. Just so in the case of the people of Nazareth. However, they might think that, from the peculiar connection of Jesus with their town, they had a special claim, Jesus judged differently, and chose to go abroad beyond their limits, in the exercise of his miraculous powers."—Ripley. "To show them most clearly that he was something more than they—that he was no mere Nazarene like any other who might have lived among them for thirty years, and that he belonged not to them, but to the world—he reminds them that miracles are not to be limited by geographical relationships ; that Elijah had only saved the Phœnician widow of Sarepta, and Elisha only healed the hostile leper of Syria."—Farrar.

Elias ; Eliseus.—The Greek forms of Elijah and Elisha.

Three years and six months.—So also in Jas. 5 : 17. In 1 Kings 18 : 1 it is called but three years, because it was three years from the time Elijah foretold the drought ; but there had already, in the natural course of the seasons, been six months without rain, so that the heaven was shut three and a half years.

Chap. IX.

Luke 4 : 26-30.

April, J.C. 32.

but unto none of them was Elias sent, save unto Sarepta, a city of Sidon, unto a woman that was a widow. And many lepers were in Israel in the time of Eliseus the prophet ; and none of them was cleansed, saving Naaman the Syrian.

And all they in the synagogue, when they heard these things, were filled with wrath. And rose up, and thrust him out of the city, and led him unto the brow of the hill whereon their city was built, that they might cast him down headlong. But he, passing through the midst of them, went his way.

The Nazarenes reject him.

Sarepta.—A town between Tyre and Sidon, and near the Mediterranean Sea. It was a Gentile town, being outside of the limits of Galilee.

Naaman the Syrian.—The general of Benhadad's army. See, for account of his cure, 2 Kings 5 : 1-14.

Were filled with wrath.—"What then ! were they in his estimation (and he but the "carpenter !") no better than Gentiles and lepers ? This was the climax of all that was intolerable to them, as coming from a fellow-townsmen whom they wished to rank among themselves ; and at these words their long-suppressed fury burst into a flame. The speaker was no longer interrupted by a murmur of disapprobation, but by a roar of wrath."—Farrar.

Cast him forth.—Forcibly put him out of the synagogue.

The brow of the hill.—"One who visits Nazareth at this day will see how remarkably it answers to this description. It is built on precipitous slopes, and in several places we noticed rocky steepes of forty to fifty feet. These were chiefly on the outer edge of the city, and would answer to this narrative. This kind of punishment was sometimes inflicted by law among the Romans."—Jacobus. "Nazareth, being built upon the side of a steep hill, presents several precipices down which a person might be cast. The cliff which travellers have generally fixed upon as best answering to the narrative lies just back of the Maronite church, and is some thirty or forty feet in height."—Andrews. "It was not for landscape effect, but for an execution, that the crowd were looking for a ledge, and twenty feet were as good for such a purpose as fifty, especially if the plunge were followed by stones—a method of terminating a discussion with which the Jews were quite familiar."—Beecher.

Passing through the midst of them.—"That Jesus at times

Chap. IX.

Luke 4 : 31.

April, J.C. 32.

And came down to Capernaum, a city of Galilee, assumed an aspect of such grandeur that men were awestruck, and could not bear either his eye or his voice, we know. . . . There are many instances of this power of his person to make men quail. We are inclined to the supposition that Jesus assumed a manner of such authority that even the riotous crowd let fall their hands, and that he walked quietly away from out of their midst."—Beecher. The following incident is given in Stevens' History of Methodism : "Wesley, assailed by a Cornish mob, is nearly thrown to the ground, whence he would never have risen alive. Struck with a blow upon the chest, so that the blood gushes out of his mouth, he yet maintains a composure superior to pain, and perfect, as if in the quiet of his study. Amid his utterance of prayer and their clamors for his life, a strange and sudden reaction takes place. A call is made for a fair hearing ; and the very leader of the mob, awestruck, becomes all at once his defender. And then, in language strongly reminding us (though it did not the historian himself) of the present scene, it is added, 'The people fell back, as if by common consent ; and, led on through their open ranks by the champion of the rabble, he safely escaped to his lodgings.'"

Went his way.—"And so he left them. Did he cast one lingering, lingering glance at the humble home in which for so many years he had toiled as the village carpenter ? Did no companion of his innocent boyhood, no friend of his sinless youth, accompany him with awe and pity and regret ? Such questions are not surely unnatural, not surely irreverent ; but they are not answered. Of all merely human emotions of his heart, except so far as they directly affect his mission upon earth, the Gospels are silent. We know only that henceforth other friends awaited him away from boorish Nazareth, among the gentle and noble-hearted fishermen of Bethsaida ; and that thenceforth his home, so far as he had a home, was in the little city of Capernaum, beside the sunlit waters of the Galilean lake."—Farrar.

Capernaum.—This town afterwards became the residence of Jesus, and is one of the few places whose destruction he predicted (Matt. 11 : 23 ; Luke 10 : 15). The prediction has been so perfectly fulfilled that now even its site is with difficulty determined. The probability is that it was at the north-western extremity of the lake, at the locality now occupied by Tell Hum—which is nothing more than a shapeless mass of ruins, usually deserted, but tenanted, now and then, by a few wandering Bedouins. There are at this place evident remains of a large town, and its surroundings accord with a description given by Josephus. The ruins are piled up in wild confusion for half a Chap. IX. Matt. 4 : 13-17 ; Mark 1 : 15 ; Luke 4 : 32. J.C. 32.

which is upon the sea-coast, in the borders of Zabulon and Nephthalim ; that it might be fulfilled ^{He resides at Capernaum.} which was spoken by Esaias the prophet, saying, " The land of Zabulon, and the land of Nephthalim, by the way of the sea, beyond Jordan, Galilee of the Gentiles : the people which sat in darkness, saw great light ; and to them which sat in the region and shadow of death, light is sprung up."

From that time Jesus began to preach, and to say, Repent ; for the kingdom of heaven is at hand : repent ye, and believe the gospel. And they were astonished at his doctrine : for his word was with power.

mile along the shore of the lake, and extend back a quarter of a mile to a neighboring hill. The houses were built of basalt, quite black, rudely cut, and so compact that the stones may yet remain for thousands of years. Among them are the ruins of what is supposed to have been a synagogue, of beautiful marble, with columns, entablatures, and cornices cut in the highest style of art. Every thing about the ruins grows luxuriantly, and the town must once have been the centre of a most fertile region. From Josephus it is certain that Capernaum was in a rich, busy district, and on the western shore of the lake—which in the time of Christ was one of the most prosperous and populous districts of Palestine. While Jesus was brought up at Nazareth, this was his " own city." Here he frequently taught in the synagogue built by the centurion, and here he called Matthew, and performed many of his most wonderful works.

Zebulon and Nephthalim.—Two of the ten tribes.

Galilee of the Gentiles was Upper Galilee, the region about Tyre and Sidon, and was so called because principally occupied by Gentiles.

Chap. X.

Matt. 4 : 13 ; Luke 5 : 1, 2.

J.C. 32.

CHAPTER X.

THE GALILEAN MINISTRY.

LEAVING Nazareth, he came and dwelt in Capernaum. And it came to pass, that, as the people pressed upon him to hear the word of God, he stood by the lake of Gennesaret ; and saw two ships standing by the

Time.—"The miraculous draught of fishes took place shortly after the rejection at Nazareth, but before the healing of Simon's mother-in-law (Luke 4 : 38, 39) ; for at that time these four fishermen were already in close attendance upon our Lord (Mark 1 : 29, 30). The indefinite language of Luke in regard to time plainly admits of this view."—Schaff.

Lake of Gennesaret.—Most of the public life of Jesus was passed on the borders of this lake, then in the most densely populated region of Palestine, no less than nine cities standing on its very shores. It is of oval form, about thirteen miles long, and six broad. The river Jordan enters at its northern end, and passes out at the southern. In fact the bed of the lake is only a lower section of the great Jordan valley. It is seven hundred feet below the level of the ocean, and its great depression makes the climate of its shores almost tropical. In summer the heat is intense, and even in early spring the air has the balminess of Egypt. The water of the lake is sweet, cool, and transparent, and as the beach is everywhere pebbly, it has a beautiful sparkling look. It abounds in fish now, as in ancient times. The scenery around is picturesque, and the environs are rich in natural beauty. Josephus describes the region as in his time a perfect paradise, where vines and all manner of fruits grew most luxuriantly, and at all seasons of the year. Only Luke calls it the "Lake of Gennesaret," the other evangelists variously the "Sea of Tiberias," and "Sea of Galilee."

Two ships.—These were, no doubt, such small boats as are now used in fishing on smooth, flat beaches. In fishing, one end of the net is attached to the shore ; the fishermen then row out and return, dropping the net as they go, and making a sort of semicircle from the shore, and, as one side of the net is sunk with weights to the bottom, and the other floated with corks at the top, all the fish in that compass are included, and drawn to the shore. Josephus says there were two hundred and thirty of these boats on the lake, each manned by four or five men.

Chap. X.

Luke 5 : 3.

April-March, J.C. 32.

lake : but the fishermen were gone out of them, and were washing their nets. And he entered into one of the ships, which was Simon's, and prayed him that he

Standing by the lake.—That is, probably drawn up on the beach.

Fishermen.—"In the part of Galilee adjacent to the lake, fishing was probably a common and a profitable business, as it is now on the banks of Newfoundland and coasts of New England. The first apostles seem to have been chosen out of this class, not as the lowest and the most illiterate, in order to enhance the proof of a divine authority attending the religion which they propagated, nor as the hardest and most accustomed to exposure, fitting them for what they were to suffer in their master's service, but as representing the body of the people in that part of Palestine, and no doubt possessing at least an average amount of natural intelligence, and such education and religious training as was common to the whole population, even of Galilee, who, although treated with contempt by the people of Judea, frequented the same feasts (John 4 : 45.), and attended the same spiritual worship in their synagogues, and received the same instruction from their scribes in every town of Galilee (Luke 5 : 17)."—Alexander. The four disciples who are here mentioned had become acquainted with Jesus some time before in Judea ; they had followed him, and baptized those who became his followers, and had probably attended him to Jerusalem and returned with him through Samaria to Galilee. But they seem not till now to have forsaken their ordinary employments.

Washing their nets.—"Simon and his companions, impelled by the necessities of a lot which they seem to have borne with noble-minded cheerfulness, had been engaged in fishing ; and, having been wholly unsuccessful, two of them, seated on the shore, probably, in that clear, still atmosphere, within hearing of his voice, were occupying their time in washing, and two, seated in their boat with their hired servants, and Zebedee their father, were mending their nets."—Farrar.

Simon, afterward called Peter, "was a native of Bethsaida in Galilee, and was the son of a certain Jonas. It is probable that he was, before he became known to Christ, a disciple of John the Baptist. He seems to have been a man of undoubted piety, of ardent attachment to his Master, but, at the same time, with a mind rather quick than accurate in its apprehensions, and with feelings rather hasty in their impulse than determined and continuous in their exercise. His fall and subsequent restoration produced a powerful change for the better would thrust out a little from the land. And he sat down, and taught the people out of the ship.

Now when he had left speaking, he said unto Simon, Launch out into the deep, and let down your nets for a draught. And Simon answering said unto him, Master, we have toiled all the night, and have taken upon the Apostle's mind. Tradition says that he suffered martyrdom by crucifixion, but was at his own request crucified with his head down."—Kitto.

Taught . . out of the ship.—In the vicinity of Tell Hum—the supposed site of Capernaum, at the north-west corner of the lake—are numerous inlets, where a boat could ride in safety within a few feet of the shore, while a multitude, seated on both sides, around, and in front of the boat, could hear readily.

Launch out.—"This is, in the original, in the singular number, as addressed to Peter alone, who was the steersman of his ship: let down is plural, as addressed to the fishermen in the ship collectively."—Alford. "As the first command had put the obedience of Peter to a slight test, so here his faith is exercised by an apparently arbitrary demand of the Saviour."—Van Oosterzee.

Into the deep—"i.e., the deep water. Luke always uses proper nautical phrases."—Schaff.

For a draught.—"He knew that they had toiled in vain; he had observed that even while he spoke they had been preparing for some future, and more prosperous, expedition; and with a sympathy which never omitted an act of kindness, he ordered Peter to push out his boat into the deep; and all of them cast out their nets once more. Peter was in a despondent mood; but the mere word of One whom he so deeply revered, and whose power he had already witnessed, was sufficient."—Farrar.

Master.—"A title which was given even to such teachers as any one entertained respect for, without as yet standing in a personal relation to them. Compare Luke 17 : 13."—Van Oosterzee.

We toiled.—"Not, 'have toiled,' for that implies that they had just stopped. Peter gives an account of the last night's labor."—Schaff.

All the night.—The ordinary time of fishing (see John 21 : 3). "There are certain kinds of fishing always carried on at night. It is a beautiful sight. With blazing torch the boat glides over the flashing sea, and the men stand gazing keenly into it until their prey is sighted, when, quick as lightning, they fling their net or ply their spear."—Thomson.

Chap. X.

Luke 5 : 5-9.

April-March, J.C. 32.

nothing : nevertheless at thy word I will let down the net. And when they had this done, they inclosed a great multitude of fishes ; and their net brake. And they beckoned unto their partners, which were in the other ship, that they should come and help them. And they came, and filled both the ships, so that they began to sink.

The Draught of Fishes.

When Simon Peter saw it, he fell down at Jesus' knees, saying, Depart from me ; for I am a sinful man, O Lord. For he was astonished, and all that were with him at Nevertheless, at thy word, etc.—"This implies a previous acquaintance of the Lord, from which he had already received impressions of his power, and of the weight of his words."—Trench. "He speaks as the director of the fishing party. The significance of this verse for 'fishers of men' is obvious."—Schaff.

Their net brake.—"Rather, 'was breaking.' If there was here an actual rent, it was of course only a beginning of tearing, since otherwise the whole draught might have been immediately lost again."—Van Oosterzee.

Their partners.—Their fellows ; that is, the sons of Zebedee. Not necessarily "partners," but companions.

Depart from me.—"A flash of supernatural illumination had revealed to him both his own sinful unworthiness, and who he was who was with him in the boat. It was the cry of self-loathing which had already realized something nobler. It was the first impulse of fear and amazement, before they had had time to grow into adoration and love. St. Peter did not mean the 'Depart from me : ' he only meant—and this was known to the Searcher of hearts—"I am utterly unworthy to be near thee, yet let me stay."—Farrar. "The speech is in exact keeping with the quick discernment, and expression of feeling, of Peter's character. Similar sayings are found (Exod. 20 : 18, 19 ; Judg. 13 : 22 ; 1 Kings 17 : 18 ; Isa. 6 : 5 ; Dan. 10 : 17.)"—Alford. "Below this is the utterly profane state, in which there is no contest, no contradiction, felt between the holy and the unholy, between God and man. Above it is the state of grace, in which all the contradiction is felt ; yet it is felt that this gulf is bridged over, that it is possible for the two to meet—that in One, who is sharer with both, they have already been brought together."—Trench.

For he was astonished.—It was a superstition among the Chap. X. Luke 5 : 9, 10 ; Matt. 4 : 19-21 ; Mark 1 : 19. J.C. 32.

the draught of the fishes which they had taken. And Jesus said unto Simon, Fear not ; follow me ; henceforth thou shalt catch men. And Simon (called Peter), and Andrew his brother, straightway left their nets, and followed him. And going on a little farther from thence, he saw other two brethren, James the son of Zebedee, and John his

The Disciples
Called.

Jews that he who had seen a remarkable manifestation of God would surely die. Peter appears to have been more amazed at the draught of fishes than at the wonderful cures he had seen at Capernaum. This was probably owing to his sharing a notion common to his people that the prayers of good men, with the laying on of hands, had power to heal the sick, and cast out evil spirits. "This miracle seems more than one of knowledge. It is true the shoals of fish in the lake are very thick, but the promise of Luke 5 : 10 ('Henceforth thou shalt catch men') points to an influence of Christ's upon the fish."—Trench. "Christ here appears as the ideal man, the second Adam of the eighth Psalm : Thou madest him to have dominion over the works of thy hands : Thou hast put all things under his feet—the fowl of the air, and the fish of the sea, and whatsoever walketh through the paths of the seas (ver. 6, 8)."—Schaff.

Fear not.—"How gently the answer came ! 'Fear not ; from henceforth thou shalt catch men.' Our Lord, as in all his teaching, seized and applied with exquisite significance the circumstances of the moment."—Farrar.

Shalt catch men.—"The original word here rendered "catch" means literally to "take alive." "Henceforth that sinful man, washed and cleansed, and redeemed and sanctified, was to chase with nobler labor a spoil which, by being entangled in the gospel net, would not die, but be saved alive."—Farrar. "Admire" says Chrysostom, "the dispensation of the Lord—how he draws each by the art which is most familiar and natural to him ; as the Magi by a star, so the fishermen by a fish."

Andrew his brother.—"This Greek name shows how common that language was in the East. It is not known which was the elder brother ; sometimes one and sometimes the other is named first."—Schaff.

James.—"This is the only one of the apostles of whose life and death we can write with certainty. He was called at this time to be a disciple in Christ. Next he was appointed one of brother, in a ship with Zebedee their father, mending their nets ; and straightway he called them. And they immediately left their father Zebedee in the ship with the hired servants, forsook all, and followed him.

Chap. X. Matt. 4 : 21, 22 ; Mark 1 : 20 ; Luke 5 : 11. J.C. 32.

the twelve apostles, and at that time probably with his brother received the title of 'Boanerges.' He was admitted to the raising of Jairus's daughter. He witnessed the Transfiguration. He was present at the agony in the garden. On the day of the ascension he is mentioned as persevering with each of the apostles and disciples in prayer. He was put to death by Herod (Acts 12 : 2)."—Smith's Bible Dictionary.

John.—"John was the son of Zebedee and Salome. (Compare Matt. 27 : 56 with Mark 15 : 40, 41). It would appear that he was not destitute of property, and was not in the lowest condition of life. He had hired men in his employ (Mark 1 : 20). Salome is described as one who attended our Saviour in his travels, and ministered to his wants (Matt. 27 : 55 ; Mark 15 : 41). Jesus commended his own mother Mary on the cross to John ; and he took her to his own home (John 19 : 26, 27), with whom, history informs us, she lived until her death, about fifteen years after the crucifixion of Christ ; and John was known to Caiaphas the high priest (John 18 : 15). From all this it would seem not improbable that John had some property, and was better known than any of the other apostles. He was the youngest of the apostles when called, and lived to the greatest age, and is the only one who is supposed to have died a peaceful death."—Barnes. "We have already noticed the not improbable conjecture that he resided much at Jerusalem, and there managed the importing of the fish which were sent thither from the Sea of Galilee. We should thus be able to account for his more intimate knowledge of those many incidents of our Lord's ministry in Judea which have been entirely omitted by the other Evangelists."—Farrar.

Straightway.—"True obedience knows no delays."—Ferome.

Forsook all.—"Resolving to forsake all things, remember among them to include thyself."—Bernard. "It seems that the disciples did not fully comprehend from their first call that they were to devote their whole lives to the work, throwing away their secular calling entirely ; and that while Jesus was at Capernaum they felt it incumbent on them to continue their trade, or, perhaps we ought rather to say, this return to their previous calling arose from a distrust in regard to their support. Only by degrees does it dawn upon them that they are henceforth to give up all for Christ, and trust all to

Chap. X.

Mark 1 : 21-23 ; Luke 4 : 31, 32.

J.C. 32.

And they went into Capernaum ; and straightway on the Sabbath day he entered into the synagogue, and taught. And they were astonished at his doctrine : for his word was with power ; he taught them as one that had authority, and not as the scribes.

The Unclean Spirit.

And there was in their synagogue a man with an unclean spirit ; and he cried out with a loud him."—Eggleston. " Now that John's imprisonment had determined the character of Christ's future ministry, he proceeds to gather around him those who had already been workers with him, that they might enter upon this new sphere of labor. Heretofore their relations to him had been similar to their previous relations to John the Baptist, involving only a temporary absence from their families and business."—Andrews. " These disciples hitherto, says Lightfoot, " were only as private men following Christ." " But now the Lord sought to engage them in a work which should be lifelong, and which was incompatible with other pursuits. They should now be his constant attendants, going with him wherever he went, and thus necessarily separated from their families and friends. This call to follow him was not, indeed, as Alford and others suppose, a call to the apostleship, but to a preliminary service ; and those thus called had as yet little understanding what labors, dangers, or dignities it involved."—Andrews.

Into the Synagogue.—" During the Babylonish exile, when the Jews were shut out from the Holy Land, and from the appointed sanctuary, the want of places for religious meetings, in which the worship of God without sacrifices could be celebrated, must have been painfully felt. Thus synagogues may have originated at that ominous period. When the Jews returned from Babylon, synagogues were planted throughout the country for the purpose of affording opportunities for publicly reading the law, independently of the regular sacrificial services of the temple (Neh. 8 : 1, etc)."—Schaff.

A man with an unclean spirit.—" Literally in an unclean spirit ; in his power, in intimate union with him."—Schaff. " The Scripture represents that there is a world of disembodied spirits, both good and bad ; that they are not wholly separated from mankind, but exert at times a powerful influence upon them ; that not only in past time certain individuals, as Saul, were affected by their presence, but that the Christian is still liable to be subjected to their often unrecognized influence, and that it is his voice, saying, Let us alone ; what have we to do with duty to watch and pray, not only against flesh and blood, but also 'against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world.' (Eph. 6 : 12.) It is equally certain that the phenomena of so-called animal magnetism indicate that at times individual men exert a strong influence in a direct manner mysterious to us, upon the brain and nerve-conditions of their fellows, acquiring an ascendancy over them by means which they understand as little as it is understood by either the subjects or the observers. The hypothesis of Scripture—that evil spirits sometimes acquire a similar control over the bodies and minds of individuals—is indeed incapable of scientific demonstration, since it deals with existences which lie beyond the domain of scientific investigation ; but it certainly accords with phenomena which still exist, and whose occult causes are confessedly not understood.

"It may be confidently asserted that if there are no cases of demonstrable demoniacal possession in modern times, there are mental phenomena which the hypothesis of such possession better solves than any other. . . . Is it certain that these persons, all of whom recognized the difference between right and wrong, in all of whom a double nature seemed to dwell, in all of whom conscience and their own better desires remonstrated against the crime which they abhorred, but in all of whom there seemed to their own consciousness another spirit dwelling whose instigations they were powerless to resist—is it certain that their own testimony that they were 'impelled by a shade,' or 'prompted by Satan,' is not more consistent with reason, as it is certainly more consistent with Scripture, than the material philosophy which endeavors to trace the disorder to a disease of the brain, which the utmost microscopic scrutiny after death often fails to disclose ? We are far from asserting that these and kindred cases are scientifically traceable to demoniacal possession. We do unhesitatingly assert that, in the present confessed ignorance of the causes of moral and mental disease, such an hypothesis is not to be superciliously rejected."—Abbott. The reader who is curious in this inquiry will find the cases referred to by Abbott more fully stated in Ray's Medical Jurisprudence, pp. 202-260. He can also consult Maudsley's Phys. and Path. of the Mind, pp 306-316, and Forbes Winslow's Obscure Diseases of the Brain and Mind, pp. 179-211.

Cried with a loud voice.—"The act of the demon, not a cry of pain from the demoniac. Luke (4 : 35) adds that the demon 'hurt him not.' The graphic and minute description forbids the view that this was a cure of epilepsy."—Schaff.

Chap. X.

Mark 1 : 24-28 ; Luke 4 : 35, 36.

J.C. 32.

thee, thou Jesus of Nazareth ? art thou come to destroy us ? I know thee who thou art, the Holy One of God. And Jesus rebuked him, saying, Hold thy peace, and come out of him. And when the unclean spirit had thrown him in the midst, and torn him, and cried with a loud voice, he came out of him and hurt him not. And they were all amazed, insomuch that they questioned among themselves, saying, What thing is this ? what new doctrine is this ? for with authority and power commandeth he even the unclean spirits, and they do obey him. And immediately his fame spread abroad into every place of the country, throughout all the region round about Galilee.

Hold thy peace.—"He did not here, or subsequently, permit evil spirits to bear witness to his Divine character or Messianic claims, (Mark 1 : 34 ; Luke 4 : 41). The ground of this imposition of silence may have been that the intent with which such witness was offered was evil, and that it would also have tended to evil by awaking premature and unfounded expectations as to His future work."—Andrews.

Had torn him.—"The spirit felt its Master, and that it must obey, but, demon to the last, threw the man down in the midst of the congregation, tearing him as it did so, and then with a wild howl fled out of him."—Geikie. Still malignant, though doomed to obey, submitting because he was obliged, not because he chose—he exerted his last power, inflicted all the pain he could, and then bowed to the Son of God, and came out.

They questioned among themselves.—"Only a miracle could produce this effect. The people began to think and argue for themselves, not to ask the scribes."—Schaff.

New doctrine.—"He gave old truths an unwonted freshness of presentation, and added much that sounded entirely new of his own authority, instead of confining himself, like the Rabbis, to lifeless repetitions of traditional commonplaces, delivered with a dread of the least deviation or originality. . . . Men were amazed at the phenomena of novelty, in a religious sphere so unchangeably conservative as that of the synagogue. This new teaching, said they among themselves, is with authority. It carries its warrant with it."—Geikie.

Chap. X. Mark 1 : 29-32 ; Luke 4 : 38-40 ; Matt. 8 : 15. J.C. 32.

And forthwith, when they were come out of the synagogue, they entered into the house of Simon and Andrew, with James and John. And The Healing of Peter's Wife's Mother
and Others. Simon's wife's mother lay sick of a great fever ; and they besought him for her. And he came and took her by the hand, lifted her up and rebuked the fever ; and immediately it left her, and she arose and ministered unto them.

And at even, when the sun was setting, they brought unto him all that were diseased, and them that were pos-

The house of Simon and Andrew.—That Peter lived at Capernaum, and that Christ lodged with him, is evident from this verse compared with Mark 17 : 24. Mark adds that Simon and Andrew lived together, and that James and John went with them into the house.

Simon's wife's mother.—"Peter was therefore married. Jerome and modern Romanist expositors infer that the wife was dead, from the fact that the mother when healed 'ministered unto them ;' but were that the case Peter must have married again (comp. 1 Cor. 9 : 5). Legend says that her name was Perpetua or Concordia."—Schaff.

Sick of a fever.—Luke says "a great fever." Tell Hum is environed with marshes which now breed fevers of a very violent and fatal character. In the simple science of that day they were divided into little and great fevers. This appears to have been the only distinction known. "Luke, himself a physician, characterized this as one of the more serious and aggravated type."—Abbott. "The healing of Peter's wife's mother seems to have been at the close of the synagogue service, and before evening, for at evening all that were diseased and possessed were brought to him. The synagogue service closed at or before noon, and it may be inferred, from the fact that she 'ministered unto them,' that she served them at the table at the midday meal. According to Josephus, the hour of this meal was, on the Sabbath, the sixth, or twelve o'clock. That the sick should wait till the sun was gone down (Mark 1 : 32) may be referred to the great scrupulosity of the Jews in regard to the Sabbath."—Andrews.

They brought to him all that were diseased.—"Those who heard of him and believed in his power to heal were numerous enough to justify this expression."—Schaff.

Ch. X. Mark 1 : 32, 35-38 ; Matt. 8 : 16, 17 ; Luke 4 : 41, 42. J.C. 32.

sessed with devils. And all the city was gathered together at the door, and he healed all that were sick : that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by Esaias the prophet, saying, Himself took our infirmities, and bare our sicknesses. And devils also came out of many, crying out, and saying, Thou art Christ the Son of God. And he, rebuking them, suffered them not to speak : for they knew that he was Christ.

And in the morning, rising up a great while before day, he went out, and departed into a solitary desert place, and there prayed. And when it was day the people sought him.

Jesus
Departs to Other Cities.

And Simon and they that were with him followed after him. And when they had found him, they said unto him. All men seek for thee. And he said unto them, Let us go into the next towns, that I may preach Suffered them not to speak.—See above, "Hold thy peace!"

A great while before day.—Luke says, "When it was day," or, more literally, "it becoming day;" that is, at dawn.

And there prayed.—"We always long to look into the souls of great men at critical periods to see how success or defeat affects them. This had been a triumphal Sabbath to Jesus. No opposition seems to have arisen from any quarter. . . . The effect of such success upon his own spirit is dimly shown in the record by the intimations of a probably sleepless night, and his going forth long before daylight into a quiet place for prayer. The excitement of beneficence lifted him toward the Divine Spirit. If success had in any wise tempted him to vanity, he found a refuge in communion with God."—Beecher.

That I may preach there also.—"Not to work miracles, but to preach ; though he did both (Mark 1 : 39). The crowd gathered because of the works he performed, but his great object was to teach."—Schaff. "This quick departure from Capernaum may perhaps be explained from the Lord's desire that a period of reflection should follow the surprise and wonder which his words and works had excited in the minds of the people. He therefore will leave them to meditate on what they have seen and heard, and depart to visit the other cities and villages of Galilee."—Andrews.

Ch.X. Mark 1 : 38, 39 ; Luke 4 : 42, 43 ; Matt. 4 : 23-25. J.C. 32.

there also : for therefore came I forth. And the people stayed him, that he should not depart from them ; but he said unto them, I must preach the kingdom of God to other cities also : for therefore am I sent.

And he preached the gospel of the kingdom in their synagogues throughout all Galilee, and cast out devils and healed all manner of sickness and all manner of disease among the people. And his fame went throughout all Syria : and they brought unto him all sick people that were taken with divers diseases and torments, and those which were possessed with devils, and those which were lunatic, and those that had the palsy : and he healed them. And there followed him great multitudes of people from Galilee, and from Decapolis, and from Jerusalem, and from Judea, and from beyond Jordan.

Syria.—"The name of the largest Roman province north and east of Palestine, sometimes including it. Probably used here in its widest extent."—Schaff.

Great multitudes.—Literally "many crowds." These came from all parts of Palestine—from Galilee, where he preached ; Decapolis (meaning "ten cities"), a district principally east of the Jordan, according to Ritter, settled by the veterans of Alexander the Great ; Jerusalem, the capital ; Judea, the southern part of Palestine ; and from beyond the Jordan, here referring to the northern part of Perea on the east of the Jordan, south of Decapolis. "All Palestine was moved by his presence. The synagogues were crowded with expectant hearers on the Sabbath, the streets with expectant patients in the week (Mark 1 : 45 ; Luke 5 : 15, 16). To the people it verily appeared that one of the ancient prophets had risen from the dead (Matt. 16 : 14). To his disciples it seemed as though his whole service was to be a triumphal march. But already the mutterings of the coming storm might be heard by an attentive ear."—Abbott.

CHAPTER XI.

THE GREAT PHYSICIAN.

AND it came to pass, when he was in a certain city, behold there came a man full of leprosy ; who seeing

A Certain City.—"While he was in one of the cities" is the correct rendering. What place is referred to must be left to conjecture. It was probably near to, but not Capernaum. Mark 1 : 38.

Full of leprosy.—A term of medical accuracy peculiar to Luke, who was a physician. It was not an occasional spot, but the disease had permeated the whole body. It was one of the worst and foulest cases. Such extreme forms of the disease were incurable.

Leprosy.—This is a troublesome, and, in its advanced stages, an incurable disease. It is of three kinds—the white, black, and red leprosy. Its first appearance is in spots on the skin, but it is deeply seated in the joints and bones, and, when considerably advanced, produces acute suffering. An observer describes it as follows : "Its commencement is imperceptible. There appear only some few spots on the skin. At first they are attended with no pain or inconvenience ; but no means whatever will remove them. The disease imperceptibly increases for many years. The spots become large, and spread over the whole body. When the disease advances the upper part of the nose swells, the nostrils become enlarged, and the nose itself soft. Tumors appear on the jaws ; the eyebrows swell ; the ears become thick ; the points of the fingers, as also the feet and the toes, swell ; the nails become scaly ; the joints and the hands separate and drop off. In the last stage of the disease the patient becomes a hideous spectacle, and falls to pieces." "In the tenth and eleventh centuries this terrible distemper was common in Europe, introduced, it is supposed, by the Arabs and Moors ; and it is said there were about 15,000, or according to Matthew Paris, 9000, hospitals for lepers. At present it is scarcely known in Europe. Some time ago a leprosy resembling that of the Africans terribly afflicted the people of Barbadoes, especially the blacks."—Gurney's Dict. In the neighborhood of Jerusalem Dr. Thomson once encountered a crowd of beggars "sans eyes, sans nose, sans hair, sans every thing." "They held up toward me," he says, "their handless arms, unearthly sounds gurgled through their throats without palates—in a word, I was horrified, having never seen a leper, nor had my attention turned to the subject, I at first knew not what to make of it. I subsequently

Chap. XI.

Luke 5 : 12 ; Mark 1 : 41-43. Summer, J.C. 32.

Jesus fell on his face, and besought him, saying Lord, if thou wilt, thou canst make me clean. And Cures a Leper. Jesus, moved with compassion, put forth his hand, and touched him, and saith unto him, I will ; be thou clean. And as soon as he had spoken, immediately, the leprosy departed from him, and he was cleansed. And Jesus straightly charged him, and forth-visited their habitations, and made many inquiries into their history. It appears that these unfortunate beings have been perpetuated about Jerusalem from the remotest antiquity." Leprosy was thought to be contagious, and by the Jewish laws the leper was forbidden to eat with others, and was obliged to dwell outside the towns by himself, and to wear his clothing rent as a mark of his condition (Lev. 13 : 4, 5, 6 ; 2 Kings 7 : 3 ; Josephus contra Apion 1 : 31). He was forbidden to come near to any one, and should any approach him unawares, he was bound to give the warning cry "Unclean ! Unclean !" But such was the repute of Jesus for human sympathy that even lepers approached him without fear, and "as many as came to him were healed of their infirmity."

Lord.—The usual address of the Jews to any distinguished person. The leper employs it merely as a mark of respect and honor.

Touched him.—"To touch him—the horror-stricken Jew would sooner suffer the kiss of an envenomed serpent."—Abbott. "It was not needful to touch this loathsome creature. A word would have healed him. But a word would not express the tenderness and yearning sympathy of the Saviour's heart. And Jesus, moved with compassion, put forth his hand and touched him, etc."—Beecher.

I will.—"Sometimes . . . he delayed his answer to a sufferer's prayer. But we are never told that he delayed when a leper cried to him. Leprosy was an acknowledged type of sin, and Christ would teach us that the heartfelt prayer of the sinner to be purged and cleansed is always met by instantaneous acceptance."—Farrar.

Strictly charged him.—"A word implying an extreme earnestness, and even vehemence, of look and gesture ;" and "the word for forthwith sent him away is, literally, he pushed or drove him forth."—Farrar. Various reasons are suggested for his urgent command to silence : A desire that the man should not be prevented from the duties enjoined by the law upon one with sent him away ; and saith unto him, See thou say nothing to any man : but go thy way, shew thyself to the priest, and offer for thy cleansing those things which Moses commanded, for a testimony unto them. But he went out, and began to publish it much, and to blaze abroad the matter, insomuch that Jesus could no more openly enter into the city, but was without, in desert places ; and he withdrew himself into the wilderness, and prayed ; and great multitudes came to him from every quarter to hear and to be healed by him of their infirmities.

Chap. XI.

Mark 1 : 43-45 ; Luke 5 : 15, 16. Summer, J.C. 32.

healed of leprosy ; an unwillingness to create a popular excitement, arousing the enmity of the priests and scribes, and hindering the progress of his own spiritual work ; and a foresight of the natural consequences of the miracles being "blazed abroad." As Andrews says : "The public proclamation of this miracle gave the people such conceptions of his mighty power to heal that all thronged to him to be healed, and thus his teachings, and the moral side of his work, were thrust into the shade. It was the word which he wished to make prominent, and the work was but subsidiary."

Shew thyself to the priest.—To conform to the directions of Lev. Chap. 14. A first inspection was to be made by the priest ; then after seven days a second one was to be made, and finally after purification a visit was to be made to the Temple, where the leper was to offer the gift or, as Mark has it, "those things that Moses commanded"—i.e., two live kids, three lambs for sacrifice, some oil, and various elaborate ceremonies and ritual observances (Lev. 14 : 4).

Without, in desert places.—The people sought him even in the wilderness. The narratives clearly imply that whole neighborhoods resorted to him with their sick, and were all healed.

Withdrew himself into the wilderness.—"The love of solitude is strikingly shown in Jesus. Nothing exhausts one so soon as sympathy with the active sorrows of men. Drawn out on every side by men's needs, he regained his equilibrium in the wilderness. It was there, too, that his thoughts rose into communion with his Father. What reminiscences of heaven had he ? What dim memories of his former life and joy came to him ? No one can tell. There are many who can testify

Chap. XI. Mark 2 : 1-3 ; Luke 5 : 17 ; Matt. 9 : 2. J.C. 32.

And again he entered into Capernaum after some days ; and it was noised that he was in the house. And straightway many were gathered together, insomuch that there was no room to receive them
 At Capernaum. no, not so much as about the door : and he preached the word unto them. And it came to pass on a certain day, as he was teaching, that there were Pharisees and doctors of the law sitting by, which were come out of every town of Galilee, and Judea, and Jerusalem : and the power of the Lord was present to heal them.

And behold four men brought unto him a man sick of the palsy, lying on a bed. And they sought means that to them the solitudes that lie near to every side of life have been as the dawn of the morning after a troubled night, as a cool shadow in the hot noon—a fountain in a great and weary desert.”—Beecher.

Insomuch that not even the parts about (or towards) the door (much less the house) could any longer hold them.—“ This suggests a constantly increasing crowd, at length filling even the porch leading from the interior to the door.”—Schaff.

Doctors of the law sitting by.—See below in the text, Certain of the Scribes. Evidently come together as authoritative critics of the new teacher ; and received with courtesy, since they were “ sitting.”

Palsy.—A disease common in the East. In its worst forms the patient loses all control of his limbs, suffers excruciating torture, and soon dies. Many infirmities are included under this general name of palsy in the New Testament. 1st. The apoplexy, or paralytic shock, affecting the whole body. 2d. The hemiplegy, affecting only one side of the body, the most frequent form of the disease. 3d. The paraplegy, affecting all the system below the neck. 4th. The catalepsy. This is caused by a contraction of the muscles in the whole or a part of the body, and is very dangerous. The effects are very violent and fatal. For instance, if when a person is struck he happens to have his hand extended, he is unable to draw it back ; if not extended, he is unable to stretch it out. It becomes diminished in size, and dried up. Hence it was called the withered hand (Matt. 12 : 10). 5th. The

Chap. XI.

Luke 5 : 18-20 ; Mark 2 : 5. Summer, J.C. 32.

to bring him in, and to lay him before Jesus ; and when they could not find what way they might bring him in because of the multitude, they went upon the housetop, and uncovered the roof where he was : and when they had broken it up, they let down the bed, wherein the sick of the palsy lay, through the tiling, into the midst, before Jesus. When Jesus saw their faith, he said unto the sick of the palsy, Son, be of good cheer : thy sins be forgiven thee. But cramp. This, in Eastern countries, is a fearful malady, and by no means unfrequent. It originates from chills in the night. The limbs, when seized with it, remain unmovable, and the person afflicted with it resembles one undergoing torture.

Heals the Paralytic.

The housetop was nearly flat, and protected by a battlement. (See Deut. 22 : 8). Being unable to approach "even the parts about the door," they ascended to the roof by the outside staircase.

Uncovered the roof.—In the East, "rafters are laid on the top of the side walls, about three feet apart, and on these short sticks are put till the whole is covered. Over these again a thick coating of brushwood or of some common bush is spread. A coat of mortar comes next, burying and leveling all beneath it, and on this again is spread marl or earth, which is rolled flat and hard. Many roofs indeed are much slighter. . . . It is thus easy to break up a roof when it is necessary, and it is often done."—Geikie.

The bed.—The original implies not merely a mattress but "a small low couch or a bed of the commonest description, such as was used by the poor people, having a mere network of cords stretched over the frame to support the mattress."—Abbott.

Son, thy sins be forgiven.—"The words are an affirmation, not a prayer or wish. As a prayer, the scribes would not have objected to them. When the common version was made, be was often used for are."—Campbell. Both ancient and modern physicians tell us that palsies are sometimes occasioned by intemperance. "Behold how that miserable man, whom the proud Pharisee scarce vouchsafed to look upon, of our sweet and gentle Lord is called Son. Never in the whole Gospel do we read any of the Apostles to be called, severally, of our Lord Son, like as this sick of the palsy was ; so grateful to God is sickness and poverty when sustained with patience."—Boraventura.

Chap. XI.

Mark 2 : 6-12 ; Matt. 9 : 4, 8. Summer, J.C. 32.

there were certain of the scribes sitting there, and reasoning in their hearts, saying, Why doth this man thus speak blasphemies? who can forgive sins but God only? And immediately, when Jesus perceived in his spirit that they so reasoned within themselves, he said unto them, Why reason ye these things in your hearts? Wherefore think ye evil? Whether is it easier to say to the sick of the palsy, Thy sins be forgiven thee; or to say, Arise, and take up thy bed, and walk? But that ye may know that the Son of man hath power on earth to forgive sins [he saith to the sick of the palsy], I say unto thee, Arise, and take up thy bed, and go thy way into thine house. And immediately he arose, took up the bed, and went forth before them all, departing to his own house, glorifying God. And when the multitude saw it they were all amazed, and glorified God which had given

Why doth this man thus speak? He blasphemeth! Who can, etc.—"This is the best established reading of the verse, 'This one' contemptuously: 'thus'—i.e., such great things; the words in the original resemble each other: This one in this wise. If our Lord were what the scribes deemed him, their judgment was correct."—Schaff. But he was not.

Which is easier?—"May not anybody say the former without its being possible to tell whether the sins are forgiven, or not? but who can say the latter, and give effect to his own words, without a power from above?"—Farrar.

The Son of Man.—The Messiah. Another proclamation of his mission. "By remitting the sin," says Irenæus, "he showed who he was; for if none can remit sins but God, and yet Christ did remit them, he was both the Word of God, and the Son of Man, receiving power to remit sins from his Father as God and Man."

They were all amazed.—"Luke alone mentions all three emotions of wonder, gratitude, and fear. Matthew speaks of the last two; Mark of the first two. Matthew indicates that these feelings were those of the people, not of the Scribes and Pharisees."—Schaff.

Ch. XI. Matt. 9 : 8, 9 ; Luke 5 : 26-28 ; Mark 2 : 13, 14. J.C. 32.

such power unto man, and were filled with fear, saying, We have seen strange things to-day.

And he went forth again by the sea-side ; and all the multitude resorted unto him, and he taught them. And as he passed from thence, he beheld a publican named Matthew, the son of Alphaeus, sitting at the receipt of custom, and said unto him, Follow me. And he arose, left all, and followed him.

The call of Matthew.

Matthew.—Luke says (5 : 27) "A publican named Levi ; Mark (11 : 14), Levi, the son of Alphaeus ; and Matthew himself, (9 : 9), a man named Matthew." Farrar observes : "His name may have been changed by Christ, perhaps in part to obliterate the painful reminiscences of his late discreditable calling."

Sitting.—"The people of this country sit at all kinds of work. The carpenter saws, planes, and hews with his hand-adze, sitting on the ground or upon the plank he is planing. The washer-woman sits by the tub ; and, in a word, no one stands where it is possible to sit. Shopkeepers always sit ; and Levi sitting at the receipt of custom is the exact way to state the case."—W. M. Thomson. The Romans had toll booths erected at the foot of bridges, the mouth of rivers, by the sea-side, and on every highway where many passed to and fro, and there publicans were stationed to gather the customs. "The manner of this call, like the call of Simon and Andrew, and James and John, presupposes a prior acquaintance of Jesus with Levi."—Andrews.

And he arose, etc.—Thus simply Matthew narrates the matter ; but Luke intimates that he made some sacrifice in being joined to Jesus. "And he left all, rose up, and followed him" (ver. 28). Matthew obeys the rule : "Let another man praise thee, and not thine own mouth" (Prov. 27 : 2). Geikie says of Matthew's action that it was "not, of course, on the moment, for he would have to take formal steps to release himself, and would require to settle his accounts with his superior before he was free. Henceforth, however, he attended him who soon had not where to lay his head." It does seem more dramatic to imagine Matthew leaving his affairs to take care of themselves, in his eagerness to follow Christ ; but God's word loses nothing by being interpreted according to good sense and probability. It is Matthew's genuine sacrifice of worldly prosperity, and not any theatrical display in his way of making it, that should move our admiration.

CHAPTER XII.

THE SABBATH QUESTION.

AND it came to pass on the second Sabbath after the first that Jesus went through the cornfields ; and his disciples were an hungered, and began to pluck the ears of corn, rubbing them in their hands, and to eat. But when the Pharisees saw it, they said unto him, Behold, thy disciples do that which is not lawful to do upon the Sabbath day. But he said

The second Sabbath after the first.—"There is great doubt and difference of opinion as to the meaning of the Greek word so rendered." Either of the two current explanations, however, "brings the incident in the first Passover week. The barley harvest was in April, the wheat harvest in May. Thus the incident undoubtedly occurred about the time indicated by these two interpretations. The question is of importance only as it serves to fix a date in Christ's life, and the meaning is so doubtful that it cannot be relied upon for that purpose."—Abbott. The place was doubtless Capernaum, for the incident is narrated by the three Evangelists as occurring directly before the healing of the man with the withered hand, and this took place in "their synagogue" (Matt. 12 : 9)—that is, the one at Capernaum.

Were an hungered.—"The custom of the nation had, as yet, held them fasting—which suffered none, unless he were sick, to taste any thing on the Sabbath before the morning prayers of the synagogue."—Lightfoot.

Ears of corn.—Grain, either wheat or barley. The barley harvest was in April, and the grain would be ripe on the second Sabbath after the first day of unleavened bread.

Pluck . . . rubbing it in their hands.—From Deut. 23 : 25, it will be seen that the Jew was permitted to pluck and eat the standing grain of his neighbor. Dr. Thomson says in regard to this custom : "I have often seen my muleteers, as we passed along the wheat fields, pluck off ears, rub them in their hands, and eat them unroasted, just as the disciples are said to have done."

Which is not lawful.—The preparation of food on the Sabbath was made a breach of the law by the traditions of the Pharisees. The rubbing in the hands they construed into forbidden work.

Chap. XII.

Matt. 12 : 2-6 ; Mark 2 : 26. Summer, J.C. 32.

unto them, Have ye not read what David did, when he was an hungered, and they that were with him ; how he entered into the house of God, in the days of Abiathar, the high priest, and did eat the shewbread, and gave also to them that were with him, which was not lawful for him to eat, neither for them which were with him, but only for the priests ? Or have ye not read in the law, how that on the Sabbath days the priests in the temple profane the Sabbath, and are blameless ? But I say unto you, that in this place is one greater than the House of God.—This was the Tabernacle : the Temple was not built at the time of David.

Abiathar the high priest.—"The reference is to 1 Sam. 21 : 1-9. There, however, Ahimelech is represented as the high-priest, and elsewhere Abiathar is represented as his son. The most probable explanation is that Abiathar was the son of Ahimelech and ministered with his father, and perhaps personally gave the shewbread to David, and being subsequently high-priest is here given his title ; a title which did not, however, properly become his till a later period." Abbott.

The shewbread.—"The bread of the presence," so called because it was placed before the face of Jehovah, by the priests, upon the golden table in the sanctuary. It was left there a full week, and then was removed (Exod. 25 : 23-30), to be eaten by the priests, and by them only.

The priests in the Temple.—A much larger number of beasts were slain, and prepared for sacrifice, on the Sabbath than on other days. Hence the priests did much more servile work on that day ; but it being done by express command of God, they were blameless. It was a saying of the Rabbins that the Sabbath was lawfully violated by the doing of sacerdotal work, and that there "is no sabbatism in the Temple."

One greater than the Temple. The reading of the best authorities is, "That which is greater." He had previously (John 2 : 19) compared his body to the Temple. The meaning is well given by Alford : "If the priests in the Temple, and for the Temple's sake, profane the Sabbath, as ye account profanation, and are blameless, how much were the disciples who have gone hungry in their appointed following of Him who is greater than the Temple, the true Temple of God on earth, the Son of man."

Chap. XII.

Matt. 12 : 6, 7 ; Mark 2 : 27. Summer, J.C. 32.

temple. But if ye had known what this meaneth, I will have mercy, and not sacrifice, ye would not have condemned the guiltless. And he said unto them, The Sabbath was made for man, and not man for the Sabbath.

But if ye had known.—They should have known, for they professed to be interpreters of the Scriptures. If they had read Hosea 6 : 6, they would have known that the relief of the hungry was a higher duty than any merely ceremonial observance.

The Sabbath was made for man.—This passage is peculiar to Mark, but intimately connected with the quotation which Matthew makes from Hosea. Man was created before the Sabbath, and it was instituted for his moral and physical good. No institution has contributed so much to the welfare of the race as the Sabbath. To it, more than to any thing else, are due the peace and order of every civilized country. On this day the poor and the ignorant, as well as the rich and the educated, have undisturbed time to find rest for the body, relief for the careworn mind, and recreation for the soul ; to learn the nature of morals and the love of God. Where it is neglected are found ignorance, vice, disorder, and crime ; where it is observed, peace prevails, morals are promoted, vice is suppressed, the poor are elevated, and the community prospers. Wilberforce remarks, "What a blessing is Sunday, interposed between the waves of worldly business like the divine path of the Israelites through Jordan !" "The beautiful custom of keeping the day of our Lord's resurrection, instead of the seventh day, came into the Church very early. But it is only in modern times that it has been attempted to erect it into a strict Jewish Sabbath. The very change shows that the apostolic Church did not regard themselves bound to keep the literal Jewish Sabbath, nor to keep any Sabbath with a literal and ceremonial severity. The Christian religion is not a religion of times and seasons, of rites and observances, but a religion of purity, benevolence, and long-suffering."—Eggleston. "The end for which the Sabbath was ordained was to bless man ; the end for which man was created was not to observe the Sabbath. A principle was here laid down which it is clearly impossible to confine to the Sabbath alone. Rather it must extend to the whole circle of outward ordinances."—Trench. This declaration, the Sabbath was made for man, "implies (1) the perpetuity of a Sabbath rest ; it was made for man not merely for the Jews ; (2) its universality ; it was made for man, not for any single class ; (3) its object ; for man—man's day, therefore, as truly as the Lord's day." Condensed from Abbott.

Chap. XII. Matt. 12 : 8 ; Mark 3 : 1 ; Luke 6 : 6, 7.

J.C. 32.

For the Son of Man is Lord even of the Sabbath day. And on another Sabbath he entered again into the synagogue and taught ; and there was a man there whose right hand was withered. And the scribes and Pharisees watched him, whether he would heal him on the Sab-

For the Son of Man is Lord of the Sabbath. "This crowning thought occurs in all these narratives. The emphasis rests on the word 'Lord.' The term 'Son of Man' implies his Messiahship. The Jews admitted that the authority of the Messiah was greater than that of the law of the Sabbath ; hence this declaration would serve to increase the hostility of the Pharisees. Still the more prominent idea is this : As Son of Man, Head and Representative of renewed humanity, our Lord is Lord of the Sabbath. As such, he has the right to change the position of the day, but the language points to a perpetuity of the institution. It implies further that a new air of liberty and love will be breathed into it, so that, instead of being what it then was—a badge of narrow Jewish feeling, and a field for endless hair-splitting about what was lawful and unlawful—it becomes a type and foretaste of heaven, a day when we get nearest our Lord, when we rise most with him, when our truest humanity is furthered, because we are truly made like the Son of Man."—Schaff.

The Synagogue.—From the definite manner in which this Synagogue is spoken of, it is supposed that the one at Capernaum is referred to. In the same definite way the house—probably Peter's—which Jesus occupied at Capernaum is often alluded to. "Mark 3 : 50, compared with 1 : 21, and the use of the definite article, in the mention of the Synagogue, by all the evangelists (which use shows it to have been the Synagogue most commonly frequented by our Lord), and especially the reference to the sea so directly after (Mark 3 : 7), to which he is supposed to retire from wheresoever he was, proves, almost to a demonstration, that the Synagogue in question could be only that of Capernaum."—Greswell.

Withered.—(See note on Palsy, p. 150.)

Watched him.—With a malicious intent. The combined accounts show that, from his uniform habit of healing all the sick with whom he came in contact, the Pharisees expected Jesus would cure the infirm man as soon as his attention was attracted to him. But as he showed no intention of doing so, they asked him, "Is it lawful," etc., that they might tempt him to a breach of the Sabbath.

Luke 6 : 7, 8 ; Mark 3 : 4 ; Luke 6 : 9 ; Matt. 12 : 11, 12.

bath day ; that they might find an accusation against him. But he knew their thoughts, and said to the man ^{The Withered Hand.} which had the withered hand, Rise up, and stand forth in the midst. And he arose and stood forth. And he saith unto them, Is it lawful to do good on the Sabbath days, or to do evil ? to save life, or to destroy it ? But they held their peace. And he said unto them, What man shall there be among you, that shall have one sheep, and if it fall into a pit on the Sabbath day, will he not lay hold on it, and lift it out ? How much, then, is a man better than a sheep ! Wherefore it is lawful to do well on the Sab-

Is it lawful.—From the rabbinical citations it appears that it had been decided by the doctors to be unlawful to heal any one on the Sabbath day unless he were in imminent peril of life. Yet it appears, from Luke 14 : 3, 4, that our Lord at length made the Pharisees almost ashamed to defend such a principle. (Comp. Luke 13 : 14 ; John 9 : 16.) He answers this question as was his wont (see Matt. 21 : 24) by another question. He was seeking to save life ; they were seeking to destroy it by making an occasion for an accusation against Jesus. "They had put the alternatives of doing or not doing ; here there might be a question. But he shows that the alternatives are doing good, or failing to do good—which last he puts as identical with doing evil, neglecting to save as equivalent with destroying. Here there could be no question : this under no circumstances could be right ; it could never be good to sin. Therefore it is not merely allowable, but a duty, to do some things on the Sabbath."—Trench.

Destroy.—The Pharisees were then seeking his destruction, and this remark reveals to them his knowledge of their intentions, which made them the real violators of the Sabbath. "While they were forming designs of murder in the Synagogue, and on the Sabbath, they blamed him for doing good."—Scott.

How much then is a man better than a sheep.—Lightfoot on this passage remarks that "it is certain that the Jews anciently allowed the drawing of a beast out of a pit on the Sabbath, or out of a ditch, to save it from drowning. To these canons, therefore, our Saviour seems very properly to appeal in vindication of his intention to heal this afflicted man." After this time the rabbins forbade doing more than to "lay planks" for the animal.

Chap. XII.

Mark 3 : 5, 6 ; Luke 6 : 11. Summer, J.C. 32.

bath days. And when he had looked round about on them with anger, being grieved for the hardness of their hearts, he saith unto the man, Stretch forth thine hand. And he stretched it out : and his hand was restored whole as the other.

And the Pharisees were filled with madness, and went forth, and straightway took counsel with the Herodians against him, how they might destroy him.

With anger.—"It is not necessary here to discuss, with commentators, the question whether our Lord really felt anger or not, or what is the true definition of anger ; for the word does not here denote anger, but (as sometimes in the classical writers) indignation ; a view established by the words following, 'being grieved in mind,' which no doubt meant that with the indignation was mingled concern and grief."—Bloomfield.

Stretch forth thine hand.—"Our Lord does no outward act ; the healing is performed without even a word of command. The stretching forth of the hand was to prove its soundness, which the divine power wrought in the act of stretching it forth. Thus his enemies were disappointed."—Alford.

Filled with madness.—"Pride, obstinacy, and interest combined together, are capable of any thing. When men have once framed their conscience according to their passions, madness passes for zeal, the blackest conspiracies for pious designs, and the most horrid attempts for heroic actions."—Quesnel. "They could not allow themselves to look upon Christ's merciful deed in the light of humanity. It was to them a political act, and in its tendency a subversion of their teaching, of their influence, and of their supreme authority."—Beecher

The Pharisees took counsel against him. They conferred together, and even asked aid of their enemies, the Herodians, who were wedded to the interest of their oppressors, the Romans ; but there is nothing to indicate that there was a formal meeting of the local tribunal. They intended, perhaps, to found a charge of blasphemy, from his declaring himself greater than the Temple, and also Lord of the Sabbath ; or to accuse him as a Sabbath-breaker.

Herodians.—These distinguished themselves from the other Jews by concurring with Herod's scheme of subjecting himself and his dominions to the Romans, and likewise by complying with him in many heathen practices, such as erecting temples with images for idolatrous worship, building theatres and instituting

Chap. XII.

Matt. 12 : 15 ; Mark 12 : 7-11. Summer, J.C. 32.

But when Jesus knew it, he withdrew himself with his disciples to the sea : and a great multitude from Galilee followed him, and from Judea, and from Jerusalem, and from Idumæa, and from beyond Jordan ; and they about Tyre and Sidon, a great multitude, when they had heard what great things he did, came unto him. And he spake to his disciples, that a small ship should wait on him because of the multitude, lest they should throng him. For he had healed many ; insomuch that they pressed upon him for to touch him, as many as had plagues. And un-pagan games, and placing a golden eagle over the gates of the temple of Jehovah. "The mention of this party, if they were, as their name implies, either the followers or the partisans of Herod the tetrarch, religious or political, seems to intimate that he was now in the dominions of Herod ; and, consequently, it was expedient or necessary for the Pharisees, in order to give effect to their own designs, to interest in their behalf a sect who were peculiarly his creatures."—Greswell.

Jerusalem.—The mention of this and other distant places shows how widely the reputation of Jesus had now spread.

A small ship.—The vessels in use on the sea of Tiberias were all much smaller than those we now call ships. This was, no doubt, "one of those small boats which Josephus shows to have been abundantly numerous on the lake of Tiberias ; so much so that on a certain occasion he himself speedily collected together as many as two hundred and thirty, each of which required at least four persons to man it, and was capable of carrying sixteen or more with ease ; so that our Saviour, and his usual attendants, when those became the twelve apostles, would constitute about their ordinary complement. The purpose for which this vessel was retained proves that it was not wanted at all times, but only occasionally—that is, when the importunity of the people, bringing their sick friends, or infirm persons of any kind, to press upon our Lord, became too great."—Greswell.

Plagues.—Literally "scourges." Those painful and afflictive disorders seem to be intended which were supposed to be sent, or at least permitted, by God, as a punishment for sin.

Unclean spirits.—Persons possessed with them. "When it is said that 'unclean spirits fell down before him,' it forms an undeniable proof of the reality of the possessions and of the absoclean spirits, when they saw him, fell down before him, and cried, saying, Thou art the Son of God. And he straitly charged them that they should not make him known. That it might be fulfilled which was spoken by Esaias the prophet, saying, Behold my servant, whom I have chosen ; my beloved, in whom my soul is well pleased : I will put my spirit upon him, and he shall shew judgment to the Gentiles. He shall not strive, nor cry ; neither shall any man hear his voice in the streets. A bruised reed shall he not break, and smoking flax shall he not quench, till he send forth judgment unto victory. And in his name shall the Gentiles trust.

Chap. XII. Mark 3 : 11, 12; Matt. 12 : 17-21. Summer, J C 32.

lute authority of Christ (Matt. 8 : 28, 29).”—Scott. “He silences the devils, even when they spake the truth, lest he should seem to approve of witnesses who were liars by nature.”—Luigi Novarini.

Spoken by Isaiah (chap. 43 : 1-4). Not strictly according to the Hebrew, but gives the spirit of the passage.

Proclaim judgment to the Gentiles. Make the truth to be known among them, or, according to Schaff, “announce the final judgment to the Gentiles, presenting himself as the judge.”

Not strive.—Not appear as a contentious or turbulent agitator in public.

Bruised reed . . . smoking flax.—The wicks of lamps were of flax, and when the oil was well nigh exhausted the flax would naturally smoke. Alford says of the two metaphors : “A proverbial expression for ‘He will not crush the contrite heart, nor extinguish the slightest spark of repentant feeling in the sinner.’” On this passage Bishop Porteus remarks : “He will not bear hard upon a wounded, contrite, and truly humble heart, bowed down with a sense of its infirmity. He will not quench the faintest spark of returning virtue by severity, but will cherish and encourage the one, and raise, animate, and enliven the other.” “He that stretcheth not forth his hand to the sinner, and he that beareth not the burden of his brother, breaks the bruised reed ; and he that despiseth the smallest spark of faith in little ones, quenches the smoking flax.”—Jerome. To this we may add what is quaintly written by Izaak Walton, “I have heard divines say that those virtues that were but sparks upon earth shall become great and glorious flames in heaven.”

Ch. XII. Luke 6 : 12, 13 ; Mark 3 : 14, 15 ; Matt. 10 : 2. J.C. 32.

And it came to pass in those days, that he went out into a mountain to pray, and continued all night in prayer to God.

And when it was day, he called unto him his disciples : and of them he chose twelve, that they should be with him, and that he might send them forth to preach, and to have power to heal sicknesses, and to cast out devils. Now the names of the twelve, whom he called apostles, are these : The first, Simon, who is called Peter, and An-

He chose twelve.—A number, perhaps all, of them had been previously called ; but now, for the first time, they were publicly set apart to their work.

Apostle, literally "one sent." A messenger, or envoy.

The first, Simon, who is called Peter.—"First" in all the lists ; 'first' to confess the Messiahship of Christ ; usually 'first' to speak, both before and after the death of Christ. He was not the first to follow Christ : Andrew and John preceded him (John 1 : 37) : nor the first one called, since Philip was called long before him (John 1 : 43). In all bodies of men, one must be first, although 'first among equals.' His character constituted him a leader, but he neither claimed nor possessed this position as one of office or rank."—Schaff. Peter was doubtless, like James and John, in comfortable circumstances. "He did not live, as a mere laboring man, in a hut by the seaside, but in a home belonging to himself, or his mother-in-law, which must have been rather a large one, since he received in it not only Jesus and his fellow-disciples, but multitudes who were attracted by the miracles and preaching of Jesus."—Smith's Bible Dict. He was married, and his wife, whose name tradition says was Perpetua—accompanied him on his journeys. Peter was a man of marked and decided character, and the harmonious portraiture of him which is given in all the gospels is an incidental but strong indication of their genuineness. (See notes on pages 83 and 136.)

Andrew was one of the first followers of Christ (John 1 : 35). His name is derived from, or related to, a Greek word denoting "manly" (Andros, man). Little is certainly known of him after the ascension. His name occurs only once in the Acts (1 : 13), and then only in the catalogue of the apostles. The traditions about him are various. Eusebius states that he preached in Scythia, Jerome and Theodoret in Greece, and Nicephorus in Thrace

Chap. XII.

Matt. 10 : 2, 3 ; Mark 3 : 17.

J.C. 32.

drew his brother ; James the son of Zebedee, and John his brother—and he surnamed them Boanerges, which is, the Sons of Thunder ; Philip, and Bartholomew ; Thomas, and Matthew the publican ; James the son of and Asia Minor. He is said to have been crucified at Patræ in Achaia.

James and John.—These two are generally regarded as cousins of Jesus, their mother Salome being by the majority of modern critics considered the sister of Mary. James early underwent a martyr's death (Acts 12 : 2). John lived to a great age, surviving, it is thought, by thirty years, the destruction of Jerusalem. See notes on pages 137-8.

Philip.—Like Andrew, Philip bore a Greek name, and the two were doubtless reared together with Peter, James, and John, at Bethsaida. This town had a large Hellenic population. The notices of Philip in the gospels are scanty, and after the ascension all about him is uncertain and apocryphal. Clement of Alexandria states that he had a wife and children, and died a peaceful death.

Bartholomew.—Probably identical with Nathanael. (See note on page 84.)

Thomas, or the twin, elsewhere called Didymus, which is the Greek equivalent for Thomas. "All that we know of him is derived from the Gospel of John ; and this amounts to three traits which, however, so exactly agree together that, slight as they are, they place his character before us with a precision which belongs to no other of the twelve apostles except Peter, John, and Judas Iscariot. This character is that of a man slow to believe (seeing all the difficulties of a case), subject to despondency (viewing things on the darker side), and yet full of ardent love for his Master."—Smith's Bible Dictionary. He is mentioned but twice after the death of Jesus, in John 21 : 2, and Acts 1 : 13. Tradition makes him to have preached in Parthia or Persia, and to have been martyred at Edessa.

Matthew, the publican, and author of the first gospel. It is to be noticed that only in his own list of the apostles is Matthew's obnoxious occupation of tax-gatherer mentioned.

James (Jacob) the son of Alpheus, "called 'James the Less,' or, the younger (Mark 15 : 40, where his mother Mary is mentioned). The name 'Alpheus' has been considered identical with 'Clopas' or 'Cleophas,' since 'the mother of James the Less' (Mark 15 : 40) is identical with 'Mary, the wife of Cleophas' (John 19 : 25). His mother's sister, in John 19 : 25, may

Chap. XII.

Matt. 10 : 3, 4.

Summer, J.C. 32.

Alpheus, and Lebbeus, whose surname was Thaddeus ; Simon the Canaanite, and Judas Iscariot, who also betrayed him.

refer to Salome. The view that it refers to Mary, the wife of Cleophas, identifies this James with 'the Lord's brother' (Gal. 1 : 19), the term being taken in the wide sense of relative. Others reject the notion that the two sisters had the same name, and think that Alpheus was an older brother of Joseph, who adopted his children, and that thus they were called our Lord's 'brethren.'—Schaff. Many critics consider him the author of the epistle which bears his name.

Lebbeus, whose surname (or other name) was Thaddeus. "Both have the same meaning—'courageous.' He was also called 'Judas ;' was probably the brother of James, 'the son of Alpheus,' and the author of the short Epistle of Jude. (Comp. Luke 6 : 16 ; Acts 1 : 13 ; John 14 : 22.) One of the Lord's 'brethren' was called Judas (Matt. 13 : 55), and has been identified with this apostle."—Schaff. But James and Judas were names extremely common among the Jews, and therefore these two are difficult of certain identification.

Simon the Canaanite.—Rosenmüller remarks that the Hebrew word translated Canaanite signifies zealous, and is the same as Zelotes. Doddridge is of opinion that the title was given him on account of a personal zeal for the law, for the sect of Zealots did not arise till afterward, shortly before the destruction of Jerusalem.

Judas Iscariot, or "the man of Kerioth," a town in the tribe of Judah. He was the only one of the apostles who was not a Galilean.

Who also betrayed.—"Rather, even he who betrayed, or delivered him up. The common translation, also, is exceptionable, as implying that he was betrayed by others as well as Judas (Luke 6 : 15)."—A. Clarke. "In the four lists given by Matthew (10 : 2-4), Mark (3 : 16-19), and Luke (6 : 14-16 ; Acts 1 : 13), we find the name of Peter first, that of Philip fifth, that of James the son of Alpheus ninth ; while between, the same names occur in different order, Judas Iscariot being always put last. The Twelve seem to be thus distinguished into three sets of four each. In the first the four fishermen are placed together. Besides these two pairs of brothers, we have two brothers (perhaps three) in the third set, while Philip and Bartholomew were friends. All but Judas were Galileans ; a number had been disciples of John. Our Lord therefore had

Chap. XII.

Luke 6 : 17-19.

Summer, J.C. 32.

And he came down with them, and stood in the plain, and the company of his disciples, and a great multitude of people out of all Judea and Jerusalem, and from the sea-coast of Tyre and Sidon, which came to hear him, and to be healed of their diseases ; and they that were vexed with unclean spirits : and they were healed.

And the whole multitude sought to touch him : for there went virtue out of him, and healed them all.

regard to natural relationship and mental affinity in the construction of the Apostolate, and the same principle holds good in all his dealings with the Church. Those friendships and fraternal ties are blessed which are strengthened by common attachment to our Friend and Elder Brother."—Schaff. "These twelve men Jesus took to nurture and educate as the expounders of the Christian religion and the organizers of the Church. St. John, in poetic vision, sees the Church as a golden city descending from God out of heaven, having twelve foundations, and in them the name of these twelve apostles of the Lamb. This plan of choosing honest, simple-hearted, devout men, and revealing himself to the world through their human nature and divinely educated conceptions, had in it something peculiar and original. When we look at the selection made by Christ of these own ones, we see something widely different from all the usual methods of earthly wisdom. They were neither the most cultured nor the most influential of their times. The majority of them appear to have been plain working men, from the same humble class in which our Lord was born. But the Judean peasant, under the system of religious training and teaching given by Moses, was no stolid or vulgar character. He inherited lofty and inspiring traditions, a ritual stimulating to the spiritual and poetic nature, a system of ethical morality and of tenderness to humanity in advance of the whole ancient world. A good Jew was frequently a man of spiritualized and elevated devotion. Supreme love to God, and habitual love and charity to man, were the essentials of his religious ideal. The whole system of Divine training and discipline to which the Jewish race had been subjected for hundreds of years had prepared a higher moral average to be chosen from than could have been found in any other nation."—H. B. Stowe's "Footsteps of the Master."

CHAPTER XIII.

THE SERMON ON THE MOUNT.

AND seeing the multitudes, he went up into a mountain : and when he was set, his disciples
 The Beatitudes. came unto him ; and he opened his mouth, and taught them, saying : Blessed are the poor in spirit :

“ ‘The Sermon on the Mount ’ possesses an order, but not that of a modern sermon. ‘The only logic,’ says Tholuck, ‘that Jesus observes is the logic of the heart.’ In a general way, it may be described as giving the characteristics of that Messianic kingdom which all Israel was anticipating, by contrasting it, first, with the popular expectations ; second, with the Mosaic system ; and third, with the Pharasaic formalism. It closes with an account of the way by which this kingdom may be won. It is the theme of which the whole subsequent life of Jesus is the development, the foundation on which the whole superstructure of Christianity is built, the warp of the robe with which Christ has draped the before unclad earth. The true inaugural of Christ’s church, it contains ‘the quintessence of all that is peculiar to the kingdom of the Lord.’ ”—Abbott.

The Beatitudes.—“These eight beatitudes are, as it were, ‘the eight paradoxes of the world ;’ for the world and philosophers place happiness in riches, not in poverty ; in sublimity, not in humility ; in fullness, not in hunger ; in joy, not in mourning.”—Edward Leigh.

Opened his mouth.—“A formula, indicating a solemn and authoritative utterance.”—Schaff.

Blessed.—Many commentators prefer to translate the original here “happy,” but the word expresses more than that. Happiness springs from earthly things ; blessedness, is of spiritual origin : and it is not bestowed arbitrarily, but is the natural result of an observance of the laws of our higher nature.

Poor in spirit.—This discourse “ought to be viewed in connection with the moral and intellectual state of those to whom it was addressed. When it is thus viewed we shall see that he by whom it was delivered was not an impostor, promoting and taking advantage of the prevalent notions respecting the Messiah and his kingdom, nor a fanatic borne away by the popular enthusiasm. . . . To this multitude of Jews, the obstinacy of whose pride no humiliations could subdue ; who gloried in their

Chap. XIII.

Matt. 5 : 3, 4.

Summer, J.C. 32.

for theirs is the kingdom of heaven. Blessed are they that mourn : for they shall be comforted. Blessed are knowledge of God, and regarded themselves as a holy people, the objects of his peculiar favor ; who thanked God that they were not as other men, but that they were ' Abraham's children,' ' Jews by birth, and not sinners of the Gentiles '—the first address of Jesus Christ was, ' Blessed are they who feel their spiritual wants, for theirs is the kingdom of heaven.'—Andreas Norton. " The discourse begins at the beginning : sense of want comes before spiritual blessings. The Jews with their carnal hopes were not ' poor in spirit ; ' hence the appropriateness of the introduction."—Schaff. " This poverty in spirit is put first among the Christian graces. The philosophers did not reckon humility among the moral virtues, but Christ puts it first. Self-denial is the first lesson in his school, and poverty of spirit entitled to the first beatitude. The foundation of all other graces is laid in humility. Those who would build high must begin low."—Henry. " The poor of God," says Augustine, " are poor in heart, not in purse." " Those who feel their own poverty are the better prepared to receive the true ideas of the kingdom of God."—Eggleston. " The first step to mount a ladder is from the ground."—St. Basil. " Pride is the first vice to oppose us, and the last vice which we overcome."—St. Bernard.

" The sweetest bird builds near the ground,
The loveliest flower springs low ;
And we must stoop for happiness
If we its worth would know."—Anonymous.

They that mourn.—" A sense of need makes men ' poor in spirit,' but a consciousness of the positive power of sin makes them mourn. Not terror, nor fear of punishment, but actual sorrow that sin has power over us."—Schaff. " Let the penitent ever mourn, and in his tears let him ever rejoice."—St. Augustine.

" For God has marked each sorrowing day,
And numbered every secret tear,
And heaven's long age of bliss shall pay
For all the good man suffers here.

William Cullen Bryant

" For perfect beings sorrow is not needed ; but to creatures like men, seeking to escape the thrall and burden of animal life, sorrow is helpful. As frosts unlock the hard shells of seeds, and help the germ to get free, so trouble develops in men the germs of force, patience, and ingenuity, and in noble natures works the peaceable fruits of righteousness. . . . Tears, like rain-drops, have a thousand times fallen to the ground and come up

Chap. XIII.

Matt. 5 : 5, 6.

Summer, J.C. 32.

the meek : for they shall inherit the earth. Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness :

in flowers. All the good in 'this world which has risen above the line of material comfort has been born from some one's sorrow."—Beecher.

The meek.—"Meekness," says Barnes, "is neither meanness, nor the surrender of our rights, nor cowardice, but it is the opposite of sudden anger, of malice, of long-harbored vengeance." Christ insisted on his right, as did also Paul. (See John 18 : 23 ; Acts 16 : 37.) "I have heard a grave divine say that 'God has two dwellings ; one in heaven, and the other in a meek and thankful heart.'"—Isaak Walton. "At the bottom of man's nature lie rude strength, coarse excitements, violent fluctuations, exhausting impulses. At the top of man's nature the soul puts forth continuous life almost without fatigue, is tranquil under intense activities, and is full of the light of moral intuitions. Meekness is generally thought to be a sweet benignity under provocation. But provocation only discloses, and does not create it. It exists as a generic mood or condition of soul, independent of those causes which may bring it to light. In this state, power and peace are harmonized—activity and tranquillity, joy and calmness—all-seeingness without violence of desire. From these nobler fountains chiefly are to flow those influences which shall control the world."—Beecher.

Inherit the earth.—His hearers were full of hopes of a Messiah who should inspire the nation with a martial spirit that would, by force, subjugate the earth. But Jesus tells them that it is the gentle, the loving, and the forbearing who shall gain the dominion of the world. "Man the animal has hitherto possessed the globe. Man the Divine is yet to take it. The struggle is going on. But in every cycle more and more does the world feel the superior authority of truth, purity, justice, kindness, love, and faith. They shall yet possess the earth."—Beecher.

Hunger and thirst after righteousness.—"A still stronger representation of the sense of spiritual need, advancing to positive longing for a blessing, known to be the one needed, namely, God's approval—conformity to the will of God."—Schaff. "The life of the body, its strength and skill, are every day built up by food which hunger craves. And as hunger is not a rational faculty, and does not depend upon any of the rational faculties for its action, but follows the internal condition of the body, and is an automatic sign and signal of the waste or repair going on within, so the longing for uprightness and goodness must be a

Chap. XIII.

Matt. 5 : 6-9.

Summer, J.C. 32.

for they shall be filled. Blessed are the merciful : for they shall obtain mercy. Blessed are the pure in heart : for they shall see God. Blessed are the peacemakers :

deep-seated and incessant importunity of the soul's very substance, as it were, acting not upon suggestion or special excitement, but self-aroused and continuous. To such a desire the whole world becomes a ministering servant. . . . Amidst the conflicting elements of life no man can gain any important moral victories by mere longing, or by rare impulses, or by feeble purposes. If one would reach the true manhood, the spiritual life, of the new kingdom, it must be by continuous energy during his entire career. In the whole routine of daily life, in the treatment of all cares, temptations, strifes, and experiences of every kind, the one predominant purpose must be the perfection of manhood in ourselves."—Beecher.

The merciful.—"Meekness is a passive virtue, mercy an active one. 'The meek bear the injustice of the world, the merciful bravely address themselves to the wants of the world.' 'Every degree of sympathy and mutual love and help' is included."—Schaff. No one thing does human life more need than a kind consideration of men's faults. Every one sins. Every one needs forbearance. Their own imperfections should teach men to be merciful. God is merciful because he is perfect.

Obtain mercy.—"In the original, 'pity.' They pity, and they shall be pitied. They forgive and relieve, and they shall be forgiven and relieved."—Scott. "He that is not merciful to another shall not find mercy from God ; but if thou wilt be merciful and compassionate, thou shalt be a benefactor to thine own soul."—Beman.

Pure in heart.—Religion with the Pharisees consisted principally in frequent ablutions and the strict observance of ceremonial purity. They taught that guilt was in actions, and said little or nothing about intentions. Jesus told them the heart must be clean, that only inward purity could give the knowledge of God. What is here meant is more than sincerity, or chastity ; it is, "that steady direction of the soul toward the divine life which excludes every other object from the homage of the heart."

Shall see God.—To have any spiritual knowledge of God there must be in us some likeness, however faint, to the Divine nature. "They only can understand God who have in themselves some moral resemblance to him ; and they will enter most largely into knowledge of him who are most in sympathy with the divine life."—Beecher. "For thus saith the high and lofty one that inhabiteth eternity, whose name is Holy ; I

Chap. XIII.

Matt. 5 : 9-11.

Summer, J.C. 32.

for they shall be called the children of God. Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness' sake : for theirs is the kingdom of heaven. Blessed are ye when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and dwell in the high and holy place, with him also that is of a contrite and humble spirit, to revive the spirit of the humble, and to revive the heart of the contrite ones" (Isa. 57 : 15). "God would cease to be God if he should cease to communicate himself, by love, to the pure soul. As the air rushes to a vacuum, so God fills the soul emptied of self."—Massillon.

The peacemakers.—"Not simply the peaceable, but those who reconcile others."—Schaff. This was spoken to Jews who were filled with bitter animosity to their Roman rulers, and were eager to be led by their expected Messiah into any kind of strife or rebellion which might overthrow and desolate their enemies. Jesus tells them that the kingdom of God is one of peace. "Peace is not a negative state, a mere interval between two excitements. In its highest meaning it is that serenity which joy assumes, not only when single faculties are excited, but when the whole soul is in harmony with itself, and full of wholesome activity. . . . Jesus himself never seemed so divine as when, on the eve of his arrest, with the cloud already casting its shadow upon him, and every hour bringing him consciously nearer to the great agony, he said to his humble followers, 'Peace I leave with you, My peace I give unto you.'"—Beecher.

They which are persecuted, etc.—"Doubtless these simple words have, in all ages, consoled the sufferers for Christ in dungeons, under the rack, and amid the flame."—Eggleston. Says Jerome, "I give thanks unto my God for this : that I am found worthy to be among those whom the world hateth." And Luther, more quaintly, "I am getting rather proud ; for I see that my character is more and more defamed." "Not he who suffers persecution, but rather the man who cowardly shrinks from it, is the person really trampled upon ; for to be trampled upon, we must be inferior : but we can never be called inferior, how much soever we suffer bodily on the earth, if so be our souls are fixed on heaven."—St. Augustine.

For righteousness' sake.—" 'Righteousness' includes all the preceding graces ; but the peacemakers are especially persecuted ; the effort to spread the gospel of peace provokes the hostility of men. Righteous living does the same, however men may be compelled to admit its excellence. The Jews would not expect persecution to befall the Messiah's subjects."—Schaff.

Chap. XIII. Matt. 5 : 9-12 ; Luke 6 : 22, 25.

J.C. 32.

separate you from their company, and say all manner of evil against you falsely, for my sake. Rejoice, and be exceeding glad : for great is your reward in heaven : for so persecuted they the prophets which were before you.

But woe unto you that are rich ! for ye have received your consolation. Woe unto you that are full ! for ye Separate you from their company.—The sentence of excommunication from the synagogue. The offender was banished from the assemblies, and denied all intercourse with his neighbors.

Great is your reward in heaven.—"Faith makes the records of the present the harmonies of the future."—Robert Collyer. Patient and cheerful suffering for the truth in this life will certainly be rewarded in the life to come. And there is no man who submits to misrepresentation, or opprobrium, or ignominy, for the sake of the right, but will find that "our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory."

Woe unto you.—Campbell, and many other commentators, prefer here the rendering, "Alas for you." It agrees equally well with the original, and is more in accord with the context, for Jesus is not pronouncing sentence on the guilty, but announcing spiritual truths of universal application. He is simply declaring fixed, irreversible, and eternal laws of the spiritual world. "These 'woes' have their place in the complete sermon in Matthew, in chapter 5, between verses 12 and 13. Why they were omitted there it is useless to conjecture. It is far more probable that a later tradition dropped them, because they were thought to be incongruous with the prevailing spirit of that discourse, than that it added them here, as Meyer has supposed. Tradition seeks to increase the blessings, but to diminish the warnings, of Scripture."—Abbott.

That are rich.—"The woe here is denounced, not merely against the rich, but against those who have made riches their consolation—that is, who have chosen it as their chief good, as their Messiah, Deliverer, Comforter, as the one thing needful. It is interpreted by Mark 10 : 24, and Luke 12 : 19, 20. Comp. 1 Tim. 6 : 9, 10, 17, where the warning is not against riches, but against the determination to be rich, which may be as injurious to him who fails as to him who succeeds."—Abbott.

That are full.—"A state of satiety, complete and entire satisfaction, wanting nothing more. To those who are filled to the

Chap. XIII.

Matt. 5 : 13 ; Luke 6 : 25, 26.

J.C. 32.

shall hunger. Woe unto you that laugh now ! for ye shall mourn and weep. Woe unto you, when all men shall speak well of you ! for so did their fathers to the false prophets.

Ye are the salt of the earth : but if the salt have lost full with the things of this present world there will come a time of emptying ; death will come to them as a thief (Matt. 24 : 43 ; Rev. 3 : 3), and then they will hunger ; while those who have never been satisfied, ever hungry and thirsty after righteousness, as Paul (Phil. 3 : 12-14), will be filled."—Abbott.

You that laugh "is literally, The laughing ones—that is, those who give themselves up to a life of merriment and superficial pleasure ; who will not perceive that life is serious ; who are without the earnestness of purpose that makes merriment an occasional relief, not a constant aim. Parallel with this warning is that of Prov. 14 : 13 and Eccl. 7 : 6 ; and in no way inconsistent with it is the commendation of the merry heart, that doeth good like a medicine (Prov. 17 : 22 ; 15 : 13, 15)."—Abbott.

When all men speak well of you.—"The fourth woe needs no interpretation. All men cannot and will not speak well of one who is faithful in following his own convictions of duty, and whose life is thus a rebuke to the recreant. Thus these four woes are four warnings to four different classes—those who make wealth their God ; those who are satisfied with this present life, having no hungering for inward peace or future glory ; those who live for present enjoyment, devoid of earnest purpose and serious thoughts ; and those who sacrifice conscience to a popular adulation."—Abbott.

Ye are the salt of the earth.—"Jesus having revealed by these few profound elements what was the true spiritual strength of man, declares to his disciples their mission. They were to be the preservative element of life. They were to become sons of God, not alone for their own sakes, but as spiritual forces in subduing the world to goodness."—Beecher. "Salt preserves ; Christ's disciples preserve the world from utter corruption. Salt seasons food and prevents insipidity ; Christians are to give a spiritual seasoning to what is made 'stale, flat, and unprofitable' by 'earthly' minds. (Comp. Col. 4 : 6). The first thought is the prominent one. 'The earth' refers to society as it exists."—Schaff. "The world is upheld by the veracity of good men ; they make the earth wholesome."—R. W. Emerson.

If the salt have lost his savor.—Salt in the East loses its saltiness by exposure or the admixture of foreign matters, and it is

Chap. XIII.

Matt. 5 : 13-16.

Summer, J.C. 32.

his savour, wherewith shall it be salted? it is thenceforth good for nothing, but to be cast out, and to be trodden under foot of men. Christ's Disciples the Salt and Light of the World. Ye are the light of the world. A city that is set on an hill cannot be hid. Neither do men light a candle and put it under a bushel, but on a candlestick : and it giveth light unto all that are in the house. Let your light so shine before men, that they then rendered worthless. Maundrell states that he saw, at Jebbul, salt which had entirely "lost its savor," and Thomson found the same in localities at the south end of the Dead Sea. The latter says : "It is a well-known fact that the salt of this country (Palestine), when in contact with the ground, or exposed to rain or sun, does become insipid and useless. From the manner in which it is gathered, much earth and other impurities are necessarily collected with it. Not a little of it is so impure that it cannot be used at all, and such salt effloresces and turns to dust—not to fruitful soil, however. It is not only good for nothing itself, but it actually destroys all fertility wherever it is thrown ; and this is the reason why it is cast into the street to be trodden under foot of men."

A city set on a hill.—The reference may be to Jerusalem, possibly to some nearer city then in sight ; more probably it is purely generic. The city of Saphat which Maundrel supposes referred to did not then exist, and it is doubtful whether the city of Bethulia ever existed. See Alford on this passage.

Candles.—This word often occurs in Scripture where "lamp" is probably meant. These were placed upon an elevated holder or stand, so that their light might be diffused as widely as possible.

Bushel.—This was "the ordinary household measure, holding about a peck. Under this the light could be hid."—Schaff.

Let your light so shine.—"Although it is not right to be ostentatious of our piety, it is yet our duty to set such an example before the world that others may be led to do right. It is perfectly allowable that our alms should be done in the eyes of the world if thereby the world shall be drawn to do right. But we should be very careful of the motive of such publicity."—Eggleston. "It is not sufficient to carry religion in our hearts as fire is carried in flint-stones ; but we are outwardly, visibly, apparently, to serve and honor the living God."—Richard Hooker. "The eclipses of the sun at daytime are seldom without wit-may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven.

Think not that I am come to destroy the law, or the prophets : I am not come to destroy, but to fulfill. For verily I say unto you, Till heaven and earth pass, one jot or one tittle

Christ came not to destroy, but to fulfill the law.

nesses. If you take yourselves to be the light of the church, you may well expect that men's eyes should be upon you. If other men may sin without observation, so cannot you."—Richard Baxter. "Lord Peterborough, more famed for wit than religion, when he lodged with Fénélon, at Cambrai, was so charmed with the virtue and piety of the archbishop, that he exclaimed at parting, "If I stay here any longer, I shall become a Christian in spite of myself."—Scripture Cabinet.

I am not come to destroy, but to fulfill.—"Here is the law of development announced by an inspired Hebrew to a peasant and mechanic crowd in obscure Galilee, ages before the philosophy of evolution was suspected, or the laws of progress were found out. Jesus did not come to destroy old faiths, but to carry them forward to the higher forms and the better fruit that were contained within them."—Beecher. "The patriarchal, the Jewish, and the Christian dispensations are evidently but the unfolding of one general plan. In the first we see the folded bud ; in the second, the expanded leaf ; in the third, the blossom and the fruit. And now, how sublime the idea of a religion thus commencing in the earliest dawn of time ; holding on its way through all the revolutions of kingdoms and the vicissitudes of the race ; receiving new forms, but always identical in spirit ; and, finally, expanding and embracing in one great brotherhood the whole family of man ! Who can doubt that such a religion was from God ?"—Mark Hopkins.

One jot.—The smallest letter in the Hebrew alphabet.

One tittle.—The Hebrew letters were written with small points or apices, which serve to distinguish one letter from another. To change a small point of one letter, therefore, might vary the meaning of a word, and destroy the sense. Hence the Jews were exceedingly cautious in writing these points, and considered the smallest change or omission a reason for destroying a whole manuscript, when they were transcribing the Old Testament. The expression, "one jot or tittle," became proverbial, and means that the smallest part of the law shall not be destroyed.

Chap. XIII.

Matt. 5 : 18-21.

Summer, J.C. 32.

shall in no wise pass from the law, till all be fulfilled. Whosoever therefore shall break one of these least commandments, and shall teach men so, he shall be called the least in the kingdom of heaven : but whosoever shall do, and teach them, the same shall be called great in the kingdom of heaven.

For I say unto you, That except your righteousness shall exceed the righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees, ye shall in no case enter into the kingdom of heaven.

Ye have heard that it was said by them of old time,

Till all be fulfilled.—Till all that it requires or foretells shall be accomplished. "The central truths of Hebraism were fundamental and organic. The ceremonies and institutions which surrounded them might change, but the enshrined principles were permanent."—Beecher. "Jesus taught only what is intrinsically and eternally true. . . . His thoughts are not the creations of his fancy. He does not express opinions. He declares facts, pre-existent and irreversible laws. The truth that he teaches, when fully perceived, offers evidence in and of itself to its truth—shines by its own light."—Furness.

One of these least commandments.—The Pharisees divided the precepts of the law into lesser and greater, teaching that they who violated the former were guilty of a trivial offence only ; distinguishing between what are called, by the Romish Church, mortal and venial sins (see Matt. 23 : 16). But where all is of equal obligation, there can be no less and no greater. "Small things are not small if great results come of them."—John Damascene.

"Take from the harmony a single tone,
A single tint take from the iris-bow,
And lo ! what once was all is nothing, while Fails to the lovely whole one tint or tone."—Schiller.

Except your righteousness.—"He exacts more than these so exact and exacting in their 'righteousness.' Less a charge of hypocrisy or wickedness than a declaration that they, with all their care, had not yet understood the real spirit of the law. Their scrupulous literal obedience was only a perversion of the law."—Schaff. "This may be called the theme of the whole sermon following. From this text Jesus now developed his view of the ethics of the new life."—Beecher.

By them of old time.—Better rendered "to them of old time"

Chap. XIII.

Matt. 5 : 22, 23.

Summer, J.C. 32.

Thou shalt not kill ; and whosoever shall kill, shall be in danger of the judgment : but I say unto you, That whosoever is angry with his brother without a cause, shall be in danger of the judgment : and whosoever shall say to his brother, Raca, shall be in danger of the council : but whosoever shall say, Thou fool, shall be in danger of hell-fire. Therefore, if thou bring thy gift to the altar, —by Moses (Ex. 20 : 13 ; Lev. 24 : 17) to the Israelites. “ The distinction between the life of the state and the life of the individual is the key to the interpretation of the contrast between the civil statutes of Moses and the spiritual laws of Jesus. . . . As the state can only regard an overt act, Moses inquired into the motive only for the purpose of determining the criminality of that act when committed. Christ, laying down the law of the individual character, forbids that anger of the heart which is ever the inspiration of a violent and bloody hand.”—Abbott. “ In the kingdom of the spirit feelings are acts. A murderous temper is murder.”—Beecher. John says, “ Whosoever hateth his brother is a murderer ” (1 John 3 : 15).

The judgment.—Every city had its elders, who formed a court, with power to determine minor matters. There were three of these elders, called judges, in the smaller cities, and twenty-three in the larger. The next higher body was the Sanhedrin, which acted on capital offences. The first named courts are here referred to.

Without a cause.—Indignation is proper when aroused at the commission of crime, injustice, or cruelty. “ There is nothing more wholesome than righteous indignation against wrong. See Eph. 4 : 26. See also the example of our Lord Jesus Christ in Mark 3 : 5.”—Eggleston. Matt. 23 : 17, 19 ; Luke 24 : 25 ; Gal. 1 : 8, 9 ; Jas. 2 : 20.

Raca.—A Syriac word expressive of great contempt. It denotes senseless, stupid, shallow-brained.

Council.—The Sanhedrin, which sat at Jerusalem, and had cognizance of all important civil and criminal cases.

Thou fool.—“ A term of the greatest abhorrence—‘ thou impious wretch,’ folly and impiety being equivalent with the Hebrews.”—Bloomfield. The Hebrew word which was probably used in Christ’s discourse signifies rebel rather than fool, and is a bitterer epithet than Raca.

Hell-fire.—The Gehenna of fire.—This refers to the valley of

Chap. XIII.

Matt. 5 : 23-26.

Summer, J.C. 32.

and there rememberest that thy brother hath aught against thee, leave there thy gift before the altar, and go thy way ; first be reconciled to thy brother, and then come and offer thy gift.

Agree with thine adversary quickly, while thou art in the way with him ; lest at any time the adversary deliver thee to the judge, and the judge deliver thee to the officer, and thou be cast into prison. Verily I say Hinnom, a narrow ravine with steep and rocky sides, near Jerusalem on the south. In this valley the idolatrous Jews formerly conducted the worship to Moloch. Here infants were sacrificed by being put into the arms of the idol, a brass image heated by a great fire within. After this practice ceased, the valley was made as filthy and vile as possible ; a fire was kept constantly burning, to consume the rubbish carried thither ; and it is said that it became a place for the execution of criminals. "Hence this place, so execrable, came to signify the place of the damned, as the most accursed, execrable, and abominable of all places."—Mede. The word is often used in the New Testament ; and always for the place of future punishment. Matt. 23 : 33 ; 5 : 29, 30 ; 10 : 28 ; 18 : 9 ; 23 : 15 ; Mark 9 : 43, 45, 47. "It is clear from the passage that there are different degrees of guilt, and that even the germ of sin in the heart condemns before God. The sin is not in the word and act as such, but in the motive and spirit."—Schaff.

Hath aught against thee.—The charge may be groundless, but still may give occasion for bad feeling. A religious observance should be postponed rather than an act of reconciliation omitted. The scribes required restitution in money matters ; yet otherwise held that gifts and sacrifices would expiate all offences not amenable to the judge.

Adversary.—One going to law with another. It here means a creditor—a man who has a just claim on us. It is wrong to carry the contention to a court of law. See 1 Cor. 6 : 7, ver. 24.

While thou art in the way.—According to the Roman custom, an aggrieved person could compel the party to go with him before the Prætor, unless he agreed by the way to adjust the matter. "Reconciliation with an offended brother in this life is absolutely necessary before his wrong cry against us to the Great Judge, and we be cast into eternal condemnation."—Alford.

Chap. XIII.

Matt. 5 : 26-28.

Summer, J.C. 32.

unto thee, Thou shalt by no means come out thence, till thou hast paid the uttermost farthing.

Ye have heard that it was said by them of old time, Thou shalt not commit adultery : but I say unto you, That whosoever looketh on a woman to lust after her, hath committed adultery with her already in his heart.

Uttermost farthing.—The word rendered farthing represented a small Roman coin, of brass or lead, of the value of less than a cent : the meaning is, until every thing is paid. This entire passage is by some spiritually interpreted. Thus Schaff : " Roman Catholic expositors understand this passage [as referring to] purgatory ; Universalists use it in support of their view of final restoration ; . . . but the main idea is the inexorable rigor of divine justice against the impenitent sinner." Other commentators regard it as practical counsel to those involved in earthly controversies. Thus Abbott : " Worldly wisdom, as well as duty toward God, advises to speedy reconciliation, and the more imperious your opponent, and the farther the quarrel has gone, the wiser is it to seek reconciliation." Similarly Chrysostom, Lightfoot, Barnes.

Looketh on a woman.—"Gazeth on a woman." Indulges unchaste imaginations, desires, and intentions. " Our Lord means to say that it is not the act only, but the unchaste desire also (what is called at 2 Pet. 2 : 14, 'eyes full of adultery'), which is included in the commandment. Such a desire as gains the full consent of the will, and would certainly terminate in action, did not impediments from other causes arise ; thus making the essence of the vice to be in the intention."—Bloomfield. " Impure thoughts are the immediate and only sources of impure conversation and an impure life. If the thoughts be cleansed, the man will be clean, of course. There is scarcely a more dangerous employment than the indulgence of a licentious imagination. It wanders over forbidden ground, often without thinking that it is forbidden ; and has already been guilty of many and perilous transgressions, when it is scarcely aware of having transgressed at all. The mind, if it will watch its own movements, will be astonished to perceive, after a sober computation, how great a part of all its thinking is made up of licentious thoughts. Impure thoughts produce impure words ; while strict and virtuous delicacy in language is not only indispensable to decency and dignity of character, but to all purity of heart and excellency of life."—President Dwight.

Chap. XIII.

Matt. 5 : 29-34.

Summer, J.C. 32.

And if thy right eye offend thee, pluck it out, and cast it from thee : for it is profitable for thee that one of thy members should perish, and not that thy whole body should be cast into hell. And if thy right hand offend thee, cut it off, and cast it from thee : for it is profitable for thee that one of thy members should perish, and not that thy whole body should be cast into hell.

It hath been said, Whosoever shall put away his wife, let him give her a writing of divorcement : but I say unto you, That whosoever shall put away his wife, saving for the cause of fornication, causeth her to commit adultery : and whosoever shall marry her that is divorced, committeth adultery.

Again, ye have heard that it hath been said by them of old time, Thou shalt not forswear thyself, but shalt perform unto the Lord thine oaths : but I say unto you,

Pluck it out.—We should resist “the first springs and occasions of evil desire, even by the sacrifice of what is most useful and dear to us.”—Alford.

Cast it from thee.—“The surgeon does not hesitate to amputate a limb, if he hopes thereby to save a life ; no earthly sacrifice is too great where eternal life is concerned.”—Schaff.

A writing of divorcement.—The Jews inferred from the Levitical law that a man might divorce his wife for any cause whatever. Their Rabbis said : “If a man sees a woman he loves better than his wife, let him divorce his wife, and marry her.” The school of Hillel taught that “If the wife cook her husband’s food ill, by over-salting or over-roasting it, she is to be put away ;” also, “If the wife, by any stroke of God, become dumb or foolish.” Josephus relates of himself that “About that time I divorced my wife, who had borne me three children, not being pleased with her manners.” Christianity alone has created domestic life, and made the union of the sexes a sacred bond, dissolvable only by death or crime.

Perform unto the Lord thine oaths.—The morality of the Jews on this point was truly execrable ; they maintained that a man might swear with his lips, and annul it at the same moment in his heart.

Chap. XIII.

Matt. 5 : 34-38.

Summer, J.C. 32.

Swear not at all : neither by heaven ; for it is God's throne : nor by the earth, for it is his footstool : neither by Jerusalem ; for it is the city of the great King : neither shalt thou swear by thy head, because thou canst not make one hair white or black. But let your communication be, Yea, yea ; Nay, nay : for whatsoever is more than these cometh of evil.

Ye have heard that it hath been said, An eye for an Swear not at all.—All Eastern nations are fearfully profane. Thomson says, speaking of the present people of Palestine : "Everybody curses and swears when in a passion. No people that I have ever known can compare with the Orientals for profanity. The evil habit seems inveterate and universal. When Peter, therefore, began to curse and to swear on that dismal night of temptation, we are not to suppose that it was something foreign to his former habits."

By Jerusalem.—Rather towards Jerusalem. The Jews turned towards their holy city when cursing, as well as when praying.

Thy head.—This was a practice common to both Greeks and Romans. The hand, it would seem, was placed on the head during swearing, and evil invoked upon it in case of falsehood.

Yea, yea.—The Hebrew repeats the affirmative, to give it more strength. It was a proverbial manner among the Hebrews of characterizing a man of strict probity and good faith by saying, "his yea is yea, and his nay is nay." "Swearing is a sin whereunto neither profit incites, nor pleasure allures, nor necessity compels, nor inclination of nature persuades."—Quarles. "Perjury is not only a wrong to this or that particular person who suffers by it, but it is treason against human society, subverting at once the foundations of public peace and justice, and the private security of every man's life and fortune."—Archbishop Tillotson.

Cometh of evil, or "of the evil one."—The meaning is the same in either case. "All strengthening of simple yea and nay is occasioned by the presence of sin, and the power of Satan, in the world. There is no more striking proof of the existence of evil than the prevalence of the foolish, low, useless habit of profanity. It could never have arisen if men did not believe each other to be liars. Liars are most profane, and the reverse is true. Ignorance and stupidity increase the habit. Some men swear from want of ideas."—Schaff.

An eye for an eye.—"Moses, guarding against personal re-

Chap. XIII.

Matt. 5 : 38, 39.

Summer, J.C. 32.

eye, and a tooth for a tooth. But I say unto you, That ye resist not evil : but whosoever shall smite thee on venge, and the citizen against cruel and unusual punishments, provided a rude but simple expedient in the lex talionis. The measure of a man's punishment was the mischief he had done : 'life for life, eye for eye, tooth for tooth, hand for hand, foot for foot, wound for wound, strife for strife.' Of this law, wisely adapted to a rude and barbarous age, the gallows alone now remains, a relic of the past. Christ inveighs not against this statute as a principle of administration of public justice, but he condemns its adoption as a principle for the regulation of private conduct. In commanding the smitten to turn the other cheek, he says nothing against the employment of force by the community for the protection of its citizens ; but he condemns the employment of force by the individual for the punishment of offences personal to himself."—Abbott. The Jews made it a rule to take private revenge. The Greeks and Romans did the same. The savage tribes of America, and of almost every other part of the world, set no bounds to the cool, deliberate malignity with which they will pursue, for years together, not only the person himself from whom they have received an injury, but sometimes every one related to or connected with him. The Arabs are equally implacable in their resentments ; and the Koran itself, in the case of murder, allows private revenge. Christianity teaches men to "overcome evil with good."

Resist not evil.—"Our Lord refers to sin and evil in the world, which is conquered by wise Christian submission rather than by strenuous resistance. To be merely passive were weakness ; but a non-resistance from Christian principle, and for a spiritual object, is true strength and real victory."—Lange. "The preservation of life, liberty, or important property, authorizes, and often requires, a man to defend himself at the peril of an illegal assailant ; commonly, however, it is better to yield to insults and injuries than to repel them by force or legal process ; and it is not the spirit of Christianity to put the life and soul in competition with a sum of money, however great, when there is no reason to fear further violence."—Scott. "Hath any wronged thee ? Be bravely revenged ; slight it, and the work is begun ; forgive it, and it is finished : he is below himself that is not above an injury."—Quarles. "Certainly, in taking revenge a man is but even with his enemy, but in passing it over he is superior ; for it is a prince's part to pardon."—Lord Bacon. "The surest way to keep others in temper is to keep ourselves so."—Thomas Adam. "The Christian's courtesy prevents him from giving offence ; his charity from taking it."—William Gresley.

Chap. XIII.

Matt. 5 : 39-41 ; Luke 6 : 29.

J.C. 32.

thy right cheek, turn to him the other also. And if any man will sue thee at the law, and take away thy coat, let him have thy cloak also. And whosoever

Whosoever shall smite thee on thy right cheek.—A blow on the cheek was regarded as an affront of the worst sort, and was severely punished by both Greeks and Romans. "The King of Heaven came down to instruct the world in the laws of a heavenly conversation, which he proposed in a way of conflict quite contrary to that in the Olympic games ; for there he that fights and conquers wins the garland ; here he that is beaten and bears it with patience receives the crown ; there he that is smitten and returns blow for blow ; here he that turns the other cheek is celebrated as victor in the theatre of angels. For the Christian victory is measured not by revenge, but patience ; this is the new law of crowns, this the new way of conflict and contention."—Isidore of Pelusium. "There is no example of patience more perfect than that of the Lord ; yet he, when he was smitten, said not, 'Behold the other cheek,' but, 'If I have spoken, etc. ;' hereby showing us that the turning of the other cheek should be in the heart. Indeed, the Lord was ready not only to be smitten on the cheek for the salvation of men, but to be crucified with his whole body."—Augustine. "Not only does Christianity sustain the authority of a perfect law, but in the line of conduct it lays down towards the injurious it has adopted the very principle which, according to the laws of mental operation discovered in later times, must tend in the greatest possible degree to diminish injury. It is a well-ascertained fact that the most powerful mode of inculcating and exciting any quality or temper, is the distinct and vivid manifestation of that temper. The manifestation of anger towards another excites anger in him ; and the manifestation of a meek and forgiving spirit has a tendency to disarm hostility, and does all that can be done to prevent ill feeling. If, therefore, a man were to inquire how, according to principles of mental philosophy alone, he could do most to banish the malignant and selfish passions from the earth, and make it like heaven, he would be obliged to adopt the very course prescribed by the New Testament."—Mark Hopkins.

Coat.—This was the tunic, a garment usually of linen, made to fit closely to the body, with short sleeves, and extending below the knees. Over it was worn the cloak, a square garment, wrapped loosely about the person, and laid aside when labor was performed. Of the former kind was the vesture without seam, woven throughout, for which lots were cast. (John 19 : 23.)

Chap. XIII.

Matt. 5 : 41-43 ; Luke 6 : 30.

J.C. 32.

shall compel thee to go a mile, go with him twain. Give to him that asketh thee, and from him that would borrow of thee, turn not thou away.

Ye have heard that it hath been said, Thou shalt love thy neighbor, and hate thine enemy : but I say unto Shall compel thee to go a mile.—It was a custom, introduced by the Persians, and adopted by the Romans, to transmit intelligence by couriers placed at regular distances. These couriers were authorized to impress horses or men for the public service while on their journeys. The practice is still followed by the Turks, and resistance is punishable with death.

A mile, "a thousand Roman paces, about 1520 yards (less than an English mile), but the proportion, one to two, is the main point. Endure double hardship, even when it seems most unjust, rather than angrily refuse."—Schaff.

Give to him that asketh.—"Christian charity spends more in the streets than heathen superstition on its temples."—Tertullian. "The race of mankind would perish did they cease to aid each other. From the time that the mother binds the child's head till the moment that a kind assistant wipes the death-damp from the brow of the dying, we cannot exist without mutual help. All, therefore, that need aid have a right to ask it from their fellow-mortals ; no one who holds the power of granting can refuse it without guilt."—Walter Scott. "Make not the hungry soul sorrowful ; defer not the gift to the needy ; for if he curse thee in the bitterness of his soul, his prayer shall be heard of Him that made him."—Sir Walter Raleigh. "Others make a custom of giving to idle vagabonds ; a kind of charity, very improperly so called, which one really wonders people can allow themselves in, merely to be relieved from importunity, or at best to gratify a false good-nature."—Bishop Butler.

Hate thine enemy.—"Moses, who had commanded the Jew to love his neighbor, had also carefully forbidden him to associate with the surrounding Gentile nations—an association fraught with danger to the Hebraic nation in its infancy. From these prohibitions the Pharisees had deduced the precept, 'Thou shalt hate thine enemy,' an injunction which they obeyed with the greatest unction."—Abbott. The genuine Jew was one who not only loved, but hated ; and all who were not of his own nation he counted as his enemies. Roman authors speak of this as a distinctive characteristic of the Jew ; and the measure of contempt which was by other nations served out to him he returned to them "heaped up and running over." "'Thou shalt Chap. XIII. Matt. 5 : 44-47 ; Luke 6 : 27-32.

J.C. 32.

you, Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you, and persecute you ; that ye may be the children of your Father which is in heaven : for he maketh his sun to rise on the evil and on the good, and sendeth rain on the just and on the unjust. For if ye love them which love you, what reward have ye ? do not even the publicans the same ? And if ye salute your brethren only, what do ye more than others ? do not even the publicans so ? And if ye do good to them which do good to you, what thank have ye ? for sinners hate thine enemy,' are words not found in the law of Moses, but are common in the Jewish canons ; which shows that Christ here is not correcting the moral precepts of the law, but opposing the corrupt interpretations of the scribes and Pharisees."—Whitby.

Bless them that curse you.—

" Beside a sandal-tree a woodman stood
And swung the axe, and, as the strokes were laid Upon the fragrant trunk the generous wood
With its own sweets perfumed the cruel blade.
Go, then, and do the like ; a soul endued
With light from heaven, a nature pure and great,
Will place its highest bliss in doing good,
And good for evil give, and love for hate."—Bryant.

" Before Socrates, it was said, ' Let us do good to those who love us, and evil to those who hate.' Socrates changed the precept, and said, ' Let us do good to our friends, and let us do no evil to our enemies.' Only Jesus Christ says, ' Bless them that curse you.' It belongs to the Saviour of men alone to train them to supernatural virtues."—Madame Svehchine.

Pray for them which despitefully use you.—" Prayer is that which we always have in our power to bestow, and they never in theirs to refuse."—Hooker.

If ye salute your brethren only.—The Jews, despising the Gentiles, would hold no personal intercourse with them, nor so much as salute them on the highways.

And if ye do good to them which do good to you.—To return good for good is human ; to return evil for evil is brutal ; to return evil for good is diabolical ; but to return good for evil is divine ; for " He is kind unto the unthankful, and to the evil."

Chap. XIII. Matt. 5 : 48 ; 6 : 1, 2 ; Luke 6 : 34-36. J.C. 32.

also do even the same. And if ye lend to them of whom ye hope to receive, what thank have ye ? for sinners also lend to sinners, to receive as much again. But love ye your enemies, and do good, and lend, hoping for nothing again ; and your reward shall be great, and ye shall be the children of the Highest : for he is kind unto the unthankful and to the evil. Be ye therefore merciful, as your Father also is merciful ; and be ye perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect.

Take heed that ye do not your righteousness before men, to be seen of them : otherwise ye have no reward of your Father which is in heaven. Of Almsgiving. Therefore, when thou doest thine alms,

And be ye perfect.—The Christian's standard of perfection is not the great and heroic among men, but the infinite Creator himself. "Likeness to God in inward purity, love, and holiness, must be the continual aim and end of the Christian in all the departments of his moral life. But how far we are from having attained this likeness, St. Paul shows us (Phil. 3 : 12), and every Christian feels just in the proportion in which he has striven after it."—Alford. "The only possible objection to the morality of Christianity is, that it is too perfect; that, though it may fit men for heaven, it will subject those who adopt it to injury and depredation here. But, whatever injury may be done in this way is the result, not of Christianity, but of a system of wickedness which it forbids."—Mark Hopkins.

Your righteousness.—"Alms," in the common version, follows an incorrect reading. This is a general statement afterwards applied to particular duties—viz., alms, prayer, and fasting "It is not at all the same word as the one used in verse 2, which means 'alms.' Perhaps it should be taken in its widest sense of 'good deeds,' meaning that no act of piety should be done with reference to the praise of men."—Eggleston.

When thou doest thine alms.—"Alms-giving was rightly held in high honor among the Jewish people. At their feasts they never forgot their poor (Esth. 9 : 22). By poet and prophet this virtue was accounted among the chiefest evidences of a genuine piety (Psalm 41 : 1), and, descending to the successor of Juda-

Chap. XIII.

Matt. 6 : 2, 3.

Summer, J.C. 32.

do not sound a trumpet before thee, as the hypocrites do, in the synagogues, and in the streets, that they may have glory of men. Verily I say unto you, They have their reward. But when thou doest alms, let not thy left hand know what thy right hand doeth ; that thine ism, it became one of the most characteristic features of the early Christian Church (Acts 9 : 36 ; 10 : 2 ; Gal. 2 : 10). But in that age, as in this, the value of the act was measured by the amount of the contribution, and not by the motive which prompted to it. Of all the many widows who have cast in their mite, the one whom Christ pointed out in the Temple has alone become immortal. How much of our so-called benevolence rests really in the praise of men is sufficiently attested by the fact that every philanthropic society finds it indispensable to its success to publish to the world the names of its supporters and the value of their contributions. Christ does not forbid the employment of such means. He does not even condemn such benevolence. He declares that it shall have the reward that it seeks, the praise of men. But a good bargain is not an eminent Christian virtue ; and he who looks alone for the reward of his own heart, and the approval of his heavenly Father, will give, as Boaz gave to Ruth (Ruth 2 : 15-17), as God perpetually gives to us—under cover.”

—Abbott.

Sound a trumpet before thee.—“ It not being apparent, from Jewish writings, that it was customary with the Jews to sound a trumpet when they distributed their alms ; this seems only a proverbial expression, to denote the making a thing known or public, as Jews and Gentiles were wont to do, by the sound of a trumpet, in their triumphs, and before acting their tragedies.”—Whitby. “ Certainly trumpets were not sounded in the synagogue, though efforts have been made to explain this word as meaning any collection of people—surely a forced interpretation. The literal meaning is—where you give to the poor do not endeavor to excite public attention to your charity.”—Eggleston.

Hypocrites.—“ The word is derived from the profession of actors, who personate characters not belonging to them, and, after the public exhibition, do not sustain these characters among those who know them. This they do for profit, or honor ; and hypocrites in religion publicly assume a false character for similar purposes.”—Scott. Grecian actors were disguised in masks, so that their real faces were not seen. This gives more point to the expression.

Chap. XIII.

Matt. 6 : 4-6.

Summer, J.C. 32.

alms may be in secret : and thy Father which seeth in secret, himself shall reward thee openly.

And when thou prayest, thou shalt not be as the hypocrites are : for they love to pray standing in the synagogues, and in the corners of the streets, that they may be seen of men. Of Prayer.

Verily I say unto you, They have their reward. But thou, when thou prayest, enter into thy closet, and

That thine alms may be in secret.—“It is not publicity, but ostentation that is prohibited ; not the mode, but the motive of the action which is regulated. A good man will prefer that mode, as well as those objects of his beneficence, by which he can produce the greatest effect ; and the view of this purpose may dictate sometimes the publication, sometimes the concealment, of his action.”—Paley. “The true Christian cares not how much men hear of his public charities (v. 16), nor how little they hear of his private ones.”—Toptady.

“Across a pleasant field, a rill unseen Steals from a fountain, nor does aught betray
Its presence, save a tint of livelier green,
And flowers that scent the air along its way.
Thus secretly should charity attend
Those who in want's dim chambers pine and grieve ;
And naught should e'er reveal the aid we lend,
Save the glad looks our kindly visits leave.”—Bryant.

Which seeth in secret.—“Demean thyself more warily in thy study than in the street. If thy public actions have a hundred witnesses, thy private have a thousand. The multitude looks but upon thy actions ; thy conscience looks into them : the multitude may chance to excuse thee, if not acquit thee ; thy conscience will accuse thee, if not condemn thee.”—Quarles.

Openly.—“literally in the open place, before men and angels at the last day.”—Schaff.

They love to pray standing in the corners of the streets. The Mohammedans of Palestine, when overtaken by the hour of prayer, suspend their employments and pray, even in the most public places. Spreading their outer garments on the ground, and turning their faces towards Mecca, they go through certain gestures, and forms of prayer, and then resume their previous employments. So the Pharisees took care to be in some public place, perhaps in the market areas, or in a corner of a street, where they might be seen at a considerable distance.

Enter into thy closet.—“The best means of keeping near to

Chap. XIII.

Matt. 6 : 6, 7.

Summer, J.C. 32.

when thou hast shut thy door, pray to thy Father which is in secret ; and thy Father, which seeth in secret, shall reward thee openly.

But when ye pray, use not vain repetitions, as the God is the closet. Here the battle is won or lost."—Payson. "We must avoid taking this too literally. There may be pride in closet devotion. There may be prayer offered in public that shall be so earnest and simple as to be offered in unconsciousness of the presence of others but God. This is true secret prayer."—Eggleston. "Sometimes the deepest prayer of all is not only without utterance, not only without words, but even goes down below the region of distinct thought. It is simply turning to God, and opening the heart to him, to receive whatever influence he may send."—James Freeman Clarke.

When thou hast shut thy door.—

"Lord, I have shut my door—
Shut out life's busy cares and fretting noise :
Here in this silence they intrude no more.
Speak thou, and heavenly joys
Shall fill my heart with music sweet and calm—
A holy psalm.

"Lord, I have shut my door !
Come thou and visit me ; I am alone !
Come, as when doors were shut thou cam'st of yore,
And visitedst thine own.
My Lord ! I kneel with reverent love and fear ;
For thou art here !" —Mary E. Atkinson.

Pray to thy Father.—

"The noblest prayer is, when one evermore Grows inly liker that he kneels before."

From the German.

Vain repetitions.—The Jewish rabbis taught that, "whoever multiplies prayer is heard." "Whoever prolongs prayer, his prayer does not return to him empty, and he that is long in prayer, his days shall be prolonged." The Moslems are required to repeat some expressions thirty times, and others as often as a hundred. In the Greek poet Eschylus, nearly a hundred verses are filled with a repetition of the same invocation to the gods. The vain repetitions, which Christ forbids his disciples to use, were such as proceeded from an opinion that they were to be heard for their much speaking, after the manner of the heathen. "I have heard of a very good man who was wont to pray to God that he would forgive him his 'long prayers.'" —Bishop Patrick.

Chap. XIII.

Matt. 6 : 7-9.

Summer, J.C. 32.

heathen do : for they think that they shall be heard for their much speaking. Be not ye therefore like unto them : for your Father knoweth what things ye have need of before ye ask him. After this manner therefore pray ye :

Our Father which art in heaven, Hallowed be thy

Your Father knoweth what things ye have need of before ye ask him.

“ His love goes before us all the way,
A pillar of cloud in the cloudless day,
A pillar of fire when gathering night
Enshrouds in doubt our wavering sight ;
It guides our feet, wide wandering here
O'er arid wastes, and deserts drear ;
And will lead us on, through the parting wave,
To the Promised Land beyond the grave.”—Edmund Kirke.

After this manner therefore.—“ Because vain repetitions are forbidden, a pattern or specimen of the true form of Christian prayer is given. Hence other prayers are not only allowed but required. . . . The beauty of the Lord's Prayer is in its unity, symmetry, completeness, and pervading spirit.”—Schaff. As regards its contents in general, “ it embodies all essential desires of a praying heart. Yet in the simplest form, resembling in this respect a pearl on which the light of heaven plays. It expresses and combines in the best order, every divine promise, every human sorrow and want, and every Christian aspiration for the good of others.”—Alford. “ All prayer may be said to have crystallized in this prayer. The church has worn it for hundreds of years upon her bosom as the brightest gem of devotion.”—Beecher. “ The admirable form of prayer which our Lord gave to his disciples, after cautioning them against all ostentation in their devotions, stands unrivalled in every thing that constitutes the perfection of prayer. It is concise, perspicuous, solemn and comprehensive ; adapted to all conditions and classes of men ; it fixes our thoughts on a few great, important points, and impresses on our minds a deep sense of the goodness and greatness of that Almighty Being to whom it is addressed.”—Bishop Porteous.

Our Father.—“ He did not command us to say my Father,” says St. Chrysostom, “ but our Father, who art in heaven, that, being taught that we have a common Father, we might show brotherly kindness towards each other.” “ If you pray for yourself alone, you alone pray for yourself.”—Ambrose. “ Jesus reveals

Chap. XIII.

Matt. 6 : 10, 11.

Summer, J.C. 32.

name. Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth as it is in heaven. Give us this day our daily bread. And forgive us our debts, as we forgive our God as the Father of souls. And if there be significance in the word, if there be truth in the revelation, this is of all things most sure, God loves infinitely his own offspring. He is a true Father, he is a perfect Father, without any of the blemishes or faults, and with all the excellences that are possible to the relation. Take from the word father all of error, weakness, caprice, with which it may ever be associated ; heighten to infinity all in it that is tender, endearing, excellent—that is God.”—John Young.

Hallowed be thy name is the expression of the desire that God may be held in universal reverence.

Thy kingdom come.—“ However imperfect their conceptions may be, men have always conceived of the present as a single step in one long advance towards an ideally perfect state. Somewhere in the future the spirit of man is to be elevated, purified, perfected. The discords and misrule and wretchedness of the present are not to continue. From afar off, advancing slowly through the ages, comes that kingdom “ in which dwelleth righteousness.”—Beecher. It is for the coming of that kingdom that the Christian prays.

Thy will be done.—“ All natural laws are emanations of the divine will.” All nature is, therefore, in harmony with it, and only man, being free, can act in opposition to the eternal laws of order. The prayer is that all men may be brought into harmony with the will of God.

Our daily bread.—“ The original signifies that which is fitting to our subsistence. That for every day.”—Suidas. “ Bread sufficient for our subsistence.”—Theophylact. “ I can see no reason for changing our received translation, and cannot but acquiesce in Mr. Mede’s remark, that the original signifies what is sufficient for our present support and subsistence : so that this petition is nearly parallel to that of Agur, and a most excellent lesson to teach us, on the one hand, moderation in our desires, and, on the other an humble dependence on Divine Providence for the most necessary supplies, be our possessions or abilities ever so great.”—Doddridge. “ Let your prayer for temporal blessings be strictly limited to things absolutely necessary.”—St. Bernard.

Forgive us our debts.—“ Debts is a mild word for our sins. But it is a wider word than trespasses, covering every short-

Chap. XIII.

Matt. 6 : 12-16.

Summer, J.C. 32.

debtors. And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory, for ever. Amen.

For if ye forgive men their trespasses, your heavenly Father will also forgive you : but if ye forgive not men their trespasses, neither will your Father forgive your trespasses.

Moreover, when ye fast, be not as the hypocrites, of coming. And 'debtors' is a word whose meaning we must not narrow into 'them that trespass against us.' If we would be forgiven of God, we must forgive even debts. We must not be too hard in exacting our 'rights,' especially when our claims oppress the poor."—Eggleston.

As we forgive our debtors.—"He does not forgive his neighbor ; so he prays to God not to forgive him. God grant that his prayer may not be heard."—Augustus W. Hare.

Lead us not into temptation.—"God cannot tempt us (Jas. 1 : 13)—i.e., solicit us to evil, but 'temptation' means also a trial of our moral character ; these trials are under God's control, and His Providence may lead us into them, may even permit us to be solicited by evil. This petition asks to be preserved from these, and, by implication, to be shown a way of escape. In view of the many temptations from within (our 'flesh'), from without (the 'world'), and from beneath ('the devil'), to which we are constantly exposed, there is no help and safety for us, but in the personal trust in Christ which underlies the proper offering up of this petition. We should never seek temptation, but flee from it ; or if we cannot avoid it, meet it with the weapon of prayer wielded in that faith which overcomes the world."—Schaff.

For thine is the kingdom, etc.—This clause is not found in the oldest copies of the New Testament now in existence. It is rejected by Griesbach, Wetstein, and other eminent Biblical critics.

When ye fast.—"The Pharisees fasted often, but in a hypocritical manner, appearing abroad, even in their private fasts, with gloomy countenances, and such neglect of their persons, as to inform all of their employment. They assumed this appearance to keep up their credit, and to gain applause for sanctity ; and this would be their only reward."—Leigh.

a sad countenance : for they disfigure their faces, that they may appear unto men to fast.
 Of Fasting. Verily I say unto you, They have their reward. But thou, when thou fastest, anoint thine head, and wash thy face ; that thou appear not unto men to fast, but unto thy Father, which is in secret : and thy Father, which seeth in secret, shall reward thee openly.

Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth, where moth and rust doth corrupt, and where thieves break through and steal : but lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, and where thieves do not break through nor steal. For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also. The light of the body is the eye : if therefore thine eye be single, thy whole

Of a sad countenance.—Not sorrowful, but sullen and morose, as is indicated by what follows.

They disfigure their faces.—They omitted washing, and allowed their beards to grow, paying no regard to cleanliness, which is near of kin to godliness.

Anoint thy head.—The richer class of Jews anointed their bodies daily with sweet or olive oil. The custom still exists among eastern nations.

Treasures upon earth.—Treasures among the Jews and Romans consisted largely in costly and richly ornamented apparel. Hence the allusion to the moth.

Where your treasure is, etc.—"The affection of the heart moulds the character. If your treasure is upon earth, your heart will be drawn towards earthly objects ; if in heaven, it will be set on objects that are heavenly and eternal."—Eggleston.

If thine eye be single.—"What the eye is to the body, the heart, not the intellect, is to the soul. If the heart be pure, we see God and heavenly things, and take hold on the truth, and are made righteous (Matt. 5 : 8 ; Rom. 10 : 10) ; if it be corrupt all is corrupt (Matt. 12 : 33, 35 ; 15 : 19), and the very power of moral and spiritual discernment is abated and finally destroyed ; for the soul which begins by practically disregarding spiritual truths, ends by losing the power of perceiving them (1 Cor. 2 : 14)."—Abbott.

Chap. XIII.

Matt. 6 : 23-25.

Summer, J.C. 32.

body shall be full of light. But if thine eye be evil, thy whole body shall be full of darkness. If therefore the light that is in thee be darkness, how great is that darkness ! No man can serve two masters : for either he will hate the one, and love the other ; or else he will hold to the one, and despise the other. Ye cannot serve God and mammon.

Therefore I say unto you, Take no thought for your Whole body. . . . full of light.—“ It is with man’s soul as it was with Nature ; the beginning of Creation is Light.”—Thomas Carlyle.

Ye cannot serve God and mammon.—“ This is the direct application. Money, in opposition to God, is personified and regarded as an idol, somewhat like Plutus, although it cannot be shown that such an idol was worshipped.”—Olshausen. “ The Chaldee word ‘ mammon ’ originally meant ‘ trust ’ or confidence, and riches are the trust of worldly men. If God be not the object of supreme trust, something else will be, and it is most likely to be money. We must choose. Not the possession of money, but its mastery over the mind, is condemned.”—Schaff.

Take no thought.—“ Be not anxious.” The word “ thought,” when the common version was translated, was used in the sense of “ anxiety.” In Holland’s edition of “ Ammianus Marcellinus ” (1609) he says of the Emperor Tacitus, “ His heart was broken, and so for thought he died.” “ I know of but one way of fortifying my soul against all gloomy presages and terrors of mind ; and that is, by securing to myself the friendship and protection of that Being who disposes of events and governs futurity.”—Addison. “ Take no thought—that is, do not be anxiously careful about the future, or, as we should say, do not borrow trouble. Extreme acquisitiveness generally has its root in extreme fear of poverty, and millionaires live often in mortal fear of the almshouse. Life has a higher purpose than the perpetuation of itself, and the body has a nobler use than that of wearing raiment.”—Eggleston.

“ Why shouldst thou fill to-day with sorrow

About to-morrow,

My heart ?

One watches all with care most true,

Doubt not that He will give thee too

Thy part.

Chap. XIII.

Matt. 6 : 26, 27.

Summer, J.C. 32.

life, what ye shall eat, or what ye shall drink ; nor yet Of Dependence for your body, what ye shall put on. Is upon God. not the life more than meat, and the body than raiment ? behold the fowls of the air : for they sow not, neither do they reap, nor gather into barns ; yet your heavenly Father feedeth them. Are ye not much better than they ? Which of you by taking " Only be steadfast, never waver,

 Nor seek earth's favor,
 But rest :
 Thou knowest what God wills must be
 For all his creatures, so for thee,
 The best."—Paul Fleming.

" If you constantly make the best use of the present hour, you are sure to be prepared for those which shall follow."—Fénélon.
 " The more a man disregards the consequences of his actions, the more repose he has in action. The fountain does not stop to calculate through what regions of the earth its streams shall flow, what foreign matter it shall take in, and where it shall finally lose itself. It flows from its own fulness with an irrepressible motion."—Herder.

What ye shall put on.—" In thy apparel avoid singularity, profuseness, and gaudiness. . . . Decency is the half-way between affectation and neglect. The body is the shell of the soul ; apparel is the husk of that shell: the husk often tells you what the kernel is."—Quarles.

Is not the life more than meat.—" Of riches, Henry somewhere says, ' The trouble of getting them, the care of keeping them, and the fear of losing them, takes away all the pleasure of using them.' Man can trust God with his soul, but scarcely do so with his body ! but surely He who so wondrously formed the body, contrived its curious mechanism, and set it in motion, is able to provide for its sustenance in his own appointed service."—Mimpriss.

Behold the fowls.—" The argument is that if God feeds the flocks of birds, so that they have their meat in their season, and supplies their wants, though they themselves are incapable of forethought, how much more shall he care for his rational creatures who are engaged in his service. There were probably flocks of birds in sight at the time, and this allusion was a beautiful object lesson, by which Christ has made every bird of the air a preacher of trustfulness."—Eggleston.

Which of you by taking thought.—" As you are obliged to

Chap. XIII.

Matt. 6 : 28-31.

Summer, J.C. 32.

thought can add one cubit unto his stature? And why take ye thought for raiment? Consider the lilies of the field how they grow; they toil not, neither do they spin; and yet I say unto you, that even Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these. Wherefore, if God so clothe the grass of the field, which to-day is, and to-morrow is cast into the oven, shall he not much more clothe you, O ye of little faith? Therefore leave the physical development of your body to God, so leave the result of your labor for its sustenance to him. For, after all man's endeavor to acquire property, the result is very generally governed by circumstances beyond his own control."—Eggleson.

Add one cubit unto his stature.—"Age" is preferable to 'stature' (the word has both meanings); the reference is not to the body, but to the life; further, to add a cubit (18 inches) to the stature would be a very great thing. Our age is conceived of as a race or journey. If then we cannot do what is least by our care, why be anxious?"—Schaff.

Lilies.—A flower called the Hûleh lily grows luxuriantly among the hills of Nazareth, and on the borders of the Lake of Galilee. Thomson describes it as being very large, its three inner petals meeting above and forming a gorgeous canopy, such as art never approached, or king sat under. It is of a downy softness, the corolla white, but every petal marked with a single streak of bright purple down the middle. The gazelles feed upon it, and, owing to the scarcity of fuel, it is, with the myrtle, rosemary, and cinnamon grasses, gathered and used in heating ovens.

Solomon in all his glory.—"The reason of this inferiority Solon formerly gave to Croesus, when the philosopher preferred to all his magnificence the poultry, the pheasants, and the peacocks; because, he said, their beauties were natural, not artificial."—Heinsius. "We here have the declaration of the Creator himself concerning the relative glory and beauty of all human pomp, compared with the meanest of his own works (see 2 Chron. 9 : 15-28). And the meaning hidden beneath the text should not escape the student. As the beauty of the flower is unfolded by the divine Creator-Spirit from within, from the laws and capacities of his own individual life, so must all true adornment of man be unfolded from within by the same Almighty Spirit (see 1 Peter 3 : 3, 4)."—Alford.

Chap. XIII.

Matt. 6 : 31-34 ; 7 : 1.

Summer, J.C. 32.

take no thought, saying, What shall we eat ? or, What shall we drink ? or, Wherewithal shall we be clothed ? (For after all these things do the Gentiles seek) : for your heavenly Father knoweth that ye have need of all these things. But seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you. Take therefore no thought for the morrow : for the morrow shall take thought for the things of itself. Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof.

Judge not, that ye be not judged ; condemn not, and

Your Father knoweth.—"It is not so much general notions of Providence which are our best support, but a sense of the personal interest, if I may so speak, taken in our welfare by Him who died and rose again."—Thomas Arnold. "If God were not a necessary Being, he might almost seem to be made for the use and benefit of men."—Archbishop Tillotson.

"God hath kept me hitherto ;
Can he cease, then, to be true ?
Why should I just now despair,
Can he weary of his care ?
Hence, tormenting terrors, hence !
God shall be my confidence :
Let him lead me as he will,
O my soul, and be thou still."—Spenser.

"Does God control constantly immense masses of matter through natural law ? How ? Why, by causing the law to operate, not upon the mass as a whole, but upon every individual particle composing that mass ; that is, he governs the vast through his government of the minute. And if he does this in matter, who will deny the probability of a providential care, proceeding on precisely the same principles, which numbers the hairs of our heads, and watches the fall of the sparrow ? Shall God care for the less and not for the greater ? "If he so clothe the grass of the field, shall he not much more clothe you, O ye of little faith ?"—Mark Hopkins.

Judge not.—"We get to the gist of the command here, as I am persuaded we shall generally do in Christ's sayings, not by departing from, but by adhering to his exact words. All assuming of God's judgment-seat, all undertaking to reach any final and conclusive judgment concerning our fellow-men, is forbidden by the spirit and words of this passage, and its parallels in the New Testament."—Abbott. "It behooves us ever to bear in mind

Chap. XIII.

Matt. 7 : 2 ; Luke 6 : 37-39.

J.C. 32.

ye shall not be condemned. For with what judgment ye judge, ye shall be judged. Forgive, and ye shall be forgiven. Give, and it shall be given unto you ; good measure, pressed down, and shaken together, and running over, shall men give into your bosom. For with the same measure that ye that while actions are always to be judged by the immutable standard of right and wrong, the judgments which we pass upon men must be qualified by the considerations of age, country, situation, and other incidental circumstances. And it will then be found that he who is most charitable in his judgment is generally the least unjust."—Robert Southey.

Of Judging.

"Teach me to feel another's woe,
To hide the fault I see ;
That mercy I to others show,
That mercy show to me."—Alexander Pope.

Give and it shall be given.—" Date and dabitur (Give, and it shall be given you) are two twins."—Bishop Andrewes. "' He that giveth to the poor lendeth unto the Lord ; ' there is more rhetoric in that one sentence than in a library of sermons."—Sir T. Browne.

Good measure pressed down.—" The language is derived from the usages of the Jewish grain market of the East, as they may be seen at the present day in Jerusalem. An official, appointed by the government, measures all the grain that is bought or sold ; after he has filled the measure full to the edge, he pours on more, presses it down, shakes the measure, pours on again till no more can be heaped up, and then, by a sudden movement, with a dexterity which only long experience could give, he empties the contents of the measure into the receptacle of the waiting customer, and begins again. This receptacle is often the ' bosom ' of the purchaser. The long robe, skilfully gathered about the wearer, affords by its ample folds a capacious pocket, easily adjusted to the carriage of a considerable burden. A pocketful of grain carried in this way in the bosom is not an inconsiderable quantity."—Abbott.

Into your bosom.—" The Arabs join together the two upper corners of their hyke, a garment like the plaid of the Highlanders in Scotland, and after having placed them first over one of their shoulders, they then fold the rest of it about their bodies ; the outer fold serves them frequently instead of an apron, wherein they carry loaves, corn, etc."—Dr. Shaw.

mete withal it shall be measured to you again. And he spake a parable unto them ; Can the blind lead the blind ? shall they not both fall into the ditch ? The disciple is not above his master : but every one that is perfect shall be as his master. And why beholdest thou the mote that is in thy brother's eye, but perceivest not the beam that is in thine own eye ? Either how canst thou say to thy brother, Brother, let me pull out the mote that is in thine eye, when thou thyself beholdest not the beam that is in thine own eye ? Thou hypocrite, cast out first the beam out of thine own eye, and then shalt thou see clearly to pull out the mote that is in thy brother's eye.

Give not that which is holy unto the dogs, neither

Why beholdest thou the mote.—The word rendered mote signifies a little splinter of wood, and thus with great propriety is opposed to a large beam. "Why are you so quick to see a small fault in a brother who have one so much greater yourself. Get rid of your own fault, which partially blinds you, and then you shall see clearly, not to stand staring at your brother's faults, but to help him to overcome them. There is always hypocrisy in professing a horror of other people's sins while we tolerate our own. Some quaint writer says that every man carries a wallet over his shoulder, putting other people's faults in the front end and his own behind him."—Eggleston. "The true way to reform mankind is for each to look at home, and begin with reforming himself."—Stanhope.

Give not that which is holy unto the dogs, etc.—The characteristic of dogs is brutality and ferocity ; of swine, grossness and stupidity. "Holy, inasmuch as it ought not to be desecrated ; a pearl, inasmuch as it ought not to be depreciated. . . . By dogs, we understand the enemies of the truth ; and by swine, its despisers."—Augustine. It is our duty to help others to overcome their faults, but in doing so we must not foolishly give rebuke and advice when it will do no good, but rather harm.

That which is holy.—"The holy meat offered in sacrifice. . . . 'Pearls' are somewhat like the natural food of swine, but if deceived by them we might expect them to revenge themselves by attacking those who deceived them. Valuable as pearls are,

Chap. XIII.

Matt. 7 : 6-12 ; Luke 6 : 31.

J.C. 32.

cast ye your pearls before swine, lest they trample them under their feet, and turn again and rend you.

Ask, and it shall be given you ; seek, and ye shall find ; knock, and it shall be opened unto you : for every one that asketh receiveth ; and he that seeketh findeth ; and to him that knocketh it shall be opened. Or what man is there of you, whom if his son ask bread, will he give him a stone ? Or if he ask a fish, will he give him a serpent ? If ye then, being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children, how much more shall your Father which is in heaven give good things to them that ask him ? Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that they are worth nothing for swine's food, and valuable as the truth of the gospel is, it is of no account to those whose God is their belly, whose glory is in their shame, whose end is destruction. (Phil. 3 : 19. See also Titus 1 : 15.)"—Eggleston.

Of Asking

Ask, and it shall be given you.—"The promise is absolute. 'Every one that asketh receiveth.' Such supplicants sometimes find ready admission ; always in due time ; nor will their previous character, however bad, preclude them ; for He who opened the way has taught them to come, and 'He giveth to all men liberally and upbraideth not.' (James 1 : 5-8.)"—Scott. But we must ask aright, in submission to the wisdom and will of God. If a child were to ask hurtful things, a wise parent would deny its request ; so our prayers may not always be granted ; but, says St. Bernard, "God will give us either what we ask, or what he knows to be better for us." But of those "good things"—necessary food, and all spiritual blessings—there can be no failure.

Or if he ask a fish.—Bread and fish were the common food of the people in that part of Galilee. The passage represents, "by a familiar illustration, those who disappoint the just expectations of others, by giving them not the thing they ask for and need, but something else, which, though similar to it in form, as a serpent is to some sorts of fish (eel and perch), or a stone to a cake or biscuit, yet it is not only not the thing, but wholly useless, or even noxious."—Bloomfield.

Whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them. "Every man must perceive that this would lead to uni-men should do to you, do ye even so to them : for this is the law and the prophets. Enter ye in at the strait gate : for wide is the gate, and broad is the way, that leadeth to destruction, and many there be which go in thereat : because strait is the gate, and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life and few there be that find it.

versal justice, goodness, compassion, forgiveness, and candor, and exclude every thing of an opposite character. If we proceed in this way, we may readily know how we ought to act in all circumstances."—Adam Clarke. A man's "desires of good from others are here set up as the measure of his performances of good to others. The more selfish and unbounded his desires are, the larger are those performances with the obligation of which he is burdened. Whatsoever he would that others should do unto him he is bound to do unto them ; and therefore the more he gives way to ungenerous and extravagant wishes of service from those who are around him, the heavier and more insupportable is the load of duty which he brings on himself."—Chalmers. "Having given us the seeds of all rules, he has left us in a great measure to grow the rules for ourselves. He has left us to apply the principles to particular cases, and so draw the rules for each case out of them."—Augustus W. Hare.

This is the law and the prophets.—"It is the summary of the second great command—that is, one of the two on which hang all the law and the prophets (Matt. 21 : 40), being their concurrent language. Every thing said in them about our duty to our neighbor may be reduced to this rule."—Henry.

The wide and strait gates.—Nearly every town in Syria and Palestine is surrounded with walls, and entered by gates. The principal ones are wide, two-leaved, plated with iron, closed with locks, and fastened with metal bars. The gateway is vaulted, shady, and cool, and so is a favorite resort in the heat of the day. Thomson says, "I have seen the strait and narrow ways, with here and there a traveller." The "strait gates" are in retired corners, and must be sought for. They are opened only to those who knock, and when the sun goes down, and the night comes on, are shut and locked. "These small gates, not much larger than a window-pane, are common in all Oriental walled cities. They are found, also, in the gates which lead into the courts of houses and caravanseras and into walled gardens."—J. S. Jewell. "There is no entering into the King of heaven's

Chap. XIII. Matt. 7 : 15-20 ; Luke 6 : 44, 45. J.C. 32.

Beware of false prophets, which come to you in sheep's clothing, but inwardly they are ravening wolves. Ye shall know them by their fruits. Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of this-False Teachers.
 tles? Even so every good tree bringeth forth good fruit ; but a corrupt tree bringeth forth evil fruit. A good man out of the good treasure of his heart bringeth forth that which is good ; and an evil man out of the evil treasure of his heart bringeth forth that which is evil : for of the abundance of the heart his mouth speaketh. A good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit, neither can a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit. Every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire. Wherefore by their fruits ye privy chamber without passing through the strait gate of purity." Bunyan's "Pilgrim's Progress" is the best of all commentaries on this passage.

False prophets ; "false teachers."

Sheep's clothing.—"Not literally in sheep's skins which the old prophets wore, but 'in clothing such as sheep wear—that is, gentle and meek in their outward appearance.'"—De Wette. "The expression refers, however, not merely to their gentle and mild exterior, but also to their profession of Christianity."—Lange.

By their fruits ye shall know them.—"Here seems to be prescribed a plain and easy way of discerning false teachers from true ; and a way which lies level to the meanest capacity. It is only by observing the fruits and consequents of every doctrine, what it is apt to produce when it is thoroughly believed, and then judging how far those fruits resemble the doctrine and spirit of Christianity."—James Blair.

Of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh.—"Our words are the commentaries on our wills ; for when we speak we make, as it were, a dissection of our own hearts, and read an anatomy lecture upon ourselves. Our wanton talk discovers a stew in our heart ; when our words are swords, our hearts are a slaughter-house ; when we bear false witness, that is the mint ; when we worship Mammon, that is the temple. The heart is the shop and workhouse of all evil."—Antony Farindon.

Chap. XIII. Matt. 7 : 21-25 ; Luke 6 : 46-48.

J.C. 32.

shall know them. Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven ; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven. And why call ye me Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say ? Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name ? and in thy name have cast out devils ? and in thy name done many wonderful works ? And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you : depart from me, ye that work iniquity.

Therefore, whosoever heareth these sayings of mine,
Of Hearing and Doing. and doeth them, I will liken him unto a wise man, which built an house, and digged deep and laid the foundation on a rock : and the rain

That day.—"Many passages are found in the rabbinical writers, from which it appears that the Jews were accustomed to call the day of judgment by the emphatic name of that day."—Bloomfield.

He that doeth.—"To restore a commonplace truth to its first uncommon lustre, you need only translate it into action. But to do this, you must have reflected on its truth."—Coleridge. "To understand the comparison, imagine the rough, steep sides of the valleys of that Jura formation prevalent in Palestine. A house built beside a torrent, on a rock, is unharmed by the swollen and sweeping flood. But if resting, though placed high above the stream, on a foundation of earth, the flood gradually wears away its base, till at length the undermined and growing slide of earth reaches the house itself, and plunges it into the flood."—Ebrard Digged deep.—"God is not to be found on the surface."—St. Gregory.

And the rain descended, etc.—"The rain, floods, and winds of an eastern monsoon strikingly illustrate this passage. When people in those regions speak of the strength of a house, it is not by saying it will last so many years, but it will outstand the rains ; it will not be injured by the floods. Houses built of the best materials, and having deep foundations, in a few years often yield to the rains of a monsoon. The house founded upon a rock can alone stand the rains and floods of a wet monsoon."—Roberts.

Chap. XIII. Matt. 7 : 25-28 ; Luke 6 : 48, 49.

J.C. 32.

descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat vehemently upon that house ; and it fell not : for it was founded upon a rock. And every one that heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them not, shall be likened unto a foolish man, that without a foundation, built his house upon the sand : and the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house ; and it fell : and great was the fall of it.

And it came to pass when Jesus had ended these sayings, the people were astonished at his doctrine.

On the sand.—"The fishermen of Bengal build their huts in the dry season on the bed of sand from which the river has retired. Then the rains set in, which they do often very suddenly, accompanied by northwest winds, and the water pours down in torrents from the mountains. In one night multitudes of these huts are swept away, and the place where they stood is the next morning undiscoverable."—Ward quoted by Whedon. "The house built on the sand," says Barnes, "is beat upon by the floods and rains ; its foundation gradually is worn away ; it falls, is borne down the stream, and is destroyed. So falls the sinner. The floods are wearing away his sandy foundation ; and soon one tremendous storm shall beat upon him, and he and his hopes shall fall, forever fall."

When Jesus had ended these sayings.—This plainly intimates that all this discourse was delivered at one time ; and, consequently, that several passages related by Luke, as spoken at different times, are repetitions of it. Compare Matt. 5 : 13 with Luke 14 : 34, 35 ; Matt. 5 : 25 with Luke 12 : 58 ; Matt. 6 : 9 and seq. with Luke 11 : 2, and seq. ; Matt. 6 : 20, 21, with Luke 12 : 33, 34 ; Matt. 6 : 24 with Luke 16 : 13, and Matt. 7 : 13, 14, with Luke 13 : 24. The reasons for the view that the report in Matthew and Luke refers to one and the same discourse are fully stated by Robinson, "Harmony of the Gospels," pp. 178, 179.

Were astonished at his doctrine.—"The word may denote either the doctrine taught or the manner of teaching. The latter is probably meant."—Greswell.

With authority and not as the scribes.—"When the scribes delivered their doctrines to the people, they delivered them expressly as the doctrines of men, grounding them on the authority

Chap. XIII.

Matt. 7 : 29.

Summer, J.C. 32.

For he taught them as one having authority, and not as the scribes.

of their distinguished doctors ; Christ, on the contrary, spake boldly from himself, delivering his commands as the commands of God."—Grotius. "In opposition to all the learning, and authority, and prejudices of his age and nation, he simply said, Verily, I say unto you. He spoke with the calmness, and dignity, and decision of one who bore credentials that challenged entire deference. But, if his manner was authoritative, it was also gentle and condescending ; if it was dignified, it was also kind ; if it was calm, it was also earnest. While his instructions were the most elevated that were ever uttered, they were uttered with such plainness, were so clothed in parables, and illustrated by common objects, that they were also the most intelligible. . . . The most exalted intellect cannot exhaust his instructions, and yet they are adapted to the feeblest. 'Never man spake like this man !' "—Mark Hopkins.

Chap. XIV.

Matt. 8 : 5 ; Luke 7 : 1, 2. Summer, J.C. 32.

CHAPTER XIV.

INCIDENTS IN GALILEE.

Now, when Jesus had ended^d all his sayings in the audience of the people, he entered into Capernaum. And a certain centurion's servant, who was dear unto

When he had ended all his sayings.—The Sermon on the Mount. "The very form of this expression indicates that Luke's report of those sayings was not a complete one. It thus confirms the opinion that Luke's and Matthew's accounts are simply different reports of the same sermon."—Abbott. "In Luke the account of this miracle is fuller in the first part, not so full in the closing. In Matthew the centurion is said to have come to Christ, while, in fact, he sent to him. But both narratives are, substantially, accurate. We often speak of a man as doing himself that which he does by means of others. So a ruler is said to do what his servants do. The variations of the two accounts are no greater than we expect to meet where the same fact is told by two different narrators, and this natural and human variation is the strongest possible proof that there was no collusion. It is likely that Matthew told the story as he understood it, or in this way for brevity. The coincidence of the two in all essential particulars is quite remarkable."—Eggleston.

Entered into Capernaum.—The hill called Horns of Hattin, on which the Sermon on the Mount was probably delivered, lies about seven miles south-west from Capernaum. For Capernaum, see note on page 121.

Certain Centurion.—A Roman military officer. "All Palestine was under Roman military government ; this centurion was probably connected with the garrison at Capernaum. (See note on page 64.) The Roman army was divided into legions, answering to our army corps, varying in size from 3000 to 6000 men ; each legion was divided into ten cohorts (regiments), usually called in the New Testament the 'band ;' the cohort was divided into three maniples (battalions), and each maniple was divided into two centuries. These last contained from 50 to 100 men, answering to our 'company ;' and each one was commanded by a centurion, answering to our captain. There were thus in each legion 60 centuries, each under the command of a centurion."—Abbott.

Servant.—"Luke says doulos, servant ; but Matthew has it pais, boy."—Whedon. "This indicates that the relation be-

Chap. XIV.

Matt. 8 : 6 ; Luke 7 : 2-5.

Summer, J.C. 32.

him, was at home sick of the palsy, grievously tormented, and ready to die. And when he heard of Jesus, he sent unto him the elders of the Jews, beseeching him that he would come and heal his servant. And when they came to Jesus, they besought him instantly, saying, That he was worthy for whom he should do this : for Jesus heals a Centurion's Servant.

Capernaum.

tween this centurion and his servant was one unusually tender."
—Abbott.

Was dear unto him.—"Such instances of affection are more common in military than in domestic service."—Abbott. "In that age especially, slaves were often made the favorites and heirs of their masters. Many of the prominent characters in Rome were originally slaves, though they rose to honor only as freedmen."—Riddle.

Sick of the palsy, grievously tormented.—Paralysis or "palsy" was a common disease in those days (comp. Matt. 4 : 24). "The disease in the text may have been an attack of tetanus, which the ancient physicians included under paralysis, and which is more common in hot countries than with us. It can hardly have been apoplexy, which usually deprives of sensation."—Alford.

Ready to die.—"A more definite statement of the immediate danger than is given by Matthew."—Abbott. "United with tetanus, as palsy sometimes is in Eastern countries, extreme suffering and rapid dissolution often result."—Whedon.

Elders of the Jews.—"The elders are not the elders of the synagogue (chap. 13 : 14 ; Acts 13 : 15, etc.), for which a different Greek word is used, but the elders of the people. (The intervention of these elders indicates that the centurion was a proselyte ; and this is confirmed by his second message to Jesus. No heathen would have regarded himself unworthy to receive a Jewish prophet.) Observe that the elders put their request on the ground that the centurion is worthy because of his attachment to the Jewish nation, while Jesus esteems him above Israel because of his faith."—Abbott.

And heal.—Literally "save." There is a touch of pathos in the term used:

Instantly.—"Earnestly."

He was worthy.—"This centurion was by birth a heathen ; but, like him in the Acts (10 : 1) who bore the same office, was one of the many who were at this time deeply feeling the emptiness of all polytheistic religions."—Trench.

Chap. XIV.

Luke 7 : 5, 6.

Summer, J.C. 32.

he loveth our nation, and he hath built us a synagogue. And Jesus saith, I will come and heal him. Then Jesus went with them. And when he was now not far from the house, the centurion sent friends to him, saying unto him, Lord, trouble not thyself : for I am not

For he loveth our nation.—With the Jews, “our nation” and “our religion” were almost equivalent terms. They expected Jesus to share in their appreciation of the centurion’s attachment to Judaism.

He hath built, etc.—This clause may be translated, “himself built us our synagogue.” “This was often done by Gentiles who inclined to Judaism. It was regarded as a mark of piety, just as building churches has been ever since. We know the wider purpose of our Lord’s mission, and therefore do not consider how natural it was to present this fact to him as a motive for granting the request of the centurion. Even the apostles were slow to learn that the gospel was meant for the Gentiles also. This was the first lesson, and it was wisely given. It would have been impossible to break down at once their Jewish prejudice ; hence Jesus chose as the first Gentile he would bless, one whose case would not arouse opposition, nay, would be presented by the leading Jews themselves. This was the entering wedge in breaking the barrier.”—Riddle.

I will come and heal him.—“I coming, will heal him.” “This saying is worthy of observation. Jesus did not positively say, I will come and heal him ; this could not have been strictly true, because our Lord healed him without going to the house, and the issue shows that the words ought to be taken in the most literal sense ; thus understood, they contained a promise which it seems none of them distinctly comprehended. Foreseeing the exercise of the centurion’s faith, Jesus promises that while he is coming, before he arrives at the house, he will heal him ; and this was literally done. There is much beauty in this passage.”—Greswell.

Went with them.—“There was no delay as in the case of the Syro-Phenician woman, because there was not the same necessity either for bringing out the faith of the person who asked the favor, or for thus giving a lesson to the disciples, to remove prejudice.”—Schaff.

Friends.—“A very delicate and thoroughly natural touch—no intercessors, for these he needed no longer, but intimate friends of his family, who can in some measure take his place in greeting the highly honored guest.”—Van Oosterzee.

Chap. XIV.

Matt. 8 : 8, 9 ; Luke 7 : 6-8. Summer, J.C. 32.

worthy that thou shouldst enter under my roof ; wherefore neither thought I myself worthy to come unto thee ; but speak the word only and my servant shall be healed. For I also am a man set under authority, hav-

For I am not worthy.—"This humility was partly due to his consciousness that he was a Gentile, and as such not an heir of the blessings bestowed on the Jews ; but still more to the esteem in which he held Jesus in consequence of what he had heard concerning him (ver. 3). Social intercourse had much more significance then than now, especially between the Jews and people of other nations."—Riddle. "If thou desire the love of God and man, be humble ; for the proud heart, as it loves none but itself, so it is beloved of none but itself. The voice of humility is God's music, and the silence of humility is God's rhetoric. Humility enforces where neither virtue nor strength can prevail, nor reason."—Quarles.

Wherefore neither thought I myself worthy to come unto thee.—"This is not a repetition of the last clause, but a more emphatic statement. 'Worthy' here is not the same word as in ver. 6, and 'neither' means 'not even.' The centurion did not expect so great an honor as a visit from Jesus ; he did not even think he was fit to go and welcome him when he knew of his coming. Here the thought of personal unworthiness comes out. While Jesus met all classes, and was condemned for so doing, he always impressed men as being himself 'separate from sinners' (Heb. 7 : 26). What Peter felt, the centurion now feels."—Riddle. "Observe three estimates of the centurion's character : first his own, not worthy, because a Gentile, and because a sinner ; second, the Jewish estimate, worthy, because he had built a Jewish synagogue, the highest encomium on character which a Jewish elder could pass on a Gentile outcast ; third, Jesus' estimate worthy, because of his faith, and needing no commendation from Jewish elders, but himself an example and a rebuke to them."—Abbott.

Speak the word.—"Contrast the centurion's faith, who trusts all to the word of Christ, with Martha's, who trusts only to his prayer to God (John 11 : 21, 23)."—Abbott.

A man set under authority, etc.—The meaning is, "I know how to obey, being myself under authority ; and in turn know how others obey, having soldiers under me ;" inferring, "if, then, I, in my subordinate station of command, am obeyed, how much more thou, who art over all, and whom diseases serve as their master !"—Alford. "His view of Christ's relation to the spiritual kingdom is as original as it is grand. The Lord ap-

Chap. XIV.

Matt. 8 : 9-12 ; Luke 7 : 8, 9. Summer, J.C. 32.

ing under me soldiers, and I say unto one, Go, and he goeth ; and to another, Come, and he cometh ; and to my servant, Do this, and he doeth it. When Jesus heard these things, he marvelled, and turned him about and said unto the people that followed him, Verily, I say unto you, I have not found so great faith, no, not in Israel. And I say unto you, That many shall come from the east and west, and shall sit down with Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, in the kingdom of heaven : but the children of the kingdom shall be cast out into outer darkness : there shall be weeping and pears to him here as the true Cæsar and Imperator, the highest over the hierarchy, not of earth, but of heaven."—Trench.

He marveled.—"Not to be explained away. Our Lord could marvel. A mystery of his humanity."—Schaff. "There are two occasions where it is recorded that our Lord Jesus Christ 'marveled:' once in this history, and once in Mark 6 : 6. It is remarkable that in one case he is described as marveling at 'faith,' and in the other as marveling at 'unbelief.' Bishop Hall, and Burkitt after him, both observe, 'What can be more wonderful than to see Christ wonder?'"—Ryle.

I have not found so great faith.—The word faith, here means confidence, or belief that Christ had power to heal his servant.

Many shall come from the East.—Jesus takes occasion from the faith of the centurion to state that this case was not to be a solitary one ; that many of those afar off, and not of the Jewish nation, would be converted to the Gospel, and be saved, as were Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob.

Shall sit down.—Literally "recline," in allusion to the recumbent posture of guests at table in the East. The enjoyments of heaven are described under the similitude of a feast or banquet (Matt. 26 : 29 ; Luke 14 : 15 ; 22 : 30.)

Children of the kingdom.—The Jews, who boasted much that they were the children of Abraham.

Cast. . . . into outer darkness.—The expression denotes darkness the most remote from the light, and is employed in opposition to the brilliant lights, which are figuratively supposed to be burning in the banqueting-room. The history of the Jews for eighteen hundred years has been a fulfillment of this passage.

Chap. XIV.

Matt. 8 : 13 ; Luke 7 : 12.

Summer, J.C. 32.

gnashing of teeth. And Jesus said, Go thy way ; and as thou hast believed, so be it done unto thee. And his servant was healed in the self-same hour ; and they that were sent, returning to the house, found the servant whole.

And it came to pass the day after, that he went into a city called Nain : and many of his disciples went with him, and much people. Now when he came nigh to the gate of the city, behold, there was a dead man carried out, the only son of his mother, and she was a widow : and much peo-

Jesus raises a Widow's Son at Nain.

The day after.—After the healing of the centurion's servant. He went into a city called Nain.—"Nain occurs nowhere else in the Bible. It was a town of Galilee, not far from Capernaum, a few miles to the south of Mount Tabor."—Alford. "On the northern slope of the rugged and barren ridge of Little Hermon," says Stanley, "immediately west of Endor, which lies in a farther recess of the same range, is the ruined village of Nain. No convent, no tradition, marks the spot ; but under these circumstances the name is sufficient to guarantee its authenticity. One entrance alone could it have had—that which opens on the rough hillside in its downward slope to the plain. It must have been in this descent, as, according to Eastern custom, they 'carried out the dead man,' that 'nigh to the gate' of the village the bier was stopped, and the long procession of mourners stayed, and the young man delivered back to his mother. It is a spot which has no peculiarity of feature to fix it on the memory."—Sinai and Palestine, p. 349.

When he came nigh to the gate of the city.—"Ancient cities were very commonly surrounded by walls, to protect them from enemies : and hence the gates. But at the entrance of almost every town in the East is a gate, although there be no wall ; and, as people pass in and out this way, it was formerly the place of public assembling and of the dispensing of justice. The Jews, as well as the Greeks and Romans, were accustomed to bury their dead outside the gates, except that the kings of David's house were buried within the city of David (2 Kings 21 : 18.)"—Jacobus.

Behold, there was a dead man. . . . the only son of a widow.—"That our Lord should meet the funeral at the gate of the city, is to be explained by the fact that the Jews did not suf-

Chap. XIV.

Luke 7 : 13.

Summer, J.C. 32.

ple of the city was with her. And when the Lord saw her, he had compassion on her, and said unto her, Weep fer the interring of the dead in towns, but had their burial-places without the walls. Probably there was very much in the circumstances of the sad procession which he now met, to arouse the compassion even of those who were not touched with so lively a feeling for human sorrows as was the compassionate Saviour of men; and it was this which had brought 'much people' to accompany the bier. Indeed, there could little be added to the words of the evangelist, whose whole narrative here, apart from its deeper interest, is a master-work for its perfect beauty,—there could be little added to it to make the picture of desolation more complete. The bitterness of the mourning for an only son had passed into a proverb (Jer. 6 : 26 ; Zech. 12 : 10 ; Amos 8 : 10)."

—Farar.

Much people was with her.—"This expression should not be overlooked. It shows the publicity of the great miracle here recorded. It was wrought before many witnesses."—Ryle. "There is no room for deception or mistake. As in the case of Lazarus, we must believe either that the incident never occurred—i.e., that it is a fictitious narrative ; or that it was a deliberate fraud, in which Christ and the widow conspired to deceive the people ; or that it was a divine interposition, attesting in Christ that power over death which is the peculiar prerogative of divinity. (2 Kings 5 : 7.) To suppose that the cases of resurrection recorded in the New Testament were simply restorations of suspended animation, as some rationalistic critics have suggested, involves insuperable difficulties. We must then believe that, in less than three years, three cases of suspended animation occurred within the circle of Christ's ministry, that in each criticism now discovers what was hidden from the immediate friends, and that Christ made the discovery in each case without any examination of the supposed corpse, and just at the fortunate moment when the returning life was ready to respond to his voice. This involves a perfectly incredible doctrine of chances."—Abbott.

He had compassion on her, and said, Weep not.—"What mingled majesty and grace shines in this scene ! the Resurrection and the Life in human flesh, with a word of command, bringing back life to the dead body ; Incarnate Compassion summoning its absolute power to dry a widow's tears !" — Jamieson. "None moved our Lord on behalf of the widow ; neither do we read that she herself spake to him. The leper was healed (Luke 5 : 12) in reply to his own personal application ; the centurion's servant (Luke 7 : 1) in reply to the prayer of his

Chap. XIV.

Luke 7 : 14.

Summer, J.C. 32.

not. And he came and touched the bier : and they master ; but the widow's son was raised without any one interceding on his behalf."—Poole. "How different this 'weep not' from the 'weep not' which often proceeds from the lips of earthly comforters, who, even while they speak the words, give no reason why the mourner should cease from weeping ; but He that is come that he may one day make good that word, 'God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes ; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain' (Rev. 21 : 4), does show now some effectual glimpses of his power, wiping away, though not yet forever, the tears from the weeping eyes of that desolate mother."—Trench. "Sympathy for the mother is specified as that which determined Jesus to waken him who reposed in the coffin. But that does not exclude a regard for the man himself in the transaction. . . . It is the immediate result of the action, noticeable by the bystanders, but the less essential one : its concealed result was the spiritual awakening of the youth to a higher existence, by means of which even the mother's joy first became true and lasting."—Olshausen. "Here was no solicitor but his own compassion. While we have to do with the Father of mercies, our afflictions are the most powerful suitors."—Bishop Hall.

Touched the bier.—The Jews did not use a coffin for their dead : this belonged to Babylon and Egypt. "In Constantinople we saw such a funeral as this at Nain. The body was stretched out upon a long bier, like one asleep on a bed, covered with shawls and silk. The head, hands, and feet were bare. The bier was carried by four persons."—Jacobus. "The bier on which the dead were borne was, in the case of the poorer classes, a simple board supported on two poles. There was no coffin ; the corpse was simply covered with a large cloth. Mourners accompanied the body to the grave, chanting a sorrowful refrain, broken in upon by the genuine lamentation of friends, the sympathetic expressions of bystanders and acquaintances, and the professional outcries of hired mourners. Greater respect is paid to funeral processions in the East than with us ; bystanders wait reverentially as it passes, and often swell the little cortege, following in the train as a mark of sympathy."—Abbott. "The drawing nigh and touching the bier was meant as an intimation to the bearers that they should arrest their steps, and one which they understood ; for 'immediately' they that bare him stood still."—Trench. "Christ rouses from the bier as easily as another would rouse from the bed—different in this even from his own messengers and ministers in the old covenant ; for they, not without an effort, not without a long and earnest wrestling with

Chap. XIV.

Luke 7 : 14, 15.

Summer, J.C. 32.

that bare him stood still. And he said, Young man, I say unto thee, Arise. And he that was dead sat up, God, won back its prey from the jaws of death ; and this because there dwelt not the fullness of power in them, who were but as servants in the house of another, not as a son in his own house."—Trench.

I say unto thee, Arise.—"It must have been a moment of intense and breathless expectation. Unbidden, but filled with undefinable awe, the bearers of the bier stood still. And then through the hearts of the stricken mourners, and through the hearts of the silent multitude, there thrilled the calm utterance, 'Young man, arise!' Would that dread sentence thrill also through the unknown mysterious solitudes of death? would it thrill through the impenetrable darkness of the more than midnight which has ever concealed from human vision the world beyond the grave? It did."—Farrar. Contrast the prayers and efforts of Elijah and Elisha (1 Kings 17 : 20-22 ; 2 Kings 4 : 33-35). "Elijah, it is true, raises up the dead. But he is obliged to stretch himself out upon the body of the child whom he recalls to life ; and it is easily seen that he invokes a foreign power, that he withdraws from the empire of death a soul which is not subjugated to him, and that he is not himself the master of life and death. Jesus Christ raised up the dead as easily as he performs the most common actions ; he speaks as master of those who repose in an eternal sleep ; and it is thoroughly felt that he is the God of the dead as of the living, never more tranquil and calm than when he is operating the grandest things."—Massillon's Sermons, p. 448. Godet draws beautifully another and a suggestive contrast, which hints not only, indeed, at the manner in which the divine voice recalls the dead from the long sleep, but at an analogy which helps our faith to accept the sublime fact. "The interruption of the connection between the soul and the body in death, as in sleep, is only relative ; and as man's voice suffices to re-establish this connection between the soul and the body in any one who is wrapt in slumber, so the word of the Lord has the power to restore this interrupted connection even in the dead."

He that was dead sat up.—"This is one of the three greatest miracles of our Lord ; of which it has been observed that he raised one (Jairus's daughter) when just dead, one on the way to burial, and one (Lazarus) who had been buried four days. All three raisings from the dead are wrought with words of power : 'Damsel, arise,' 'Young man, arise,' 'Lazarus, come forth.'" —Alford.

Chap. XIV.

Luke 7 : 15-17.

Summer, J.C. 32.

and began to speak : and he delivered him to his mother. And there came a fear on all : and they glorified God, saying, That a great prophet is risen up among us ; and, That God hath visited his people. And this rumor of him went forth throughout all Judea, and throughout all the region round about.

Began to speak.—An evidence of the completeness of his restoration.

Delivered him to his mother.—"The on-lookers were too awe-struck to act ; the mother was overwhelmed by the sudden revulsion of feeling ; personally helping the son from his bier, and conducting him to his mother, Christ completed his merciful interposition, and gave to the mother's feeling that opportunity for action which was necessary for her own relief. Comp. John 11 : 44."—Abbott. "Luke here hints at the Old Testament instances in 1 Kings 17 : 23, and 2 Kings 4 : 36, 'Take thy son hence.' The same Redeemer who does this will, when the great word, 'Rise up,' shall call all the dead, give back to all his separated ones their own beloved whom he has raised for personal recognition and special communion. As surely as there is to be a resurrection, so surely is there to be such a recognition and possession again of our beloved ones, if we and they are Christ's—those whom he has raised from spiritual death, and who are his to give back to those whom he loves."—Jacobus.

And there came a fear on all.—"They were naturally enough awed at this direct exertion of miraculous power. Nothing could go beyond this work of raising the dead."—Jamieson.

Great prophet.—"Only the greatest prophets, Elijah and Elisha, had been known to raise the dead ; and they not by a word, but by exertions of a power not belonging to themselves."—Jacobus.

This rumor.—The fame of this deed. It passed all the way through Samaria, and into Judea, and so came to John the Baptist, who was confined in the prison of Machærus, on the eastern side of the Dead Sea, and led to the inquiries reported in the following chapter.

CHAPTER XV.

TESTIMONY OF JESUS ABOUT JOHN.

AND the disciples of John showed him of all these things. And when he had heard in the prison the works of Christ, calling unto him two of his disciples, he sent them to Jesus, saying, Art thou he that should come ? or look we for another ?

When he had heard in the prison.—“ For now six months, it may be for more than a year, the Baptist, the one man hitherto recognized, in these days, as a prophet, had lain a prisoner in the dungeons of Machaerus—doubtless in hourly expectation of death—a man, young in years, but wasted with his own fiery zeal, and now by the shadows of his prison house. As a Jew he had clung to Jewish ideas of the Messiah, expecting apparently a national movement which would establish a pure theocracy under Jesus. Why had he left him to languish in prison ? Why had he not used his supernatural powers to advance the kingdom of God ? To solve such questions, which could not be repressed, two of his disciples were deputed to visit Jesus, and learn from himself whether he was indeed the Messiah, or whether the nation should still look for another ?”—Geikie.

He that should come, had become a kind of title for the Messiah (Heb. 10 : 37).

Or look we for another?—On this Farrar remarks : “ Was this a message from him who had first recognized and pointed out the Lamb of God ? . . . St. John the Baptist in his heroic greatness needs not the poor aid of our charitable suppositions. We conclude from the express words of him, who at this very crisis pronounced upon him the most splendid eulogy ever breathed over mortal man, that the great and noble prophet had indeed, for the moment, found a stumbling-block to his faith in what he heard about the Christ.” Farrar then goes on to recall “ similar moments of intense and heart-breaking despondency” in the careers of Moses and Elijah ; cites the cases of Savonarola, Jerome of Prague, and Luther, “ whose courage, like that of the Baptist, had enabled them to stand unquailing before angry councils and threatening kings,” but who yet wavered in constancy of heart or of mind under the oppressive influence of prison cells. “ And yet to St. John the Baptist imprisonment must have been a deadlier thing than even to Luther.” To exchange the free, wild life of the hermit for the chilly damps and cramping fetters of a dungeon was worse than death. And,

Chap. XV.

Luke 7 : 20-23 ; Matt. 11 : 4-6.

J.C. 32.

When the men were come unto him, they said, John Baptist hath sent us unto thee, saying, Art thou he that should come? or look we for another? And in that same hour he cured many of their infirmities and plagues, and of evil spirits; and unto many that were blind he gave sight.

Then Jesus answering said unto them, Go your way, and tell John what things ye have seen and heard; how that the blind see, the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed, the deaf hear, the dead are raised, and to the poor the gospel is preached. And blessed is he, whosoever shall not be offended in me.

moreover, "he seemed to be neglected not only by God above, but by the living Son of God on earth. . . . What wonder! . . . if the eye of the caged eagle began to film!" Says De Pressensé: "Had he possessed greater light, he would have been less heroic; for there is no work so noble as his who prepares the triumph in which he does not share."

In that same hour.—"It would seem that Jesus delayed his answer, and went on with his teaching and miracles in the presence of John's waiting disciples."—Beecher. "He doth neither affirm nor deny, but would rather have his works testify of him than that he would testify of himself."—The Venerable Beda. "The language here indicates that these miracles were wrought at the time, and for the purpose of giving a message to carry back to their master. If so, it is, I think, the only case reported where Christ performed a miracle for the avowed purpose of demonstrating his claim."—Abbott.

Infirmities and plagues and evil spirits.—Luke, who was a physician, defines diseases with professional accuracy. "Infirmities are those disorders which disable, as deafness, dumbness, paralysis, the withered hand, etc.; plagues (literally scourges) are the more painful forms of sickness; the possessed of evil spirits are discriminated from the merely diseased."—Abbott.

Tell John.—"Was it for an impostor, or enthusiast, to refer messengers who came to him to miraculous works performed before their eyes, to things done on the spot, to the testimony of their own senses?"—Paley.

Offended.—Made to stumble. "This does not upbraid, but cautions, implying that Christ knew best what to do in his king-

Chap. XV. Luke 7 : 24-28 ; Matt. 11 : 7-12.

J.C. 32.

And when the messengers of John were departed, he began to speak unto the people concerning John : What went ye out into the wilderness for to see ? A reed shaken with the wind ? But what went ye out for to see ? A man clothed in soft raiment ? Behold, they which are gorgeously appareled, and live delicately, are in kings' courts. But what went ye out for to see ? A prophet ? Yea, I say unto you, and much more than a prophet. This is he, of whom it is written, Behold, I send my messenger before thy face, which shall prepare thy way before thee. For I say unto you, Among those that are born of women there is not a greater prophet than John the Baptist : but he that is least in the kingdom of God is greater than he. And from the days of John

Testimony of Jesus
about John.

dom."—Schaff. "Isaiah, ages before, had given the marks by which the Messiah should be known (Is. 61 : 1-3 ; 29 : 18 ; 35 : 5-10), and these Jesus at once proceeded to display."—Giekie.

To the poor the Gospel is preached.—"Not the healing of the sick, nor even the raising of the dead, was so surprising as that a person, clothed with divine power, able to draw to him the homage of the rich and of the influential, should address himself specially to the poor. Wonders and miracles might be counterfeited, but a sympathy with suffering and helplessness, so tender, so laborious, and so long-continued, was not likely to be simulated. Such humanity was unworldly and divine."—Beecher.

A reed shaken by the wind.—"Reeds are abundant on the lower banks of the Jordan. The meaning is not simply 'you did not go without a motive,' but 'he whom you went to see was not a fickle, wavering character.'"—Schaff.

Before thy face.—In Mal. 3 : 1 the text is, "I send my messenger . . . before ME." In here applying it to himself Christ assumes to be one with God (John 10 : 30).

Least in the kingdom of God.—"Chief among all the sacred names of the old theocracy, [John] was yet second in his privileges to the least of those who were permitted to become citizens of the new one, as the least child is more than the highest servant."

—Abbott.

From the days of John.—A period, as is supposed, of not much more than a year.

Chap. XV.

Luke 7 : 29-32 ; Matt. 11 : 12-16.

J.C. 32.

the Baptist until now the kingdom of heaven suffereth violence, and the violent take it by force. For all the prophets and the law prophesied until John. And if ye will receive it, this is Elias, which was for to come. He that hath ears to hear, let him hear.

And all the people that heard him, and the publicans, justified God, being baptized with the baptism of John. But the Pharisees and lawyers rejected the counsel of God against themselves, being not baptized of him. And the Lord said, Whereunto then shall I liken the men of this generation ; and to what are they like ? They are like unto children sitting in the market-place, Suffereth violence.—"Or, is assaulted by storm, referring to the excitement and earnest endeavors awakened in the brief period since John appeared. And the violent—those making the effort—take it by force—actually succeed in entering in."—Schaff.

This is Elias.—"To a Jewish audience no honor could be so great as this, for Elijah was the greatest of all the prophets."—Geikie.

He that hath ears to hear.—An expression so often used by Jesus that it may be called, like his use of "verily," a mannerism. "It usually follows an important statement, intimating that he who has the discernment to understand will find a deeper meaning. Here it suggests : Christ meant more than that John was Elijah—that he himself was the Messiah."—Schaff.

And all the people that heard, etc.—This clause is not generally considered a part of the Lord's discourse, but a comment of the Evangelist. The common people and the publicans, who had been, many of them, baptized by John, heard this eulogy of their late teacher with delight. But the Pharisees contemned the counsel of God respecting themselves (Psalm 2), and rejected Jesus as they had rejected the baptism of John.

Whereunto shall I liken this generation ?—"Struck with these contrasts, Jesus drew an illustration from peevish children, who fretfully reject every effort of their fellows to delight or amuse them."—Farrar.

Children, "among the Jews, imitated in their sports what they saw done by others on great occasions, and particularly the customs in festivities, wherein the musician beginning a tune on and calling one to another, and saying, We have piped unto you, and ye have not danced ; we have mourned to you and ye have not wept. For John the Baptist came neither eating bread nor drinking wine ; and ye say, He hath a devil. The Son of Man is come eating and drinking ; and ye say, Behold a gluttonous man, and a winebibber, a friend of publicans and sinners ! But wisdom is justified of all her children.

Chap. XV. Luke 7 : 33-35 ; Matt. II : 16-19. J.C. 32.

his instrument, the company danced to his pipe. So also, in funerals, wherein the women beginning the mournful song (as the præfica of the Romans), the rest followed, lamenting and beating their breasts. These things the children acted and personated in the streets in play."—Burder.

Market-place.—The forum, or market-place, was usually a public market on one side only, the other sides of the area being occupied by temples, theatres, courts of justice, and other public buildings. Here the philosophers met and taught, here laws were promulgated, and here devotions, as well as amusements, occupied the populace. These places, in ancient times, were generally at the gate of the city, and were used for judicial trials, as places of business, and to accommodate those who were assembled merely to pass time away (Acts 16 : 19 ; 17 : 17 ; Matt. 20 : 3 ; Gen. 23 : 10, et seq. ; Deut. 21 : 19 ; 25 : 6, 7 ; Ruth 4 : 1, et seq. ; Ps. 127 : 5 ; Prov. 22 : 22 ; 24 : 7 ; Zech. 8 : 16.) Here the Pharisees, who desired salutations (Mark 12 : 38,) might meet country people, judges, magistrates, and dignitaries.—Calmet. Jahn.

A gluttonous man and a winebibber.—"Christ's example is opposed not to temperance, but to asceticism. Even his example must be followed in the light of common-sense. What he might do in one age or nation we may find perilous in a different state of society."—Eggleston.

Wisdom is justified.—"Wisdom can be here no other than the Divine Wisdom which had been revealed by John and Jesus, and in Jesus was personally manifested ; her children are those who are not only born of her, but related to her in that they possess a wise heart. . . . An antithesis of the preceding."—Lange. Probably the children of wisdom here are the same as the babes spoken of in Luke 10 : 21 ("not ignorant persons in themselves, but only childlike souls"—Lange), as contrasted with the Pharisees and lawyers (scribes), who considered themselves "wise and prudent," but from whom "these things" of heav-

Chap. XV.

Matt. 11 : 20, 21.

Midsummer, J.C. 32.

Then began he to upbraid the cities wherein most of his mighty works were done, because they repented not : Woe unto thee, Chorazin ! woe unto thee, Bethsaida ! for if the mighty works, which Christ upbraids the Cities. were done in you, had been done in Tyre and Sidon, they would have repented long ago in sackenly wisdom were "hid." So, after showing the folly of the unreasonable Pharisees, Jesus declares that true spiritual wisdom is recognized and accepted—justified—by those who have hearts simple enough to receive it.

Then began he.—Luke seems to record the denunciation of Christ on the Galilean cities, as made later, at the time when he finally left them. "But even at this stage partial predictions of judgment must have been uttered, which Matthew, according to his systematic plan, here records in their final and complete form."—Lange.

To upbraid.—"In all the reproofs of Jesus there is an exaltation and calmness which renders them more terrible than if they were the outburst of sudden passion. It is not angered ambition, but repulsed kindness, that speaks. There is sadness in the severity. The very denunciations seem to mourn."—Beecher.

Woe unto thee!—or Alas for thee!—they are exclamations of pity rather than of anger.

Chorazin.—A city near the lake of Galilee. Jerome says it was about two miles distant from Capernaum. Even its site is now a matter of conjecture. Some consider it identical with the ruins of Kerazeh. (See "The Land and the Book," Thomson, and Andrews's "Life of Our Lord," pp. 203-219, for full statement of the questions respecting the sites of the three cities.)

Bethsaida.—The word means a house of hunting or fishing. It was once the home of Peter, Andrew, and Philip. Dr. Thomson locates it at the northern end of the lake, on both sides of the inlet. The town on the eastern side of the Jordan was rebuilt and adorned by Philip the Tetrarch, and by him called Julias, after Cæsar's daughter. Here, in a magnificent tomb, the Tetrarch was buried.

Tyre and Sidon were rich trading cities on the east coast of the Mediterranean Sea, noted for their pride, luxury, and contempt of religion (Judges 18 : 7 ; Isaiah 23 : 9 ; Amos 1 : 9, 10). The latter city was founded by Sidon, the great grandson of Noah. The Greeks called the strip of verdant country where these cities lay Phœnicia—the Land of the Palm ; and its people are known in history as Phœnicians.—Abbott, condensed.

Chap. XV.

Matt. 11 : 21-27.

Midsummer, J.C. 32.

cloth and ashes. But I say unto you, It shall be more tolerable for Tyre and Sidon at the day of judgment, than for you. And thou, Capernaum, which art exalted unto heaven, shalt be brought down to hell : for if the mighty works, which have been done in thee, had been done in Sodom, it would have remained until this day. But I say unto you, That it shall be more tolerable for the land of Sodom in the day of judgment, than for thee.

At that time Jesus answered and said, I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, because thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes. Even so, Father ; for so it Sackcloth and ashes.—Sackcloth was a kind of coarse cloth woven of camel's hair (the same used by John the Baptist), usually worn to express mourning. "The costume of mourners resembled a sack with holes for the arms, and it was usual to strew ashes upon the head."—Schaff (Job 2 : 12 ; Est. 4 : 1 ; Jer. 6 : 26 ; Lam. 2 : 10). The words are expressive of deep sorrow and self-abhorrence (Job. 13 : 6).

Exalted to heaven.—A Hebrew metaphor expressive of great prosperity ; and also, probably, here meaning spiritual privilege in the presence and teaching of Jesus.

Brought down to hell.—To Hades, the place of the dead—a state of great desolation. This prediction was literally fulfilled, for in the wars between the Jews and Romans these three cities were totally destroyed. Nothing now remains of them but scattered heaps of ruins, and their exact location is a matter of dispute among travellers.

All things are delivered unto me of my Father.—"Language like this demands reverent thought. Who does not feel that such words could not fall from the lips of a sinful man, but only from one whose nature and life lay far above all human imperfection ? Who, even of the highest, or wisest, or best of human teachers, could invite all, without exception, to come to him, with promise that he would give true rest to their souls ? And who, in doing so, could speak of it as a thing apparent to all who heard him, that he was meek and lowly in heart ? Who would think of claiming the stately dignity of sole representa-

Chap. XV.

Matt. II : 27-30 ; Luke 7 : 36.

J.C. 32.

seemed good in thy sight. All things are delivered unto me of my Father : and no man knoweth the Son, but the Father ; neither knoweth any man the Father, save the Son, and he to whomsoever the Son will reveal him. Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me ; for I am meek and lowly in heart : and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light.

And one of the Pharisees desired him that he would tive of the Unseen God, and who could speak of God as his Father in the same way as Jesus ? And who would dare to link himself with the Eternal in a Communion so awful, and an inter-relation so absolute ? He makes us feel that as we listen we are face to face with the Incarnate Divine."—Geikie. See this thought more expanded in Bushnell's "Nature and the Supernatural," pp. 288-292.

Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden.—

"Yea, Lord, I come to thee!
Weighed down with misery,
By sin oppressed ;
Smooth thou my rugged road,
Lift thou my weary load—
Give me thy Rest.

"Cleanse thou my leprous stains,
Heal thou the bitter pains
That rack my breast ;
Speak to my spirit Peace,
Bid the wild tempest cease—
Give me thy Rest."

Edmund Kirke.

Desired him that he would eat with him.—Where this event occurred is uncertain. Some have supposed it took place at Nain, others at Capernaum. We incline to the opinion that it was at the former place, and directly after the raising of the widow's son. The local notoriety that act would have given to Jesus might naturally have moved a leading Pharisee to show him the sort of condescending hospitality we see in the conduct of Simon. If this supposition be correct, the "woman which was a sinner" had heard his loving invitation to come unto him, and been led by it to fall in penitence at his feet.

Chap. XV.

Luke 7 : 36, 37.

Midsummer, J.C. 32.

eat with him. And he went into the Pharisee's house, and sat down to meat. And, behold, a woman in the city, which was a sinner, when she knew that Jesus sat at meat in the Pharisee's

Dines with a Pharisee.

Eat with him.—"The people of the East take but two regular meals a day—i.e., a hearty breakfast early in the morning, before going to their business, and the principal meal at night, after they come home. Rich people often eat a regular meal at noon (Gen. 43 : 16) ; but the more common practice is to take some light luncheon in an informal manner."—Van Lennep ; "Bible Lands."

Sat down—More accurately, reclined. The table was but slightly elevated from the ground, and the guests reclined about it on low couches, which were placed around three of its sides, an opening being left at the fourth side for the entrance of the servants who served at the meal. Ordinarily only three persons, but sometimes four or five, reclined on each couch. The couches were provided with cushions, on which the guest rested upon his left elbow, his right arm being free, and his feet extended outward from the table, so that one standing at them would be behind him. Next to the host was the place of honor, and the guest occupying it, being near enough to rest his head on or near the breast of the one behind him, was said to "lie in his bosom" (John 1 : 18 ; 23 ; 21 : 20). Knives and forks were not used, and each person took his food with his hand from a common dish. A piece of bread was held between the thumb and two forefingers, and was dipped either into a bowl of melted grease (this was the "sop," John 13 : 26) or into a dish of meat, whence a piece was conveyed to the mouth between two layers of bread. When guests were invited, more than ordinary ceremony was used, and it was to the neglect of this ceremony on the part of Simon that Jesus alluded. On such occasions the visitor was received with a kiss, water was produced to wash his feet, and his head, and often his beard and feet, were perfumed with oil.

A sinner.—"A prostitute. She was, even up to this time, a prostitute, and this was the first manifestation of her penitence."—Alford. "That she entered the house uninvited is not strange. In the free life of the East the presence of uninvited guests, not at the table, but in the room, is not uncommon."—Abbott. "It was counted a piece of hospitality that access to a house should be unusually free when an entertainment was given ; and, in fact, many repaired to strange houses on such occasions. Thus, from one cause or another, there were always many people hanging about the court, and the outer parts of the guest chamber, which was wholly open in front."—Kittó. The same custom still

Chap. XV.

Luke 7 : 37-39.

Midsummer, J.C. 32.

house, brought an alabaster box of ointment, and stood at his feet behind him weeping, and began to wash his feet with tears, and did wipe them with the hairs of her head, and kissed his feet, and anointed them with the ointment.

Now when the Pharisee which had bidden him saw prevails in the East. (See "Narrative of a Mission to the Jews," quoted in Trench, On the Parables.)

An alabaster box.—A vase or cruse. Alabaster is a beautiful white, translucent stone, similar to marble, but more brittle. It ferments with acids, calcines in fire, and when powdered and placed over a flame, appears in rolling masses like a fluid. It was highly valued for the preservation of ointments. "Unguents," says Pliny, "keep best in alabaster." The vessels usually had a long neck, and were sealed at the top.

Ointment "was used in the East, and still is, not only in religious consecration, but also in the toilet. The hair and face were both anointed, a shining skin being accounted an element of beauty (Ruth 3 : 3 ; Eccles. 9 : 8 ; Amos, 6 : 6). To be without anointing was a sign of mourning (2 Sam. 14 : 2)."—Abbott. "The ointment here has a peculiar interest, as being the offering by a penitent of that which had been an accessory in her unhallowed work of sin."—Alford.

Kissed his feet.—Among ancient nations kissing the feet was a token of deep reverence and earnest supplication. Seneca relates that "C. Cæsar gave wine to Pompey Pennus, whom he had pardoned, and then, on his returning thanks, presented his left foot for him to kiss." Xenophon speaks of similar instances. From this arose the custom of kissing the Pope's foot.

When the Pharisee saw it.—"Her tears dropped on his feet. That she intended this is unlikely. Genuine emotion is not intentional ; only unbidden tears are precious. Her intention was to kiss and anoint his feet, but coming for that purpose the precious ointment of her penitent heart first flowed from her weeping eyes."—Schaff. "That she was not spurned was to her trembling heart a sign of grace and favor. When the Pharisee beheld, without sympathy, the forbearance of Jesus, it stirred up his heart against his guest. . . . He could not conceive of a Divinity of compassion. God, to his imagination, was only an enlarged Pharisee, careful of his own safety, and careless of those made wretched by their sins. These thoughts were interpreted upon his countenance by a look of displeasure and contempt."—Beecher.

Chap. XV.

Luke 7 : 39-43.

Midsummer, J.C. 32.

it, he spake within himself, saying, This man, if he were a prophet, would have known who and what manner of woman this is that toucheth him ; for she is a sinner.

And Jesus answering said unto him, Simon, I have somewhat to say unto thee. And he saith, Master, say on.

There was a certain creditor which had two debtors : the one owed five hundred pence, and the other fifty. And when they had nothing to pay, he frankly forgave them both. Tell me, therefore, which of them will love him most ?

Simon answered and said, I suppose that he to whom he forgave most.

That toucheth him.—The Pharisees were rendered ceremonially unclean by the touch of an impure person. To this technical defilement Simon objected.

Jesus answering.—Answering the look, and the unspoken thought, of the Pharisee.

A certain creditor, or money-lender. "We scarcely know which we should most admire—the skill with which he causes the accuser to appear as witness against himself, or the moderation with which he spares his host, inasmuch as he forbears any severe censure."—Van Oosterzee.

Pence—Denarii ; Roman silver coin then in circulation in Palestine. One denarius, it would seem from Matt. 20 : 1-13, was then the ordinary pay for a day's labor. Fifty were equal to about nine dollars.

Debtors.—"The debt is sin, or, strictly speaking here, the sense of sin, since gratitude for forgiveness of sins must be based upon that, not upon actual guilt, which we cannot measure."—Schaff.

Frankly.—Freely, or without any compensation. The only forgiveness adapted to the case, since both were entirely unable to pay.

Which of them will love him most?—"It is possible that this Pharisee himself had been healed by Jesus, and that, not feeling any true gratitude, he thought that he might acquit himself of his obligation by his invitation."—Kendrick's Olshausen.

Simon answered.—"There is a touch of supercilious patronage, of surprised indifference to the whole matter, in the word he uses. I presume that he to whom he forgave most."—Farrar.

Chap. XV.

Luke 7 : 43-47.

Midsummer, J.C. 32.

And he said unto him, Thou hast rightly judged.

And he turned to the woman, and said unto Simon, Seest thou this woman? I entered into thine house, thou gavest me no water for my feet : but she hath washed my feet with tears, and wiped them with the hairs of her head. Thou gavest me no kiss : but this woman, since the time I came in, hath not ceased to kiss my feet. My head with oil thou didst not anoint : but this woman hath anointed my feet with ointment. Wherefore I say unto thee, Her sins, which are many,

And said unto Simon.—"He thus brings face to face the two persons whose cases he had set forth in the parable. Possibly Simon had hitherto avoided looking at her or, in any case, had looked down upon her ; now, according to his own verdict, he must look up to her."—Schaff. In the answer to Simon are allusions to several customs of respect to guests among the Jews, already explained, which Simon had omitted, perhaps for fear that he might be regarded as too intimate a friend, or as a disciple of Jesus.

No water for my feet.—As sandals were worn which covered only the sole of the foot, frequent washings were necessary. It was customary to remove the sandals and bathe the feet whenever one entered a house, and in omitting to provide water for this purpose, Simon had neglected one of the commonest acts of hospitality. In Hindoostan, at the present time, when a superior enters the house of an inferior, the latter brings water, and washes his feet.

With ointment.—"This ointment was a mixture of various aromatics, and was therefore far more costly and precious than the oil commonly used for anointing the head. Her conduct, compared with that of Simon, was therefore more striking. He did not even give the common oil for his head usual on such occasions. She had applied to his feet a far more precious and valuable unguent. He, therefore, showed comparatively little love ; she showed much."—Barnes.

Wherefore I say unto thee.—"Christ does not say, 'Wherefore her sins are forgiven.' The manifestations of the woman's love are alleged to be not the cause of the forgiveness, but the occasion of the teaching."—Abbott.

Her sins are forgiven.—"That he should claim to forgive sins had already raised a charge of blasphemy against him, and

Chap. XV.

Luke 7 : 47-50.

Midsummer, J.C. 32.

are forgiven for she loved much : but to whom little is forgiven, the same loveth little.

And he said unto her, Thy sins are forgiven.

And they that sat at meat with him began to say within themselves, Who is this that forgiveth sins also ?

And he said to the woman, Thy faith hath saved thee ; go in peace.

it did not pass unnoticed now. But the time had not yet come for open hostility, and his words, in the meanwhile, were duly treasured up to be used against him hereafter."—Geikie.

And he said unto her.—"With ineffable grace Jesus turns from the Pharisee, silent under this rebuke, to the woman. 'Thy sins are forgiven.' The effect produced upon the company shows that these words were no mere pious phrases, but were uttered with an authority which a mere man had no right to assume."—Beecher. "It was only in their secret thoughts that the guests—rather it seems in astonishment than in wrath—ventured to question this calm and simple claim to a more than earthly attribute."—Farrar.

For she loved much.—"We may say, It is light, for the sun is risen ; but we may also say, The sun is risen, for it is light. So in this passage, for may—and according to what precedes must—mean : 'I say unto thee that her many sins are forgiven, as thou must infer from this, that she loved much.'"—Godet.

Thy faith hath saved thee.—"Let it be observed that it is not said thy love hath saved thee. Here, as in every other part of the New Testament, faith is put forward as the key to salvation."—Kyle. And yet "Faith without works is dead," or, as Jesus himself put it, "The tree is known by its fruits." If here he says, "Go in peace," to others, who had shown less gratitude, he said, "Go, and sin no more !"

Go in peace : literally, go into peace.—"First faith, then forgiveness, then love from the sense of forgiveness, then abiding peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ (Rom. 5 : 1). Christ is indeed the friend of sinners."—Riddle. "The general lesson which her story inculcates is one which forms a central doctrine of Christ's revelation ; I mean the lesson that cold and selfish hypocrisy is in the sight of God as hateful as more glaring sin ; the lesson that a life of sinful and impenitent respectability may be no less deadly and dangerous than a life of open shame."—Farrar.

CHAPTER XVI.

A CIRCUIT IN GALILEE.

AND it came to pass afterward, that he went throughout every city and village, preaching and shewing the glad tidings of the kingdom of God : and the twelve were with him, and certain women, which had been Throughout every city and village.—"Whether this journey was a continuation of the circuit from Nain is not certain, though most probable."—Andrews. The mention of "every city and village" implies a journey of considerable duration. "A very thorough missionary tour. Christ neither dreaded the large places nor despised the small ones."—Abbott.

The twelve.—"The twelve were not all in indigence. The mother of John ministered to Jesus of her substance ; Peter and Andrew had a house at Capernaum ; Matthew gave a feast to the Master. But it is clear, nevertheless, that the apostles belonged to the lower class, and were to the Jew at Jerusalem despised provincials, whose very speech was open to ridicule."—De Pressensé. "In these journeys he was attended by the twelve, and by a group of loving women, attracted to him by relationship, or by his having healed them of various diseases ; who provided, in part, at least, for his wants, and those of his followers. . . . The names of some of the group of women who thus attended Jesus have been handed down as a fitting tribute to their devotion, while those of the men who followed him, with the exception of the twelve apostles, are lost."—Geikie. "In the company of pious women who followed Jesus, even to the foot of the cross, were Salome, the mother of James and John, and Mary, the mother of James the Less. Thus, even in the very dawn of the new religion, appears that type of the Christian mother, one of the most beautiful creations of the Gospel."—De Pressensé.

Certain women.—"Such admixture of the sexes was in utter violation of the customs of the country. It would hardly be tolerated there even now. Promiscuous assemblies of men and women are unknown ; and even when a crowd collects to see some sight or gaze at a show, the sexes are always grouped in two distinct and separate portions. A man never walks in the street by the side of his wife or daughter, but when he happens to be out in their company is sure to keep several paces in advance of them. . . . In some parts of the country, and

Chap. XVI.

Luke 8 : 2, 3.

Autumn, J.C. 32.

healed of evil spirits and infirmities,—Mary called Magdalene, out of whom went seven devils, Joanna, even among the Christians, a woman may not show herself unveiled before her father-in-law, and even before her own husband. She never speaks to the former except through a third person, and should he ask her a question, she must whisper her answer to some one who will repeat it aloud to him.”—Van Lennep's Bible Lands. “To this add that the Jewish rabbis did not allow the law to be taught to women; that to the present day in the East women are not allowed an education; and that even in England and America the education of women has been accomplished only after much and bitter opposition, and the reader will have some conception how radical was the movement which Christ inaugurated in taking women with him as disciples. They did not teach. Whether this was because it was not Christ's will that women should ever be public teachers in the church, or because in that age and condition of society their teaching would not have been received, and the attempt would have been idle, is a question to be determined by other passages of Scripture. Little can be drawn from the mere negative fact. Subsequently, women did become recognized religious teachers, though never to any considerable extent” (Acts 18 : 26 ; 21 : 9 ; Phil. 4 : 3).”—Abbott.

Mary of Magdala.—Mary is commonly supposed to have been an abandoned character, but of this there is no evidence. From this notice it is to be inferred that she was a person of some property. “Mary appears to have belonged to the village of Magdala, or Migdola—the Tower—about three miles north of Tiberias, on the water's edge, at the south-east corner of the plain of Gennesareth. It is now represented by the few wretched hovels which form the Mohammedan village of El-Mejdel, with a solitary thorn-bush beside it, as the last trace of the rich groves and orchards, amidst which it was, doubtless, embowered in the days of our Lord.”—Geikie. “Whatever doubt may rest upon her history or the origin of her name, she clung to Jesus with a fidelity that could not be surpassed, an affection which seems to have grown more earnest and fearless with danger, and which, during his crucifixion and after his burial, places her even before his own mother in intensity of self-devotion.”—Beecher.

Seven devils.—The Jews supposed the demons who possessed men were the spirits of mortals who, after death, haunted the earth, and, under the direction of Satan, worked evil to mankind.

Joanna, the wife of Chuza.—Of whom nothing else is known. It has been surmised that Chuza was the court lord

Chap. XVI.

Luke 8 : 3 ; Matt. 12 : 22, 23.

J.C. 32.

the wife of Chuza, Herod's steward, and Susanna, and many others, which ministered unto him of their substance.

And they went into a house. Then was brought unto him one possessed with a devil, blind, and dumb : and he healed him, insomuch that the blind and dumb both spake and saw. And all the people were amazed, and said, Is not this the Son of David ?

whose son Jesus healed, and who believed with all his house (John 4 : 46-54). It is also noted as one of the coincidences confirmatory of the truth of the New Testament that Herod, the son of one of whose courtiers was healed by Christ, and whose steward's wife was a disciple, heard much of Christ, and was perplexed by what he heard of his wonderful works (Matt. 14 : 1, 2).

Herod's steward.—This Herod was Antipas. (See note, p. 122.)

Susanna.—Not mentioned elsewhere.

And many others.—"Mary, the mother of James the Less, was another one of these ministering women ; and it is an illustration of the extreme paucity of names among the Jews, and the confusion that results from it, that there are, perhaps, as many as eleven Marys in the Gospel history alone."—Farrar.

Into a house.—"This indicates a return to Capernaum, as the succeeding events probably took place there."—Schaff. "There was to be one more day of opposition—more bitter, more dangerous, more personal, more implacable—one day of open and final rupture between Jesus and the Pharisaic spies from Jerusalem—before he yielded for a time to the deadly hatred of his enemies, and retired to find in heathen countries the rest which he could find no longer in the rich fields and in the green hills of Gennesareth."—Farrar.

Blind and dumb.—The only instance of this nature that is mentioned in the Gospels.

Son of David.—"So far as we know, this was the first time that this specially Messianic title had been given him ; nor does it clearly appear what there was in this miracle that should lead them thus to speak. It would, however, naturally arouse the jealousy of the Pharisees, and make them the more eager to oppose him."—Andrews. "By that phrase was meant Messiahship. The spark had fallen. The fire was kindled: The scribes seemed thrown off their guard by the extremity of Chap. XVI. Matt. 12 : 24-26 ; Mark 3 : 22, 23.

J.C. 32.

But when the Pharisees and the scribes which came down from Jerusalem heard it, they said, This fellow hath Beelzebub, and doth not cast out devils but by Beelzebub the prince of the devils.

And Jesus knew their thoughts, and he called them unto him and said unto them in parables, How can Satan cast out Satan ? Every kingdom divided against itself is brought to desolation ; and every city or house divided against itself shall not stand : and if Satan cast out Satan, danger. Then it was that they blindly charged him with being a minion of infernal influence."—Beecher.

By Beelzebub.—This is said by the scribes who came down from Jerusalem. " Their presence at this time may be ascribed to the powerful impression which the raising of the widow's son at Nain had made upon all who heard of it, and the consequent necessity on the part of his enemies of taking some steps to counteract it. It is not improbable that they came as a formal deputation to watch his proceedings, and to organize his enemies against him throughout Galilee. Doubtless their calumny that he was aided by Beelzebub, was caught up and reiterated by the Pharisees of Capernaum. As the fact of the healing was beyond dispute, they could only assert that it was done through the aid of the prince of the devils. This ascription of his miracles to Satanic agency marks a decided progress in Pharisaic hostility. Heretofore they had said of him that he was a Sabbath-breaker and a blasphemer ; now they say that he is in league with evil spirits. And this charge reached much farther than this particular miracle. It was virtually ascribing all that he said and did to a diabolical origin, and made the Spirit of God that rested upon him to be the spirit of Beelzebub ; and hence the severity of his language in reply (Matt. 12 : 34)."—Andrews. " Beelzebub was the chief of foreign heathen deities. To charge Jesus with acting under his inspiration was an appeal to the national fanaticism. The rigor of Christ's reply manifests his sense of the danger of such an imputation, and explains also the solemn and judicial severity with which he immediately turned upon his assailants."—Beecher.

If Satan cast out Satan.—" In a few calm words Jesus scattered the hideous sophism to atoms. He showed them the gross absurdity of supposing that Satan could be his own enemy."—Farrar.

Chap. XVI. Matt. 12 : 26-31 ; Mark 3 : 27-29.

J.C. 32.

he is divided against himself ; how shall then his kingdom stand ? And if I by Beelzebub cast out devils, by whom do your children cast them out ? therefore they shall be your judges. But if I cast out devils by the Spirit of God, then the kingdom of God is come unto you. Or else, how can one enter into a strong man's house, and spoil his goods, except he first bind the strong man ? and then he will spoil his house. He that is not with me is against me ; and he that gathereth not with me scattereth abroad. Wherefore I say unto you, Blasphemy against the Holy Spirit. All manner of sin and blasphemy shall be forgiven unto men : but the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost shall not be forgiven unto men. And who-

Your children—Your disciples. “ If casting out devils is an evidence of a league with Satan, then this holds good against your scholars, who profess to do it also.”—Schaff. That the Jews practised exorcism is shown by Mark 9 : 38 ; Luke 9 : 49 ; Acts 19 : 13 ; and Josephus, Ant. 8 : 2-5 ; 7 : 3-6, and from the early fathers, generally.

He that is not with me.—Between Beelzebub and the Spirit of God there can be no neutral ground. Whatever the good deeds of evil men, or the failures and sins of good men, every soul in its general life tends Godward or Devilward, is “ with” Christ or “ against” him.

The blasphemy against the Holy Ghost.—Perhaps no passage in the Scriptures has more perplexed commentators, or given rise to a greater variety of interpretations, than this. The different views in regard to the sin it expresses are thus clearly and briefly stated by Schaff : “ 1. A particular sin—that of deliberately, persistently, and maliciously, in the presence of proper evidence, attributing the works of Christ (whether of physical healing or spiritual deliverance) to diabolical agency, instead of acknowledging the Holy Spirit as the agent (Comp. Mark 3 : 36). . . . 2. A state of determined, wilful opposition, in the presence of light, to the power of the Holy Spirit, virtually a moral suicide, a killing of the conscience, so that the human spirit is absolutely insusceptible to the influences of the Holy Spirit. Vers. 33-35 favor this view, as also the correct reading in Mark 3 : 29—‘ guilty of eter-

Chap. XVI. Matt. 12 : 32-35 ; Mark 3 : 29. Autumn, J.C. 32.

soever speaketh a word against the Son of man, it shall be forgiven him : but whosoever speaketh against the Holy Ghost, hath never forgiveness, neither in this world, neither in the world to come, but he is in danger of eternal damnation : Because they said, He hath an unclean spirit. Either make the tree good, and his fruit good ; or else make the tree corrupt, and his fruit corrupt : for the tree is known by his fruit. O generation of vipers, how can ye, being evil, speak good things ? for out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh. A good man out of the good treasure of the nal sin.' " " It is doubtless correctly described rather as a state than an act (Alford in loco). . . . But it is certainly significant that Christ warns of it only those who, in the Church of God, deliberately oppose God's cause."—Abbott. " The reason why this sin is not pardonable is that the person whose heart is so base as to defy and blaspheme God with a mind fully informed, has lost the power of amendment. No human soul that has a desire to be better can be said to have reached this state of hopeless and defiant blasphemy."—Eggleston.

Cast them out.—" I infer that the children of the Pharisees did really cast out devils. . . . The difficulty has arisen mainly from forgetting that miracles, as such, are no test of truth, but have been permitted to, and prophesied of, false religions and teachers."—Alford.

Against the Son of Man. . . . It shall be forgiven him.—Jesus takes pains to remove all personal motives from his terrible accusation against the religious teachers of his nation. He did not denounce them for their opposition to him, but for their violation of their own best instincts and highest intuitions.

Either make the tree good, etc.—" The dependence of the words is this : ' You say, I work by the devil,' saith Christ ; ' but you do not see any other work of mine beside this miracle, which looks like a work of the devil : you see I go about doing good ; I exhort people to repentance ; I show them the way to heaven. These are no works which the devils used to do. Therefore, either say that I do all this in the name of Beelzebub too, or else acknowledge that I do my miracles by the power of God ; for men judge of the quality of the mind by the common actions or habits of the life, as they do of trees by the fruits which they produce, be they good or evil.' "—John Hales.

heart bringeth forth good things : and an evil man out of the evil treasure bringeth forth evil things. But I say unto you, That every idle word that men shall speak, they shall give account thereof in the day of judgment. For by thy words thou shalt be justified, and by thy words thou shalt be condemned.

Every idle word.—According to Dr. Hitchcock, our words, our actions, and even our thoughts, make an indelible impression on the universe. He gives a curious and ingenious scheme by which these impressions may be transmitted and recorded. (1) By Mechanical reactions. The air is one library, on whose pages are forever written all that man has ever said or woman whispered. On the solid earth not a footprint that does not permanently change the whole globe. (2) By Optical reactions. Taking all the worlds together, they at this moment contain a vast panorama of the world's entire history. The universe encloses the pictures of the past like an indestructible record. (3) By Electric reactions. There is an electric influence excited by every muscular effort, or thought passing through the brain. There may be no spot in the universe where the knowledge of our most secret thoughts and purposes may not be transmitted on the lightning's wing. (4) By Chemical reactions. The photographic influence pervades all nature, and we cannot say where it stops. (5) By Mental reactions. Indirectly through matter, directly by the influence of mind upon mind. If we admit that mind acts upon other minds, can we tell how far this influence extends? Our lightest thoughts and feeblest volitions may reach the outer limit of intellectual life, and their consequences meet us in distant worlds and far down the track of eternity.

Shall give account.—"Not surely that playful words may not be spoken, nor that men shall keep themselves on a perpetual strain about their words. But that the idle word is an index of what a man has within him (see preceding verses), and that in this sense no act or word is unimportant. A man's sense of accountability should extend even to trifles."—Eggleston.

By thy words thou shalt be justified.—"Declared righteous, acquitted, not made righteous. The word never has the latter sense in the New Testament. The index of character will be the words, not hypocritical ones, although even these speedily reveal their true character, but those coming from the heart (Mark. 3 : 34, 35)."—Schaff.

Chap. XVI.

Matt. 12 : 37-40.

Autumn, J.C. 32.

Then certain of the scribes and of the Pharisees answered, saying, Master, we would see a sign from thee. But he answered and said unto them, An evil and adulterous generation seeketh after a sign ; and there shall no sign be given to it, but the sign of the prophet Jonas : for as Jonas

The Pharisees seek a Sign.

Certain of the Scribes and Pharisees answered.—"They saw their blunder. They had not carried the people with them. They had aroused in Jesus a spirit of sovereignty before which they quailed. They had thrown the javelin, but it had missed, and they stood disarmed. They then attempted to recover their position . . . with an affectation of reasonableness and devotion."—Beecher.

A sign from thee.—Some supernatural appearance in the air (Matt. 16 : 1). They ascribed what he had done to the power of Satan ; but this new evidence, they implied, would convince them. Some such sign they appear to have expected from the coming Messiah. From Luke 11 : 16, we see that the sign they asked was one from heaven. They had witnessed several miracles on earth ; now they demand the appearance of some celestial one, which would be the strongest test of his pretensions. Lightfoot says that the signs they were taught by their traditions to expect from the Messiah were that he should raise the old prophets and the old holy famous men from the dead ; and bring down manna from heaven (John 6 : 30). Or they might require a sign founded on Dan. 7 : 13, 14, in which the Son of Man is mentioned, as coming with the clouds of heaven, and reducing all nations under his dominion. "In the Jewish superstition it was held that demons and false gods could give signs on earth, but only the true God signs from heaven."—Alford.

The Prophet Jonas.—No sign was worked for their benefit ; but they were referred to one already provided, in the prophet Jonah, who aroused the Ninevites to repentance, and King Solomon, whose wisdom illumined the darkened mind of the Queen of the South ; while a greater than Jonah, or even than Solomon the Great King, could make no impression on their hard hearts. Olshausen (Kendrick's Trans.) suggests several points of similarity between Jonah and Jesus : (1) both "signs" had reference to the persons themselves ; (2) both the deliverance of Jonah and the resurrection of Jesus were unseen signs given only to the faithful, and concealed from the vulgar eyes of the adulterous generation ; (3) the belly of the fish and the heart of the earth are parallel contrasts to the demanded sign from heaven.

was three days and three nights in the whale's belly, so shall the Son of man be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth. The men of Nineveh shall rise ^{Jesus reproves them.} in judgment with this generation, and shall condemn it : because they repented at the preaching of Jonas ; and, behold, a greater than Jonas is here. The queen of the South shall rise up in the judgment with this generation, and shall condemn it : for she came from the uttermost parts of the earth to hear the wisdom of Solomon ; and, behold, a greater than Solomon is here. When the unclean spirit is gone out of a man, he walketh through dry places, seeking rest, and findeth none. Then he saith, I will return into my house from whence I came out ; and when

He adds : " Moreover, the Lord had not yet distinctly spoken of his death. The whale, therefore, remained in proper enigmatical obscurity . . . a hierograph the deciphering of which was reserved for the future."

The whale's belly.—In Jonah 1 : 17, the Hebrew word here rendered a whale, is "a great fish." And the Greek word fish means, in general, any large fish. A certain species of white shark, of an immense size, is found in the Mediterranean, whose throat will easily admit a man's body. But the whale's throat is capable of admitting little more than the arm of a man.

Queen of the South.—In 1 Kings 10 : 1, her kingdom is called Sheba, which was a province of Arabia Felix, to the south or south-east of Judea. Josephus, however, says that she took her title from Saba, a city of Meral, an island in the Nile, the queens of which were afterwards called Candace. The Abyssinians claim her as the ancestress of their kings.

Rise up in the judgment.—An allusion to the custom among the Jews and Romans for witnesses to rise from their seats when accusing or giving evidence against criminals.

Through dry places.—The common notion was that evil spirits haunted dry and desert places.

Seeking rest and finding none.—"Strange ! a fallen, corrupt spirit can have no rest but in a polluted human heart : the corruption of the one is suited to the pollution of the other ; and thus like cleaves to like."—Adam Clarke.

Chap. XVI. Matt. 12 : 44-46 ; Mark 3 : 31.

J.C. 32.

he is come, he findeth it empty, swept, and garnished. Then goeth he, and taketh with himself seven other spirits more wicked than himself, and they enter in and dwell there : and the last state of that man is worse than the first. Even so shall it be also unto this wicked generation.

While he yet talked to the people, behold, his mother and his brethren stood without, desiring to speak with

That man.—Reference is here made to the whole nation of Jews. Jesus compares them to a demoniac, who, after an interval of quiet, relapses into greater violence. Since their return from Babylon, the Jews had not fallen into idolatry, and, therefore, did not consider themselves liable to the anger of God ; but Jesus says that seven demons are about to enter them, and their last state will be worse than the first. According to Josephus, "the character of the Jews, just before their final destruction by the Romans, was the vilest that can be conceived. They pressed on to their own ruin as if they were possessed by legions of devils, and wrought up to the last degree of madness." "It would prove with this generation as with a man from whom an unclean spirit has for a time gone out. . . . The Reformation under John, and under [Jesus] himself, was only temporary ; the nation would fall back again to its old sinful ways, and become worse than ever."—Geikie.

His mother and his brethren.—"The visit of his mother and brethren is mentioned by all the Synoptists ; and that it occurred during, or immediately after, the reply to the Pharisees, appears from Matt. 12 : 46. Luke (8 : 19) has it in another connection, but without any note of time. It is, perhaps, fairly inferrible that they now resided at Capernaum."—Andrews. Greswell, 2 : 270, admitting this, still affirms that "they had no house of their own, or none in which our Lord was living along with them." Mark 6 : 3, which no doubt refers to a subsequent period, shows that his sisters, at least, were still residents of Nazareth. "As yet they were out of sympathy with him : they knew him not, did not fully believe in him : they said, 'He is beside himself.' It was needful that they should be henceforth taught by several decisive proofs that he was not of them ; that this was no longer the carpenter, the brother of James and Joses and Judas and Simon, but the Son of God, the Saviour of the world."—Farrar. "Very possibly the simple household at Nazareth, Chap. XVI. Luke 8 : 19-21 ; Mark 3 : 31-35 ; Matt. 12 : 47 50.

him, and could not come at him for the press, for the Christ's true multitude sat about him. Then one said Brethren, unto him, Behold, thy mother and thy brethren stand without, desiring to speak with thee. But he answered and said unto him that told him, Who is my mother ? and who are my brethren ? And he looked round about on them which sat about him, and stretched forth his hand toward his disciples, and said, Behold my mother and my brethren ! They are these which hear the word of God and do it. For whosoever shall do the will of my Father which is in heaven, the same is my brother, and sister, and mother.

who, like other Jews, must have looked on the Rabbis with superstitious reverence, and have shrunk from questioning anything they said, had innocently accepted the insinuation that he was really out of his mind, as a result of being possessed. Prejudiced in favor of the common idea of the Messiah as a national hero, at the head of Jewish armies, they had not risen to any higher conception, and felt impelled by every motive to interfere, and, if possible, put a stop to what seemed to them an unaccountable course of action on his part. It was only about ten hours' distance from Nazareth to Capernaum, over the hills ; they would go and see for themselves ; and so, Mary, and the brothers and sisters of Jesus—the whole household, for Joseph was dead—set out for Peter's house."—Geikie.

He looked round about on them.—"Then it was that he seems to have drawn himself up and looked round upon the crowd with an eye of love veiled by sorrow. There must have been something striking in his manner of speaking, that should lead the Evangelists always to describe his personal appearance in that act. They were not anatomists, nor close students of details ; they mentioned that which struck them forcibly. It was not a glance, a flash, but a long and piercing gaze ; 'he looked round about on them which sat about him ;' and then, stretching forth his hand toward his disciples, he said, 'Behold my mother and my brethren !'"—Beecher. "Apart from anything supernatural, there seems to have been in the presence of Jesus a spell of mystery and of majesty which even his most ruthless and hardened enemies acknowledged, and before which they involuntarily bowed."—Farrar.

CHAPTER XVII.

THE SEVEN PARABLES.

THE same day went Jesus out of the house, and began again to teach by the sea side. And great multitudes out of every city were gathered together unto him, so that he entered into a ship, and sat in the sea ; and

The Seven Parables.—In commenting on the parables recorded in this chapter, Andrews remarks :

" This teaching in parables plainly marks an onward step in the Lord's ministry. He had now testified of himself both in word and deed, had manifested himself as the Messiah ; and it was becoming apparent to him that the great body of the people had no discernment of his divine character and mission, and would not receive him, however they might for a time be personally attracted to him, and marvel at his words and works. The Pharisees, the spiritual leaders both at Jerusalem and in Galilee, had taken decided steps against him ; and though with the common people his popularity seemed now at its height, he discerned that there was no root of faith, and that most followed him through motives of wonder, or idle curiosity. He could, therefore, well speak of them (Matt. 13 : 13-15) as hearing his words, and yet not understanding them ; as seeing his works and not perceiving their significance. To them he could not explain the mysteries of the Kingdom. He must use the form of the parable which, hiding its meaning from the careless and foolish, opened it to the diligent and wise seeker after truth."

Sat in the sea.—Speaking of the lake shore in the vicinity of Capernaum, Dr. Thomson says, " I was delighted to find small creeks or inlets between this and Tell Hum, where the ship could ride in safety only a few feet from the shore, and where the multitudes, seated on both sides and before the boat, could listen without distraction or fatigue. As if on purpose to furnish seats, the shore on both sides of these narrow inlets is piled up with smooth boulders of basalt."—The Land and the Book. (See note on p. 135.) Macgregor, author of The Rob Roy on the Jordan, relates how he conversed with an Arab on shore while he paddled his canoe along on the water, and says, " It was very remarkable how distinctly every word was heard, even at 300 yards off ; and it was very easy to comprehend how in this clear air a preacher sitting in a boat could easily be heard by a vast multitude standing upon the shore."

Ch. XVII. Matt. 13 : 1, 2 ; Mark 4 : 1, 2 ; Luke 8 : 4.

J.C. 32.

the whole multitude was by the sea on the land. And he taught them many things by parables, and said unto them in his doctrine, Parables.—The parable has been defined by Alford as “a serious narration within the limits of probability, of a course of action pointing to some moral or spiritual truth.” Schaff remarks that “in the widest sense it includes all illustrations from analogy, but in the strict sense it differs from a mere simile or metaphor, which is not a narration ; from a fable (two fables occur in the Old Testament ; Judg. 4 : 8–15 ; 2 Kings 14 : 9 ; but both are given as purely human productions), which is not within the limits of probability, nor designed to teach spiritual truth ; from a myth, which is told as the truth, while the design of the parable is evident ; from a proverb, which is briefer and which may not contain a figure ; from an allegory, which is self-interpreting, the imaginary persons receiving names, performing actions which declare the meaning, so that allegory is less natural than parable.” (On type, symbol, and allegory, as elements of the parable, see Lange, Matthew, pp. 234–235.) “The fable restricts itself to earthly virtues or commendable qualities. . . . The parable introduces us into a higher, a purely moral domain.” —Kendrick's Olshausen.

The origin of parables, so far as can be traced, appears to have been with the Hebrews. It is most certain that the oldest specimen of this kind of writing and speaking is to be found in their Scriptures, which carry us far beyond the earliest fragments of antiquity, into the first ages of the world. Our Saviour's parables were generally short narratives of some event or fact, real or fictitious, in which a continued comparison is carried on, frequently between natural and spiritual objects ; and under this similitude some important truth, moral or religious, is conveyed. They have the advantages of being easily comprehended—especially by uncultivated minds—of commanding attention, exciting curiosity, reproving vice, and rectifying error by insinuating truth. Our Lord's parables are superior to all others. He never introduces beasts or trees conversing together with the faculties of men ; all is built on nature and life. Once only, in the rich man and Lazarus, the scene is laid beyond this world (Luke 16 : 19–31).—Condensed from Townson.

“Parables may be pressed too far ; the general truth is always the central one ; others are usually involved, but only as related to it. Resemblances which we discover at every point, although founded on analogies which God has created, are not to be placed on a level with what our Lord distinctly teaches.”—

Ch. XVII. Matt. 13 : 2 ; Mark 4 : 3 ; Luke 8 : 5.

J.C. 32.

Hearken : Behold, there went out a sower to sow :

Schaff. Ingenuity is not always the best element of interpretation ; yet the following suggestion of a prophetic meaning included in these parables is interesting if not altogether true :

"We cannot fail to trace in the parable of the sower a picture of the apostolic age ; in the parable of the tares, the ancient Catholic Church springing up in the midst of heresies ; in the parable of the mustard bush, resorted to by the birds of the air as if it were a tree, and loaded with their nests, a representation of the secular state-Church under Constantine the Great ; in the leaven that is mixed among the three measures of meal, the pervading and transforming influence of Christianity in the mediæval Church, among the barbarous races of Europe ; in the parable of the treasure in the field, the period of the Reformation ; in the parable of the pearl, the contrast between Christianity and the acquisitions of modern secular culture ; and in the last parable [the net], a picture of the closing judgment."—

Lange. In reference to this, Schaff aptly remarks : "Other applications, however true, should never ignore the original one, out of wh'ch they grow. All, however, are always instructive and applicable. The history of the kingdom as a whole finds its counterpart in the experience of each of its subjects, and in every period of its development. They remain 'like apples of gold in pictures of silver,' the gospel to the poor, to children, and yet inexhaustible in meaning."—Schaff.

A sower went forth to sow.—"There is a nice and close adherence to actual life in this form of expression. It implies that the sower in the days of our Saviour lived in a hamlet or village as all these [Palestine] farmers now do ; that he did not sow near his own house, or in a garden fenced or walled, for such a field does not furnish all the basis of the parable. There are neither roads, nor thorns, nor stony places in such lots. He must go forth into the open country as those have done, where there are no fences, where the path passes through the cultivated land ; where thorns grow in clumps all around ; where the rocks peep out in places through the scanty soil ; and where, also, hard by, are patches extremely fertile. Now, here we have the farm within a dozen rods of us. Our horses are actually trampling down some seeds which have fallen by the wayside, and larks and sparrows are busy picking them up. That man, with his mattock, is digging about places where the rock is too near the surface for the plough, and much that is sown there will wither away, because it has no deepness of earth. And not a few seeds have fallen among this billan, and will be effectually choked by this most tangled of thorn-bushes. But a large portion, after and it came to pass, as he sowed, some seeds fell by the way side ; and it was trodden down and the fowls of the air came and devoured it up. And some fell on stony ground, where it had not much earth ; and immediately it sprang up, because it had no depth of earth : but when the sun was up, it was scorched ; and because it had no root and lacked moisture it withered away. And some fell among thorns ; and the thorns grew up with it and choked it, and it yielded no fruit. And other fell on good ground, and did yield fruit that sprang up and brought forth, some thirty, and some sixty, and some a hundred fold.

Ch. XVII. Matt. 13 : 4-8 ; Mark 4 : 3-8 ; Luke 8 : 5-8. J.C. 32.

all, falls into really good ground, and four months hence ill exhibit every variety of crop, up to the richest and hardiest that ever rejoices the heart of even an American farmer."—Dr. Thomson, "The Land and the Book."

By the way side.—"There was not a fence, nor tree, nor house upon it [the field]. Our path was bordered by the tall ripe grain ; and our attendants plucked the ears as they rode along, and did eat, rubbing them in their hands (Luke 6 : 1). We could see here how true to nature was the illustration in the parable of the sower (Mark 4 : 4). When the husbandman sows such fields as these, some seeds must necessarily fall upon the unfenced, beaten tracks, which traverse them in every direction."—Porter's "Syria's Holy Places."

The fowls devoured it up.—"In sowing they allow one third of the seeds for the birds, particularly the crows, which settle down upon the fields in countless flocks."—Thomson.

Was scorched.—In Palestine, during seed-time (November), the sky is cloudy ; the seed then springs up even in stony places, but when the blazing sun comes out it quickly outgrows its strength.

A hundred fold.—"The country in the time of Christ was densely peopled, and the fields being protected from the depredations of birds, a hundred fold might be realized. On the plain of Sidon a hundred stalks are now often seen to spring from a single root, and each with a head bowing gracefully beneath a load of well-formed grains."—Condensed from Thomson. Strabo and Pliny state that the soil in Babylonia never produced less than two hundred fold, and, sometimes, even three hundred.

Ch. XVII. Matt. 13 : 9-13 ; Mark 4 : 9-12 ; Luke 8 : 8-10. J.C. 32.

And when he had said these things, he cried, He that hath ears to hear, let him hear.

And when he was alone, they that were about him with the Twelve asked of him the parable, and said, Why speakest thou unto them in parables ?

And he said unto them, Because it is given unto you to know the mystery of the Kingdom of God : but unto them that are without it is not given, and all these things are done in parables : for whosoever hath, to Why He taught in Parables. him shall be given, and he shall have more abundance ; but whosoever hath not, from him shall be taken away even that he hath. Therefore spake I to them in parables ; because they seeing see not ; and hearing they hear not, neither do they understand. And

" This great increase is owing to the kernels being put into the soil at a distance from each other, so as to send out several stalks (Gen. 41 : 5, 47), some of which (according to Pliny) have from three to four hundred ears ; and in Africa at the present time they bear at least ten and fifteen."—Jahn.

The mystery.—The secrets : that which had not been disclosed before. The word mystery is derived from a Greek word signifying to initiate ; the military word muster is from the same root and has the same radical idea. Mysteries in the New Testament is the term " used to denote the divine counsels, decrees, doctrines, which as such could never have become known to men as such, to men if left to themselves [not initiated]. Nowhere, however, are these decrees, etc., represented as absolutely and eternally hid ; but God who, at the prompting of his own love, reveals himself and all that is in him, is constantly revealing his mysteries."—Condensed from Kendrick's Olshausen.

Seeing, they see not.—They overlook what they see, and are inattentive to what they hear ; they shut their eyes to the truth, and abuse the means of knowledge.

Hearing they may hear, and not understand.—" The object of the parable is both to conceal and to reveal the truth, according to the moral state of the hearers."—Schaff. " As there is something in the eye waiting for the light, and in the ear prepared for sound, and in the body ready to digest and assimilate food, so there must be in the soul some pre-existing fitness Chap. XVII. Matt. 13 : 14-17 ; Mark 4 : 12.

J.C. 32.

in them is fulfilled the prophecy of Esaias, which saith, "By hearing ye shall hear, and shall not understand ; and seeing ye shall see, and shall not perceive." For this people's heart is waxed gross, and their ears are dull of hearing, and their eyes they have closed ; lest at any time they should see with their eyes, and hear with their ears, and understand with their heart, and should be converted, and I should heal them, and their sins should be forgiven them. But blessed are your eyes, for they see : and your ears, for they hear. For verily I say unto you, that many prophets and righteous men have desired to see those things which ye see, and have not seen them ; and to hear those things which ye hear, and have not heard them.

for truth. . . . Men will remember an illustration when they would forget a principle. The parable, so far from being an instrument for blinding, was better adapted to give light than would be the unillustrated statement of spiritual things. At the same time, it put the truth in such a form that those who were lying in wait to catch Jesus in his words would find nothing on which to lay hold."—Beecher.

The prophecy of Esaias. Chap. 6 : 9, 10.—This passage is frequently quoted and applied to the Jews ; quoted in John 12 : 40 ; Acts 28 : 26, 27, and referred to in Mark 4 : 12 and Luke 8 : 10. "The sense of the original prophecy is given, but not its form. In Isaiah is a command ; here a strong prediction, indicating that judgment is a result of what is done by man as well as what is done to man."—Schaff.

Waxed gross.—The ancients had the idea that the fat of the body is destitute of sensation ; hence a "gross heart" denoted stupidity and lack of feeling. "That we might not suspect this grossness of heart and heaviness of ears was the effect of nature, and not of choice, he subjoins the fault of the will, "their eyes have they closed."—Jerome.

Many prophets.—See 1 Peter 1 : 11, 12 ; Heb. 11 : 13. "The object always dearest to the hearts of all righteous men is to witness the coming and advancement of the kingdom of Christ."—Barnes.

Matt. 13 : 18-21 ; Mark 4 : 13-17 ; Luke 8 : 11-13.

And he said unto them, Know ye not this parable ? and how then will ye know all parables ?

The parable is this, The seed is the word of God. The sower soweth the word. And these are they by the way side, where the word is sown ; Jesus explains the Parable. but when they have heard, and understand it not, then Satan cometh immediately, and taketh away the word that was sown in their hearts, lest they should believe and be saved. And these are they likewise which are sown on stony ground ; who, when they have heard the word, immediately receive it with gladness ; and have no root in themselves, and so endure but for a time : afterward in time of temptation when affliction or persecution ariseth for the word's sake, im-

Know ye not this parable ?—" ' The first parable of the kingdom is the basis of all the rest. If they understood not this, they could not understand any that followed. If they had the explanation of this, they had the key for the understanding of all others.' Hence our Lord gives, not rules of interpretation, but examples, one of which is here preserved, to be our guide in interpretation."—Alford.

Understand it not.—"Virtue can no more exist without knowledge than an animal without life."—Richard Watson.

"It is only the man who honestly means to do the Lord's will that understands the truth" (John 7 : 17).—Eggleston. Trench says, "He has brought himself to this state · he has exposed his heart as a common road to every evil influence of the world, till it has become hard as a pavement."

On stony ground.—"O rocky hearts ! How shallow are the impressions of divine things upon you ! Religion goes never further than the upper surface of your hearts. You have but few deep thoughts of God, and of Jesus Christ, and the things of the world to come ; all are but slight and transient glances."—Leighton.

When tribulation or persecution ariseth.—"Half our virtue arises from our being out of the way of temptation."—Thomas Adams. "When the wind doth not blow, then cannot a man know the wheat from the chaff ; but when the blast cometh, then fleeth away the chaff : but the wheat remaineth, and is so far from being hurt, that by the wind it is more cleansed from the chaff and known to be wheat."—J. Bradford.

Matt. 13 : 22, 23 ; Mark 4 : 18-22 ; Luke 8 : 14-17.

mediately they are offended, and fall away. And these are they which are sown among thorns ; such as hear the word, go forth, and the cares of this world, and the deceitfulness of riches, and the lusts of other things entering in, choke the word, and it becometh unfruitful. And these are they which are sown on good ground ; such as in an honest and good heart hear the word, and receive it, and bring forth fruit with patience, some thirtyfold, some sixty, and some a hundred.

And he said unto them, No man, when he hath lighted a candle, covereth it with a vessel, or putteth it under a bushel, or under a bed ? but setteth it on a candlestick, that they which enter in may see the light. For there is nothing hid, which shall not be manifested ;

The lusts of other things.—"Certainly, by the 'other things,' are to be understood gluttony, drunkenness, intemperance, and sensuality of every kind."—Bloomfield. "This includes all other worldly distractions. The desires become 'lusts,' because the objects interfere with spiritual growth. What is in itself innocent may become a snare."—Schaff.

Under a bed.—"The orientals sit or recline on a divan, or sofa, that is, a part of the room raised above the floor," generally along two sides, "and spread with a carpet in winter, and in summer with fine mats," sometimes stuffed like a continuous cushion, "and having cushions or bolsters, placed along the back to lean against," or a continuous stuffed back affixed against the wall. "These divans frequently serve the purpose of a bed, with the addition of two thick cotton quilts."—Calmet. The expression in the text must not be understood of a modern bed, but of such as divan or sofa, which, as Grotius observes, had such a cavity as would admit of a candelabrum being put under it. Indeed, it appears to have been used by the ancients as a common hiding-place or lumber closet. The expression was a proverbial one, and meant that a thing should not be made useless by being kept from the purpose for which it was intended.

Candlestick.—A candelabrum. See note on page 173.

Shall not be manifested.—"Should not be made manifest," Henry thinks a better reading. "There is no treasure of gifts and graces," he says, "lodged in any but with design to be com-

Matt. 13 : 24, 25 ; Mark 4 : 24, 25 ; Luke 8 : 18.

neither was any thing kept secret, that shall not be known and come abroad. If any man have ears to hear, let him hear.

And he said unto them, Take heed therefore how and what ye hear. With what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you ; and unto you that hear shall more be given. For he that hath, to him shall be given, and he shall have more abundance ; and he that hath not, from him shall be taken even that which he seemeth to have.

Another parable put he forth unto them, saying, The kingdom of heaven is likened unto a man which sowed good seed in his field. But while men slept, his enemy came and sowed tares among municated ; nor was the Gospel made a secret to the apostles ; it should come abroad, to all the world."
The Tares.

More shall be given.—A universal law. " There is that scattereth and yet increaseth." The more light a man gives out, the clearer are his own views of truth. " The more attentive you shall be in hearing, so much the greater progress will you daily make in the knowledge of my doctrine."—Kuinoel. Or it may be thus expressed : " Whatsoever may be the measure of your attention, such shall be the measure of your knowledge."—Bloomfield.

He that hath not, etc.—" By neglecting to use your faculties, you will in time lose the very power of using them."—Seed.

Seemeth to have : " Thinketh he hath."—" Peculiar to Luke. It is self-deception, not deception of others, that is referred to,"—Schaff.

Another parable.—This parable of the Tares has been the subject of much controversy, but its central thought is apparent :—that though the evil and the good are mingled in this world, they will be separated in the world to come.

While men slept.—Owing to the extreme heat, laborers in the East do not work in the middle of the day. Then they sleep.

Tares grow in great profusion all over the East, and are a great nuisance to the farmer. They closely resemble wheat, and, until the stalk begins to head out, cannot be distinguished from the good grain. Though the farmers weed their fields, they do not attempt to separate the tares from the wheat ; the Chap. XVII.

Matt. 13 : 25-30.

J.C. 32.

the wheat, and went his way. But when the blade was sprung up, and brought forth fruit, then appeared the tares also. So the servants of the householder came and said unto him, Sir, didst not thou sow good seed in thy field? from whence then hath it tares? He said unto them, An enemy hath done this. The servants said unto him, Wilt thou then that we go and gather them up? But he said, Nay; lest while ye gather up the tares, ye root up also the wheat with them. Let two are so much alike, and their roots are so intertwined, that there is danger of pulling up both. They are therefore allowed to grow together until the harvest, when the stalks are mostly separated by hand, but if any tares remain among the wheat, their grain being lighter and smaller than that of the wheat, is easily separated by the winnowing fan. The grain of tares has a bitter taste, and, eaten separately or diffused among the wheat, produces dizziness and vomiting. The Arabic name is Zowan.

And went his way.—"There is something very expressive in this. He knew the soil; he knew how the seed would take root, and grow. He had only to sow the seed, and let it alone. So Satan knows the soil in which he sows his doctrine. He knows that in the human heart it will take deep and rapid root. It needs but little culture. Grace needs constant attendance and care. Error, and sin, and hypocrisy are the native products of the human heart; and, when left alone, start up with deadly luxuriance."—Barnes. "The hostile sowing required no further care; in the beginnings of evil Satan conceals himself."—Schaff. "Strange as it may appear, this is still literally done in the East. See that lurking villain, watching for the time when his neighbor shall plough his field; he carefully marks the period when the work has been finished, and goes the night following, and casts in what the natives call padinellu, that is, pig paddy; this being of rapid growth, springs up before the good seed, and scatters itself before the other can be reaped, so that the poor owner of the field will be for years before he can get rid of this troublesome weed. But there is another noisome plant which these wretches cast into the ground of those they hate, called perum-pirandi, which is more destructive to vegetation than any other plant. Has a man purchased a field out of the hands of another? The offended says, 'I will plant the perum-pirandi in his grounds.'"—Roberts' Oriental Illustrations, p. 521.

Chap. XVII. Matt. 13 : 30-32 ; Mark 4 : 30-32.

J.C. 32.

both grow together until the harvest : and in the time of harvest I will say to the reapers, Gather ye together first the tares, and bind them in bundles to burn them : but gather the wheat into my barn.

Another parable put he forth unto them, saying : The kingdom of heaven is like to a grain of mustard seed, which a man took, and sowed in his field ; which indeed is the least of all seeds : but when it is grown, it is the greatest among herbs, and shooteth out great branches and becometh a

The Mustard Seed.

Let both grow together.—"God has so ordered it," says Matthew Henry, "that good and bad should be mixed together in this world, that the good may be exercised, the bad left inexcusable, and a difference made between earth and heaven." "The answer of a wise husbandman. The servants might distinguish the two, but their roots were intertwined. Impatient zeal for purity in the Church has often rooted up the wheat."—Schaff. "They who prematurely put themselves forward to root out whatever is displeasing to them, overthrow the judgment of God and rashly intrude upon the office of the angels."—Calvin.

A grain of mustard seed.—The mustard plant grows wild, and in great luxuriance, near the Sea of Galilee. It bears a yellow flower, and grows to a considerable size, shooting forth great branches, so that the birds of the air come and lodge in them. It is sometimes seen as high as a horse and his rider. It is said to have been cultivated in earlier times, and to have then grown to such a size that a man could climb into it.—Trench supposes that this seed was chosen, not only on account of the proportionate smallness of the seed to the size of the tree, but on account of its heat, its fiery vigor, and the fact that its best qualities are given out only when it is bruised.

The least of all seeds.—"Its beginnings seem contemptible. This son of the carpenter and his twelve peasant companions afford apparently but poor prospect of revolutionizing the world. It is but a little army for so large a campaign ; but in God's hands the largest growths spring continually from the least sowings, as the mustard tree, one of the largest among the garden herbs, came from one of the smallest seeds."—Abbott. "Small as a grain of mustard seed," was a proverbial expression among the Jews for something exceedingly minute."—Trench.

Chap. XVII. Matt. 13 : 33 ; Mark 4 : 26-28.

J.C. 32.

tree, so that the birds of the air come and lodge in the branches thereof.

Another parable spake he unto them : The kingdom of heaven is like unto leaven, which a woman took, and hid in three measures of meal, till the whole was leavened.

And he said, So is the kingdom of God : as if a man should cast seed into the ground ; and should sleep and rise, night and day, and the seed should spring and grow up, he knoweth not how. For the earth bringeth forth fruit

Leaven.—"The parable of the leaven, leavening little by little the whole lump into which it has been cast, gives us the most faithful conception of the irresistible and pervasive influence of the truth, which works only by persuasion, never by recourse to force and pressure from without."—De Pressensé.

Three measures of meal.—Perhaps the third part of an ephah (Ex. 16 : 36 ; Ruth 2 : 17), a measure of about a peck and a half, and probably the quantity usually taken in making bread (Gen. 17 : 6 ; 1 Sam. 1 : 24 ; Judges 6 : 19).

Till the whole was leavened.—"The growth proceeds by a process of permeation. Christianity, symbolized by the leaven, throws the entire community into ferment, and finally permeates it only by a continuous agitation."—Abbott.

Should cast seed into the ground.—Literally, "upon the earth," implying a single, careless act of sowing.

Sleep and rise, night and day.—"Sleep by night and rise by day, attending to other matters, confident that, by the blessing of God upon the seed sown, there will be a crop."—Kuinoel. A proverbial expression denoting security and freedom from anxiety.

He knoweth not how.—Progress of the best kind is comparatively slow. Great results cannot be achieved at once ; and we must be satisfied to advance in life, as we walk, step by step. De Maistre says that "to know how to wait is the great secret of success."—Samuel Smiles. "Jesus knew that the living force of truth in each single heart must spread, and that, as soul after soul was won, it would silently revolutionize the world"—Geikie.

The earth bringeth forth fruit of herself, "as if from a self-acting power. The growth of the kingdom of God, in general of herself ; first the blade, then the ear, after that the full corn in the ear. But when the fruit is brought forth, immediately he putteth in the sickle, because the harvest is come.

Chap. XVII. Mark 4 : 28-34 ; Matt. 13 : 34-41.

J.C. 32.

All these things spake Jesus unto the multitude in parables ; and without a parable spake he not unto them : that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the prophet, saying, " I will open my mouth in parables ; I will utter things which have been kept secret from the foundation of the world." And when they were alone, he expounded all things to his disciples.

Then Jesus sent the multitude away, and went into the house : and his disciples came unto him, saying, Declare unto us the parable of the tares of the field. He answered and said unto them : He that soweth the good seed is the Son of man. The field is the world ; the good seed are the children of the kingdom ; but the tares are the children of the wicked one. The enemy that sowed them is the devil ; the harvest is the end of the world ; and the reapers are the angels. As therefore the tares are gathered and burned in the fire ; so shall it be in the end of this world. The Son of man shall send forth his angels, and they shall gather out of his kingdom all things that the Parable.

Jesus explains

and in individuals, is according to a development which is natural, that is, in accordance with certain laws in the realm of grace, which are analogous to what are called natural laws, and like them acting with a certain spontaneity ; though God's constant energy is present in both."—Schaff.

Spoken by the prophet.—Psalm 78 : 2 ; 49 : 4.

The end of the world.—The word here rendered " world "—more properly translated " age "—was used by the Jews to denote the end of the state of things which was to precede the coming of the Messiah, and not the end of the world.

Chap. XVII.

Matt. 13: 42-46.

J.C. 32.

offend, and them which do iniquity ; and shall cast them into a furnace of fire : there shall be wailing and gnashing of teeth. Then shall the righteous shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father. Who hath ears to hear, let him hear.

Again, the kingdom of heaven is like unto treasure hid
 The Treasure in a field : the which when a man hath Trove found, he hideth, and for joy thereof goeth and selleth all that he hath, and buyeth that field.

Again, the kingdom of heaven is like unto a merchantman, seeking goodly pearls : who, when he had found

That offend.—" Properly, stumbling-blocks, or impediments : figuratively, those who cause others to stumble or fall away from Christian principles."—Bloomfield.

Furnace of fire.—This figure is perhaps drawn from the custom of burning alive, mentioned in Daniel 3 : 10. " These expressions, however, are not to be taken literally. For the wicked will have no longer flesh and blood ; they can neither be burned, nor gnash with the teeth. We are to understand the words metaphorically. Euthymius judiciously points out that it denotes misery not to be expressed by human language. Punishments are meant as exquisite in degree as burning is to our present bodies."—Bloomfield. " It undoubtedly refers to intolerable suffering, resulting not simply from the circumstances of the evil-doers in a future state, but from their character."—Schaff.

Treasure hidden in a field.—Judea had been subject to invasions and calamities, and hence a feeling of insecurity had arisen among the people, and it had become a custom to hide treasures in fields and gardens. The practice is alluded to by Solomon (Prov. 2 : 4). It still continues in Palestine, and the country is said to abound in hidden treasure. The right of treasure-trove was adjudged by Jewish law to the buyer, and not to the seller of the field.

Merchantman.—" The original word, translated merchant, means a traveling trader. Such persons took long journeys for the purpose of buying, selling, or exchanging goods. These petty ' merchants,' we may suppose, were not dissimilar to our pedlars ; and by them much of the traffic of ancient times was carried on."—Bloomfield.

Chap. XVII.

Matt. 13 : 46-49.

J.C. 32.

one pearl of great price, went and sold all that he had, and bought it.

The Pearl.

Again, the kingdom of heaven is like unto a net, that was cast into the sea, and gathered of every kind : which, when it was full, they drew to shore, and sat down, and gathered the good into vessels, but cast the bad away. So shall it be at

The Net.

One pearl of great price.—"The two largest pearls ever known, according to Pliny, were both in possession of Cleopatra, Queen of Egypt, and worn by her as ornaments. Each of these was valued at 10,000,000 of sesterces, about $400,000. One she dissolved in vinegar and drank off, at a supper which she gave to M. Antony ; the other was brought to Rome by Augustus, and was divided into two, which were attached as pendants to the ears of the statue of Venus in the Pantheon. Julius Cæsar presented Servilia, the mother of Brutus, with a pearl worth 6,000,000 sesterces, $240,000. Augustus dedicated at one time, in the treasury of Jupiter Capitolinus, jewels and pearls to the value of 50,000,000 of sesterces, $2,000,000."—Greswell on the Parables. "This parable has a historical application to the present age of investigation and discovery. Sometimes the 'merchant' is too well contented with the 'goodly pearls' already found, to look for the one pearl of great price."—Schaff.

Sold all that he had.—"The kingdom might be found by some without their seeking it, as the treasure by the peasant in the field ; or it might be met by one in earnest search for it, like him who found the costly pearl. In either case, it could only be obtained by joyful self-sacrifice of all things else for its sake, and by the realization of the worthlessness of all human possessions in comparison with it."—Geikie.

A net cast into the sea.—The great drag net is here referred to. It was not like an ordinary draw-net, being far larger, and intended to take not part of the fish of a pool or stream, but the whole, of every kind, size, and quality. It was formed of cane, osiers, and in wattled work. In working it "some must row the boat, some cast out the net, some, on the shore, pull the rope with all their strength, others throw stones and beat the water round the ends, to frighten the fish from escaping, and, as it approaches the shore, all must be active in holding up the edges, drawing it to the land, and seizing the fish. Then the fishermen sit down, gather the good into baskets, and cast the bad away."—Thomson.

Chap. XVII.

Matt. 13 : 49-53.

J.C. 32.

the end of the world : the angels shall come forth, and sever the wicked from among the just, and shall cast them into the furnace of fire : there shall be wailing and gnashing of teeth.

Jesus saith unto them, Have ye understood all these things ? They say unto him, Yea, Lord. Then said he unto them : Therefore every scribe which is instructed unto the kingdom of heaven, is like unto a man that is a householder, which bringeth forth out of his treasure things new and old.

And it came to pass, that when Jesus had finished these parables, he departed thence.

Every scribe.—It was the office of the scribes to expound the Scriptures. Their varied knowledge should be used aptly, according to the circumstances of those seeking spiritual entertainment from them. The Christian teacher should, like them, furnish himself with every variety of knowledge, to be brought forth as demanded by circumstances.

Things new and old.—“ Jesus displayed the richest variety in his teaching, in order to adapt it to every need of the heart and every grade of culture. In the synagogue he took his subject from the portion of Scripture which had been read for the day. Parable is one of the chosen forms of his teaching, showing the harmony and similitude between the natural and the spiritual world. He frequently points his thought by casting it into the form of an aphorism, or striking maxim. Paradoxes are common in his discourses. He hurls anathemas against the Pharisees ; he melts in pitying tears over Jerusalem ; he speaks peace to the suffering penitent ; he employs all accents and gives infinite variety to his language. Whether we consider his teaching in its subject, its form, or its method, it presents the same invariable aspect of perfection.”—Condensed from De Pressensé.

In these parables, which were all uttered at one time, and constitute essentially one discourse, Christ sets forth, in illustrations, the growth of his kingdom, in the individual and in the community. “ Its growth depends on its acceptance by its subjects ; (Matt. 13 : 19-23) ; it grows up with the kingdom of evil, not separated from it by natural or geographical boundaries (Matt. 13 : 37-43) ; it is a gradual growth, does not immediately appear (Mark 4 : 26-29) ; it is obtained only through a process of conflict (Matt. 13 : 33) ; and by self-sacrifice (Matt. 13 : 44-46).”—Abbott.

Ch. XVIII. Matt. 13 : 53; 8 : 18-20; Mark 4 : 35. Autumn, J.C. 32.

CHAPTER XVIII.

JESUS VISITS DECAPOLIS.

AND it came to pass, that when Jesus had finished these parables, he departed thence ; and the same day, when the even was come, and he saw great multitudes about him, he gave commandment to depart unto the other side. And as they went in the way, a certain scribe came, and said unto him, Master, I will follow thee whithersoever thou goest. And Jesus saith unto him, The foxes have holes, and Half-hearted Followers of Christ.

The same day, when the even was come.—“ The time of the voyage across the lake is fixed by the account before us. It was the evening of the day (Mark 4 : 35) when the discourse in parables had been uttered. The other accounts (Matt. 8 : 18, Luke 8 : 22) can readily be harmonized on this view. The conversations with some who would follow him (Matt. 8 : 19-22) seem to have taken place just before he crossed the sea. It had been a busy day ; our Lord had first healed a demoniac (Matt. 12 : 22), then encountered the accusation of his family (Mark 3 : 20, 21) when his mother and brethren sought him (Mark 3 : 31-35 ; Matt. 12 : 46-50) ; afterward the accusation of the Pharisees (Mark 3 : 22-30 ; more fully in Matt. 12 : 24-45) ; then departing to the sea-side had given the long discourse, parts of which are recorded in Mark 4 and Matt. 13, then encountered half-hearted followers (Matt. 8 : 19-22), and in the evening crossed the lake. After such exhausting labors, it is not strange that he fell asleep, even amid the storm. Mark's account is vivid, and in most respects more minute than that of Matthew, giving particulars omitted by both the other Evangelists.”—Schaff.

A certain scribe would be more accurately rendered “ one who was a scribe,” a particular description, indicating a class not usually found among his disciples. “ It might have seemed a great thing for one in the position of Jesus to have a Rabbi among his disciples, but he never courted human aid, or acted on mere expediency. The highest, no less than the humblest, could only be received on the condition of absolute self-sacrifice and sincerity.”—Geikie.

Chap. XVIII. Matt. 8 : 20-22 ; Luke 9 : 60, 61.

J.C. 32.

the birds of the air have nests ; but the Son of man hath not where to lay his head. And another of his disciples said unto him, Lord, suffer me first to go and bury my father. But Jesus said unto him, Follow me ; and let the dead bury their dead ; but go thou and preach the kingdom of God. And another also said, Lord, I will follow thee ; but let me first go bid them

The Son of man.—The words "Son of man" are found in that celebrated prophecy (Dan. 7 : 13) which describes the universal dominion to which the Messiah, in quality of the Son of man, was to be raised. This name, therefore, when applied to our Lord, at the same time that it denotes his human nature, carries along with it an idea of the glorious kingdom over which, in his human nature, he is to preside. This title, now first assumed by Christ, occurs sixty-one times in the Gospels, and is used by Christ himself ; never by any other person. It occurs once in the Acts—7 : 56 (employed by the martyr Stephen)—and in the Revelation. The corresponding title—Son of God—also belongs to Christ, and both taken together indicate that he, in some manner unknown to us, united in his person both the human nature and the divine. "The thought here is of his real humanity, his capability of suffering and privation, in opposition to the carnal expectation of the Jews, shared no doubt by this scribe."—Schaff.

Not where to lay his head.—"Virtually driven from the one dwelling at Capernaum he could regard as his home, and rejected from Nazareth, he was henceforth a wanderer, with no fixed dwelling. From this time he was almost a fugitive from his enemies, never remaining long in any place—a homeless and houseless man."—Geikie.

Let the dead : The spiritually dead.—"It was a requirement of the Rabbis in similar cases that if any one who wished to be a scholar of the law, had to choose between burying even his nearest relation—his parent, or his brother or sister—and devoting himself at once to his sacred duties, he should leave the burial to others as the less important duty, and give himself up on the moment undividedly to the other."—Geikie. Chrysostom says : "Jesus forbade him to go, in order to show that nothing—not even the most important work of natural duty and affection—is so momentous as care for the kingdom of heaven ; and that nothing, however urgent, should cause us to be guilty of a moment's delay in providing first for that."

Luke 9 : 61, 62 ; 8 : 22, 23 ; Mark 4 : 36, 37 ; Matt. 8 : 23.

farewell which are at home at my house. And Jesus said unto him, No man, having put his hand to the plough, and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God.

And when they had sent away the multitude, they took him even as he was, and entered into a ship, and he said unto them, Let us go over unto the other side of the lake. And there were also with him other little ships. And they launched forth. But as they sailed, he fell asleep : and there came down a great storm of wind on the lake ; and the waves

Jesus stills the Tempest.

Having put his hand to the plough.—“ This is a proverbial expression, and used by the Greek writers. The ancient rude and simple ploughs required peculiar attention to make them penetrate the ground and work straight.”—Greswell. “ The figure is one the agriculturist will readily appreciate. The ploughman must keep his eye on the furrow to be made, and the Christian on the life-duties to which he is called. Looking back spoils the furrow (comp. Phil. 3 : 13). Dr. Brown says that when Hindoos are converted and are about to be baptized, their parents often plead with them to pay them one more parting visit before taking a step that will cut them off from home altogether ; and that those who yield to these parental entreaties to go home for a visit never return, or do so only after a season, in which they abandon Christianity and conform to the heathen religion again. This fact is the best possible commentary on and explanation of a passage which has seemed to some a hard requirement on Christ’s part.”—Abbott.

Even as he was.—Without preparation, implying a sudden resolution to seek rest on the other side of the lake.

Other little ships.—Fishermen’s boats. He had sent the multitude away, but some persisted in following him, which indicates the intense excitement his acts and teachings had created. These boats were probably dispersed by the ensuing tempest, for we do not read of their landing with Jesus on the following morning.

Sailed.—The boats were arranged for oars (Mark 6 : 48), and probably also rigged with the small lateen-sail, now used on the xebecs and feluccas of the Mediterranean. They were open, and in a high sea would quickly fill with water.

A great storm of wind.—“ To understand,” says Thomson, “ the causes of these violent tempests, we must remember that beat into the ship, so that it was now full, and they were in jeopardy ; and he was in the hinder part of the ship, asleep on a pillow. And his disciples came to him, and awoke him, saying, Lord, save us : carest thou not that we perish ? And he saith unto them, Why are ye fearful, O ye of little faith ?

Mark 4 : 37, 38 ; 8 : 26 ; Luke 8 : 23 ; Matt. 8 : 25, 26.

Then he arose, and rebuked the winds, and said unto the lake lies low—six hundred feet lower than the ocean—that the vast and naked plateaus of Jaulan rise to a great height, spreading backward to the wilds of Hauran, and upward to snowy Hermon ; that the water-courses have cut out profound ravines and wild gorges, converging to the head of this lake, and that these act like gigantic funnels to draw down the winds from the mountains." W. C. Prime, who was cast away in a small boat in a sudden storm on this lake, describes the scene as follows : " We ran three or four miles up the west coast in good style, and then there ' came down ' on the sea such a storm as it knew in times of old. It was sudden, swift, and violent. A moment before we were sailing along pleasantly over the rippling water, and now it was lashed into foam by a fierce blast that literally came down into the basin, and ploughed up the waters into deep and difficult furrows. I did not believe it possible that the little lake could get up such a sea as now rolled and tossed us." It will be noticed that Luke also says that " the storm came down on the lake." Another instance of the truthful local coloring in which the Gospel narratives abound.

The hinder part of the ship.—The place where the steersman sat, and the most commodious for a passenger.

Asleep on a pillow.—This seems to have been the stuffed leather cushion which was occasionally used as a pillow. The extreme fatigue of the day had induced a slumber so deep that he was not disturbed by the fierce storm, or the, no doubt, noisy fear of his disciples. They had to come to him—evidently to touch him—to arouse him.

Carest thou not that we perish?—" These bold fishermen, to whom an ordinary storm was only a pleasurable excitement, perceived that this was one they could not weather. The danger was imminent."—Abbott.

Then he arose.—" In the wild roaring of the wind ; amidst blinding torrents of rain, and the thick darkness of the hurricane cloud, which blotted out the stars ; and the dashing of the sea, which broke over them each moment, even bronzed sailors like the Twelve lost their presence of mind, and were filled with the sea, Peace, be still. And the wind ceased, and there was a great calm.

Mark 4 : 39-41 ; 5 : 1 ; Matt. 8 : 27 ; Luke 8 : 26.

And he said unto them, Why are ye so fearful ? how is it that ye have no faith ? But the men marveled and dismay. Driven before the wind, they were fast filling, and, as it seemed, must presently go down. Through all the wild tumult of wind, darkness, rain, and sea, however, Jesus lay peacefully asleep, so profoundly had he been exhausted. It seemed as if he were indifferent to their fate. In their natural reverence they long hesitated to rouse him, but at last did so, and appealed to him to save them. Amidst the terror around, he was entirely self-possessed. Rising, he gently rebuked the fear that so unnerved them, and then, with an awful sublimity, rebuked the wind as if it had been a living power, and bade the angry sea be still."—Geikie. No more sublime spectacle was ever seen by man. Standing erect in the stern of the sinking boat, amid the howling tempest, on the heaving sea, and in the darkness of the terrible night, he utters the simple words, "Peace, be still," and the winds cease, and there is a great calm. What a power was this ! What irresistible proof that he was divine !

And there was a great calm.—The instantaneousness of the perfect calm is a proof of the reality of the miracle ; for after a storm the sea is never perfectly smooth until some time has elapsed.

My bark is wafted on the strand
By breath divine,
And on the helm there rests a hand
Other than mine.

One, who has known in storms to sail,
I have on board ;
Above the raving of the gale
I have my Lord.

He holds me when the billows smite :
I shall not fall.
If sharp, 'tis short ; if long, 'tis light :
He tempers all.

Safe to the land !—safe to the land !
The end is this ;
And then with him go hand in hand
Far into bliss.—Dean Alford.

The men marveled.—"This new display of authority over nature filled with new wonder these disciples, who had known him only as a prophet, not as a divine Messiah ; for it was only little by little, through just such incidents as this, that they were to learn the nature and authority to the king whose coronation they were to proclaim."—Abbott.

Chap. XVIII.

Mark 5 : 2 ; Matt. 8 : 28.

Autumn, J.C. 32.

feared exceedingly, and said one to another, What manner of man is this, that even the wind and the sea obey him ?

And they came over unto the other side of the sea, into the country of the Gadarenes, which is over against Galilee. And when he was come out of the ship, immediately there met him two

The Men among the Tombs.

The country of the Gadarenes.—In speaking of the locality of this miracle, Thomson remarks : “ In this Gersa, or Chersa, we have a position which fulfills every requirement of the narratives, and with a name so near that in Matthew as to be, in itself, a strong corroboration of the truth of this identification. It is within a few rods of the shore, and an immense mountain rises directly above it, in which are ancient tombs, out of some of which the two men, possessed of the devils, may have issued to meet Jesus. The place is one which our Lord would be likely to visit, having Capernaum in full view to the north, and Galilee ‘over against it,’ as Luke says it was (Luke 8 : 26). The name, moreover, pronounced by Bedouin Arabs is so similar to Gergasa that to all my inquiries for this place they invariably said it was at Chersa, and they insisted that they were identical, and I agree with them in their opinion. Gersa was a small place, and unknown, while Gadara—located some sixteen miles distant—was a large Greek city celebrated for its temples, theaters, and warm baths. Therefore Mark and Luke, writing for Greeks, spoke of the country of the Gadarenes, while Matthew, writing for the Jews, spoke of that of the Gergasenes. One district included the other, and hence there is no contradiction in the accounts, but a natural adaptation to those for whom they were written.”

Immediately there met him.—“ As the Lord left the shore at even, and afterward fell asleep, we may infer that the storm came on in the night. The landing at Gergesa on the eastern side must then have been the next morning, as there is no mention that he returned that night to Capernaum, or landed elsewhere. He was met by the demoniacs so soon as he came out of the ship ; and that it was broad daylight appears from the fact that he was seen by them afar off (Mark 5 : 2-6).”—Andrews.

Two.—Matthew mentions two, while Mark and Luke speak of only one. It was a maxim of LeClerc that, “ He who speaks of two, includes also the one ; he who mentions only one, does not deny the two.” Matthew is general in his description ; Mark and Luke more detailed and graphic ; and these peculiarities

Chap. XVIII.

Matt. 8 : 28.

Autumn, J.C. 32.

possessed with devils, coming out of the tombs, exceed-run through their entire narratives. That their silence respecting one of the demoniacs does not exclude him, Robinson thus illustrates : " In the year 1824 Lafayette visited the United States, and was everywhere welcomed with honors and pageants. Historians will describe this as a noble incident in his life. Other writers will relate the same visit as made, and the same honors as enjoyed, by two persons, viz., Lafayette and his son. Will there be any contradiction between these two classes of writers? Will not both record the truth?"

Possessed with devils.—The Jews attributed nearly all nervous disorders to demoniacal possession, and the Mohammedans of the present-day hold the same opinion. Thomson, in "The Land and the Book," referring to this subject, says : " In Sidon there are cases of epileptic fits which, in external manifestations, closely resemble that mentioned in Mark 9 : 18, Matt. 17 : 15, and Luke 9 : 38. These fits have seized a young man in my house repeatedly ; and lo ! the spirit taketh him, and he suddenly crieth out, and foameth at the mouth, and gnasheth with his teeth, and is cast down wherever he may be seized, and pineth away until you would think he was actually dead. Matthew calls him a lunatic, but according to Mark it was a dumb spirit. And there are cases in which the disease accompanies, if it does not occasion, dumbness. The instance mentioned in Mark 5 : 2-16, and Luke 8 : 26-36, was most remarkable, but there are some very similar at the present day—furious and dangerous maniacs, who wander about the mountains and sleep in dens and caves. In their worst paroxysms they are quite unmanageable, and prodigiously strong. It is one of the most common traits of this madness that the victims refuse to wear clothes. I have often seen them absolutely naked in the streets of Beirût and Sidon. There are also cases in which they run wildly about the country, and frighten the whole neighborhood. It would certainly be rash to decide that this calamity is the work of evil spirits ; and yet the manifestations are so inhuman and satanic, and the real causes so mysterious, that I am not much disposed to dispute the point with the natives of the country, who ascribe the mischief to supernatural agency."

Out of the tombs.—Burckhardt speaks of finding in the immediate neighborhood where this miracle is supposed to have occurred the ruins of many large tombs. Some of them were natural caves, and others recesses hewn out of the solid rock, with cells on their sides for the reception of the dead, and often so large as to be supported with columns. They would thus afford ample shelter, and their tenants would not be molested, Ch. XVIII. Mark 5 : 3-9 ; Luke 8 : 29, 28 ; Matt. 8 : 29. J.C. 32.

ing fierce, so that no man might pass by that way. And one of them no man could bind, no, not with chains : because that he had been often bound with fetters and chains, and the chains had been plucked asunder by him, and the fetters broken in pieces : neither could any man tame him. And he was driven of the devil into the wilderness, and always, night and day, was in the mountains, and in the tombs, crying and cutting himself with stones. But when he saw Jesus afar off, he ran and fell down before him and worshiped him. And cried with a loud voice, and said, What for the Jews regarded all such places as unclean. At the present day the ruins of ancient tombs are often resorted to for shelter by the Bedouins. "The most interesting remains of Gadara are its tombs, which dot the cliffs for a considerable distance round the city. They are excavated in the limestone rock, and consist of chambers of various dimensions, some more than twenty feet square, with recesses in the sides for bodies. The present inhabitants of Um Reis are all troglodytes, 'dwelling in tombs,' like the demoniacs of old ; and occasionally they are almost as dangerous to the unprotected traveller."—Smith's New Testament History.

Cutting himself with stones.—"This circumstance of cutting himself with sharp stones, instead of a knife (which, of course, would not be granted him), is quite in the manner of maniacs, who often tear their flesh, and cut it with whatever they can lay their hands upon."—Bloomfield. "There is no enemy can hurt us but by our own hands. Satan could not hurt us if our own corruption betrayed us not ; afflictions cannot hurt us without our own impatience ; temptations cannot hurt us without our own yieldance ; death could not hurt us without the sting of our own sins ; sin could not hurt us without our own impatience. How might I defy all things if I could obtain not to be my own enemy ! I love myself too much ; and yet, not enough. O God, teach me to wish myself but so well as thou wishest me, and I am safe."—Bishop Hall. "After all, nothing can work me mischief except myself. The harm that I sustain I carry about with me, and never am a real sufferer but by my own fault."—St. Bernard.

What have we to do with thee.—"An idiom frequent both in Hellenistic and classical Greek. . . . The sense of Chap. XVIII. Mark 5 : 9, 10 ; Luke 8 : 31. Autumn, J.C. 32.

have I to do with thee, Jesus, thou Son of the most high God? art thou come hither to torment us before the time? I adjure thee by God, that thou torment me not. (For he had said unto him, Come out of the man, thou unclean spirit.)

And Jesus asked him, What is thy name?

And he answered, saying, My name is Legion : for the phrase varies with the context, but it usually implies troublesome, or unauthorized, interference. Here it seems to be, 'What hast thou to do with us: what authority hast thou over us?' "Bloomfield. The phrase often occurs in the Old Testament as signifying an abrupt refusal of some request, or a wish not to be troubled with the company or importunity of others.

What is thy name?—"But this is here noticeable, that the first bidding of Christ is not immediately obeyed; that the evil spirits remonstrate, and do not at once quit their hold. No doubt the Lord could have forced them to do so had he willed, but the man might have perished in the process. Even that first bidding had brought on a terrible paroxysm. It was then of Christ's own will, of the Physician's, wise and tender as he was strong, to proceed step by step. And first he demands of him his name. Most probably the question was directed to the man, and for the purpose of calming him by bringing him to recollection, to the consciousness of his personality of which a man's name is the outward expression—that he was a person who had once been apart from, and was not now inextricably intertwined with, those spiritual wickednesses now lording over him. The question might thus have been intended to facilitate his cure."—Trench.

My name is Legion, for we are many.—"A reply in which truth and error are fearfully blended; it declares his sense of the utter ruin of his whole moral and spiritual being. Not on one side only, but on every side, the walls of his spirit have been broken down, and he is laid open to all the incursions of evil, torn asunder in infinite ways, now under one hostile and hated power, now under another. The destruction is complete; they who rule over him are 'lords many.' He can find no other way to express his state than in an image drawn from the reminiscences of his former life. He had seen the thick and serried ranks of a Roman legion, that fearful instrument of oppression, that sign of terror and fear to the conquered nations, and before which the Jew more especially quailed. Even such, at once one we are many. And he besought him much that he would not send them away out of the country, nor command them to go into the deep.

Chap. XVIII. Mark 5 : 11-13 ; Matt. 8 : 32. Autumn, J.C. 32.

Now there was there nigh unto the mountains a great herd of swine feeding. And all the devils besought him, saying, Send us into the swine, that we may enter into and many, cruel and inexorable and strong, were the powers that were tyrannizing over him."—Trench.

Out of the country.—It was the opinion of the Jews, as appears from Dan. 10 : 13, 20, that different evil spirits preside over distinct regions ; and it is a superstition as old as man that "ghosts" haunt the places of their earthly abode.

Into the deep.—That the sea is not meant here is evident ; for to the sea the demons went of themselves, when permitted, at their own request, to enter into the swine. The word deep should be translated abyss. "It means literally without bottom, and is generally rendered 'bottomless [pit]' (Rev. 9 ; 1, 2, 11 ; 11 : 7 ; 17 : 8 ; 20 : 1, 3). It occurs in the New Testament only here, in the passages quoted from Revelation and in Rom. 10 : 7 ; in the latter passage it signifies simply the place of departed spirits."—Abbott. "We are not to understand, of course," says Professor Hackett (in Houghton, Osgood & Co.'s Am. ed. Smith's Bible Dict.), "that abyss in the New Testament is co-extensive with Hades, or the under world as the abode of the dead indiscriminately, but in that part of the wider realm assigned as their special abode to the wicked." It is a noticeable fact that the demons whom Jesus expelled expressed a dread of being sent into the "abyss," and of being "tormented before the time," seeming to indicate that the condition of "lost men" and "fallen angels" will be practically the same.

A herd of Swine.—By the law of Moses swine were unclean, and the touch of them, when dead, defiled a man ; but the owner of this herd bred them, probably, for sale to the Gentiles. The eating of their flesh is generally supposed to cause cutaneous diseases in hot countries, and hence, among a people so liable to leprosy as the Jews, there was excellent reason for its prohibition as food.

Send us into the swine.—"Then occurred an event which is confessedly mysterious, if not inexplicable. In vain do we attempt to interpret it by recalling cases in which beasts catch the impress of human feelings ; in which horses, for example, share the panic of their riders ; or dogs are possessed with the rage of their masters. Equally in vain the proffered explanation that them. And forthwith Jesus gave them leave. And the unclean spirits went out, and entered into the swine ; and the herd ran violently down a steep place into the sea (they were about two thousand), and perished in the waters. And they that kept them, when they saw what was done, fled, and went and told in the city and in the country every thing, and what was befallen to the possessed of the devils.

Ch. XVIII. Matt. 8 : 33, 34 ; Luke 8 : 34, 36. Autumn, J.C. 32.

And, behold, the whole city came out to meet Jesus, to see what was done ; and found the man out of whom the devils were departed, sitting at the feet of Jesus, clothed, and in his right mind ; and they were afraid. They also which saw it told them by what means he the last struggles of this poor demoniac and his unearthly screams struck terror to the neighboring swineherd ; that, as the devil had before spoken by his mouth, it now acted by his hands. They ask permission to go into a herd feeding on the adjoining cliff, receive it, and the two thousand swine, seized with a sudden panic, themselves inexplicably possessed, rush violently down the cliff and are destroyed.”—Abbott.

Down a steep place into the sea.—“The lake is so near the base of the mountain that the swine, rushing madly down it, could not stop, but would be hurried on into the water and drowned. Everywhere [else] along the north-eastern and eastern shores a smooth beach declines gently down to the water. But take your stand a little south of this Chersa. A great herd of swine, we will suppose, is feeding on this mountain that towers above it. They are seized with a sudden panic, rush madly down the almost perpendicular declivity, those behind tumbling over and thrusting forward those before, and as there is neither time nor space to recover on the narrow shelf between the base and the lake, they are crowded headlong into the water, and perish. All is perfectly natural just at this point, and here, I suppose, it did occur. Further south the plain becomes so broad that the herd might have recovered and recoiled from the lake, whose domains they would not willingly invade.”—Thomson.

The whole city came out.—Josephus describes Gadara as a very considerable place. It was the first Jewish city that fell into the hands of the Romans in the war under Vespasian, and suffered great extremities.

Luke 8 : 36, 37 ; Mark 5 : 16, 18-20 ; Matt. 9 : 1.

that was possessed of the devils was healed, and also concerning the swine. Then the whole multitude of the country of the Gadarenes round about besought him to depart from them ; for they were taken with great fear.

And when he was come into the ship, he that had been possessed with the devils prayed him that he might be with him. Howbeit Jesus suffered him not, but saith unto him, Go home to thy friends, and tell them the Lord hath had compassion on thee and how great things he hath done for thee.

And he departed, and began to publish in Decapolis how great things Jesus had done for him : and all men did marvel.

And Jesus entered into a ship, and passed over, and came into his own city.

Go home to thy friends.—"The direction to the healed to go to their homes, and proclaim what the Lord had done for them, so contrary to his general custom, shows that it was his desire to call attention to himself in this section of the land, and, by making this miracle widely known, prepare the way for subsequent labors. Perhaps, also, something in the moral condition of the healed made this desirable for them."—Andrews.

Decapolis.—"A region containing ten cities, as its name imports ; but geographers differ in the enumeration of them. Pliny and Josephus place the country next to Syria, adjoining Galilee on the east, Damascus, the most ancient of its cities, being the capital."—Adam Clarke. And it contained, along with Gentile inhabitants, very many Jews. According to Ritter it was settled by the veterans of Alexander the Great. "Our Lord was not altogether unknown in this region, but his personal ministry did not extend further than this visit and another through the northern part of Decapolis (Mark 7 : 31). In Pella, a city of Decapolis, the Christians found refuge at the destruction of Jerusalem."—Schaff.

Ch. XIX. Matt. 9 : 10 ; Mark 2 : 15 ; Luke 5 : 29.

J.C. 32.

CHAPTER XIX.

FROM MATTHEW'S FEAST TO THE DEATH OF JOHN.

AND when Jesus was passed over again, much people gathered unto him, and gladly received him ; for they were all waiting for him.

And Levi made him a great feast in his own house ;

Levi.—The same as Matthew, the apostle and evangelist. He was the son of a certain Alphæus, and is supposed to have been by birth a Galilean. From the notice of "his own house," and the "great feast" which he made to Jesus, we infer that he was a man of some property ; but, being a tax-gatherer, he could have had no social standing among the Jews. Of his history after the death of Jesus nothing is known with certainty. Eusebius states that he preached in Judea (some say for fifteen years), and then went to foreign nations. Ambrose mentions that he preached in Persia, Isidore in Macedonia, and others trace him among the Medes, Parthians, and Persians of the Euphrates. Clement, Origen, and Tertullian seem to imply that he died a natural death. The tradition of his martyrdom is of later origin.

A great feast.—"The object of this feast, which was a great one (Luke 5 : 29), seems to have been both to honor the Lord and to give him an opportunity to meet in social intercourse many of Matthew's own class, the publicans and sinners. These plainly constituted the great body of invited guests, and for the Lord thus publicly to eat with them was a high mark of his regard for them, as it was also an open rebuke of Pharisaic self-righteousness. It seems, from the question of the Pharisees, 'Why eateth your master with publicans and sinners?' that this was the first instance of the kind which they had known. It is not probable that any Pharisees were invited, nor that they would have accepted an invitation had one been given them, but, with oriental freedom on such occasions, may have come in as spectators ; or the language 'seeing him eat' (Mark 2 : 16) may refer only to their knowledge of the fact, and not to their personal observation. We may suppose that some of John's disciples were present with the Pharisees, and thus the seeming discrepancy between Matt. 9 : 14 and Luke 5 : 33 is easily explained (see Mark 2 : 18). The mention of John's disciples at Capernaum is to be noted as showing that there were some there who did not follow Jesus, and their affinity with the Pharisees." —Andrews.

Matt 9 : 11-14 ; Mark 2 : 16-18 ; Luke 5 : 29-33.

and there was a great company of publicans and of sinners that sat down with Jesus and his disciples ; for there were many, and they followed him. And when the scribes and Pharisees saw him eat with publicans and sinners they murmured against his disciples, saying, How is it that he eateth and drinketh with publicans and sinners ? When Jesus heard it, he saith unto them, They that are whole have no need of the physician, but they that are sick. But go ye and learn what that meaneth : I will have mercy and not sacrifice, for I am not come to call the righteous, but sinners, to repentance.

And the disciples of John and of the Pharisees used

Sinners.—The publicans as a class were sinners ; they were the corrupt local politicians in an age when political corruption was universal, and immeasurably worse than in its worst phases in our own age. They were regarded, and not unjustly, as “altogether thieves and robbers.”

Sat down with Jesus.—Luke says they were invited, and Mark that “they were many, and they followed him.” Bishop Hall remarks : “If he sat with sinners, he converted them ; if with converts, he confirmed and instructed them ; if with the poor, he fed them ; if with the rich, he made them richer in grace. At whose board did he ever sit and left not his host a gainer ?” “He is still the same condescending Jesus, and, sinners as we are, always ready to admit us into his presence. If men do not think themselves too good to come to him, he thinks none too bad.”—Adam.

Go ye and learn.—The citation is peculiar to Matthew. “You are students of the Scriptures, yet do not know the meaning of the passage I quote. Instead of finding fault, go and learn what you ought to know already.”—Schaff.

I desire mercy and not sacrifice (Hosea 6 : 6).—“I desire acts rather than offerings ; practical godliness, not legal forms ; divine sympathy with the lost, rather than only the empty show of outward worship.”—Geikie.

The Pharisees fast.—They, and the more religious among the Jews, fasted twice a week—on Mondays and Thursdays. It appears that this discourse took place on Monday, and therefore Jesus gave especial offence to the Pharisees by feasting with to fast ; and they come and say unto him, Why do the disciples of John and of the Pharisees fast often and make prayers, but thy disciples fast not, but eat and drink ? And Jesus said unto them, Can the children of the bridechamber fast while the bridegroom is with them ? As long as they have the bridegroom with them they cannot fast ; but the days will come when the bridegroom shall be taken away from them, and then shall they fast.

Matt. 9 : 14-17 ; Mark 2 : 18-22 ; Luke 5 : 33-38.

And he spake also a parable unto them : No man putteth a piece of a new garment upon an old ; if otherwise, then both the new maketh a rent, and the piece that was taken out of the new agreeth not with the old. And no man putteth new wine into old bottles, else the new wine will burst the bottles and be spilled, and the bottles shall perish. But new wine must be put into new bottles ; and both are preserved. Also, no man tax-gatherers on a day when they held that a good man should fast.

The children of the bridechamber.—"The friends of the bridegroom who were admitted into the bridechamber formed the marriage procession, and were invited to a participation of the seven days' matrimonial feasting."—Bloomfield.

But the days will come.—"How sublime and peaceful is this early announcement by our Lord of the bitter passage before him !"—Alford. The essential truth taught respecting fasting is that it should never be perfunctory and ceremonial, but always the natural expression of real and deep feeling.

New cloth.—Undressed cloth fresh from the loom shrinks when it becomes wet, and thus draws up and tears away from the old. Perhaps the reference here is to garments made of skins.

New bottles.—Goat skins are still used in eastern countries for holding and transporting liquids. They were common among both Jews and Romans. Those for wine had the hair on the inside, and the outside was coated with pitch ; those for water had the hair on the outside. From long usage the skins become tender, and swell and burst if filled with new wine, which soon ferments ; so would it be, Jesus says, if his new truths were in-having drunk old wine straightway desireth new ; for he saith, The old is better.

Luke 5 : 39 ; 8 : 41 ; Matt. 9 : 18 ; Mark 5 : 22, 23.

While he spake these things unto them, behold there cometh one of the rulers of the synagogue, Jairus by name ; and when he saw him he fell at
The Daughter of Jairus Raised. Jesus' feet, and besought him greatly that he would come into his house, saying, My little daughter lieth at the point of death : I pray thee, come and closed in the old system of the Pharisees. The meaning of both parables is that the teachings of Christ and those of the Pharisees could not be brought into accord. An attempt to combine the two systems would be as absurd as it would be destructive.

The old is better.—"There is no comparison between the relative excellence of new and old wine, but simply a statement of the wish ('desireth') of one accustomed to drinking old wine. The one accustomed to the old wine says : The old is pleasant, good enough for me, I have no desire to try the new. This is precisely the attitude of a false conservatism. The original application to the objectors was intended by our Lord mainly for the instruction of his own disciples, to show 'how natural it was that disciples of John and of the Pharisees could not bring themselves to give up the old forms and ordinances which had become dear to them, and to substitute the new life according to His principles.'"—Meyer, quoted by Schaff.

One of the rulers.—"The president of the synagogue, in virtue of his position as one of the Jewish elders. Therefore of the highest social rank in the city, as Matthew and his company were of the lowest."—Schaff. "In the Jewish synagogues there were no regular teachers, officially qualified to pronounce discourses before the people ; at least none are mentioned in the New Testament. A synagogue preacher has been introduced since. In the time of our Lord the person who read the section for the Sabbath, or any other who was respectable for learning, and who had a readiness of speech, addressed the people. Anciently the Jews called those who, from their superior erudition, were capable of teaching in the synagogue, shepherds, or pastors. But among those who, in addition to the reader of the Scriptures, were employed in the services and government of the synagogues, was the ruler, who presided over the assembly, and invited readers and speakers, unless some who were acceptable voluntarily offered themselves."—Jahn.

At the point of death.—Matthew says, "is even now dead," lay thy hands on her, that she may be healed ; and she shall live. For he had one only daughter, about twelve years of age, and she lay a-dying.

Luke 8 : 42, 49-52 ; Matt. 9 : 19, 23 ; Mark 5 : 24, 36, 38.

And Jesus arose, and followed him, and so did his disciples and much people. While he yet spake there cometh one from the ruler of the synagogue's house, saying to him, 'Thy daughter is dead ; trouble not the Master. As soon as Jesus heard the word that was spoken, he answered him, saying, Fear not : believe only, and she shall be made whole.

And when he came into the house he suffered no man to go in save Peter, and James, and John, and the father and the mother of the maiden.

And all wept, and bewailed her. And seeing the minstrels and the people making a noise, and the tumult, but he gives no account of the deputation who came to the ruler to announce the death of the child. Matthew's account is condensed, the essential fact of the resurrection of the dead child only being preserved. It is not to be supposed that the father knew of his child's death when he applied to Jesus ; no one is recorded to have applied to Jesus to raise the dead. Even Mary (John 11 : 32) had not faith that he could do so great a miracle.

Trouble not the Master.—“The curious [Greek] word skulle, something like our ‘worry,’ or ‘bother,’ is used here, and here alone (except in Luke 7 : 6), by both St. Mark and St. Luke. The message had not been addressed to Jesus, but he overheard it, and with a compassionate desire to spare the poor father from needless agony, he said to him those memorable words, ‘Fear not, only believe.’”—Farrar.

Peter and James and John.—“The selection of Peter, James, and John, to go with him to the house of Jairus, is the first instance recorded of special preference of these three above the other nine apostles. It is hardly to be questioned that this selection was determined by the personal peculiarities of these three that made them more ready than the others to understand the real meaning of Christ's words and works, and to sympathize with him in his trials and griefs.”—Andrews.

The minstrels.—The use of instruments at funerals was of heathen origin, and was not introduced until comparatively late and them that wept and wailed greatly, he said, Weep not ; why make ye this ado ? the damsel is not dead, but sleepeth. And they laughed him to scorn, knowing that she was dead.

And he put them all out, and taketh the father and the mother of the damsel, and them that were with him, among the Jews. These were professional minstrels, who were employed to mourn for the dead. As soon as death ensued the mourning began, and it was kept up until after the burial.

Wailed greatly.—"The expressions of grief at the death of a friend in Eastern countries are extreme. As soon as a person dies, all the females in the family set up a loud and doleful cry. They continue it as long as they can without taking breath, and the shriek of wailing dies away in a low sob. Nor do the relatives satisfy themselves with these expressions of violent grief. They hire persons of both sexes, whose employment it is to mourn for the dead in the like frantic manner (see Amos 5 : 16 ; Jer. 9 : 20). They sing the virtues of the deceased, recount his acts, dwell on his beauty, strength, or learning, on the comforts of his home, and in doleful strains ask him why he has left his family and friends. This violent grief continues, commonly, eight days. In the case of a king, or other very distinguished personage, it is prolonged through an entire month. The lamentation does not cease at the house ; it is exhibited in the procession to the grave, and the air is rent with the wailings of real and of hired mourners. This custom still exists among the more ignorant of the Irish people."—Condensed from Lightfoot.

Not dead, but sleepeth.—"Our Saviour, in this passage, seems to allude to the triumph of Christianity over the grave, by calling death 'sleep.' He used similar language in the case of Lazarus. His disciples, after him, adopted the idea, as, they who sleep in Jesus, first fruits of them that slept.—The ancient Christians, still improving on this idea, called a church-yard a sleeping-place ; which we retain in the word cemetery."—Gilpin. "Besides this, to speak of death as a sleep is an image common, I suppose, to all languages and nations. Thereby the reality of the death is not denied, but only the fact implicitly assumed, that death will be followed by a resurrection, as sleep is by an awakening."—Trench.

Laughed him to scorn.—Derided him. "They mocked at his pretended knowledge, which seemed to impute error to themselves, for they knew that she was dead."—Geikie.

Mark 5 : 41, 42, 24-26 ; Luke 8 : 55, 56 ; Matt. 9 : 26.

and entereth in where the damsel was lying. And he took the damsel by the hand, and said unto her, Talitha cumi : which is, being interpreted, Damsel (I say unto thee), arise. And her spirit came again, and she arose straightway and walked (for she was of the age of twelve years) ; and he commanded to give her meat. And her parents were astonished with a great astonishment ; but he charged them straitly that they should tell no man what was done.

And the fame thereof went abroad into all that land.

And as Jesus went to the ruler's house, much people followed and thronged him. And a certain woman,

I say unto thee, Arise!—“Lightfoot tells us that it was customary with the Jews, when they gave physic to one that was sick, to say, ‘Arise from thy disease,’ meaning, ‘We wish that thou mayest arise.’ In adopting this common form of speech, our Lord shows his humility and condescension—how far he was from all ostentatious display, even in his miracles ; how little he courted admiration by any needless singularities.”—Ford.

The fame thereof went abroad.—“It was so great, because her death was publicly known, the minstrels were assembled, every preparation was made for the funeral, the assertion of our Lord was treated with scorn, and the people were convinced of her actual decease.”—D'Oyly & Mant.

Much people followed him.—“And what a crowd it was ! A rabble gathered out of our streets, composed of all sorts and kinds of people, would seem decent compared with a crowd in an oriental country, where there was so much poverty, where poverty was so squalid, and where ill fare and bad housing led to so many diseases—especially where affections of the eye were almost universal, and where men broke out with all manner of skin diseases, clear down to leprosy itself. Along the highway were human beings of every description—the rich and the poor, the Pharisees and the Sadducees, the rulers and the ruled, young men and maidens, old men and children—mixed, doubtless, with some foreigners, for Galilee was full of the detritus of almost all nations.”—Beecher.

A certain woman.—The disease was considered incurable, and was, according to the law, reckoned unclean (Lev. 15 : 25.) Her touch, therefore, would have been pollution. This may which had an issue of blood twelve years, and had suffered many things of many physicians, and had spent all that she had, and was nothing bettered, but rather grew worse, when she had heard of Jesus, came in the

The Woman Healed of an Issue of Blood. press behind and touched the border of his garment. For she said, If I may touch but his clothes I shall be whole.

And straightway the fountain of her blood was dried up ; and she felt in her body that she was healed of that plague.

And Jesus, immediately knowing in himself that virhave held her back ; or the overwhelming majesty of his presence may have so awed her that she dared not approach Jesus directly.

Suffered from many physicians.—The medical science of that time was the most absurd system of quackery and empiricism. The egg of a grasshopper, the tooth of a fox, or the nail of one who had been hanged, was applied as a remedy to mortal maladies. Lightfoot quotes from the Talmud the treatment for the complaint in the text. A score of impossible remedies are enumerated, and "if they do no good the patient is to be set in a place where two ways meet, a cup of wine is to be put in her right hand, and some one is to come behind and frighten her, and say, 'Arise, and be whole.' If that fails, "Let them dig seven ditches, in which let them burn some cuttings of vines not yet four years old. Let her take in her hand a cup of wine, and let them lead her away from the ditch, and make her sit down over that. And let them remove her from that, and make her sit down over another, saying to her at each remove, 'Arise, and be whole.' In view of this it is entirely credible that this woman had suffered many things of many physicians.

Touched the border of his garment.—This was, no doubt, the square garment worn over the shoulders, and called elsewhere a "cloak." It was surrounded by a fringe, and at its four corners were tassels of threads or strings. (See Numbers 15 : 38, 39 ; Deut. 20 : 11, 12.) This garment was peculiar to the Jews, and was worn to distinguish them from other nations. To touch either of the lower tassels was a mark of profound respect. The custom still prevails in the East. In Evelyn's Memoirs it is said, "The Turk would bring us presents when he met us, kneeling, and kissing the hem of our cloaks."

Luke 8 : 45-48 ; Mark 5 : 32-34 ; Matt. 9 : 22, 27-31.

tue had gone out of him, turned him about in the press, and said, Who touched my clothes ? When all denied, Peter, and they that were with him, said, Master, thou seest the multitude throng thee and press thee, and sayest thou, Who touched me ? And Jesus said, Somebody hath touched me, for I perceive that virtue is gone out of me. And he looked round about to see her that had done this thing.

And when the woman saw that she was not hid, she came, fearing and trembling, knowing what was done in her, and fell down before him, and told him all the truth, before all the people, for what cause she had touched him, and how she was healed immediately.

And he said unto her, Daughter, be of good comfort ; thy faith hath made thee whole ; go in peace. And the woman was made whole from that hour.

And when Jesus departed thence, two blind men followed him, crying, and saying, Thou Son of David, have mercy on us. And when he was Two Blind Men come into the house the blind men came Healed. to him ; and Jesus saith unto them, Believe ye that I

Fearing and trembling.—"Doubtless she dreaded his anger, for the law expressly ordained that the touch of one afflicted as she was caused ceremonial uncleanness till the evening. But his touch had cleansed her, not hers polluted him."—Farrar.

Be of good comfort.—"To one he says, 'Son, be of good cheer ;' to another, 'Daughter, be of good comfort.' What gracious, endearing language ! Yes, Lord, thy forgiveness is cheering ; thy healing is comfort."—Adam.

Son of David.—This was one of the titles of the Messiah. "By these blind men was Jesus for the first time addressed as 'the Son of David.' This shows that his descent from that royal house was known and recognized. Already the people had asked of him (Matt. 12 : 23), 'Is this the Son of David ?' and the use of the title by the blind men shows their disposition to honor him whose help they sought."—Andrews.

Chap. XIX.

Matt. 9 : 32-34 ; Mark 6 : 1, 2.

J.C. 32.

am able to do this? They said unto him, Yea, Lord. Then touched he their eyes, saying, According to your faith be it unto you. And their eyes were opened; and Jesus straitly charged them, saying, See that no man know it. But they, when they were departed, spread abroad his fame in all that country.

As they went out, behold, they brought to him a dumb man possessed with a devil. And when the devil was cast out, the dumb spake: and the multitudes marveled, saying, it was never so seen in Israel. But the Pharisees said, He casteth out devils through the prince of the devils.

And he went out from thence, and came into his own country; and his disciples follow him.

And when the Sabbath day was come, he began to teach in the synagogue: and many hearing him were

It was never so seen in Israel.—This remark seems to refer not to this particular miracle only, but to the four that Jesus had wrought during this day.

The Pharisees said.—No doubt many of the Pharisees had been attracted by the fact that Jairus had called upon Jesus for help, and the title given him by the blind men had provoked them to again ascribe his miracles to the power of Satan. "Their hostility gives confirmation to the truth. Had the Jews been universally or even generally converted by the Gospel miracles, the skeptic might argue, with some plausibility, that the facts had been invented or exaggerated to gratify the national propensity, and had been credited without examination or proof. On the contrary, we are now certain the Gospel miracles were wrought in the presence of enemies, and thus subjected to the severest scrutiny; and that they carried with them conviction to multitudes, notwithstanding the fierce opposition of national prejudice, bigotry, and vice, and the strictest research of the most vigilant hostility."—Graves.

Came into his own country.—See note on Nazareth, page 124.

Many hearing him.—According to many ancient MSS., "the many," i.e., the multitude of the city. This indicates that a larger astonished, saying, From whence hath this man these things ? and what wisdom is this which is given unto him, that even such mighty works are wrought by his hands ? Is not this the carpenter, the son of Mary, the brother of James, and Joses, and of Juda, and Simon ? and are not all his sisters here with us ? And they were audience than usual, drawn together by the fame of his "mighty works," had assembled to hear him, which seems to point clearly to this being a second visit to Nazareth.

Chap. XIX. Mark 6 : 2-4 ; Matt. 13 : 56. Autumn, J.C. 32.

Whence hath this man these things ?—"A question we may well ask, as did the Jews, but with another spirit. What education had Jesus, what patterns to form himself upon, to become the man he was ? By what train of thinking could he conceive, by what prospects be moved to undertake, by what power accomplish, the unparalleled things he did ? To imagine that such a person could have existed by accident is monstrously unreasonable. But to have also fallen by accident into just that country, where was a system of religion he could build on, with predictions applicable to himself, and at a period when he was so pointed out as to raise an universal expectation ; that, under all disadvantages of condition, he could make and maintain the highest claims, interpret the ancient oracles in a sublimer, juster sense than the most learned instructors of the people, and have the self-denial to prefer, in consequence, persecution and crucifixion before the splendor of offered dominion, or the safety of a private station—that all these things (and others equally strange) should meet in the same person, without the special appointment of heaven, exceeds all power of chance. Considered but as a man, he appears the greatest and best of men. His reasonable doctrines, cool temper, composed and familiar conversation, prove he was no enthusiast. The unvaried goodness of his life, and willing suffering of death, with no worldly advantage to attain by the course he took, fully prove he was no impostor. What must he then have been ? And from his whole behavior what can we gather but what the spectators did from the finishing scene on the cross, 'Truly this was the Son of God !' (Matt. 28 : 54)."—Archbishop Secker.

Is not this the carpenter ?—That our Lord should have been taught some handicraft occupation the Jewish law required. And what was so likely as that he should be brought up to the trade of his reputed father, which, though lowly, was not degrading ? Their most distinguished rabbis exercised a trade. Paul was a tent maker. (Acts 18 : 3).

Chap. XIX. Mark 6 : 4-6 ; Matt. 13 : 58 ; 9 : 35-37. J.C. 32.

offended at him. But Jesus said unto them, A prophet is not without honor but in his own country, and among his own kin, and in his own house. And he could there do no mighty work because of their unbelief, save that he laid his hands upon a few sick folk, and healed them.

And he marveled because of their unbelief.

And Jesus went about all the cities and villages, teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom, and healing every sickness and every disease among the people.

They were offended at him.—Scandalized. Their knowledge of his humble birth and meagre education made him seem guilty of an impious assumption in aspiring to the character of a prophet, and, much more, to the title of Messiah.

A prophet is not, etc.—A proverbial expression, verified by experience. The same principle is expressed in the phrases in common use : "Familiarity breeds contempt ;" "Distance lends enchantment to the view ;" and "No man is a hero to his valet." "How could he, whom they had known from childhood up, be a prophet, and possess such powers? Now his fame was spread throughout the whole land, and his character as a prophet was established. Crowds followed him from all parts of the land. His miracles were familiar to all. He had, in the immediate neighborhood of Nazareth, raised a dead man to life. But his now enlarged and confirmed reputation did not weaken the feeling of surprise. All his life was familiar to them, and they could not believe that he was in aught greater than themselves."

And he marveled.—It is twice said that Jesus marveled, once at faith (Matt. 8 : 10), and now at unbelief.

Went about all the cities and villages.—"That the sending of the Twelve upon their mission was during this journey appears from the order in which it stands in all the Synoptists. Matthew (9 : 35, etc.) connects it with the journey following the healing of the blind man, and the dumb possessed ; and Mark (6 : 7) with that following the departure from Nazareth. Luke does not mention this visit at Nazareth, but narrates the sending of the Twelve (9 : 1-6) directly after the healing of Jairus's daughter. How long this circuit continued, or at what point in it the Twelve were sent out, we have no data to determine. That it was extensive, and occupied a considerable period, may Matt. 9 : 37, 38 ; 10 : 1, 5 ; Luke 9 : 2 ; Mark 6 : 7.

But when he saw the multitudes he was moved with compassion on them, because they fainted, and were scattered abroad, as sheep having no shepherd. Then saith he unto his disciples, The harvest truly is plenteous, but the labourers are few. Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest that he will send forth laborers into his harvest.

And when he had called unto him his twelve disciples, he gave them power against unclean spirits to cast them out, and to heal all manner of sickness and all manner of disease, and he be fairly inferred from Matthew's language (9 : 35), that " he went about all the cities and villages."—Andrews.

Mission of the Twelve Apostles.

As sheep having no shepherd.—"A figure, showing the spiritual condition of the people. They were suffering ('distressed') from the burdens put on them by those who pretended to be their shepherds, the scribes and Pharisees, and uncared for by these, they wandered ('scattered') as sheep left to stray from the pasture. Their physical condition as he looked upon them doubtless made the figure especially apt."—Schaff.

The harvest truly is plenteous, etc.—"Another beautiful image. A waving field of golden grain invites many reapers, and demands haste. By the harvest here he meant that the multitude of people that flocked to his ministry was great. The people expected the Messiah. Few were engaged in instructing the multitude. He directed the disciples, therefore, to pray to the Lord of the harvest."—Greswell.

He gave them power.—This is the distinction between the miraculous powers of Christ and those of his apostles. His power was inherent in himself ; theirs was derived from him, and always exercised in dependence on him.

These twelve Jesus sent forth.—"When they had seen the dead raised up, diseases rebuked, and devils expelled, a paralytic new-strung, sins remitted, and a leper cleansed, and had received a sufficient proof of his power, both by deeds and words, then he sends them forth ; and not to dangerous acts, for, as yet, there was no danger in Palestine, but they had only to stand against evil speakings. However, even of this he forewarns them—I mean, of their perils, preparing them even before the time, and making them feel as in conflict, by his continual predictions of that sort."—Chrysostom.

Chap. XIX. Matt. 10 : 5-10 ; Mark 6 : 9. Autumn, J.C. 32.

sent them forth by two and two to preach the kingdom of God, and to heal the sick. These twelve Jesus sent forth, and commanded them, saying, Go not into the way of the Gentiles, and into any city of the Samaritans enter ye not : but go rather to the lost sheep of the house of Israel. And as ye go, preach, saying, The kingdom of heaven is at hand. Heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, raise the dead, cast out devils ; freely ye have received, freely give. Provide neither gold, nor silver, nor brass in your purses ; nor scrip for your

By two and two, that they might support and encourage each other on the way.

Way of the Gentiles.—They were eventually to preach the Gospel to every creature (Mark 16 : 15), and disciple all nations (Matt. 28 : 19), but for the present were to confine themselves to Jewish districts. Probably their Jewish prejudices unfitted them, as yet, for a mission to any but Jews. This was seen even later when John would have called down fire upon a Samaritan village. "It was necessary, first of all, to prepare, in the nation of Israel, a hearth to receive the sacred fire, and to keep its heat in a state of concentration. It was only after the church had thus been safely established in the midst of the people of God, and after the unbelief of the mass had been fully manifested, that the stream of life was poured out over the wide Gentile world."—Kendrick's Olshausen.

Preach, saying, "The kingdom of heaven is at hand." The burden of their preaching was to be a repetition of that of John. Like him, they were to be heralds to prepare the way for Christ.

Heal the sick.—"Men will never believe that we really intend the good of their souls if they do not find that we endeavor to do them good, disinterestedly, in temporal things."—Thomas Scott.

Freely ye have received, freely give.—They were not to make a trade of their miraculous gifts, as the Jewish exorcists did of their pretended power to cast out devils.

Provide neither, etc.—They were not to procure for the purposes of this journey that which they did not already possess.

In your purses.—For traveling expenses. The original word expresses the custom of carrying money in a kind of fob-pocket or purse, which was made in the duplicature of their girdles, and is still used in the East and in Greece. (Comp. Luke 22 : 35).

Nor scrip.—This was a kind of leathern pouch or wallet which journey, neither two coats, neither shoes, but be shod with sandals ; nor yet staves ; take nothing for your journey save a staff only, for the workman is worthy of his meat. And into whatsoever city or town ye shall enter, inquire who in it is worthy ; and there abide till ye go thence. And when ye come into a house salute it. And if the house be worthy, let your peace come upon it ; but if it be not worthy, let your peace return to you. And whosoever shall not receive you, nor hear your words, when ye depart out of that house or city shake off the very dust of your feet for a testimony against them. Verily I say unto you, It shall be more tolerable for the land of Sodom and Gomorrah in the day of judgment than for that city.

Matt. 10 : 10-16 ; Mark 6 : 9, 8, 11 ; Luke 10 : 11.

travelers usually hung about their necks, and in which they carried their food.

Neither shoes.—The original word in Matthew might be rendered sandals, if Mark did not say, " But be shod with sandals." The lower class of people commonly wore nothing on the feet ; but in traveling, sandals were necessary, and on long journeys, and in winter, a kind of short boot or shoe was worn. The meaning of the whole passage is that they were not to take forethought or make provision, as ordinary travelers would do.

Staves are now always used by foot travelers over the rocky roads of Palestine to support them in slippery places, and for defence against robbers ; and it is usual, on long journeys, to take two lest one should fail. Matthew says (see above), provide neither . . . nor yet staves ; Mark, "take but a staff," in other words, take what you happen to have : make no special provision.

Who in it is worthy ?—The Jews had no public houses such as now exist, and it was common for individuals to entertain strangers.

Your peace.—The Jewish form of salutation was, " Peace be to this house." It is still retained among the Turks and other Eastern nations. " No mention is made of the synagogues in their instructions ; it may be because the apostles were not yet confident enough to come forward so publicly. It was to be a house-to-house mission."—Gzike.

Chap. XIX.

Matt. 10 : 17-19.

Autumn, J.C. 32.

Behold, I send you forth as sheep in the midst of wolves : be ye therefore wise as serpents, and harmless as doves. But beware of men ; for they will deliver you up to their councils, and they will scourge you in their synagogues. And ye shall be brought before governors and kings for my sake, for a testimony against them and the Further Instructions to his Apostles.

Behold I send you forth.—As the emergencies referred to did not occur on this journey, some have supposed this part of the discourse was given at a later period.

Wise as serpents.—Serpents have been always an emblem of wisdom and cunning. The Egyptians used the serpent in their hieroglyphics as a symbol of wisdom. Probably the trait which Christ here directed his followers to imitate in the serpent was its caution in avoiding danger. No animal equals it in the rapidity and skill which it evinces in escaping danger. To be sharp-sighted as a serpent was a proverb both among Greeks and Romans.

Harmless as doves.—"There is a beauty in this saying which is seldom observed ; doves are, and always have been, a striking emblem of innocence. Most men would be disposed to destroy a serpent, be it ever so harmless ; yet few are so hard-hearted as to kill a dove. The serpent is represented as prudent to excess, being full of cunning (Gen. 3 : 1 ; 2 Cor. 11 : 3), and the dove is simple, even to stupidity (Hosea. 7 : 11) ; but Jesus Christ corrects here the cunning of the serpent by the simplicity of the dove, and the too great simplicity of the dove by the cunning of the serpent.—Greswell.

They will deliver you up to their councils.—By councils are here to be understood the provincial tribunals which existed in most towns, and even villages. And that synagogues must be taken in like manner is plain from the parallel passages in Mark and Luke. "They would be like helpless sheep in the midst of treacherous wolves. Even their work would be different from what they might expect. To-day it was an olive branch ; to-morrow it would be a sword. Instead of peace, it would divide households and communities, and turn the closest relations into deadly enemies. They would need to labor diligently, for before they had gone over all the towns of Israel he himself would come to their aid as the risen and glorified Messiah."—Geikie.

Ye shall be brought before governors and kings. "If these speeches of Jesus are true, and if, according to his prediction,

Chap. XIX.

Matt. 10 : 19-27.

Autumn, J.C. 32.

Gentiles. But when they deliver you up, take no thought how or what ye shall speak ; for it shall be given you in that same hour what ye shall speak. For it is not ye that speak, but the Spirit of your Father which speaketh in you. And the brother shall deliver up the brother to death, and the father the child ; and the children shall rise up against their parents, and cause them to be put to death. And ye shall be hated of all men for my name's sake : but he that endureth to the end shall be saved. But when they persecute you in this city, flee ye into another : for verily I say unto you, Ye shall not have gone over the cities of Israel till the Son of man be come. The disciple is not above his master, nor the servant above his lord. It is enough for the disciple that he be as his master, and the servant as his lord. If they have called the master of the house Beelzebub, how much more shall they call them of his household ? Fear them not therefore : for there is nothing governors and kings undertake to ruin and destroy those who shall profess themselves his disciples, we will believe, not only that he is a prophet, but that he has received power from God sufficient to preserve and propagate his religion ; and that he would never talk in such a peremptory and discouraging manner were he not assured that he was able to subdue the most powerful opposition that could be made against the faith and doctrine which he taught."—Joseph Addison.

Take no thought.—The word "thought" is used in its old English sense ; meaning, "Be not over-anxious," as in Matt. 6 : 25.

Fear them not therefore.—"I feel more and more as to the joys of conscience. I believe them to be at once the deepest and most real. There is only one great object in this world that deserves our efforts ; that is the good of humanity. As I advance in life, I see it more and more from that point of view which I used to fancy belonged to early youth—namely, as a thing of very mediocre worth, valuable only as far as one can employ it in doing one's duty, in serving men, and in taking one's fit place among them. How cold, small, and sad life would be-covered that shall not be revealed ; and hid that shall not be known. What I tell you in darkness, that speak ye in light : and what ye hear in the ear, that preach ye upon the housetops. And fear not them which kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul : but rather fear him which is able to destroy both soul and body in hell. Are not two sparrows sold for a farthing ? and one of them shall not fall to the ground without your Father. But the very hairs of your head are all numbered. Fear ye not therefore : ye are of more value than many sparrows. Whosoever therefore shall confess me before men, him will I confess also before my Father which is in heaven. But whosoever shall deny me before come if, by the side of this every-day world, so full of cowardice and selfishness, the human side could not build for itself another in which generosity, courage, virtue, in a word, may breathe at ease !"—De Tocqueville.

Hear in the ear.—"Allusion is here made to the manner of the schools. After the return from the captivity, the pure Hebrew was no longer the vernacular tongue of the Jews, yet the law continued to be read in that language. The doctor whispered out of the chair into the ear of the interpreter, and he, with a loud voice, repeated to the whole school that which was spoken in the ear."—Lightfoot.

Preach [i.e., proclaim] ye upon the housetops.—"Perhaps this alludes to the custom that the minister of the synagogue, on the Sabbath eve, sounded with a trumpet six times, on the roof of an exceeding high house, that all might have notice of the coming in of the Sabbath. The first sound was, that they should come in from their work in the fields ; the second, that they should cease from it in the city ; the third, that they should light the Sabbath candle," etc.—Lightfoot. The houses of Judea were flat-roofed, with a balustrade round about. As there are no bells among the Turks, a crier proclaims even now all times of public worship from the housetops.

One of them shall not fall, etc.—His care embraces all things, the most minute and the most magnificent. The same law which regulates the courses of the planets controls the fall of a sparrow and of a feather.

Matt. 10 : 38-42 ; 11 : 1 ; 14 : 1 ; Mark 6 : 12, 13 ; Luke 9 : 6.

men, him will I also deny before my Father which is in heaven.

Think not that I am come to send peace on earth : I came not to send peace, but a sword. For I am come to set a man at variance against his father, and the daughter against her mother, and the daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law. And a man's foes shall be they of his own household. He that loveth father or mother more than me is not worthy of me : and he that loveth son or daughter more than me is not worthy of me. And he that taketh not his cross, and followeth after me, is not worthy of me. He that findeth his life shall lose it ; and he that loseth his life for my sake shall find it.

He that receiveth you receiveth me ; and he that receiveth me receiveth him that sent me. He that receiveth a prophet in the name of a prophet shall receive a prophet's reward ; and he that receiveth a righteous man in the name of a righteous man shall receive a righteous man's reward. And whosoever shall give to drink unto one of these little ones a cup of cold water only in the name of a disciple, verily I say unto you, he shall in no wise lose his reward.

And they went out through the towns, and preached that men should repent. And they cast out many devils, and anointed with oil many that were sick, and healed them everywhere.

And it came to pass, when Jesus had made an end

He that taketh not his cross.—The condemned man was obliged to bear his cross to the place of execution. Jesus tells his disciples that they must be prepared to submit to a death of torture and ignominy. An impostor would not have promised such rewards to his followers.

Luke 9 : 7-9 ; Matt. 14 : 2, 6, 8 ; Mark 6 : 17, 21-25.

of commanding his twelve disciples, he departed thence to teach and to preach in their cities. At that time Herod the tetrarch heard of the fame of Jesus and of all that was done by him (for his name was spread abroad), and he was perplexed, because that it was said of some, that John was risen from the dead ; and of some, that Elias had appeared ; and of others, that one of the old prophets was risen again. And Herod said, John have I beheaded ; but who is this of whom I hear such things ? And he desired to see him ; and said unto his servants, This is John the Baptist ; he is risen from the dead ; and therefore mighty works do shew forth themselves in him. For Herod himself had sent forth and laid hold upon John, and bound him in prison for Herodias' sake, his brother Philip's wife.

And when a convenient day was come, Herod on his birthday made a supper to his lords, high captains, and chief estates of Galilee. And when the daughter of the said Herodias came in, and danced before them, and pleased Herod and them that sat with him, the king said unto the damsel, Ask of me whatsoever thou wilt, and I will give it thee. And he sware unto her, What-

An end of commanding his twelve disciples.—Speaking of "these great parting instructions as given by St. Matthew," Farrar says, "Every missionary and every minister should write them in letters of gold. The sterility of missionary labor [and certainly of the ordinary preaching of the Gospel] is a constant subject of regret and discouragement among us. Would it be so if all our missions [and clerical and lay ministrations in churches and schools] were carried out in this wise and conciliatory, in this simple and self-abandoning, in this faithful and dauntless spirit."

Herod.—See note on page 122.

The high captains were the commanders of a thousand men.

Chap. XIX.

Mark 6 : 25-29 ; Matt. 14 : 9-12.

J.C. 32.

soever thou shall ask of me I will give it thee, unto the half of my kingdom.

And she went forth, and said unto her mother, What shall I ask ? And she said, The head of John the Baptist.

And she, instructed of her mother, came in straight-way with haste unto the king, and asked, saying, I will that thou give me by and by in a charger the head of John the Baptist. And the king was exceeding sorry ; yet for his oath's sake, and for their sakes which sat with him at meat, he would not reject her. And immediately the king sent an executioner, and commanded his head to be brought. And he went and beheaded him in the prison, and brought his head in a charger, and gave it to the damsel ; and the damsel gave it to her mother.

And when his disciples heard of it, they came and took up his corpse, and laid it in a tomb, and went and told Jesus.

The head of John.—Josephus attributes John's execution to Herod's fear of his fomenting sedition among the people. For consideration of John's imprisonment, etc., see note on page 122.

PART IV.

FROM THE DEATH OF JOHN THE BAPTIST

TO THE

FINAL DEPARTURE OF JESUS FROM GALILEE :

FROM

APRIL TO OCTOBER, J.C. 33.

TIME, SIX MONTHS.

Chap. XX.

Mark 6 : 30, 31 ; Luke 9 : 10.

April, J.C. 33.

CHAPTER XX.

THE FEEDING OF THE FIVE THOUSAND, AND OTHER INCIDENTS.

AND the apostles, when they were returned, gathered themselves together unto Jesus, and told him all things, both what they had done, and what they had taught. And Jesus having heard of The Apostles Return from their Mission. the death of John, said unto them, Come ye yourselves apart into a desert place, and rest a while : for there were many coming and going, and they had no leisure so much as to eat.

The death of John.—These words are supplied to combine the account of Matthew (14 : 13) with the other narratives. “It is not said where Jesus was when the disciples of John came to him to announce their master’s death (Matt. 14 : 12), but it was natural that they should seek him at Capernaum. About the same time the twelve, who had been absent on their mission, rejoined him. Perhaps their return at this juncture may have been determined by the tidings of the death of the Baptist, which must very soon have become widely and generally known. As usual, whenever Jesus, after one of his circuits, returned to Capernaum, the people of the surrounding cities and villages flocked to see him, bringing with them their sick. ‘Many were coming and going, and they had no leisure so much as to eat’ (Mark 6 : 31). Jesus therefore determines to cross the sea and find repose in the uninhabited hills upon the eastern shore. Some attribute this departure to fear of Herod’s hostility, and this has some countenance in the language of Matt. 14 : 13. But a more careful examination shows this could not have been his motive. Mark (6 : 31) gives the Lord’s own words to the apostles. He desired to separate them from the multitude, and to give them, after their labors, a little period of repose, such as was not possible for them to obtain at Capernaum. . . . That the departure across the sea was not through fear of personal violence from Herod appears from the fact that Jesus the next day returned, landing publicly upon the shore of Gennesaret ; and thence, attended by crowds, went to Capernaum, where he taught openly in the synagogue (Mark 6 : 53-55 ; John 6 : 52-

Ch. XX. Luke 9 : 10 ; Mark 6 : 32, 33 ; John 6 : 1, 2. J.C. 33.

And he took them and went aside privately by ship over the sea of Galilee, which is the sea of Tiberias, into a desert place apart belonging to the city called Bethsaida. And a great multitude of people saw them 59). And after this he continued to make Capernaum his home, unmolested by Herod."—Andrews.

A desert place.—Bethsaida is now generally supposed to have been situated just at the entrance of the Jordan into the lake, and upon both banks of the river. "Upon the east side lies the rich level plain of Butaiha (Batihah), forming a triangle, of which the eastern mountains make one side, and the river bank and the lake shore the two other. This plain, with its bordering hills, probably belonged to Bethsaida."—Andrews. It is at the south-eastern angle of this plain, where the hills come down close to the shore, that Thomson (ii. 29) places the site of the feeding of the five thousand. He says : "From the four narratives of this stupendous miracle we gather, first, that the place belonged to Bethsaida ; second, that it was a desert place ; third, that it was near the shore of the lake, for they came to it by boats ; fourth, that there was a mountain close at hand ; fifth, that it was a smooth, grassy spot, capable of seating many thousand people. Now all these requisites are found in this exact locality, and nowhere else, so far as I can discover. This Butaiha belonged to Bethsaida. At this extreme south-east corner of it the mountain shuts down upon the lake, bleak and barren. It was, doubtless, desert then as now, for it is not capable of cultivation. In this little cove the ships (boats) were anchored. On this beautiful sward, at the base of the rocky hill, the people were seated."

A great multitude followed and outwent them.—Some have supposed that John (6 : 4) mentions the fact that "the Passover was nigh" to explain why so great a company should have gathered to him of men, women, and children. They were composed, at least in part, of those that were journeying toward Jerusalem to keep the feast. Alexander, on the other hand, objects that, "from the fact that they had nothing to eat, they could scarcely be a caravan of pilgrims, but were probably just come from their own homes. It would seem that the people were mostly from Capernaum and the towns adjacent. (See Mark 6 : 33.)" "It was the Lord's desire to go privately with the apostles, and thus escape the multitudes ; but as his preparations to depart were necessarily made in public, and the departure itself was in sight of all, he could not prevent them from following him. It strikingly marks the strong hold he now had upon the people at departing, and many knew him, and followed him, because they saw his miracles which he did on them that were diseased, and ran afoot thither out of all the cities, and outwent them, and came together unto him. And Jesus, when he came out, went up into a mountain, and there he sat with his disciples. And the passover, a feast of the Jews, was nigh. And when he lifted up his eyes and saw a great multitude, he was moved with compassion toward them, because they were as sheep not having a shepherd : and he received them, and began to teach them many things of the kingdom of God, and healed them that had need of healing.

Matt. 14 : 13-15 ; Mark 6 : 33-35 ; Luke 9 : 10-12 ; John 6 : 2-5.

Feeding of the Five Thousand ;
near Bethsaida.

And when the day began to wear away, his twelve dis-large, that so great a number should follow him so far. That they should be able to keep pace with those in the boat will not appear strange if we remember the relative positions of Capernaum and Bethsaida. From the former city, which we identify with Tell Hum, to the entrance of the Jordan, where we place Bethsaida, is, according to Robinson, one hour and five minutes, or about two and a half geographical miles. The distance from the entrance of the Jordan along the eastern shore to the point where the mountains approach the lake is also about an hour. The whole distance, then, which the people had to travel, was not more than six or eight miles, and, from the conformation of the coast, could be as rapidly passed by those on the shore as those in the boat."—Andrews.

Up into a mountain.—"Upon landing they went up some hill or cliff, and from that point saw the great crowd (John 6 : 3, 5). It is not certain that the needed rest was obtained."—Schaff.

Not having a shepherd.—None to instruct or guide them. The scribes and Pharisees despised the common people, and when they did teach them, simply led them astray. They were blind leaders of the blind.

Began to wear away.—"When it was evening" (Matt. 14 : 15), "when the day was far spent" (Mark 6 : 35). Among the Jews there were two evenings : the first from three to six o'clock, corresponding to our afternoon ; the other from six to ciples came unto him, and said, This is a desert place, and now the time is far passed : send the multitude away, that they may go into the towns and country round about, and lodge and buy themselves victuals, for they have nothing to eat.

Matt. 14 : 15-17 ; Mark 6 : 35-38 ; Luke 9 : 12, 13 ; John 6 : 5-9.

Jesus then saith unto Philip, Whence shall we buy bread that these may eat ? (And this he said to prove him : for he himself knew what he would do.) Philip answered him, Two hundred pennyworth of bread is not sufficient for them, that every one of them may take a little. But Jesus said, They need not depart ; give ye them to eat. And the disciples say unto him, Shall we go and buy two hundred pennyworth of bread, and give them to eat ? He saith unto them, How many loaves have ye ? go and see. And when they knew, one of his disciples, Andrew, Simon Peter's brother, saith unto him, There is a lad here which hath five barley-loaves and two small fishes : but what are they among so many ? (For they were about five thousand men.)

nine, after which came "the darkness." The text refers to the first, John 6 : 16 to the second, three or four hours later ; and this allows a sufficient interval for the feeding of the multitude.

Saith unto Philip.—As a resident of Bethsaida Philip might be supposed to know better than the others where to procure food ; but the question was put to test him. As Augustine remarks, "it was not bread which Jesus sought from Philip, but faith."

Two hundred pennyworth.—Two hundred denaries, about thirty dollars ; in those days a large sum, and probably more than the disciples had in their possession. A denarius was the price of a day's labor, and its purchasing value was therefore nearly ten times as much as the same sum has at this day.

Barley loaves.—Barley was of only about one third the value of wheat. The loaves were made thin and brittle, and were therefore broken, not cut. The supply—"five thin barley crackers, barely adequate for as many persons, and two little fishes, such as served the purpose of a relish to the otherwise vegetable diet of the Galilean peasant—was not, in truth, sufficient for their own meal."—Abbott.

Matt. 14 : 17-19 ; Mark 6 : 38-42 ; Luke 9 : 13-17 ; John 6 : 9-12.

Jesus said, Bring them hither to me ; and he said to his disciples, Make them sit down by fifties in a company, upon the green grass. (Now there was much grass in the place.) And the men sat down in ranks, by hundreds, and by fifties. And Jesus took the five loaves, and the two fishes, and looking up to heaven, blessed, and brake the loaves, and distributed them to the disciples, and the disciples to them that were sat down ; and likewise of the two fishes divided he among them all as much as they would. And they did all eat, and were all filled. When they were filled, he said unto his disciples, Gather up the fragments that remain, that

By hundreds and by fifties.—"That is," says Wesley, "fifty in a file, and a hundred in a rank." So a hundred, multiplied by fifty, made five thousand. "This miracle could not be counterfeited."—Adam Clarke.

In ranks.—"The word in the original is taken from beds in a garden, to which companies of people, seated in rows, twice the number in rank as in file, would bear resemblance. Many expositors seem to think that the whole multitude formed one body, but the plural number leads us to conclude that several distinct companies were formed, but all arranged in the same manner."—Scott. The use of the original word by Mark suggests to Geikie that this disposition of the multitude, arrayed in their bright-colored Eastern garments, reminded Peter long afterward (when Mark's gospel was written) of the many-hued flower-beds of a great garden. Thus placed, "the disciples were able to number the people with some accuracy."—Abbott.

Much grass in the place.—"This circumstance is plainly the remark of an eye-witness."—Paley.

Gather up the fragments.—This injunction was no doubt given to enforce the lesson that no part of the bounties of Providence, however small, should be wasted. The quantity gathered is incontestable evidence of the reality of the miracle. It was an amazing exhibition of creative power ; but scarcely less amazing is that other miracle which is daily seen in nature—the tiny acorn expanding slowly into the gigantic oak. Upon this text Olshausen remarks : "This union of careful savingness with creative power is a feature so peculiar that it impresses, beyond all mistake, a heavenly character on the narrative. Such things nothing be lost. Therefore they gathered them together, and filled twelve baskets with the fragments of the five barley-loaves, and of the fishes which remained over and above unto them that had eaten. And they that had eaten were about five thousand men, beside women and children.

Matt. 14 : 20, 21 ; Mark 6 : 43-45 ; Luke 9 : 17, 14 ; John 6 : 12-14, 10.

Then those men, when they had seen the miracle that Jesus did, said, This is of a truth that Prophet that should come into the world.

When Jesus therefore perceived that they would come and take him by force, to make him king, he straightway constrained his disciples to get into a ship, and to go are not invented ! Nature, that mirror of divine perfections, places before our eyes the same combination of boundless munificence, and of truest frugality in imparting her benefits." " God loveth a bountiful, but not a wasteful, hand." — Archbishop Sandys. " Thy superfluities are the poor man's necessities." — Augustine.

Baskets.—It was customary for the Jews on a journey to carry small flag baskets, slung over the shoulder, to hold their provisions, as there were then few inns, and they could not eat with Gentiles without pollution. Tacitus says that a flag basket, and a bundle of straw for a bed, composed the entire household furniture of a Jew. A similar allusion is made by Juvenal in his Third Satire. The original word denotes that these were a kind of large basket, usually slung from the shoulder, and of a different sort from those mentioned in the feeding of the four thousand, which were " hand-baskets." In both cases the fragments gathered far exceeded the original quantity of food.

That prophet.—The prophet spoken of by Moses (Deut. 18 : 15), " We can scarce doubt from the context that they meant the Messiah, for so great was their enthusiasm that they proposed among themselves to take him by force and make him king (John 6 : 14, 15). Thus the effect of the miracle was to confirm them in their false Messianic hopes ; for they interpreted it as a sign and pledge of the highest temporal prosperity under his rule, who could not only heal the sick of all their diseases, but feed five thousand men with five loaves of barley bread. Hence he must immediately dismiss them." — Andrews.

Constrained his disciples.—" It appears from Matthew and Mark that he sent away the disciples first, perhaps that the excite-before him unto the other side, unto Bethsaida, while he sent the multitudes away. And when he had sent the multitudes away, he went up again into a mountain apart to pray : and when the evening was come he was there alone.

Matt. 14 : 22-25 ; Mark 6 : 45-48 ; John 6 : 15-18. J.C. 33.

Jesus Walks on the Water.
Sea of Galilee.

And his disciples went down unto the sea, and entered into a ship, and went over the sea toward Capernaum. And it was now dark, and Jesus was not come to them. And the sea arose by reason of a great wind that blew, and the ship was now in the midst of the sea, tossed with waves : and he saw them toiling in rowing ; for the wind was contrary unto them.

And about the fourth watch of the night he cometh

ment of the multitude might not seize upon them. That they were unwilling to leave him, and that he was obliged to 'constrain' them to depart, is not strange if we remember that they knew no way by which he could rejoin them but by a long walk along the shore, and this in the solitude and darkness of the night ; for it was evening when they left the place."—Andrews. "He overcame their unwillingness to leave him by a promise to join them at the mouth of the Jordan, just below Bethsaida."—Abbott.

He went up into a mountain.—Not a mountain, but the mountain on whose slope he had so lately fed the five thousand—a part of the range by which the lake is encircled. "The second instance mentioned of a night so spent, the first being the night prior to the choice of apostles (Luke 6 : 12, 13) ; and both mark important points in his life."—Andrews.

In the midst of the sea.—The "great wind" blew them off from land, and, in spite of all their efforts at rowing, they could not reach Bethsaida, nor even Capernaum, but were driven out into the middle of the lake, and southerly, opposite the Plain of Gennesaret. The width of the sea is there about six miles, and as "they had rowed about five-and-twenty or thirty furlongs" when Jesus met them, they were scarcely more than half way across. As it was then "about the fourth watch," from three to six o'clock A.M., they had been struggling with the wind and waves eight or ten hours.

The fourth watch.—"In the time of Christ the night, in imitation of the Romans, was divided into four watches, viz. : 1, unto them, walking upon the sea, and would have passed by them. So when they had rowed about five-and-twenty or thirty furlongs, they see Jesus walking on the sea, and drawing nigh unto the ship : and they supposed it had been a spirit, and cried out for fear. (For they all saw him, and were troubled.) And immediately he spake unto them, saying, Be of good cheer : it is I ; be not afraid.

Matt. 14 : 25-30 ; Mark 6 : 48-50 ; John 6 : 18-20. J.C. 33.

And Peter answered him and said, Lord, if it be thou, bid me come unto thee on the water. And he said, Come. And when Peter was come down out of the ship he walked on the water to go to Jesus. But the evening, from twilight to nine o'clock ; 2, the midnight, from nine to twelve ; 3, the cock-crowing, from twelve to three ; and the morning, from three o'clock till daybreak."—Jahn. The four periods are distinctly stated in Mark 13 : 35.

Walking on the sea.—In the Egyptian hieroglyphics the figure of two feet treading the sea represents an impossibility. "Some cheats have pretended to cure diseases miraculously, and some have even attempted to raise the dead ; yet no impostor, I believe, has ever been so bold as to undertake to feed five thousand people with five loaves and two fishes, or to walk on the waves of the sea."—Bishop Porteus.

They had rowed.—"Being forced by the wind to betake themselves to their oars."—Henry.

A spirit.—The Jews, and the ancients generally, believed in the existence of spirits in the human form. They thought evil spirits walked the night to work harm to mortals. Ps. 91 : 6, as rendered in the Septuagint, is, "The devils that walk in the night." The original word here should be rendered "apparition," an unreal appearance of a real person. It is not the same as the term usually translated "spirit."

Peter . . . walked on the water.—"Not necessarily very far ; and yet so long as he thus walked it was through supernatural aid from Christ. The power was obtained and conditioned by faith in Christ's power. So in our spiritual walk above the waves of this world."—Schaff. It is to be noticed that Peter began to sink when his attention was distracted from Christ by the boisterous wind. That he would otherwise have been sustained is indicated by the exclamation of Jesus, "Wherefore didst thou doubt?"

Matt. 14 : 30-35 ; Mark 6 : 51-53 ; John 6 : 21. J.C. 33.

when he saw the winds boisterous, he was afraid ; and beginning to sink, he cried, saying, Lord, save me. And immediately Jesus stretched forth his hand, and caught him, and said unto him, O thou of little faith, wherefore didst thou doubt ?

Then they willingly received him into the ship, and the wind ceased, and they were sore amazed in themselves beyond measure ; for they considered not the miracle of the loaves ; for their heart was hardened. Then they came and worshiped him, saying, Of a truth thou art the Son of God. And immediately the ship was at the land, whither they went.

And they drew to the shore in the land of Gennesaret,

Sore amazed in themselves beyond measure.—"The words in the original are still stronger—indeed so strong that it is impossible for the English language to express all their force. In comparison with this miracle, even that of the loaves and fishes seems to have appeared nothing in the eyes of the disciples, for Mark informs us that 'they considered not the miracles of the loaves, for their heart was hardened ;' but at the act of walking to them on the sea for their deliverance they were amazed beyond measure ; they were overwhelmed and overcome with this astonishing display of divine power, therefore they instantly fell at the feet of Jesus and worshiped him, exclaiming, with devout awe, 'Of a truth thou art the Son of God.'"—Greswell.

Their heart was hardened.—Their minds were dull of perception.

Immediately at the land.—"This was on the western side of the lake, and we may either suppose that the wind during the night had driven them near that shore, or accept another miracle."—Schaff. But the distance across was six miles, and it is distinctly stated that they had gone less than four miles when Jesus came to them.

The land of Gennesaret.—The word means the "Garden of the Prince." It extended for about six miles along the western shore of the lake, and had an average breadth of about two miles. It was extremely fertile and populous, and was the scene of much of the public life of Jesus. In speaking of it Josephus says : "Such is the fertility of the soil that it rejects no kind of plant, and they who cultivate it have left no sort unplanted and when they were come out of the ship, straightway the men of that place knew him, and ran through the whole region round about, and began to carry about in beds those that were sick, where they heard he was. And whithersoever he entered, into villages, or cities, or country, they laid the sick in the streets, and besought him that they might touch, if it were but the border of his garment : and as many as touched him were made perfectly whole.

Chap. XX. Mark 6 : 53-56 ; Matt. 14 : 35, 36.

J.C. 33.

there ; and such is the temperature of the climate that it suits the most different wants of nature. In addition to palm trees, which thrive best by heat, and figs and olives in their vicinity, which require a milder air, nut trees, the hardiest of plants, flourish there in the utmost abundance. It might be said that nature had been purposely ambitious of forcing herself to collect upon one spot discordant principles, and that the seasons, with a salutary conflict, each as it were challenged exclusively the possession of the country ; for not merely does it so unaccountably nourish the different productions of as many different periods of the year, but it also preserves what it nourishes. The noblest of the kind, such as grapes and figs, it supplies for ten months without ceasing : and fruits of every other description, growing old on the trees round about, are supplied for the whole year."

The men of that place knew him.—"It was one of the days of synagogue worship—Monday or Thursday—and they met him on his way to the synagogue, to which they accordingly went with him. Excitement was at its height. News of his arrival had spread far and near, and his way was hindered by crowds, who had, as usual, brought their sick to the streets through which he was passing, in hope of his healing them."—Geikie.

They laid the sick in the streets.—"Maximus Tyrius tells us that the medical art had its rise from the custom of placing sick persons on the side of frequented ways, that so those who passed, inquiring into the nature of their complaint, might communicate the knowledge of what had been to themselves useful in like cases."—Burder.

Touch the border of his garment.—The cure of the afflicted woman must have been widely reported. From this notice we get an idea of the crowd of sick that everywhere thronged Jesus. The number was so great that they feared he could not cure them all by his ordinary methods ; but while he was merely

Chap. XX.

John 6 : 22-27.

April, J.C. 33.

The day following, when the people which stood on the other side of the sea saw that there was none other boat there save that one whereinto his disciples were entered, and that Jesus went not with his disciples into the boat, but that his disciples were gone away alone (howbeit there came other boats from Tiberias nigh unto the place where they did eat bread, after that the Lord had given thanks)—when the people therefore saw that Jesus was not there, neither his disciples, they also took shipping, and came to Capernaum, seeking for Jesus.

Jesus Teaches in the Synagogue
at Capernaum.

And when they had found him on the other side of the sea, they said unto him, Rabbi, when camest thou hither? Jesus answered them and said, Verily, verily, I say unto you, Ye seek me, not because ye saw the miracles, but because ye did eat of the loaves, and were filled. Labor not for the meat which perisheth, but for that meat which endureth unto everlasting life, which the Son of man shall give unto you : for him hath God the Father sealed.

passing they could touch his garments ; and the wonder followed, "As many as touched him were made perfectly whole."

The day following the one on which the five thousand were fed.

Not because ye saw the miracles.—They followed Jesus not because they saw evidence of his being "the prophet that should come into the world," but because he had supplied their lowest needs. "Not because he taught them, but because he fed them ; not for love, but for loaves. Thus they do who aim at secular advantage, and follow him because they get preferments."—Henry.

That meat which endureth.—"He had discoursed with the woman of Samaria under the similitude of water ; he here speaks of the same things under the similitude of meat. His design is to moderate our worldly pursuits, not to forbid honest labor for food convenient (2 Thess. 3 : 10, 12)."—Henry.

Sealed.—"Hath confirmed, authorized, commissioned, as it

Chap. XX.

John 6 : 27-32.

April, J. C. 33.

Then said they unto him, What shall we do that we might work the works of God? Jesus answered and said unto them, This is the work of God, that ye believe on him whom he hath sent. They said therefore unto him, What sign shewest thou then, ^{The Bread from Heaven.} that we may see, and believe thee? what dost thou work? Our fathers did eat manna in the desert; as it is written, He gave them bread from heaven to eat. Then Jesus said unto them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, Moses gave you not that bread were, with the witness of a seal." Miracles were to his doctrine what a seal is to a written instrument.

What shall we do that we might work the works of God? "As Jews, they had been painfully keeping all the rabbinical precepts in belief that their doing so gave them a claim above. Yet if he had some additional injunctions, they were willing to add them to the rest, that they might legally qualify themselves for a share in the new kingdom of God as a right. But, instead of multiplied observances, he startled them by announcing that citizenship in the New Theocracy required no more than their believing in him, as sent from the Father. In this lay all, for the manifold 'works of God' would spring naturally from it."—Geikie.

What sign showest thou?—On other occasions the Jews had asked for a sign from the visible heaven—which they supposed the dwelling of God—thus showing that they expected some extraordinary physical phenomena would attend the coming of the Messiah. They now say to Jesus, in effect, "We have eaten of the loaves—they were earthly food; but Moses gave us manna (bread) from heaven to eat. What like this do you do?" In view of this expectation his answer has peculiar force.

Our fathers did eat manna.—"The Jews insinuated that feeding a few thousands with the five loaves was an inconsiderable thing compared with what Moses did when he fed the whole camp of Israel; but our Lord here declares the purposes of his grace and bounty to be far more extensive, as reaching to the whole world, and giving immortal life to all that should believe in him."—Doddridge.

Moses gave you not.—It was not Moses, but the Angel Jehovah, who was with Moses in the wilderness, that fed the Israelites with manna. Jesus does not directly say that it was

Chap. XX.

John 6 : 32-39.

April, J.C. 33.

from heaven ; but my Father giveth you the true bread from heaven. For the bread of God is he which cometh down from heaven, and giveth life unto the world.

Then said they unto him, Lord, evermore give us this bread. And Jesus said unto them, I am the bread of life : he that cometh to me shall never hunger ; and he that believeth on me shall never thirst. But I said unto you, That ye also have seen me, and believe not. All that the Father giveth me shall come to me ; and him that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out. For I he who had fed their fathers ; but he presses upon them the greater evidence of his love, in his having come to give himself for "the life of the world." That he was the Angel Jehovah, or "Angel of the Covenant," so often mentioned in the Old Testament, is expressly stated in Malachi 3 : 1. "The Lord, whom ye seek, shall suddenly come to his temple, even the messenger [angel] of the Covenant, whom ye delight in." This truth lends even a more intense interest to the Gospel history. It was he who had watched over the Jewish nation from its very beginning who uttered the pathetic lament over Jerusalem, "Oh, Jerusalem . . . how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wing, and ye would not !"

Evermore give us this bread.—"Like Ponce de Leon, with the spring of unfading youth in Florida, they thought that the new gift would literally make them immortal, and eagerly clamored to have a boon so far in advance of the day before."—Geikie.

Ye have also seen me.—They had been eye-witnesses of his deeds as the Messiah, and yet they did not believe.

I will in no wise cast out.—"The original expression here is extremely beautiful and emphatic. It represents an humble supplicant as coming into the house of some prince, or other great person, to cast himself at his feet, and to commit himself to his protection and care. He might fear that his petition might be rejected, and he thrust out ; but our Lord assures him to the contrary. His house and heart are large enough to receive, shelter, and supply all the indigent and distressed. God only knows how many thousand souls have been supported by these words."—Doddridge. "It is less injurious to Christ to doubt even of his existence than to doubt of his willingness to save a wounded, broken-hearted sinner."—Ryland.

Chap. XX.

John 6 : 39-50.

April, J.C. 33.

came down from heaven, not to do mine own will, but the will of him that sent me. And this is the Father's will which hath sent me, that of all which he hath given me I should lose nothing, but should raise it up again at the last day. And this is the will of him that sent me, that every one which seeth the Son, and believeth on him, may have everlasting life : and I will raise him up at the last day.

The Jews then murmured at him, because he said, I am the bread which came down from heaven. And they said, Is not this Jesus, the son of Joseph, whose father and mother we know ? how is it then that he saith, I came down from heaven ?

Jesus therefore answered and said unto them, Murmur not among yourselves. No man can come to me, except the Father which hath sent me draw him : and I will raise him up at the last day. It is written in the prophets, And they shall be all taught of God. Every man therefore that hath heard, and hath learned of the Father, cometh unto me. Not that any man hath seen the Father, save he which is of God, he hath seen the Father. Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that believeth on me hath everlasting life. I am that bread of

Is not this Jesus, the son of Joseph ?—"The congregation, comprising some rabbis and other enemies, had from time to time, in Jewish fashion, freely expressed their feelings, and had taken such offence at his claim to be the bread that came down from heaven, that their whispers and murmurs now ran through the whole building."—Geikie.

No man can come to me.—The difficulty in this case was not a want of ability, but erroneous opinions, pride, obstinacy, and self-conceit, which prevented their giving due weight to evidence. The word cannot is often used to denote a strong and violent opposition of the will.

It is written in the prophets.—Mich. 4 : 2 ; Jer. 31 : 33.

life. Your fathers did eat manna in the wilderness, and are dead. This is the bread which cometh down from heaven, that a man may eat thereof, and not die. I am the living bread which came down from heaven : if any man eat of this bread, he shall live for ever : and the bread that I will give is my flesh, which I will give for the life of the world.

The Jews therefore strove among themselves, saying, How can this man give us his flesh to eat ? Then Jesus said unto them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of man, and drink his blood, ye have no life in you. Whoso eateth my flesh, and drinketh my blood, hath eternal life ; and I will raise him up at the last day. For my flesh is meat indeed, and my blood is drink indeed. He that eateth my flesh, and drinketh my blood, dwelleth in me, and I in him. As the living Father hath sent me, and I live by the Father, so he that eateth me, even he shall live by me. This is that bread which came down from heaven : not as your fathers did eat manna, and are dead ; he that eateth of this bread shall live for ever.

I am the living bread.—"From the rabbinical illustrations of Lightfoot, it is plain that the metaphors employed in this discourse must have been familiar to most of the hearers as being in frequent use among the Jewish doctors. I need only instance the following example : 'Every mention of eating and drinking found in Ecclesiastes is said of the law and good works.'"
Bloomfield. The metaphor was as familiar and as readily understood as our expressions of "devouring a book," or "drinking in" instruction. "I am not only the Life-giving Bread, but the Living Bread, and as all that is living communicates life, so whoever eats this only true Bread of Heaven—whoever believes in me—shall live for ever. As the Living Bread I will give myself—my flesh—that is, my life—for the life of the world."—Geikie.

Eat my flesh.—"It cannot be questioned but that he speaks in this chapter of our continual feeding upon him by faith."—John Calvin.

Chap. XX.

John 6 : 59-66.

April, J.C. 33.

These things said he in the synagogue, as he taught in Capernaum.

Many therefore of his disciples, when they had heard this, said, This is an hard saying; who can hear it?

Many Disciples
Forsake Him.

When Jesus knew in himself that his disciples murmured at it, he said unto them, Doth this offend you? What and if ye shall see the Son of man ascend up where he was before? It is the spirit that quickeneth; the flesh profiteth nothing: the words that I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life. But there are some of you that believe not. (For Jesus knew from the beginning who they were that believed not, and who should betray him.) And he said, Therefore said I unto you, that no man can come unto me except it were given unto him of my Father.

From that time many of his disciples went back, and walked no more with him.

Hard saying.—Some explain this as “hard to understand,” others as “offensive.” Both senses are probably applicable. It is not strange that Jesus, making such pretensions as neither Moses nor any prophet had made, should have been unacceptable to those who knew his humble origin and circumstances; and the truths he touched upon cannot be intelligible, except to the experience of spiritually-minded persons, and such the Jews generally were not. This he recognizes in the remark, “It is the spirit that quickeneth.”

Many of his disciples went back.—“The false enthusiasm which had hitherto gathered the masses round Jesus was henceforth at an end, now that their worldly hopes of him as the Messiah were exploded. His discourse had finally undeceived them. He was founding a mysterious spiritual kingdom: they cared only for a kingdom of this world. It became for the first time clear that no worldly rewards or honors were to be had by following him, but only spiritual gifts and benefits, for which most of them cared nothing. He had disenchanted the insincere and selfish who had hitherto flocked after him, and they forthwith showed their altered feelings. From the moment of this address the crowds that had thronged him began to disappear, returning

Chap. XX.

John 6 : 66-71 ; 7 : 1.

April, J.C. 33.

Then said Jesus unto the Twelve, Will ye also go away ? Then Simon Peter answered him, Lord, to whom shall we go ? thou hast the words of eternal life. And we believe, and are sure that thou art that Christ, the Son of the living God. Jesus answered them, Have not I chosen you twelve, and one of you is a devil ? He spake of Judas Iscariot the son of Simon : for he it was that should betray him, being one of the twelve.

After these things Jesus walked in Galilee : for he would not walk in Jewry, because the Jews sought to kill him.

to their homes, doubtless in angry disappointment."—Geikie. It was at the close of the second year of his ministry, and after more than a twelvemonth of constant preaching in Galilee, and now his followers were reduced to the original twelve, and a mere handful of devoted disciples. How slow had been the growth of that seed whose branches he had predicted would overshadow the earth !

One of you is a devil.—“ Not the devil ; not merely devilish ; but belonging to the kingdom of the devil ; one of his ministers and agents.”—Abbott. “ I can see no proof that Judas from the beginning intended to betray Christ. It is more probable he at first engaged with him in expectation of secular advantage ; and finding those views disappointed, he might now begin to form that detestable scheme which he afterward executed. If this was the occasion (as I think probable), one would imagine that such an intimation of his secret wickedness must have struck him to the heart.”—Doddridge. But there “ is no evidence that Jesus designated Judas so that the disciples then understood that it was he. It does not appear that the apostles suspected Judas, as they continued to treat him afterward with the same confidence ; for he carried the bag, or the purse containing their little property. At the table, when Jesus said that one of them would betray him, the rest did not suspect Judas until Jesus pointed him out particularly.”—Greswell.

CHAPTER XXI.

THE FEEDING OF THE FOUR THOUSAND, AND OTHER INCIDENTS.

THEN came together unto Jesus the Pharisees, and certain of the scribes, which came from Jerusalem. And when they saw some of his disciples eat bread with defiled (that is to say, with unwashen) hands, they

Which came from Jerusalem.—"Much earlier in the Lord's ministry, as we have seen, a deputation of scribes had been sent from Jerusalem to watch and oppose him. The presence of this new deputation may be ascribed to the reports that had been borne to that city by the pilgrims going to the feast, of the feeding of the five thousand, and of the wish of the people to make him king. So great a miracle, and its effect on the popular mind, could not be overlooked ; and they hasten to counteract, if possible, his growing influence. Arriving at Capernaum, and watchful to seize every possible ground of accusation against him, they notice that some of his disciples did not wash their hands in the prescribed manner before eating, a sign that they were already in some degree becoming indifferent to Pharisaic traditions. The words of the Lord in reply to the Pharisees are full of severity, and show that he knew that they were, and would continue to be, his enemies. Now for the first time he addresses them openly as hypocrites, and reproaches them, that they set aside by their traditions the commandments of God."

—Andrews.

Unwashen hands.—On this subject the Pharisees were particularly scrupulous. The Talmud tells of a certain Rabbi Akiba, who, being confined in prison with only a small allowance of water, and having spilled a part, chose rather to die of thirst than to omit washing his hands with the remainder. It also says that, "Whoever despises the washing of hands shall be rooted out of the world." Some of their precepts respecting ablutions were ridiculous in the extreme. "It was laid down that the hands were first to be washed clean. The tips of the ten fingers were then joined and lifted up so that the water ran down to the elbows, then turned down so that it might run off to the ground. Fresh water was poured on them as they were lifted up, and twice again as they hung down. The washing itself was to be done by rubbing of one hand in the hollow of another."— found fault. For the Pharisees, and all the Jews, except they wash their hands oft, eat not, holding the tradition of the elders. And when they come from the market, except they wash, they eat not. ^{Tradition of the Elders.} And many other things there be, which they have received to hold, as the washing of cups, and pots, and brazen vessels, and tables.

Chap. XXI. Matt. 15 : 2, 3, 7 ; Mark 7 : 3-6. Summer, J.C. 33.

Then the Pharisees and scribes asked him, Why do thy disciples transgress the tradition of the elders, but eat bread with unwashen hands ?

Geikie. And various other forms were to be observed too senseless even for repetition.

All the Jews.—The great body of the people observed the Pharisaic traditions. The Sadducees are said to have rejected these customs.

Except they wash.—This is explained by Grotius, “ unless they wash themselves, i.e., their bodies (namely, in opposition to the washing of the hands before mentioned) ; because after coming from a place of such public resort, and where people in a crowd must touch one another, they might unintentionally have touched some impure person or thing, and hence might require a more exact ablution than merely washing the hands.”

Tradition of the elders.—“ Beside the laws of Moses, as recorded in the Pentateuch, the rabbins pretend that he left a variety of oral traditions, delivered to him by the voice of God at Sinai, and handed down from generation to generation, by word of mouth, to the time of our Lord, and even lower ; for it does not appear that any complete digest of them was put into writing till the latter part of the second century, by Rabbi Judas, surnamed the holy. This work (which makes six volumes, folio) is called the Mishna, or second law, as containing a variety of additions to, and explanations of, the written law : these were pretended to be explicatory, but many of them were evasive, and some even subversive, of the laws of Moses, as in the text.”—Williams. “ To explain the Mishna were written the two Talmuds, called the Jerusalem and Babylonish, which are named Gemara, or complement, ‘ because by these the oral law is fully explained.’ The former was completed about A.D. 300 ; the latter after A.D. 500.”—Jenks.

Chap. XXI. Matt. 15 : 8, 3-6 ; Mark 7 . 6-13. Summer, J.C. 33.

He answered and said unto then, Well did Esaias prophesy of you hypocrites,

This people draweth nigh unto me with their mouth,
And honoreth me with their lips ;
But their heart is far from me.
But in vain they do worship me,
Teaching for doctrines the commandments of men.

For laying aside the commandment of God, ye hold the tradition of men, as the washing of pots and cups : and many other such like things ye do ? And he said unto them, Why do ye also transgress the commandment of God by your traditions ? For God commanded, Honor thy father and thy mother ; and, Whoso curseth father or mother, let him die the death : but ye say, if a man shall say to his father or mother, It is Corban (that is to say, a gift), by whatsoever thou mightest be profited by me : and honor not his father or his mother, he shall be free. And ye suffer him no more to do aught for his father or his mother ; thus making the word of God of none effect through your tradition,

Well did Esaias prophesy of you.—That is, the words of Isaiah were well applicable to them.

Curseth.—Revileth. “ The proper import of the [original] word, is to give abusive language, to revile, to calumniate. The application, in the present instance, is evidently to reproachful words quite different from cursing.”—Campbell.

By whatsoever thou mightest be profited.—The meaning is, “ That from which thou mightest have been benefited by me is an offering to God.” “ Allusion is made to a method of rendering void the precept to relieve parents, practised by the Jews at this time. It was held by the traditions of the elders, that, if a son made a formal devotion to sacred purposes of those goods which he could afford for the relief of a parent, it was then not lawful for him to succor his parent. And, what was most strange, he was not held to be bound by his words to devote his estate to sacred uses ; but not to relieve the parent he was inviolably bound.”—Lightfoot.

Chap. XXI. Matt. 15 : 10-19 ; Mark 7 : 14-21. Summer, J.C. 33.

which ye have delivered : and many such like things do ye.

And he called all the people unto him, and said unto them, Hearken unto me every one of you, and understand. There is nothing from without a man, that entering into him, can defile him : but the things which come out of the mouth, those are they that defile the man. If any man have ears to hear, let him hear.

And when he was entered into the house from the people, his disciples came and said unto him, Knowest thou that the Pharisees were offended after they heard this saying ?

But he answered and said, Every plant, which my heavenly Father hath not planted, shall be rooted up. Let them alone : they be blind leaders of the blind. And if the blind lead the blind, both shall fall into the ditch.

Peter then said unto him, Declare unto us this parable. And Jesus said, Are ye also yet without understanding ? Do ye not yet understand, that whatever entereth in at the mouth from without, cannot defile a man, because it entereth Explains the "Parable." not into his heart, but into the belly, and goeth out into

Which ye have delivered.—The elders, possibly the Sanhedrin, had delivered their judgment upon the matter, and they claimed to be the authorized interpreters of the law.

Nothing from without can defile him.—"Words clear enough to us, perhaps, but grand beyond thought when uttered, for they were the knell of caste—heard now, for the first time, in the history of the world."—Geikie.

Let them alone.—"Error, if let alone, defeats and destroys itself. Let it work out its self-destructive results."—Schaff.

This parable.—This "dark saying." "The tendency to regard the external and formal as a vital and leading characteristic of religion was well nigh unconquerable in minds habituated to Jewish conceptions."—Geikie. Hence, the Master's words were dark and strange, and seemed to require an explanation.

Chap. XXI. Matt. 15 : 19-24 ; Mark 7 : 21-24. Summer, J.C. 33.

the draught, purging all meats? And he said, That which cometh out of the man, that defileth the man. For from within, out of the heart of men, proceed evil thoughts, adulteries, fornications, murders, thefts, covetousness, wickedness, deceit, lasciviousness, an evil eye, blasphemy, false witness, pride, foolishness ; all these evil things come from within, and defile the man : but to eat with unwashen hands defileth not a man.

And Jesus arose from thence and went into the borders of Tyre and Sidon. And behold, a woman of Canaan, who was a Greek, a Syrophenician by nation, came out of the same Daughter of the Syrophenician Woman Healed. coasts, and cried unto him, saying, Have mercy on me, O Lord, thou son of David ; my daughter is grievously vexed with a devil. But he answered her not a word. And his disciples came and besought him,

Out of the heart.—"The criminality of acts proceeds from the purpose. What comes out of the mouth indicates what is in the heart."—Schaff.

Evil thoughts.—"He puts evil thoughts in the front, as the leader of all this black regiment ; for 'out of this evil treasure of the heart men bring forth evil things ;' and all the fruits of the flesh, the grapes of Sodom and the clusters of Gomorrah, receive their sap and nourishment from this root of bitterness."—Bishop Hopkins.

Foolishness.—"Because this renders all the other evils less curable, it stands last. Human corruption does not subsist exclusively in the will."—Bengel.

Tyre was built about 1700 B.C., and was celebrated for its wealth, commerce, and manufactures.

Sidon was the oldest and most important maritime city of the ancient world. It is about twenty-five miles north of Tyre. See note on page 000. The district called Syrophenicia was altogether inhabited by Gentiles.

He answered her not a word.—"By this unwonted silence our Lord would try her faith, and prove it to his disciples. They were Jews, and must learn to intercede for a heathen woman before they could carry the Gospel to the Gentiles."—Schaff.

Chap. XXI. Matt. 15 : 25-29 ; Mark 7 : 24-32. Summer, J. C. 33.

saying, Send her away ; for she crieth after us. But he answered and said, I am not sent but unto the lost sheep of the house of Israel.

They entered into a house, and would have no man know it : but he could not be hid. For the woman, whose young daughter had an unclean spirit, heard of him, and came and fell at his feet, and besought him that he would cast forth the devil out of her daughter.

But Jesus said unto her, Let the children first be filled : for it is not meet to take the children's bread, and to cast it unto the dogs.

And she answered and said unto him, Truth, Lord : yet the dogs eat of the children's crumbs which fall from their master's table.

Then Jesus answered and said unto her, O woman, great is thy faith : for this saying, go thy way ; be it unto thee even as thou wilt. The devil is gone out of thy daughter.

And her daughter was made whole from that very hour. And when she was come to her house, she found the devil gone out, and her daughter laid upon the bed.

And again, departing from the coasts of Tyre and Dogs.—An epithet applied by the Jews to all Gentiles. The literal rendering is "little dogs," household pets, a meaning which the woman skilfully uses. Homer represents persons of the highest rank as allowing their faithful dogs to wait round their festive boards, and gather up the fragments of their meals. —Iliad, Book V., 173.

Her daughter was healed from that hour.—"As in the case of the Gentile centurion, the cure was performed at a distance. The intermediate link in both cases was strong faith combined with affection for the person healed."—Schaff.

Again departing.—"He probably made a circuit, passing south-eastward, through the northern part of the Decapolis at the foot of the Lebanon range, reaching the mountainous (and solitary) district on the eastern shore of the Sea of Galilee."—Schaff.

Chap. XXI.

Mark 7 : 32-37 ; 30-31.

Summer, J.C. 33.

Sidon, he came nigh unto the sea of Galilee, through the midst of the coasts of Decapolis. And they Heals a Deaf and Dumb Man. bring unto him one that was deaf, and had an impediment in his speech ; and they beseech him to put his hand upon him. And he took him aside from the multitude, and put his fingers into his ears, and he spit, and touched his tongue : and looking up to heaven, he sighed, and saith unto him, Ephphatha (that is, Be opened).

And straightway his ears were opened, and the string of his tongue was loosed, and he spake plain.

And he charged them that they should tell no man : but the more he charged them, so much the more a great deal they published it ; and were beyond measure astonished, saying, He hath done all things well ; he maketh both the deaf to hear, and the dumb to speak.

And he went up into a mountain and sat down there. And great multitudes came unto him, having with them those that were lame, blind, dumb, maimed, and many

One that was deaf.—"It is impossible to tell where this cure took place ; but from the fact that Jesus enjoined silence upon the deaf man and his friends, we infer that it was wrought before he came to the shore of the lake."—Andrews.

So much the more they published it.—"The effect of this was, as related by Matthew, a great gathering to Him of 'the lame, blind, dumb, maimed, and many others,' whom he healed. Both Matthew and Mark speak of the wonder and astonishment of the multitude as they saw these healings, as if they now saw them for the first time. It is to be remembered that Jesus had not visited this region at all, except for the few hours when he healed the demoniacs of Gergesa, and afterward when he fed the five thousand ; and the great body of the people now saw him for the first time."—Andrews.

Maimed.—"The original might be rendered 'deformed,' those wounded or diseased in hand or foot."—Schaff. Our word maimed implies the loss of a member.

Chap. XXI. Matt. 15: 32-38 ; Mark 8 : 1-8. Summer, J.C. 33.

others, and cast them down at Jesus' feet ; and he healed them : insomuch that the multitude wondered, when they saw the dumb to speak, the maimed to be whole, the lame to walk, and the blind to see : and they glorified the God of Israel.

Then the multitude being very great, and having nothing to eat, Jesus called his disciples unto him, and saith unto them, I have compassion on the multitude, because they have now Four Thousand are Fed. been with me three days, and have nothing to eat : and if I send them away fasting to their own houses, they will faint by the way : for divers of them came from far. And his disciples answered him, From whence can we satisfy so great a multitude with bread here in the wilderness ?

And Jesus asked them, How many loaves have ye ?

And they said, Seven, and a few little fishes.

And he commanded the multitude to sit down on the ground, and he took the seven loaves, and gave thanks,

Cast them down—indicating haste and excitement in those that bore the sick.

Three days, and have nothing to eat.—Meaning probably that during that time they had been without their customary daily food, not entirely deprived of nourishment. Their wants were simple, and the mildness of the sky in the summer nights invites sleeping in the open air.

Whence can we satisfy so great a multitude?—"The question may seem strange after the miraculous feeding of the five thousand. But it was not so strange as their subsequent reasoning about the leaven of the Pharisees and Sadducees (Matt. 16 : 6-12). Our own forgetfulness and unbelief should make us wonder less at the 'little faith' of the disciples. In the previous case the disciples emphasized the amount of bread needed ('two hundred pennyworth') ; in this, the fact that they are in a desert place."—Schaff.

On the ground—not on the grass, as in the former instance in Matt. 14 : 19 ; they were now in a wilderness, destitute, probably, and brake, and gave to his disciples to set before them ; and they did set them before the people. And he blessed the few small fishes, and commanded to set them also before them. And they did all eat, and were filled : and they took up of the broken meat that was left seven baskets full. And they that had eaten were four thousand men, beside women and children. And he sent away the multitude.

Ch. XXI. Matt. 15 : 37-39 ; 16 : 1 ; Mark 8 : 8-11. J.C. 33.

And straightway he entered into a ship with his disciples, and came into the coasts of Magdala, and Dalmanutha.

A Sign again Demanded.

And the Pharisees with the Sadducees came forth, of herbage. This is another of those indications of accuracy in detail which go far to verify the Gospel narratives.

Gave thanks.—"The form of the short prayer, which, in the time of Christ, was uttered before and after meals, has been preserved by the Talmudists. It is as follows : 'Blessed be Thou, O Lord, our God, the King of the world, who hast produced this food, or this drink (as the case may be), from the earth, or the vine.'"—Jahn.

Baskets.—"Hand-baskets." See note on page 294.

Magdala and Dalmanutha.—"Magdala is generally identified with El Mejdal, a miserable village on the south side of the plain of Gennesaret, near the lake. Dalmanutha is generally supposed to have been a small town or village in the neighborhood of Magdala, perhaps in its territory, and upon the shore. Porter places it about a mile south of Magdala, by the fountain Ain-el-Barideh."—Andrews. It is probable that Jesus, still seeking retirement, landed at an obscure locality between the two places, and was there found by the Pharisees and Sadducees, who, with hostile intentions, "came forth" to meet him.

Sadducees.—"This is the first time the Sadducees are named as acting in opposition to Jesus. Hitherto they seem to have regarded him with indifference, if not with contempt ; but as his teachings exposed their errors, their hostility was aroused, and henceforth they appear as acting in unison with the Pharisees as his bitter enemies. The Pharisees had already stifled their dislike of the Herodians, and had formed an alliance with them that they might the more easily crush him. It marked the growing malignity of feeling that a class fanatically proud of their ceremo-

Chap. XXI.

Matt. 16 : 2-4 ; Mark 8 : 12. Summer, J.C. 33.

and began to question with him, and tempting him, desired that he would shew them a sign from heaven.

He answered and said unto them, When it is evening, ye say, It will be fair weather : for the sky is red. And in the morning, It will be foul weather to-day : for the sky is red and lowering. O ye hypocrites, ye can discern the face of the sky ; but can ye not discern the signs of the times ? And he sighed deeply in his spirit, nial and moral purity—a class from whose midst had sprung the zealots for the law, who abhorred all rule except that of a restored theocracy—should have banded themselves with a party of moral indifferentists, partial to monarchy, and guilty of flattering even the hated family of Herod. But a still more ominous sign of increasing danger showed itself in even Sadducees joining the Pharisees to make new attempts to compromise Jesus with the authorities.”—Geikie.

A sign from heaven.—“ The peculiarity of the sign which his enemies now sought from him was that it should be from heaven, or something visible in the heavens ; perhaps some change in the sun or moon, or a meteor, or fire, or thunder and lightning.”—Andrews. He had healed the sick, and raised the dead ; cast out demons, and fed thousands with a few loaves and fishes ; but these were earthly signs, and according to them might all be wrought through the power of the prince of the devils. But the evil powers could not “ show signs in the heavens” (Baruch. 6 : 66) ; give them manna to eat, as did Moses ; call down thunder and hail, like Samuel ; or fire and rain, like Elijah ; or make the shadow on the dial turn backward, as did Isaiah. Such signs their rabbis said would appear when the Messiah came, and if he would show these signs they would believe. He knew their insincerity, and had already enjoined upon his disciples not to cast pearls before swine ; therefore, turning from them, he denounced them as hypocrites, who could discern the face of the sky, but not the signs of the times, and refused to give any other sign than one which would be too late to profit them—his own resurrection.

He sighed deeply.—The original word denotes intense feeling. He sighed from the very heart. Alexander observes also that the expression (Matt. 16 : 4 ; Mark 8 : 13) “ He left them,” suggests the idea of “ abandonment, letting them alone, leaving them to themselves, giving them up to hopeless unbelief.” His emotion indicates how keenly he felt the opposition of his ene-and saith, Why doth this wicked and adulterous generation seek after a sign ? Verily I say unto you there shall no sign be given unto it, but the sign of the prophet Jonas.

Chap. XXI. Matt. 16 : 4-6 ; Mark 8 : 13-15. Summer, J.C. 33.

And he left them, and entering into the ship again, departed to the other side. And when his disciples were come to the other side, they had forgotten to take bread, neither had they in the ship with them more than one loaf.

The Leaven of the Pharisees.

Then Jesus charged them, saying, Take heed and beware of the leaven of the Pharisees and Sadducees, and of Herod.

mies. And "the plain prediction of his death which so soon followed shows that he knew the crisis was approaching. ('The sign of the prophet Jonah,' Matt. 16 : 4, points in the same way.) It may have been a sign of his entering, though with human pang, upon the appointed path of tribulation. But the sign was mainly for these who would reject the atoning sorrows they were the instruments in producing."—Schaff.

The sign of the prophet Jonas.—"It was never known that any one pretending to be a prophet laid the foundation of the truth of his pretensions upon his being despised and rejected, and even crucified as a deceiver, by them to whom he was sent, and among whom he performed all his miracles ; and upon what should be done by others at his death ; and upon what he should do after his resurrection."—Whitby. Yet this Jesus did repeatedly and openly, so that even his enemies were well aware of it !

To the other side.—He returned to Galilee but once again, and then with the utmost privacy.

Had forgotten to take bread.—"Saw that they had forgotten."—Kuinoel.

Beware of the leaven.—The figure is used for a permeating spiritual influence (Matt. 13 : 33). "From the accidental circumstance of their having forgotten to lay in before their departure any supply of bread (implying that in their journeyings to and fro they were accustomed to carry with them their own provision, and also that their departure from Magdala had been precipitate and sudden), and because they were aware that the mutual animosity of the Jewish sects made them avoid, as much as possible, all dealings, even of buying or selling, with those of an opposite sect or party, the apostles interpreted the injunction literally."—

Chap. XXI. Mark 8 : 16-22 ; Matt. 16 : 7-12. Summer, J.C. 33.

And they reasoned among themselves, saying, It is because we have taken no bread.

When Jesus perceived it, he said unto them, O ye of little faith, why reason ye among yourselves, because ye have brought no bread? Do ye not yet perceive, neither understand? have ye your heart yet hardened? Having eyes, see ye not? and having ears, hear ye not? and do ye not remember? When I brake the five loaves among five thousand, how many baskets full of fragments took ye up? They say unto him, Twelve.

And when the seven among four thousand, how many baskets full of fragments took ye up? And they said, Seven.

And he said unto them, How is it that ye do not un-

Greswell. " ' He tells us,' they whispered, ' that if we buy bread from a Pharisee or Sadducee, the bread would defile us, as it would if we bought it from a Samaritan.' So rude was the spiritual material from which Jesus had to create the founders of Christianity!"—Geikie. " According to Matthew, he admonishes his disciples to beware of the leaven of the Pharisees and Sadducees; according to Mark, of the leaven of the Pharisees and of Herod. This slight discrepancy is generally explained by saying that Herod was a Sadducee. This is in itself probable, for none of the Herodian princes seem to have imbibed the true Jewish spirit; and though fearing the Pharisees, because of their great influence over the people, yet favored the Sadducees, and gave office so far as possible to men of that party."—Andrews. " Herod was not a professed Sadducee, but our Lord was warning against what all these had in common. The one common characteristic of the Pharisees, Sadducees, and Herodians was 'hypocrisy,' the last-named party coquetting with the other two as politicians do, and of course acting hypocritically."—Schaff.

Baskets.—In the relation formerly given of both miracles, and here, where our Lord recapitulates the principal circumstances of each, a different kind of basket employed for holding the fragments is carefully indicated in the Greek. "This difference incidentally confirms the truthfulness of the account."—Schaff.

How is it that ye do not understand, etc?—"The recent Ch. XXI. Mark 8 : 22-27 ; Matt. 16 : 13 ; Luke 9 : 18. J.C. 33.

derstand that I spake not to you concerning bread, but that ye should beware of the leaven of the Pharisees and of the Sadducees ?

Then understood they that he bade them beware not of the leaven of bread, but of the doctrine of the Pharisees and Sadducees.

And he cometh to Bethsaida ; and they bring a blind man unto him, and besought him to touch him. And A Blind Man Healed.
 he took the blind man by the hand, and led him out of the town ; and when he had spit on his eyes, and put his hands upon him, he asked him if he saw aught.

And he looked up, and said, I see men as trees walking.

After that, he put his hands again upon his eyes, and made him look up : and he was restored, and saw every man clearly. And he sent him away to his house, say-instruction (Matt. 15 : 19, 20) that eating did not defile a man, should have prevented the surmise about not eating bread with the Pharisees and Sadducees ; the miracles should have shown them that lack of earthly bread was not referred to."—Schaff.

Cometh to Bethsaida.—As he now sought retirement, it is likely that Jesus had not purposed going to Bethsaida, where he must have been well known, and was sure to attract a crowd. But he had set out on a journey of some length, on which it was indispensable to carry food, therefore the neglect of the disciples to bring bread had forced a visit to this place—probably the nearest city—to procure it. That he led the blind man out of the town before performing the cure shows his desire of privacy.

He spit on his eyes.—"He might have wrought the cure by a word, but he chose to use the same form as in the case of the dumb man in the Decapolis."—Geikie. The mode of cure was calculated to excite faith in the blind man. That it was not instantaneous would seem to indicate that he lacked the degree of faith that would so invigorate his faculties as to render him susceptible to the healing influence. "There may have been something in the man's spiritual condition which called for this method to develop his faith."—Schaff. "His seeing men as trees proves that he was not blind from birth."—Kuinoel.

Ch. XXI. Matt. 16 : 13-15 ; Mark 8 : 27-29 ; Luke 9 : 18-20. J.C. 33.

ing, Neither go into the town, nor tell it to any in the town.

And Jesus and his disciples went out and came into the coasts of Cæsarea Philippi, and it came to pass by the way, as he was praying alone, his disciples were with him and he asked them Peter Professes
His Faith. saying, Whom do men say that I, the Son of man, am ?

And they answered, Some say that thou art John the Baptist ; some say Elias ; and others, Jeremias, or one of the old prophets risen again.

Cæsarea Philippi was situated at the foot of Mount Hermon, and near the source of the Jordan. It is now called Banias, and is a wretched hamlet of about a hundred miserable huts, inhabited by Turks. It was close to Dan, the extreme northern limit, as Beersheba was the extreme southern of ancient Palestine. A town had existed there from time immemorial, but Herod Philip had, three years before the birth of Christ, rebuilt it in a style of great magnificence, adorning the temple built by his father with altars, votive images, and statues, and given the place the name of the Emperor—to which his own was attached to distinguish it from the Cæsarea on the Mediterranean coast. It was one of the loveliest spots in Palestine, and the country around has still great natural beauty. "Thick woods still shade the channel of the young river. Oaks and olive groves alternate with pastures and fields of grain, and high over all rises the old castle of Banias, perhaps the 'Tower of Lebanon, that looketh toward Damascus,' of the Song of Solomon."—Geikie. It was nearly in the latitude of Tyre, and thus far out of reach of the rabbis and chief priests who were dogging the footsteps of Jesus. Into the borders—towns or villages dependent on this important city—Jesus came with his disciples. "The natural inference from the narratives of Matthew and Mark is that the Lord journeyed directly from Bethsaida toward Cæsarea Philippi, and that there was no return to Capernaum or visit to Jerusalem before the Transfiguration."—Andrews.

One of the old prophets risen again.—From the accounts which Josephus has given of the tenets of the Pharisees, it appears that their notion of the immortality of the soul was the Pythagorean metempsychosis ; that the soul, after the dissolution of one body, passed into another ; and that these removals were perpetuated and diversified, through an infinite succession, the

Ch. XXI. Matt. 16 : 15-17 ; Mark 8 : 29 ; Luke 9 : 20. J.C. 33.

He saith unto them, But whom say ye that I am ?

And Simon Peter answered and said, Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God.

soul animating a sound and healthy body, or being confined in a deformed and diseased frame, according to its conduct in a prior state of existence. From this notion, derived from the Greek philosophy, we find the Jews speculated variously concerning Jesus, and conjectured which of the ancient prophets it was whose soul now animated him, and performed such astonishing miracles. "It is to be noted that no important part of the people seem to have regarded Jesus as the Christ, or else it would have been mentioned by the apostles. It is apparent that he was regarded rather as a forerunner of the Messiah than as the Messiah himself, though public sentiment may have changed from time to time in regard to his Messianic claims."—Andrews.

Whom say ye that I am ?—"In the conscious divinity of his nature, Jesus had never yet asked the Twelve any question respecting himself ; but it was necessary, now that the end was approaching, that they should know him in his true dignity. He must reveal himself definitely as the Messiah, and be formally accepted as such. Without a personal center round which to gather, the work of his life would have faded away at his death. . . . He had founded a kingdom for the first and only time in history on personal love to the founder, and as such he must definitely reveal himself in his spiritual relation to it as, henceforth, its recognized Messiah-King."—Geikie.

Thou art the Christ, the Son of the Living God.—"Every word here is emphatic—a most concise, and yet comprehensive, confession of faith. The Christ, or Messiah, points out his divinity, and shows his office—the Son, designates his person : on this account it is that both are joined together so frequently. Of the living God—literally, of God, the Living One. Living—a character applied to the Supreme Being, not only to distinguish him from the dead idols of paganism, but also to point him out as the source of life, present, spiritual, and eternal. Probably there is an allusion here to the great name Yeve, or Yehovah, which properly signifies being, or existence."—Adam Clarke. "God had revealed this to Peter, since men of themselves readily form lower conceptions of Christ. This is the germ of the true and full statement respecting the Divine Human Person of Christ. The germ itself was a revelation, and its development was through subsequent revelation to the apostles. The doctrine of Christ's Person is not the result of human speculation, but a truth revealed by the Father of our Lord respecting his only Chap. XXI.

Matt. 16 : 17, 18.

Summer, J.C. 33.

And Jesus answered and said unto him, Blessed art thou, Simon Bar-jona : for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father which is in heaven. And I also say unto thee, That thou art Peter, and Begotten Son."—Schaff. "This truth of the united divinity and humanity of the Lord being known and confessed, Jesus could begin to open to them other truths till this time concealed. Now he could teach them that his first work in the flesh was to suffer ; that he must be rejected by the Jews and be put to death ; that he must rise from the dead, and afterward establish his kingdom. These truths, so new and strange to the disciples, so foreign to all their modes of thinking, they could not for a long time comprehend. The very fact of the divinity of Jesus made it still more incomprehensible how he could suffer and die, nor could the plainest words of the Lord make it intelligible."—Andrews.

Flesh and blood.—A Hebrew phrase for man, as man (1 Cor. 15 : 50 ; Eph. 6 : 10 ; Gal. 1 : 6). It here denotes "natural reason," or "human faculties."

But my Father who is in heaven.—"The real knowledge of Jesus as the Messiah, the Son of the living God, is and must be a matter of divine revelation. Men may, of themselves, hold such a doctrine as part of a creed, but a belief that influences heart and life is the result of a divine revelation made in us. Peter's confession was based on such a belief. For the trials of faith before them during the remainder of our Lord's earthly life the disciples needed a knowledge of his person far above the carnal notions of the Messiah ; the reply of Peter shows that they had it, and our Lord tells whence it came."—Schaff. (Compare John 6 : 37, 44, 45).

Thou art Peter, and upon this rock.—Petros, the Greek word for "rock." This passage has had a great diversity of interpretations, which the reader may see stated fairly in Schaff on Matt. 16 : 18. The Romanists have built upon it their whole hierarchy, and Protestants generally, in their anxiety to overturn the position of the Romanists, have denied that the text has any personal allusion to Peter, and claimed that the truth which he uttered—the divinity of Christ—is the rock on which the church was to be built. The view of Schaff is that Peter is personally alluded to, but only as representing all the apostles ; and this he confirms by remarking that "what is addressed to Peter in the next verse (Matt. 16 : 19) is afterward repeated to all the apostles" (Matt. 18 : 18). He adds, "Our Lord is usually represented, not as the foundation, but as the Builder and Master,

Chap. XXI.

Matt. 16 : 18, 19.

Summer, J.C. 33.

upon this rock I will build my church : and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it. And I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven : and of the spiritual temple, into which living stones are built, the first ones laid (the apostles) being the foundation." "Undoubtedly he meant Peter, as the plain import of the words implies. Protestants have no more right to twist Scripture than Catholics. . . . But the building of his church upon Peter—that is, the founding of the Jewish and then of the Gentile churches by Peter's preaching—is one thing ; the making an infallible Pope out of the very fallible Simon Peter is another and wholly different thing, not found in this or any other text."—Eggleston. It is to be noticed that this passage is altogether omitted by Mark, and on this Beza (Calvin's successor) remarks : "As the ancients, with general consent, record that this gospel was dictated by the Apostle Peter to Mark, who can believe that either Peter or Mark would have omitted that expression, 'Thou art Peter,' if they had thought that the foundation of the Christian church was placed in these words?"

My church.—"This word occurs only twice in the Gospels (here and Matt. 18 : 17). The Greek word, meaning 'an assembly called out' (with a technical sense in classical Greek), was used to translate the Hebrew expression, Kahal, 'congregation.' While it usually means a local congregation, it must be taken here in a general sense. It refers to a congregation distinct from the Jewish ('my church'), the first intimation of such a separation. Its formation is only predicted ('I will build'). It is not the precise equivalent of 'the kingdom of heaven,' so often spoken of before this time by our Lord. 'The kingdom of heaven' is the new dispensation of grace from heaven of which our Lord was Ruler and Dispenser ; his Church was to be an organized and visible congregation of the faithful, manifesting and extending, by its worship and ministry, that kingdom. The next verse points to such a visible organization, as does the fact that confessing apostles are spoken of as the foundation."—Schaff.

The gates of hell.—Hades. The abode of the dead was thought, by both Jews and Gentiles, to be a subterranean receptacle, guarded by gates, from which there was no escape. Death was the entrance within those gates. The gates of ancient cities were the principal places where courts were held, and public matters deliberated on. By the gates of Hades are therefore meant the powers which were supposed to rule the rebellious invisible world.

The keys of the kingdom of heaven.—The key was a badge whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth, shall be bound in heaven : and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth, shall be loosed in heaven.

Ch. XXI. Matt. 16 : 19-21 ; Mark 8 : 30, 31 ; Luke 9 : 21, 22.

of high office and distinction in the regal governments of antiquity, and it was a custom with the Jews to accompany and denote promotion by the delivery of a key. "To confer the key" is a phrase equivalent to bestowing a situation of great distinction and trust. (See Is. 22 : 22.) "And the key of the house of David will I lay upon his shoulder ; so he shall open, and none shall shut ; and he shall shut, and none shall open." Peter was given authority with the other apostles to declare what should be binding upon believers, and what they should be released from.

And whatsoever thou shalt bind, etc.—“Jewish usage would explain “bind” and “loose” as equivalent to forbid and permit ; the reference therefore is to the power of legislation in the Church (“on earth”) in the case of the apostles, Peter being their representative ; this was in accordance with heavenly design (“in heaven”). This promise is, in its full sense, applicable only to the apostles.”—Schaff. [The view of Dr. Schaff given in these notes is perhaps the one most common in the Protestant churches, though for reasons more fully stated in my commentary on Matthew, I do not accept it. I regard Simon, who by nature was the least rock-like and stable of all the Apostles, as here a type of the disciple of Christ, and the change wrought in him by his living faith in Christ, as a type of that change which is wrought in every believer by the transforming power of Christ. So that Christ’s promise is that such faith shall make of every believer a rock, and on this rock the transformed character of the disciple, and on Christ, in his heart making him stable, his church shall be built. It is thus interpreted by Peter himself in 1 Peter, 2 : 4-8. The second promise I also regard as made not to Peter, nor to the apostles, but to all believers in all time : the key being an emblem of authority ; to bind and loose being equivalent to forbid and permit ; the kingdom of heaven always meaning in Matthew’s usage of the term, not a future heaven, but the state of supreme allegiance to God ; and the whole passage being fairly interpreted by the following paraphrase : To my disciples I will give authority in their spiritual life, so that they shall no longer be bound by rules and regulations like those of the Pharisees or of the Mosaic code ; but whatsoever under the inspiration of a living faith in Me, they shall prohibit themselves, God shall prohibit ; and whatsoever, under the inspiration of that Spirit they shall permit themselves, God shall permit ; for they shall have the mind of the Spirit. Comp. for parallel passages, John 8 : 32, Chap. XXI. Matt. 16 : 22, 23 ; Mark 8 : 31-33.

J.C. 33.

And he straitly charged his disciples to tell no man that he was Jesus the Christ.

From that time forth began Jesus to shew unto his disciples, how that he, the Son of man, must go unto Jerusalem, and be rejected and suffer many things of the elders, and chief priests, and scribes, and be killed, and be raised again the third day. And he spake that saying openly.

Jesus Foretells
His Death and Resurrection.

Then Peter took him, and began to rebuke him, saying, Be it far from thee, Lord : this shall not be unto thee.

But when he had turned about, and looked on his 36 ; Rom. 7 : 6 ; 2 Cor. 3 : 17 ; 5 : 7 ; Gal. 3 : 25 ; 4 : 7, 31 ; 5 : 1, 16, 18, etc.—L. A.]

Should tell no man—Until he himself should have plainly announced his Messiahship to the Sanhedrin.

Of the elders and chief priests and scribes.—The elders, with the chief priests and scribes, composed the Sanhedrin. These elders of the people are to be distinguished from the elders of the cities, who were only the heads of the lower courts of justice. The scribes were assessors, or learned assistants. These three orders, including the chief priests, are named promiscuously in the Gospels whenever the Sanhedrin is mentioned.

And he spake that saying openly.—He had before been conversing with his disciples privately, when he charged them to "tell no man that he was Jesus the Christ" (Matt. 16 : 20). Regarding his approaching rejection and death, he speaks openly, so that any one near him might hear (Mark 8 : 34).

Began to rebuke him.—"The same Peter who but just now had made so noble and spiritual a confession, and received so high a blessing, now shows the weak and carnal side of his character, becomes a stumbling-block in the way of his Lord, and earns the very rebuff with which the tempter before him had been dismissed. Nor is there anything improbable in this : the expression of spiritual faith may, and frequently does, precede the betraying of carnal weakness ; and never is this more probable than when the mind has just been uplifted, as Peter's was, by commendation and lofty promise."—Alford. "Satan is most busy to seduce us when we are most highly exalted and favored by Christ."—Lange.

Ch. XXI. Matt. 16 : 24, 25 ; Mark 8 : 34, 35 ; Luke 9 : 23, 24.

disciples, he rebuked Peter, saying, Get thee behind me, Satan ; thou art an offence unto me : for thou savourest not the things that be of God, but those that be of men.

And when he had called the people unto him with his disciples also, he said unto them all, Whosoever will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross daily, and follow me. For whosoever will save

Get thee behind me, Satan.—Christ used the same words to Satan in the wilderness. The expression Satan here denotes more generally an adversary, or tempter, with an allusion to the satanic element which was unconsciously at work in Peter.

Thou art an offence unto me.—A stumbling-block—a “stone of stumbling ;” perhaps an allusion to the name he had just bestowed upon Peter. If Peter’s views were followed, they would defeat the object for which he came.

Thou savorest not.—Thou mindest not. “Thou enterest not into the thoughts and plans of God, but consideredest all things from the ideas of men, with their dreams of ambition and human advantage.”—Geikie.

Take up his cross.—It was usual for persons condemned to be crucified to carry to the place of execution the whole or part of the fatal gibbet on which they were to suffer. Hence the expression, taking up one’s cross, was used to signify a person suffering any evil willingly. “Love the cross of Christ, and be content to have your faith tried every day by some cross or other as it pleaseth God to put on you ; and if God putteth no grievous cross on you, let your brethren’s cross be your cross, which is a certain token of true brotherly love.”—J. Bradford.

For whosoever will save his life, etc.—Comp. the same thought in Matt. 10 : 39. Whoever makes the lower life the supreme motive shall lose the higher life, and whoever, making Christ supreme, shall lose even life for his sake, shall find it in the highest, truest sense. The contrast throughout the passage is not between body and soul, but earthly life in all forms with true heavenly life here and hereafter. Life, worldly, selfish, fleshly, is opposed to life eternal, Christian and spiritual. “The fear of death subjects to the bondage of death (Heb. 2 : 15), while readiness to suffer a holy death for Christ’s sake opens up before us true life.”—Alford. [I think more than this is meant : all self-seeking is self-losing. Even in spiritual things he who is perpetually studying how to secure joy and peace for himself loses it.—L. A.] his life, shall lose it ; but whosoever shall lose his life for my sake and the gospel's, the same shall save it. For what shall it profit a man, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul ? Or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul ? Whosoever therefore shall be ashamed of me, and of my words, in this adulterous and sinful generation, of him also shall the Son of man be ashamed, when he cometh in his own glory and in his Father's, with the holy angels. For the Son of man shall come in the glory of the Father, with his angels, and then he shall reward every man according to his works. And he said unto them, Verily I say unto you, That there be some standing here which shall not taste of death till they have seen the kingdom of God come with power, and the Son of man coming in his kingdom.

Ch. XXI. Matt. 16 : 25-28 ; Mark 8 : 35-38 ; 9 : 1 ; Luke 9 : 24-27.

Whosoever shall lose his life for my sake.—

Flung to the heedless winds,
Or on the waters cast,
The martyrs' ashes, watched,
Shall gathered be at last ;
And from that scattered dust,
Around us and abroad,
Shall spring a plenteous seed
Of witnesses for God.

The Father hath received
Their latest living breath ;
And vain is Satan's boast
Of victory in their death ;
Still, still, though dead, they speak,
And, trumpet tongued, proclaim
To many a waking land
The one availing name.

Martin Luther. Translation of W. J. Fox.

What shall it profit.—" The soul is all that whereby we may be, and without which we cannot be happy."—Jeremy Taylor. "Of all the riches that we hug, of all the pleasures we enjoy, we can carry no more out of this world than out of a dream."—Bonnell. "Oh, think what great losers they must needs be who lose their souls to gain the world, and must at last lose the world too, together with their souls !"—Bishop Hopkins.

Ch. XXII. Matt. 17 : 1, 2 ; Mark 9 : 2 ; Luke 9 : 28, 29. J.C. 33.

CHAPTER XXII.

THE TRANSFIGURATION AND CONNECTED INCIDENTS.

AND six days after these sayings Jesus took with him Peter, and James, and John his brother, and went up into a high mountain apart, to pray. And as he prayed, the fashion of his countenance was altered, and he was transfigured before them ;

The Transfiguration.

After six days.—"Luke states the time roughly, as he understood it. 'About an eight days' in Jewish reckoning would be about a week. Luke states the case thus generally that it was about a week, while Matthew and Mark, more correctly informed, state the time at just six days."—Eggleston. The statements are easily reconciled if we suppose that Luke included, and the others excluded, both the day on which the words in Matt. 16 : 28 were spoken, and the day of the Transfiguration.

Peter and James and John.—These three disciples seem to have been distinguished by Christ's peculiar confidence, and were frequently admitted by him to the more private transactions of his life, from which the others were excluded.

A high mountain apart.—The particular mountain here referred to is uncertain. A tradition dating back to the fourth century designates Mount Tabor ; but the majority of modern travelers are of opinion that Mount Hermon, or some other elevation north of the Sea of Galilee, is the true locality. Andrews remarks : "The expression of Mark (9 : 30), that 'departing thence he passed through Galilee,' would imply that he was not then in Galilee. We are therefore made to look for some mountain in the vicinity of Cæsarea, and Mount Hermon at once rises before us." "Standing amid the ruins of Cæsarea," says Porter, "we do not need to ask what that 'high mountain' is. The lofty ridge of Hermon rises over us, and probably on one or other of those wooded peaks above us that wondrous event took place."—Hand-Book of Palestine. "On the other hand, the fact that on his descent he found Scribes questioning with the disciples, indicates that they were not in a heathen territory, but in Galilee."—Abbott.

He was transfigured.—"The original word (which sometimes imports a change of substance) here denotes only a change in external appearance. A similar appearance is ascribed to Moses, his face did shine as the sun, and his raiment became white as the light and glistering—exceeding white as snow ; so as no fuller on earth can white them. And, behold, there talked with him two men, which were Moses and Elias : who appeared unto them in glory, and spake of his decease which he should accomplish at Jerusalem. But Peter and they that were with him were heavy with sleep : and when they were awake, they saw his glory, and the two men that stood with him.

Ch. XXII. Matt. 17 : 2-4 ; Mark 9 : 3 ; Luke 9 : 29-33. J.C. 33.

And it came to pass, as they departed from him, Peter said unto Jesus, Master, it is good for us to be here : and when he came down from Sinai (Ex. 34 : 29, sq.), where it is said that his face shone with a kind of glory, as it were an halo.”—Bloomfield. “No explanation is possible that denies the supernatural element. Our Lord’s inherent glory burst forth ; added to this there was an external heavenly illumination affecting his garments and surrounding Moses and Elijah, reaching its highest manifestation in the luminous cloud spoken of in Matt. 17 : 5.”—Schaff.

White and glistering.—“That is, flashing. The idea conveyed is of an appearance like burnished metal flashing in the sun. Comp. Ezek. 1 : 4, 7 ; Nahum 3 : 3.”—Abbott.

Moses and Elijah.—“The two chief representatives of the Old Testament (the law and the prophets). Both were forerunners of the Messiah, and had also fasted forty days. They came from the invisible world, appearing ‘in glory’ (Luke 9 : 31), in a glorified form. They were recognized by the disciples, probably by intuition.”—Schaff.

Spake of his decease.—Literally, “departure” which he was about to accomplish at Jerusalem. Even on the mount of transfiguration the cross is in the foreground.

But Peter and they that were with him had been heavy with sleep, but having kept fully awake they saw his glory. This is the correct rendering of the original. “Our English version implies that they fell asleep and were wakened to see his glory, while the original implies that though heavy with sleep they kept fully awake.”—Abbott. “The word (keep awake) appears to be used expressly here to show that it was not merely a vision seen in sleep.”—Alford.

It is good for us to be here.—“He wished to remain there,

Ch. XXII. Matt. 17 : 4-9 ; Mark 9 : 5-8 ; Luke 9 : 34. J.C. 33.

if thou wilt let us make here three tabernacles ; one for thee, and one for Moses, and one for Elias : not knowing what to say, for they were sore afraid.

While he thus spake, a bright cloud overshadowed them : and they feared as they entered into the cloud.

And behold ! there came a voice out of the cloud, saying, 'This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased. Hear ye him.

And when the disciples heard it, they fell on their faces, and were sore afraid. And when the voice was passed Jesus came and touched them, and said, Arise, and be not afraid. And suddenly, when they had lifted up their eyes and looked round about, they saw no man, save Jesus only with themselves.

and perhaps to detain Moses and Elijah, since they were about to depart (Luke 9 : 33). The glory was so dazzling, the privilege seemed so great, the companionship so choice, that he would cling to the enjoyment, and let the toils and duties of the future go."—Schaff.

Three tabernacles.—Booths, composed of branches of trees, such as travelers are accustomed to construct when they meet with a pleasant spot.

Behold, a bright cloud.—" ' A sign from heaven ' granted to the apostles, though refused to the Jewish leaders. A luminous cloud, not dark like that on Sinai. It was analogous to the pillar of cloud by day and fire by night in the wilderness, and to the Shekinah of the Old Testament ; a symbol of the glory resting on the New Testament Church, separating between the holy and the unholy, and a type of the splendor of the New Jerusalem."—Schaff.

And they [the disciples] feared as they [Christ, Moses, and Elijah] entered into the cloud.—" The original does not imply that the disciples entered into the cloud. On the contrary, in the Received Text, it distinguishes between them and the others who did enter. There is some doubt as to the reading, but the whole course of the narrative here and in the other Evangelists indicates that the cloud received the three out of the sight of the disciples."—Abbott.

Beloved Son.—The best reading here is, " My son the beloved or chosen." See Matt. 3 : 17.—Schaff.

Ch. XXII. Matt. 17 : 9-13 ; Mark 9 : 9-14 ; Luke 9 : 37. J.C. 33.

And as they came down from the mountain, Jesus charged them, saying, 'Tell the vision to no man, until the Son of man be risen again from the dead. And they kept that saying to themselves, questioning one with another what the rising from the dead should mean.

And they asked him, saying, Why then say the scribes that Elias must first come ?

And Jesus answered and said unto them, Elias truly shall first come, and restore all things. But I say unto ^{Elias has come already.} you, that Elias is come already, and they knew him not, but have done unto him whatsoever they listed, as it is written of him ; likewise also it is written of the Son of man that he must suffer many things, and be set at nought of them.

Then the disciples understood that he spake unto them of John the Baptist, and they kept it close and told no man in those days any of those things.

Tell the vision to no one.—"Vision" does not imply that this was like the visions seen by the prophets. The narrative itself forbids this; the other accounts use the phrase: "What things they had seen."

Restore all things.—"The original word has two meanings, which are nearly related. One is to restore, the other to finish. John the Baptist came as the last prophet of the old dispensation, to finish that state of things, and to usher in a new one."—Bloomfield.

Whatsoever they listed.—List is an old English word meaning to choose, to desire, to be inclined. See John 3 : 8.

He spake of John the Baptist.—"That Elijah must personally precede the Messiah was one of the firmest and most undoubted convictions of the Jews ; and the fact that the Baptist denied himself to be Elijah, was a circumstance that went far to discredit his mission. If he was not Elijah, then Jesus could not be the Christ. If he was a prophet, and so all the people regarded him, it by no means followed that the Messiah must immediately follow him ; for there might be many prophets who should act as forerunners, and yet Elijah alone should prepare his way. Most of the people seem to have regarded Jesus

Ch. XXII. Mark 9: 14-18; Matt. 17: 14-18; Luke 9: 39. J.C. 33.

And it came to pass, that on the next day, when they were come down from the hill, he saw a great multitude about his disciples, and the scribes questioning with them. And straightway all the people, when they beheld him, were greatly amazed, and running to him, saluted him. And he asked the scribes, What question ye with them?

And one of the multitude came to him kneeling down to him, and saying, Lord, have mercy, I beseech thee, and look upon my son; for he is mine Healing of the Demoniac Boy. only child; and he is lunatic, and sore vexed, for oftentimes he falleth into the fire, and oft into the water. And he hath a dumb spirit, wheresoever himself only as one of the prophetic forerunners of the Messiah. Educated in the current belief respecting the office of Elijah, the three apostles could not reconcile it with his appearance upon the mount."—Andrews.

Questioning with them.—Disputing. Their failure to cure the lunatic boy was probably used, not only against them, but against their master.

Were greatly amazed.—"Our Lord's countenance may have retained some traces of the glory on the mount, as in the case of Moses. The word here used (struck with awe) indicates more than surprise at his sudden coming."—Schaff. "How great the difference between Moses and Jesus! When the prophet of Horeb had been forty days upon the mountain, he underwent a kind of transfiguration, so that his countenance shone with exceeding brightness, and he put a veil over his face, for the people could not endure to look upon his glory. Not so our Saviour. He had been transfigured with a greater glory than that of Moses, and yet it is not written that the people were blinded by the blaze of his countenance, but rather they were amazed, and running to him they saluted him. The glory of the law repels, but the greater glory of Jesus attracts."—Eggleston.

He is lunatic.—"He is moon-struck." Meaning not insane, but epileptic; which disease in olden times was thought to be greatly influenced by the moon. The symptoms mentioned at Luke 9: 39 seem to show that this disease was epilepsy, caused by the power of an evil spirit. See notes on page 208.

Chap. XXII. Mark 9 : 18-25 ; Luke 9 : 39-42.

J.C. 33.

he taketh him, he teareth him, and bruising him hardly departeth from him ; and he suddenly crieth out and foameth and gnasheth with his teeth, and pineth away ; and I brought him to thy disciples and besought them that they should cure him, and they could not.

Then Jesus answered and said, O faithless and perverse generation, how long shall I be with you ? how long shall I suffer you ? Bring thy son hither to me.

And they brought him unto him : and when he saw him, as he was yet a coming, straightway the spirit threw him down and tare him ; and he fell on the ground, and wallowed, foaming. And Jesus asked his father, How long is it ago since this came unto him ?

And he said, Of a child. And oftentimes it hath cast him into the fire, and into the waters to destroy him ; but if thou canst do any thing, have compassion on us, and help us.

Jesus said unto him, If thou canst believe : all things are possible to him that believeth.

And straightway the father of the child cried out, and said with tears, Lord, I believe ; help thou mine unbelief.

When Jesus saw that the people came running together, he rebuked the foul spirit, saying unto him, Thou dumb

Crieth out.—"Peculiar to Luke. An inarticulate cry is intended ; for the boy was both deaf and dumb (Mark 9 : 26)."—Abbott.

Perverse generation.—Rather, "perverted race." The language is that of pity, not of indignation.

How long shall I be with you ? "are words as of a master complaining of the slowness and dullness of his scholars : 'Have I abode with you all this time, and have you profited so little by my teaching ?' feeling, it may be, at the same time, that till their task was learned he could not leave them, he must abide with them still."—Trench.

Mark 9 : 26-30 ; Luke 9 : 42, 43 ; Matt. 17 : 19-22. J.C. 33.

and deaf spirit, I charge thee, come out of him, and enter no more into him. And the spirit cried, and rent him sore, and came out of him : and he was as one dead ; insomuch that many said, He is dead. But Jesus took him by the hand, and lifted him up, and delivered him again to his father. And the child arose, cured from that very hour.

And they were all amazed at the mighty power of God.

And when he was come into the house, his disciples asked him privately, Why could not we cast him out ? And Jesus said unto them, Because of your unbelief : for verily I say unto you, If ye have faith as a grain of mustard-seed, ye shall say unto this mountain, Remove hence to yonder place, and it shall remove ; and nothing shall be impossible unto you. Howbeit, this kind goeth not out, but by prayer and fasting.

And they departed thence, and passed through Galilee ; and he would not that any man should know it. And while they abode in Galilee, and every one wondered at all things which Resurrection again Foretold.

Faith as a grain of mustard seed.—"The smallest faith, with a tacit contrast between a grain of mustard seed, a very small thing, and a mountain, a very great. That smallest shall be effectual to work on this largest. The least spiritual power shall be potent for the overthrow of the mightiest powers which are merely of this world."—Trench.

This kind goeth not out but by prayer and fasting.—"The faith which shall be effectual against this must be a faith exercised in prayer, that has not relaxed itself by an habitual compliance with the demands of the lower nature, but often girt itself up to an austerer rule, to rigor and self-denial."—Trench. However, the words "and fasting" are omitted in the oldest and best MSS.

While every one wondered.—"As before he gave an intimation of his passion immediately after the apostles' confession of faith in his Messiahship, so now after the expression of their Mark 9 : 30-33 ; Matt. 17 : 22-26 ; Luke 9 : 43-49. J.C. 33.

Jesus did, he said unto his disciples, Let these sayings sink down into your ears : for the Son of man shall be betrayed into the hands of men : and they shall kill him, and after that he is killed, he shall rise again the third day. And they were exceeding sorry. But they understood not this saying, and it was hid from them, that they perceived it not ; and they were afraid to ask him of that saying.

And when they were come to Capernaum, they that Tribute-money Provided. received tribute-money came to Peter, and said, Doth not your master pay tribute ?
 He saith, Yes.

wonder at his miraculous power. Thus he adapts the trial of their faith to its strength. Matthew and Mark both add a prophecy of the resurrection."—Abbott.

Let these sayings sink down into your ears.—"The definite details as to time and place show that our Lord repeated his prediction of his sufferings (Matt. 16 : 21-23). Our Lord now left the foot of the mount and passed through Galilee (Mark 9 : 30) ; the prediction was made while the people were still wondering (Luke 9 : 43). We infer that they passed directly from Mount Hermon into Galilee ; on the way our Lord made this declaration ; reaching Capernaum, the question about tribute was put. Both incidents belong together in the education of the apostles for the events which were so soon to come."—Schaff.

They were exceeding sorry.—"No remonstrance now, but sorrow, partly from natural affection, partly from the dashing of their false hopes. The strife as to who should be greatest, which followed (Matt. 18 : 1), shows that their views were still incorrect ; Mark and Luke speak of their failure to understand. Men are still slow to learn the meaning of the death and resurrection of our Lord."—Schaff.

It was hid from them, that they perceived it not.—"It was the divine purpose that they should not at present be aware of the full significance of these words."—Alford. "And this is implied not only in the original, which our English version imperfectly renders, but also in the direction, 'Let these sayings sink down into your ears.'"—Abbott.

Tribute money.—"This tribute was required from every male Israelite above the age of twenty, once in the year ; and

Chap. XXII.

Matt. 17 : 25-27.

Summer, J.C. 33.

to be paid into the corban, or treasury of God, for the current expenses of the temple service. . . . Our Lord's argument (Matt. 17 : 25-27), supposes that he himself stood in the relation of Son to him for the benefit of whose service the tax was understood to be levied ; a supposition which would manifestly be true if the tax was levied for the service of the temple, and our Saviour himself stood in the relation of Son to the God of Israel."—Greswell. The tax was collected by those acting for the Jewish authorities, and not by the Roman tax-gatherers. Vespasian afterwards ordered it paid into the Roman treasury. "When the tabernacle was first constructed in the wilderness it was by voluntary offerings. 'Whosoever is of a willing heart, let him bring an offering of the Lord,' was the divine commandment (Ex. 35 : 5). But Pharisaism had perverted this free-will offering into a legal exaction. After a long struggle between Pharisee and Sadducee, the former had triumphed, and a poll-tax was laid upon all Israel of a half shekel for the support of the temple service. They quoted the laws of Moses to sustain them in this exaction (Ex. 30 : 12, 13). But to enforce this as a tax was contrary to the free spirit of the Gospel, if not to that of the Mosaic commonwealth. Jesus had already declared himself openly against the Pharisaic exactions. Whether in this controversy he would side with Sadducee or Pharisee was to the collector of this church tax a matter of uncertainty. He came, therefore, in doubt to Peter with the question, 'Doth not your master pay tribute?' Peter, still a Jew, readily pledged Jesus to fulfill the obligations which no other rabbi would refuse to recognize. But Jesus, though quite ready to contribute to the support of the appointed service even of a corrupted church, was not willing to sanction a custom so pernicious as that which rests the Church of God on enforced tithes rather than on free contributions. 'We are,' he says in effect to Peter, 'not strangers and aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, but sons of the kingdom ; and the kingdom must live by the free-will gifts, not by the compulsory payments of its citizens. The church must be supported as it was built, by willing hearts.' But, that his heart be not thought unwilling, he bids his disciple cast a line into the sea and draw forth a fish, in whose mouth he should find the needed sum. Thus, by a figure, Christ at once proclaims the emancipation of humanity from the thralldom of a church establishment, and designates as the true substitute therefor a free-will offering by a cheerful giver."—Abbott's Jesus of Nazareth.

Came to Peter.—"That the question was asked of Peter may be explained from his prominent position as a disciple, or because, as a resident in the city, he was well known."—Andrews.

Chap. XXII.

Matt. 17 : 27 ; Luke 9 : 46. Summer, J.C. 33.

And when he was come into the house, Jesus prevented him, saying, What thinkest thou, Simon ? of whom do the kings of the earth take custom or tribute ? of their own children, or of strangers ?

Peter saith unto him, Of strangers.

Jesus saith unto him, Then are the children free. Notwithstanding, lest we should offend them, go thou to the sea, and cast an hook, and take up the fish that first cometh up : and when thou hast opened his mouth, thou shalt find a piece of money : that take, and give unto them for me and thee.

Then there arose a reasoning among them, which of Prevented him.—"Spoke first unto him," the old English use of the word "prevent;" thus showing that he was already acquainted with the demand, "that he was a discerner of the thoughts of the heart, that it was for him as though he had been present at that conversation between his disciple and the collectors of the money."—Trench.

Lest we should offend them.—"Our Lord would rather work a miracle than allow Peter to offend, in not paying the tribute for himself and his master, after acceding to the demand. But he did not direct payment to be made for the other apostles, who might justly plead exemption, and for whom no engagement, as to payment, had been made."—Bloomfield. "He commands the sea ; and behold ! the fishes hasten to him with tribute in their mouths. As he did express his humility, that he might not offend the rulers, so we may be easily persuaded that he did manifest his glory, that he might not offend his disciples."—Farindon.

A piece of money.—Literally "a shekel," variously estimated of the value of from fifty to seventy cents, and the exact tax for two persons.

For me and for thee.—"He says not 'for us,' but, as elsewhere, 'I ascend unto my Father and your Father ; and to my God and your God.' (John 25 : 17). While he has made common part with his brethren, yet he has done this by an act of condescension, not by a necessity of nature."—Trench. See also John 20 : 17. The same distinction is kept up throughout the Gospels.

Then there arose a reasoning (questioning) among them.—

Ch. XXII. Luke 9 : 46 ; Mark 9 : 33-36 ; Matt. 18 : 1, 2. J.C. 33.

them should be greatest in the kingdom of heaven ; and being in the house, he, perceiving the thought of their heart, asked them, What was it that ye disputed among yourselves by the way ? But they held their peace : for by the way they had disputed among themselves who should be the greatest.

The Disciples Dispute who shall be Greatest.

And he sat down, and called the twelve, and saith unto them, If any man desire to be first, the same shall be last of all, and servant of all. And he called a little child unto him, and set him

Jesus Teaches
Humility.

“ As Peter returned from paying the temple tax. According to Mark (9 : 33), our Lord first asked them about their dispute on this subject ‘ in the way,’ probably to Capernaum. Hence the declaration, ‘ Surely then the sons are free’ (Matt. 17 : 26) could not have occasioned this discourse. Nor did they answer his question (Mark 9 : 34) ; his knowledge of their thoughts (Luke 9 : 47) probably shamed them. An indication of the moral power of his Person.”—Schaff. “ Probably just before their arrival at Capernaum, a dispute had arisen among the disciples, who should be the greatest in the kingdom. That he was about to reveal himself as the Messiah and set up his kingdom, was a belief still firmly rooted in their minds, and which his mysterious words about his death and resurrection seemed only to confirm. They knew that some great event was approaching ; what should it be but this long-hoped-for manifestation of the kingdom, when David’s son should sit on David’s throne ? It, therefore, naturally became now a question of deep personal interest to those most ambitious among them, who should fill the highest places under the new government. Perhaps the preference shown by Jesus to the three whom he took with him upon the mount, and whom he had before specially honored, may have provoked envy and occasioned this dispute.”—Andrews. Or, more probably, the dispute was between Peter and James and John. Notice the questions of John and Peter, which indicate a special personal interest in his present teaching.

Called the twelve.—From this it would appear that the previous conversation had not been with the body of the disciples, but with those who were accustomed to keep nearest to Jesus—namely, Peter, James, and John. The latter afterwards did actually ask for places of honor in the kingdom (Mark 10 : 37).

Chap. XXII. Matt. 18 : 2, 3 ; Mark 9 : 36. Summer, J.C. 33.

in the midst of them, and when he had taken him in his arms, he said unto them, Verily I say unto you, Except ye be converted, and become as little children, ye shall

Called a little child.—“The more forcibly to impress on their minds the truth he wishes to inculcate, our Lord employs the aid of example ; here adopting a method of instruction always prevalent in the East—that by emblems and symbolical actions ; a mode of conveying one's meaning, which having first been resorted to from the poverty of early language, was afterwards continued, from the advantage it possessed of forcible and vivid illustration ; since none of the conceptions of the mind are so distinct as the direct impression of the senses. Of these symbolical and significant actions the writings of the Old Testament supply numerous examples ; nor are they wanting in the New. Those of the former are generally of a prophetic character ; those of the latter, partly vehicles of prophecy, partly of counsel and instruction. Those of our Lord are generally of the latter description ; as when he washed his disciples' feet, broke the bread at the institution of the Eucharist, and breathed on them to represent the communicating to them the Holy Ghost.”—Greswell on the Parables, vol. ii., p. 276-283.

Taken him in his arms.—“A phrase peculiar to Mark. The child seems not to have been brought in, but to have been a member of the household. Tradition says it was the martyr Ignatius, of Antioch. The little one may have been the child of one of the apostles, perhaps of Peter, at whose house this may have occurred.”—Schaff. “Observe the spontaneous overflow of his condescending and benign nature. ‘He took the child in his arms ;’ an act not at all called for by the circumstances of the case.”—James Ford.

Except ye be converted.—Except ye are turned from this ambitious spirit to the humility of childhood. “Here is conversion after conversion, being a solemn turning from some particular sin.”—Fuller.

And become as little children.—What is so beautiful as the innocence of childhood ! “In its presence the cynic forgets to sneer, and the misanthrope to scowl. As the ancients ever looked wistfully back on a golden age long passed away, so the adult delights to gaze on the bright visions of his early days, and sighs that they can return no more. In the society of childhood, manhood forgets its cares, and age its decrepitude. The painter strives to perpetuate its joyous scenes, and the poet to recall its sunny memories ; while the humorist, as he strives to not enter into the kingdom of heaven. Whosoever therefore shall humble himself as this little child, the same is greatest in the kingdom of heaven : and whosoever shall receive one such little child in my name, receiveth me : and whosoever shall receive me, receiveth not me, but him that sent me. For he that is least among you all, the same shall be great.

Ch. XXII. Matt. 18 : 3 ; Mark 9 : 37-39 ; Luke 9 : 48, 49. J.C. 33.

And John answered him, saying, Master, we saw one casting out devils in thy name, and he followeth not us ; and we forbade him, because he followeth not with us.

contemplate it with a mirthful smile, lets fall his pen, and drops a tear instead."—W. H. Groser.

Ye shall not enter.—" ' Instead of discussing who shall be greater [in the kingdom], you need to inquire whether you have entered it.' This is not denied, but the ambitious question, opposed to the humility which is essential, should raise a doubt."—Schaff.

Humble himself as this little child.—" Not humble himself as this little child has done, but become humble as this little child is in this company. The absolute innocence of children is not implied, but simply this : ' The real greatness of the child consists in its perfect contentment with its littleness and dependence.' This is necessary for entrance to the kingdom ; our greatness there is measured by our humility."—Schaff.

Receive.—Love, cherish, treat with kindness, or aid in time of need.

He that is least among you . . . shall be great.—" Above all, let me mind my own personal work ; to keep myself pure and zealous and believing ; laboring to do God's will, yet not anxious that it should be done by me rather than by others, if God disapproves of my doing it."—Thomas Arnold.

He followeth not with us.—" The disciples had before ' disputed among themselves which of them should be the greatest ;' they are now instructed by the Lord so that they see clearly that none should be rejected by them. If Christ and a faith in him could exist in these children, it could be found also in the man whom they had ' forbidden.' The retiring and candid spirit of St. John is here evinced. He seems to have long harbored doubts on this point, and only waited for a fit occasion to state them."—Bengel.

Chap. XXII. Mark 9 : 39-42 ; Matt. 18 : 7. Summer, J.C. 33.

But Jesus said, Forbid him not : for there is no man which shall do a miracle in my name, that can lightly speak evil of me. For he that is not against us, is on our part. For whosoever shall give you a cup of water Forbid him not.—"John is here taught that no person should be discouraged from the good which he has attained in part, but that he should rather be stimulated to the further pursuit of the good that remains yet to be attained."—The Venerable Bede. "I will not break the certain laws of Charity for a doubtful doctrine or an uncertain truth."—Whichcote. "Though we can not think alike, may we not love alike? May we not be of one heart, though we are not of one opinion? Without all doubt we may. Every wise man, therefore, will allow others the same liberty of thinking which he desires they should allow him, and will no more insist on their embracing his opinion than he would have them to insist on embracing theirs. Keep you your opinion, I mine ; and that as steadily as ever. You need not even endeavor to come over to me, or bring me over to you. I do not desire you to dispute these points, or to hear or speak one word concerning them. Let all opinions alone on one side or the other, only give me thine hand."—John Wesley. "There is a principle which is pure, placed in the human mind, which, in different places and ages, hath had different names ; it is, however, pure, and proceeds from God. It is deep and inward, confined to no forms of religion, nor excluded from any when the heart stands in perfect sincerity. For in whomsoever this takes root and grows, they become brethren."—John Woolman.

A miracle.—A "mighty work," or "work of power." "He gives a generous welcome to any faith in him. No man who 'casts out devils' can be an enemy of Christ."—Eggleston.

He that is not against us is on our part.—"I do not look upon an opponent as an enemy to be repelled, but as a torch-bearer to be welcomed for any light that he may bring."—Hamer-ton. "Let us 'follow truth in love' (Eph. 4 : 15), and, of the two, indeed be contented rather to miss of the conveyance of a speculative truth than to part with love. When we would convince men of any error by the strength of truth, let us withal pour the sweet balm of love upon their heads. Truth and love are two of the most powerful things in the world, and when they both go together, they can not easily be withstood. The golden beams of truth and the silken cords of love, twisted together, will draw men on with a sweet violence, whether they will or not."—Vinet.

Chap. XXII. Matt. 18 : 7-9 ; Mark 9 : 43-49. Summer, J.C. 33.

to drink in my name, because ye belong to Christ, verily I say unto you, he shall not lose his reward. But whosoever shall offend one of these little ones that believe in me, it were better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck, and he were drowned in the depth of the sea.

Woe unto the world because of offenses ! for it must needs be that offenses come ; but woe to that man by whom the offense cometh ! Wherefore if thy hand offend thee, cut it off, and cast it from thee ; it is better for thee to enter into life maimed, than having two hands to go into hell, into the fire that never shall be quenched : where their worm dieth not, and the fire is Shall offend one of these little ones.—Shall cause them to stumble, or go astray. “The weak, unpretending, outwardly insignificant, the children, the poor, the ignorant, and the weak-minded, are all included. Only he who feeds the lambs can feed the sheep (John 20 : 15).”—Schaff.

A millstone were hanged about his neck.—In the original “a great millstone,” indicating one operated by an animal. Water-mills were not invented till shortly before the time of Augustus : windmills long afterwards. The smaller mills among the Jews were worked by slaves or women (Matt. 24 : 41), the larger ones by asses or mules. “The punishment here alluded to, though not in use among the Jews themselves, was so among the Greeks, Romans, and the surrounding nations ; where it was inflicted on criminals of the worst sort, especially parricides and those guilty of sacrilege. The custom seems to have grown into a proverb for dreadful and inevitable ruin.”—Greswell. This mode of punishment is still one of the “institutions” of Turkey.

If thy hand offend thee, etc.—See note on page 177. Evidently repeated here, and appropriate to the connection.

Their worm dieth not, etc.—“The figure is clearly taken from Isa. 66 : 24. In describing the great prosperity of the kingdom of the Messiah, Isaiah says that the people of God shall go forth, and look upon the carcasses of men who have transgressed against God. Their enemies shall be slain. The people of God shall triumph. The figure is taken from heaps of the dead slain in battle ; and the prophet says that the number shall be so great Chap. XXII. Mark 9 : 49, 50 ; Matt. 18 : 10-12.

J.C. 33.

not quenched. And if thy foot offend thee, cut it off and cast it from thee : it is better for thee to enter into life halt, than having two feet to be cast into hell, into the fire that never shall be quenched : where their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched. And if thine eye offend thee, pluck it out, and cast it from thee : it is better for thee to enter into the kingdom of God with one eye, rather than having two eyes, to be cast into hell-fire : where their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched.

For every one shall be salted with fire, and every sacrifice shall be salted with salt. Salt is good : but if the salt have lost his saltness, wherewith will ye season it ? Have salt in yourselves, and have peace one with another.

Take heed that ye despise not one of these little ones : for I say unto you, that in heaven their angels do that their worm—the worm feeding on the dead—shall not die, shall live long, as long as there are carcasses to be devoured ; and that the fire which was used to burn the bodies of the dead shall continue long to burn, shall not be extinguished till they are consumed. The figure, therefore, denotes great misery and certain and terrible destruction.”—Barnes. “We do but deceive ourselves with names. Hell is nothing but the orb of sin and wickedness, or else that hemisphere of darkness in which all evil moves ; and heaven is the opposite hemisphere of light, or else, if you please, the bright orb of truth, holiness, and goodness : and we do actually, in this life, instate ourselves in the possession of one or other of them. Take sin and disobedience out of hell, and it will presently clear up into light, tranquillity, serenity, and shine out into a heaven.”—Cudworth.

Every one shall be salted with fire.—“The full sense seems to be : Every [believer] will be (or is) seasoned and prepared, by the fiery trials of this life, for eternal glory—even as every victim is seasoned with salt [for sacrifice].”—Bloomfield.

Their angels.—It was a general belief among the Jews, that every person was attended by an angel, who was considered as his representative, and to whom he was supposed to have a personal resemblance. See Acts 12 : 15.

Chap. XXII.

Matt. 18 : 12-14.

Summer, J.C. 33.

always behold the face of my Father which is in heaven. For the Son of man is come to save that which was lost. How think ye ? If a man have an hundred sheep, and one of them be gone astray, doth he not leave the ninety and nine in the wilderness, and goeth into the mountains, and seeketh that which is gone astray ? And if so be that he find it, verily I say unto you, he rejoiceth more of that sheep, than of the ninety and nine which went not astray. Even

The Sheep gone Astray.

Do always behold the face of my Father.—“ An allusion to the fact that the ministers of Eastern kings had access to them ; suggesting that these angels were not actively employed, ‘ as if God were through them always looking upon the little ones.’ The general sense is : God’s highest angels represent the least subjects of his kingdom.”—Schaff. The fact of angelic guardianship is affirmed throughout the Scriptures. See 2 Kings 6 : 17 ; Ps. 34 : 7 ; 91 : 11 ; Dan. 4 : 13 ; Luke 15 : 10 ; 16 : 22 ; Acts 7 : 53 ; Heb. 1 : 14 ; and many passages in the Revelations.

If a man have an hundred sheep.—“ The man having a hundred sheep is plainly the Son of God—the Good Shepherd. This had been his prophetic description, and in this very connection—of seeking the lost (Ezek. 34 : 6, 11-15).”—Alford.

The ninety and nine which have not gone astray.—“ Either the unfallen beings in other worlds, whom Christ in a certain sense left, to save the ‘ one ’ in this lost world, or those who think they are not lost and who cannot be saved as long as they think so. The general lesson is : The good Shepherd’s special care was for those in greatest need, so should yours be ; even if the needy be but the smallest fraction of those committed to your care.”—Schaff.

He rejoiceth more over that sheep.—“ Not mere self-interest, but love, comes forward here. No blows are given to the straying, no hard words ; mercy to the lost one, and joy within himself, are the Shepherd’s feelings. The sheep is weary with long wanderings ; he gives it rest (Matt. 11 : 28).”—Alford.

“ ‘ Come unto Me,’ with loving voice at morn
I heard the Shepherd call,
But narrow seemed the fold, and fair the fields
Beyond the frowning wall.

“ Again, at midday, came the gentle voice,
But far my feet had strayed,
And, weary with the heat, I only longed
To find the forest shade.

so it is not the will of your Father which is in heaven, that one of these little ones should perish.

-
- "Once more it came, but cool the shadows lay Across the grassy wold,
And resting there, content with present ease,
I scorned the sheltering fold.
- "Soon fell the night, with neither silver star
Nor song of happy bird,
And through the gloom no more, with pleadings sweet,
The Shepherd's voice I heard.
- "Affrighted then, I turned, and blindly sought
To cross the pathless lea,
Till faint with fear, in sorest need, I cried,
'O Shepherd, come to me!'
- "No answering voice the sullen silence cleft,
But, lo! beside me stood
One who with sorrowing brow had followed close,
Unseen through wold and wood.
- "Then all the night grew light, and soft and sweet
The stars shone overhead,
While homeward by the Shepherd's tender hand
The wandering sheep was led."

Mary B. Sleight.

Your Father.—In Matt. 17 : 10, where the dignity of the little ones is asserted, our Lord says "my Father;" here, where the duty is enforced by God's gracious will, "your Father."

That not one of these little ones should perish.

- "All the day long, with naked feet,
In the driving rain and the blinding sleet,
In the biting cold and the scorching heat,
The boys stand there in the crowded street,
Saying to all who pass that way:
'A penny, sir—a penny, pray:
For we've swept the crossing—every stone—
Till it's clean as a broom, and dry as a bone,
And you can cross without wetting your feet:
A penny, sir, for something to eat.'
But a surly word, or an angry frown
Is all they get—those waifs of the town.
- "All the day long, from morn till night,
In the garish sun and the pale gas-light,
A-hungred and cold, in wretched plight,
The boys stand there, a piteous sight;
But never a passer stops to ask
If they get bread by their thankless task;
And never a Christian gives a thought
To the tender souls his Lord has bought;
For things like these can have no needs,
In God's great garden they are but weeds;
So on they go, in their saintly pride,
Like him of old, on the other side.

Chap. XXII.

Matt. 18 : 14-19.

Summer, J.C. 33.

Moreover, if thy brother shall trespass against thee, go and tell him his fault between thee and him alone : if he shall hear thee, thou hast gained thy brother. But if he will not hear thee, then take with thee one or two more, that in the mouth of two or three witnesses every word may be established. And if he shall neglect to hear them, tell it unto the church : but if he neglect to hear the church, let him be unto thee as an heathen man and a publican.

How to treat an Offender.

"The moon comes out, and the stars look down
With pitiful eyes on the pitiless town,
And then these waifs, whom none will own,
Sink down to sleep on the cold, gray stone :
To sleep, and to dream of another day,
In some fair country, far away,
Where all the streets—so they've been told—
Are paved with gems, and shining gold,
And many a sweeper rides about
In gaudy livery and grand turn-out ;
And many a poor, neglected thing,
Becomes a great and mighty king.

"Dream on, poor boys, nor wake again,
In the blinding sleet, and the driving rain,
Where all for you is sin or pain—
The pauper's bed or the walk of Cain.
Oh ! better than that is the silent flow
Of the peaceful river there below ;
For in its depths is a pitchy slime,
That is purer far than vice and crime,
And on its breast is a wintry tide
That is kinder far than the men of pride,
Who build great temples of goodly stones,
And leave to perish Christ's little ones."

Edmund Kirke.

If thy brother shall trespass against thee.—"Forgiveness is chiefly taken for abstaining from revenge ; and so far we are to forgive our enemies, even whilst they continue so, and though they do not repent. Besides, we are to pray for them, and to do them all offices of common humanity and charity. But sometimes forgiveness doth signify a perfect reconciliation to those that have offended us, so as to take them again into our friendship ; which they are by no means fit for till they have repented of their enmity and laid it aside ; and this is the meaning of that text, of 'rebuking our brother if he trespass against us ;' and, 'if he repent,' to 'forgive him.'"—Robert Nelson.

Let him be unto thee as an heathen man.—"In one sense an offending brother, or an offender of any sort, is to be

Chap. XXII.

Matt. 18 : 19-25.

Summer, J.C. 33.

Verily I say unto you, Whatsoever ye shall bind on earth, shall be bound in heaven : and whatsoever ye shall loose on earth, shall be loosed in heaven.

Again I say unto you, That if two of you shall agree on earth, as touching any thing that they shall ask, it shall be done for them of my Father which is in heaven. For where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them.

Then came Peter to him, and said, Lord, how oft shall my brother sin against me, and I forgive him ? till seven times ? Jesus saith unto him, I say not unto forgiven unconditionally. It is not Christian—it is fatal to a Christian spirit—to cherish revengeful feelings to an offender because he has not asked you to forgive him. On the other hand, you can not cast pearls before swine by offering him an expression of your pardon while he stubbornly refuses to seek it. But distinct verbal confession is rare, and a brotherly spirit runs before and understands the first tacit acknowledgment of wrong, and is not exacting in its demand for explicit and humiliating confession. A brotherly spirit loves to give indirect evidence of forgiveness before there is a direct confession. As to taking an offender into confidence, that is a question of prudence. Trust him if he is trustworthy. You can forgive a man, and still distrust him. But if you are a Christian, you will not needlessly make your distrust apparent.”—Eggleston.

Whatsoever ye shall bind on earth, etc.—“ This verse, in its full meaning, refers to the special power and wisdom given to the apostles by means of which their foundation work ‘on earth’ corresponded to God’s designs ‘in heaven.’ Matt. 18 : 19, 20, shows the means by which the power of the church may rise toward this apostolic height. Were these conditions (agreement in prayer, and the presence of Christ) wanting in the case of the apostles, even the promise of this verse would be invalid.”—Schaff.

If two of you shall agree on earth.—It was a saying of the Rabbis that “when two are assembled to study the law, then the Shekinah is present.” “A Christian congregation calling upon God, with one heart and one voice, and in one reverent and humble posture, looks as beautiful as ‘Jerusalem which is at peace with itself.’”—Izaak Walton.

Till seven times.—The Rabbis said, three times. Peter, more

Chap. XXII.

Matt. 18 : 25-32.

Summer, J.C. 33.

thee, Until seven times : but, Until seventy times seven.

Therefore is the kingdom of heaven likened unto a certain king which would take account of his servants. And when he had begun to reckon, one was brought unto him which owed him Parable of the Unforgiving Servant. ten thousand talents. But forasmuch as he had not to pay, his lord commanded him to be sold, and his wife and children, and all that he had, and payment to be made. 'The servant therefore fell down, and worshiped him, saying, Lord, have patience with me, and I will pay thee all. 'Then the lord of that servant was moved with compassion, and loosed him, and forgave him the debt. But the same servant went out and found one of his fellow-servants which owed him an hundred pence : and he laid hands on him, and took him by the throat, saying, Pay me that thou owest.

in accord with Christ's law of love, was disposed to forgive till seven times. He no doubt felt aggrieved at some treatment of his fellow-apostles during the recent discussion as to precedence.

Of his servants.—"His collectors of the revenue, or governors of provinces, who would have to pay a certain annual sum to their government, as is now customary in Turkey and in the East. Hence the immense sum said to be due, which we may suppose would be in arrears, since in the East sometimes governors of provinces are deeply in arrears, and do not pay till compelled by an armed force."—Greswell.

Ten thousand talents, equal to $11,700,000, if we understand Attic talents of silver. The Syrian talent was much smaller, but a talent of gold would, of course, be of much greater value.

To be sold.—It was the custom to sell debtors among many of the Eastern nations. For notices of the existence of this custom among the Jews, see 2 Kings 4 : 1 ; Lev. 25 : 39-46 ; Amos 8 : 6 ; Ex. 22 : 3.

An hundred pence, equal to about eighteen dollars. "The insignificance of the sum is to show us how trifling any offense against one another is in comparison to the vastness of our sin against God."—Alford.

Chap. XXII.

Matt. 18 : 32-35.

Summer, J.C. 33.

And his fellow-servant fell down at his feet, and besought him, saying, Have patience with me, and I will pay thee all. And he would not : but went and cast him into prison, till he should pay the debt. So when his fellow-servants saw what was done, they were very sorry, and came and told unto their lord all that was done. Then his lord, after that he had called him, said unto him, O thou wicked servant, I forgave thee all that debt, because thou desiredst me : shouldest not thou also have had compassion on thy fellow-servant, even as I had pity on thee ? And his lord was wroth, and delivered him to the tormentors, till he should pay all that was due unto him. So likewise shall my heavenly Father do also unto you, if ye from your hearts forgive not every one his brother their trespasses.

Pay me that thou owest.—The debt was honestly due him, but it “is not always right, but often most wrong, the most opposite to right, to press our rights.”—Trench. “Anger is not man’s proper mood toward sin, but sorrow, because all men are sinners.”—Alford.

His fellow-servants.—“These fellow-servants are the praying people of God, who plead with him against the oppression and tyranny in the world.”—Alford.

To the tormentors.—“To the jailers or keepers of the prison. The original properly denotes ‘examiner,’ particularly one who has it in charge to examine by torture. Hence it came to signify jailer, for on such, in those days, did this charge commonly devolve. They were commanded, by any means, and by every kind of cruelty, to extort payment from the wretched debtor. And if he had nothing, to wrest the sum owed from the compassion of his relatives and friends ; who, to release an unhappy creature for whom they had a regard, from such extreme misery, might be induced to pay the debt : for the person of the insolvent debtor was at the disposal of the creditor.”—Greswell.

CHAPTER XXIII.

AT JERUSALEM.

Now the Jews' feast of tabernacles was at hand.

The Jews' Feast of Tabernacles.—Called the tabernacles, from the tents or booths which were erected in and about Jerusalem, and designed to commemorate the dwelling of the Israelites in tents in the wilderness. (Ne. 8 : 14-18.) It was one of the three feasts which every male Israelite was obliged to attend. "It is likewise termed the feast of ingathering. (Ex. 23 : 16 ; 34 : 22.) Further, the design of this feast was, to return thanks to God for the fruits of the vine, as well as of other trees, which were gathered about this time, and also to implore his blessing upon those of the ensuing year."—Greswell. The festival began on the fifteenth of the month Tisri, which this year answered to the 11th of October, and it continued eight days. While it lasted the Jews gave themselves up to festivity and rejoicing. "The gates and market-places and the broader streets were filled with branches brought from the groves. This new city of trees, surrounding the walls of Jerusalem, and making gay with its festoons all the avenues leading up to the temple, passed even the holy gates. The court of the Gentiles was filled with these huts of the wilderness, that the priests and the Levites might share in the festivities of the joyous encampment ; for during the Feast of the Tabernacles the houses were bereft of occupants. No man suffered himself to sleep beneath a roof. . . . Its scenes of festivity were so marked that Plutarch, who seemed incapable of interpreting Judaism, save by the analogy of his own heathen religion, declared that this people consecrated every year seven days to a feast of Bacchus, god of wine."—Abbott. "During the week of festivities all the courses of priests were employed in turn ; seventy bullocks were offered in sacrifice ; the Law was daily read ; and on each day the temple trumpets sounded twenty-one times an inspiring and triumphant blast."—Farrar. "Though all the Hebrews' annual festivals were seasons of rejoicing, the Feast of Tabernacles was, in this respect, distinguished above them all. The huts and the lilabs must have made a gay and striking spectacle over the city by day, and the lamps, the flambeaux, the music, and the joyous gatherings in the court of the temple, must have given a still more festive character to the night. Hence, it was called by the Rabbis the festival. There is a proverb in Succah (v : 1) : 'He who has never seen the rejoicing at the pouring out of the water of Siloam

His brethren therefore said unto him, Depart hence, and go into Judea, that thy disciples also may see the works that thou doest. For there is no man that doeth any thing in secret, and he himself seeketh to be known openly. If thou do these things, show thyself to the world. For neither did his brethren believe in him.

has never seen rejoicing in his life.'"—Smith's Bible Dictionary, art. Feast of Tabernacles, which see for a fuller account.

His brethren.—Those of his own family. "His brethren appear not wholly as unbelievers, but as those who, recognizing his works as wonderful, do not understand his course of conduct. Sharing the common opinions respecting the Messiah, they felt that if his Messianic claims were well founded, there could be no general recognition of them so long as he confined his labors to Galilee (see John 7 : 41, 52). In advising him to go and show himself in Judea, their motives were friendly rather than evil. They knew that Jerusalem was the ecclesiastical center, and that if he desired to be received by the nation at large, he must first find reception there. His works in Galilee, however great they might be, could avail little so long as the priests and scribes did not give him their countenance and aid. He must then stay no longer in that remote province, but go up to Jerusalem, and there in the temple, and before the priests and rulers, do his works. If once recognized there, he would be everywhere received. Had Jesus been such a Messiah as they supposed was to come, their advice was good."—Andrews.

Depart hence, and go into Judea.—"It is a remarkable fact, that after so long and systematic an absence from Jerusalem, as eighteen months before the Feast of Tabernacles (John 7 : 2), our Lord attended every feast, for the next six months, in its order. What is also remarkable, these six months are the last six months of his ministry—beginning at the Feast of Tabernacles, and expiring at the Feast of the Passover ; which being the case, the reason of the fact must be sought for in the moral of the parable of the barren fig-tree (Luke 13 : 6-9) ; and will from that be found to have been due to some necessity, more especially incumbent on our Saviour, for the concluding period of his ministry to be diligent both in Judea and out of Judea, with a view either finally to convince the Jews, and bring about the national repentance and conversion, or, at least, to leave them without excuse to the ultimate consequences of an invincible unbelief."—Greswell, condensed.

Chap. XXIII.

John 7 : 3-10.

October, J.C. 33.

Then Jesus said unto them, My time is not yet come : but your time is always ready. The world cannot hate you ; but me it hateth, because I testify of it, that the works thereof are evil. Go ye up unto this feast : I go not up yet unto this feast ; for my time is not yet full come. When he had said these words unto them, he abode still in Galilee. But when his brethren were gone up, then went he also up unto the feast, not openly, but as it were in secret.

Then the Jews sought him at the feast, and said, Where is he ? And there was much murmuring among Neither did his brethren believe in him.—“Should be rendered, ‘For even his brethren did not,’ etc.”—Alford.

My time is not yet.—“Not meaning ‘the time of his death,’ as some understand, but the time of his going up to the feast at Jerusalem, and manifesting himself publicly. (John 7 : 8.) ‘Any time and manner will be suitable for you to go there : you have nothing to fear.’ The reason is intimated in the verse following, where the natural form of expression would be, ‘I cannot go thus publicly, because of the hatred of a world whose ways and works I have reproved ; but they have no such reason to hate you.’”—Bloomfield.

I go not up yet.—Jesus assigns a sufficient reason for delaying his attendance, in the danger to which he would be exposed by going up too openly, or too soon. “It was essential for the safety of his life, which was not to end for six months more—it was essential for the carrying out of his divine purposes, which were closely enwoven with the events of the next few days—that his brethren should not know about his plans. And therefore he let them depart in the completest uncertainty as to whether or not he intended to follow them.”—Farrar.

As it were in secret, implies that he went unattended, and by some unusual and obscure route. If the twelve disciples did not go with him, it is probable that they also attended the festival.

There was much murmuring among the people. The “multitude.” “Much whispering.” The word in the original means such an expression of opinion as is not intended to be publicly heard. “No one dared to speak his full thought about him ; each seemed to distrust his neighbor ; and all feared to commit themselves too far while the opinion of the ‘Jews,’ and of the leading priests and Pharisees, had not been finally or decisively declared.”— the people concerning him : for some said, He is a good man : others said, Nay ; but he deceiveth the people. Howbeit, no man spake openly of him, for fear of the Jews.

Now about the midst of the feast Jesus went up into the temple and taught. And the Jews marveled, saying, How knoweth this man letters, having never learned ? Jesus answered them, and said, My doctrine is not mine, but his that sent me. If any man will do

Farrar. "The Galileans brought with them a report of his strange works and stranger doctrines. They told, doubtless, the story of the feeding of the multitude, of the cure of the demoniac in the synagogue, of the raising of Jairus's daughter, of the healing of the centurion's servant, perhaps of the quelling of the tempest, and the walk upon the waves."—Abbott. His whole character and work must have been discussed, and while the words of approval were vague and timid, those of condemnation were bitter and emphatic. He was, said they, "a deceiver of the people."

About the midst of the feast.—"But when it was about." "To judge from the practice of our Saviour at other times, when he resorted to the temple for the purpose of teaching, he resorted thither about the usual period of the morning service ; and passed the remainder of the day in the temple."—Greswell. "Throwing himself, as it were, in full confidence on the protection of his disciples from Galilee and those in Jerusalem, he was suddenly found in one of the large halls which opened out of the temple courts, and there he taught."—Farrar.

How knoweth this man letters ?—In none of the discourses of Jesus is there a trace of the current Greek learning. His parents had doubtless been able to give him only such meagre education as was common to all Hebrew children. The words in the text, as is remarked by Doddridge, "undoubtedly refer to our Lord's thorough acquaintance with the Scriptures, and the judicious and masterly manner in which he taught the people out of them, with far greater majesty and nobler eloquence than the scribes could attain by a learned education." "A rule, analogous to that which still prevails in most church communions, forbade any rabbi to teach new truths except he was a regular graduate of one of the theological schools."—Abbott.

My doctrine.—"My teaching, or that which I teach."

Chap. XXIII.

John 7 : 16-18.

October, J.C. 33.

his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of

His that sent me.—As much as to say, "I do not proceed upon any authority or power distinct from that of the Father : my plans and actions are inseparable from his ; my doctrine, works, and glory are his, and his are mine : the union is perfect and indissoluble."—Bloomfield. "He told them that his learning came immediately from his Heavenly Father, and that they, too, if they did God's will, might learn and might understand the same high lessons. In all ages there is a tendency to mistake erudition for learning, knowledge for wisdom ; in all ages there is a slowness to comprehend that true learning of the deepest and noblest character may co-exist with complete and utter ignorance of every thing which absorbs and constitutes the learning of the schools."—Farrar.

If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine. "Is willing to do his will." "There is in Christianity a self-evidencing power, and the experimental knowledge of a Christian is to him a valid ground of belief."—Mark Hopkins. "Most true it is, as a wise man teaches us, that 'doubt of any sort cannot be removed except by action.' On which ground, too, let him who gropes painfully in darkness or uncertain light, and prays vehemently that the dawn may ripen into day, lay this other precept well to heart, which to me was of invaluable service : 'Do the duty which liest nearest thee,' which thou knowest to be a duty ! Thy second duty will already have become clearer."—Thomas Carlyle. "The more we exercise the spiritual faculty, the more certain do spiritual things become. He who habitually obeys conscience sees, more and more clearly, the eternal distinction between right and wrong. He who habitually disobeys his conscience at last can hardly discern any law of duty. To him who constantly looks forward with trust to a future life, immortality becomes more and more certain. The pure in heart, who habitually look up to a heavenly ideal of goodness, see God more and more. He who trusts in Providence comes at last to stand so firmly on that rock, that no doubt can disturb, no disappointment shake his confidence that all things are working together for ultimate good."—James Freeman Clarke. "No one can know what it is to live, but by living ; what it is to see, but by seeing ; what it is to feel, but by feeling ; nor, in general, can any one know what it is to be any thing, but by becoming that thing. Direct knowledge, thus gained, is the condition of all reasoning, and it is not within the proper province of reasoning to call it in question. The knowledge is not gained by reasoning, but it is in the highest degree rational to

Chap. XXIII.

John 7 : 18-23.

October, J.C. 33.

God, or whether I speak of myself. He that speaketh of himself seeketh his own glory : but he that seeketh his glory that sent him, the same is true, and no unrighteousness is in him. Did not Moses give you the law, and yet none of you keepeth the law ? Why go ye about to kill me ? The people answered and said, 'Thou hast a devil : who goeth about to kill thee ?' Jesus answered and said unto them, I have done one work, and ye all marvel. Moses therefore gave unto you circumcision (not because it is of Moses, but of the fathers) ; and ye on the Sabbath-day circumcise a man. If a man on the Sabbath-day receive circum-admit it and act upon it. If Christianity be true, there must be such a knowledge."—Mark Hopkins.

Of myself, "from myself," from my own resources, and knowledge.

Why go ye about to kill me ?—"Why seek ye to kill me ?" "The determination to kill him was known indeed to him, and known to some of those who heard him, but was a guilty secret which had been concealed from the majority of the multitude."—Farrar. "It will serve to the understanding of the present narrative to keep in mind that at the time of the healing of the impotent man the Jewish rulers determined, perhaps formally in full Sanhedrin, to put him to death (John 5 : 16-18) ; that this determination was known to some at least of the citizens of Jerusalem ; and that Jesus had not, from that time to the present, entered Judea. He can now, therefore, refer back to that miracle, and to the purpose to kill him, as to things well known to the rulers and to some of the people, although some of the multitude, doubtless the feast pilgrims (5 : 20), were ignorant of this purpose. Thus we readily see why the citizens were surprised that he should be allowed to speak at all in the temple."—Andrews.

One work.—The healing of the impotent man on the Sabbath, at the pool of Bethesda. (John, ch. 5).

If a man.—"The argument is, If a man may be circumcised on the Sabbath, without the Sabbath being broken, it is unreasonable in you to be angry with me, if, in place of wounding by circumcision, I have made a man perfectly well, and thus the more capable of enjoying the appointed rest."

Chap. XXIII.

John 7 : 23-28.

October, J.C. 33.

cision, that the law of Moses should not be broken, are ye angry at me, because I have made a man every whit whole on the Sabbath-day? Judge not according to the appearance, but judge righteous judgment. Then said some of them of Jerusalem, Is not this he whom they seek to kill? But lo, he speaketh boldly, and they say nothing unto him. Do the rulers know indeed that this is the very Christ? Howbeit, we know this man, whence he is: but when Christ cometh, no man knoweth whence he is. Then cried Jesus in the temple, as Judge righteous judgment.—"Instead of being content with a superficial mode of criticism, come once for all to some principle of righteous decision."—Farrar. "The force of the argument is, 'do not condemn in me what you approve of in Moses: if you allow a man to be circumcised on the Sabbath, because Moses ordered it, but do not allow him to be healed, when I do it, you judge according to the person, and not according to justice.'"—Bloomfield.

Do the rulers know indeed.—It should be, "Have the rulers come to know that this man is the Christ?"—Alford. "They could not account for the liberty Jesus enjoyed, and it would seem they spoke ironically of the superior knowledge of the rulers. (Comp. ver. 27.) The sense is, 'Can it be that the rulers no longer seek to kill him, but suffer him to speak without molestation, because they now know for certain that he is indeed the Christ?'"—Greswell.

We know . . . whence he is.—We know the place of his birth and residence. They knew him as "Jesus of Nazareth."

No man knoweth whence he is.—"They spake this from the vain traditions of the rabbis, who owned indeed that their Messiah was to be born in Bethlehem, but imagined that he was soon to be conveyed thence, and concealed till Elias came to anoint him."—Whitby. Or, "perhaps from a mistaken sense of Is. 53:8, 'Who shall declare his generation?'"—Pearce. Or "from the similitude of Christ to Melchizedek, who was acknowledged to be a type of him, and is described as being without father or mother. (Heb. 7. 3.)"—Mann.

Then cried Jesus.—According to Alford, the oldest MSS. have it, "Therefore, cried Jesus." "There was a certain irony in the answer of Jesus. They knew whence he came, and all about him, and yet, in very truth, he came not of himself,

Chap. XXIII.

John 7 : 28-32.

October, J.C. 33.

he taught, saying, Ye both know me, and ye know whence I am : and I am not come of myself, but he that sent me is true, whom ye know not. But I know him ; for I am from him, and he hath sent me. Then they sought to take him : but no man laid hands on him, because his hour was not yet come. And many of the people believed on him, and said, When Christ cometh, will he do more miracles than these which this man hath done ?

The Pharisees heard that the people murmured such but from one of whom they knew nothing. This word maddened still more some of his hearers. They longed but did not dare to seize him, and all the more because there were some whom these words convinced, and who appealed to his many miracles as irresistible proof of his sacred claims."—Farrar. Adam Clarke and Whitby take a slightly different view of the passage, as follows : " Our Lord takes them up on their own professions, and argues thence, Since you have so much information concerning me, add this to it, viz., that I am not come of myself ; am no self-created or self-authorized prophet ; I came from God ; and thus have an original, of which ye know not."

Whom ye know not.—" When St. Columban said to Luanus concerning his ardent devotion to learning, ' My child, many out of undue love of knowledge have shipwrecked their souls,' ' My father,' replied the boy with deep humility, ' if I learn to know God I shall never offend him, for they only offend him who know him not.' "—Farrar.

Will he do more miracles than these ?—It is a remarkable fact that the Jews have never attempted to deny the reality of the miracles of Jesus. They admit them as facts, but account for them on the supposition that he had learned the pronunciation of the " Tetragrammation," or secret name.

The Pharisees heard.—" The Sanhedrin, seated in frequent session in their stone hall of meeting within the immediate precincts of the temple, were, by means of their emissaries, kept informed of all that he did and said, and, without seeming to do so, watched his every movement with malignant and jealous eyes. The whispered arguments in his favor, the deepened awe of him and belief in him, which, despite their authority, was growing up under their very eyes, seemed to them at once humiliating and dangerous. They determined on a bolder

Chap. XXIII.

John 7 : 32-35.

October, J.C. 33.

things concerning him : and the Pharisees and the chief priests sent officers to take him. Then said Jesus unto them, Yet a little while am I with you, and then I go unto him that sent me. Ye shall seek me, and shall not find me : and where I am, thither ye cannot come. Then said the Jews among themselves, Whither will he go, that we shall not find him? will he go unto the dispersed among the Gentiles, and teach the Gentiles? What manner of saying is this that he said, Ye shall seek me, and shall not find me : and where I am, thither ye cannot come? In the last day, that great day of the feast, Jesus stood and cried, saying, If any man thirst, let him come unto me, and drink. He that course of action. They sent out emissaries to seize him suddenly and stealthily, at the first opportunity which should occur."—Farrar. But Jesus was not moved. He tells them he should be with them a short time longer, and then should go to him who had sent him. "Then, indeed, they would seek him, not as now with hostile intent, but in the crushing agony of remorse and shame ; and their search would be in vain."

The dispersed among the Gentiles.—Literally "the Greeks." "Grotius, Wetstein, Rosenmueller, and Kuinoel understand by the 'dispersed' the Jews scattered among the Gentiles, as in 2 Macc. 1 : 27. That the Israelites were at that time dispersed over the whole world, is known from Philo Judæus and Josephus. These foreign Jews (says Kuinoel) are mentioned in contempt ; for the Jews of Palestine, and especially Jerusalem, used to arrogate an infinite superiority over them ; from their own residence in the holy land, the sacred city, and their consequent more accurate knowledge and observance of the law."—Scott.

In the last day, that great day of the feast. "We may conclude that the rejoicing and thanksgiving enjoined at this festival, on account of the harvest, were chiefly, if not wholly, appropriated to the eighth day. And it is observable that they were commanded to dwell in booths no longer than the seven days, a circumstance which shows that the eighth day was not observed on the same account as the seven preceding."—Jennings's Jewish Antiquities, p. 364.

If any man thirst, etc.—This seems to be an allusion to the

Chap. XXIII.

John 7 : 35-39.

October, J.C. 33.

believeth on me, as the Scripture hath said, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water. (But this spake he of the Spirit, which they that believe on him should receive, for the Holy Ghost was not yet given, because that Jesus was not yet glorified.)

Many of the people therefore, when they heard this custom of drawing water from the pool of Siloam, and offering it up in the temple with much solemnity, and the sound of various voices and instruments. "Agreeably to our Saviour's invariable principle of drawing instruction from the occasion, it would furnish a striking opportunity for the prophetic declaration which he pronounced accordingly. The ceremony consisted in fetching water from the fountain of Shiloah, in carrying it in procession round the altar of burnt-offerings, accompanied by a recitation of Isa. 12 : 3, 'With joy shall ye draw water out of the wells of salvation;' and, finally, of pouring out a libation thereof over the sacrifice upon the altar. The primary intention of these ceremonies was both to commemorate the miraculous supply of water in the wilderness and to typify the anticipated blessing of heaven, in the recurrence of the autumnal rains against the arrival of seed-time. But the appositeness of the ceremony to the future facts of the Christian history, which is the application our Lord makes of it, is too plain and perceptible not to have been remarked by almost every commentator. Isa. 8 : 6, too, 'the waters of Shiloah' are figuratively employed as a description of the Messiah himself."—Greswell.

As the Scripture hath said.—Two passages seem specially referred to: Isa. 55 : 1 and 58 : 11.

Belly.—The original word denotes mind or heart. The phrase is equivalent to "from him." "The metaphor, however strong, was probably well understood by those to whom it was addressed, since it is found in the Jewish writings. Nor is it unknown to the classical writers."—Bloomfield. It was a saying of the rabbies: "When a man turns to the Lord, he is like a fountain filled with living water, and rivers flow from him to men of all nations and tribes." "So St. Peter on the day of Pentecost, by one sermon, as by a rush of water, delivered three thousand men from the devil's kingdom, washing them in an hour from sin, death, and Satan."—Luther.

The Holy Ghost was not yet given.—"Omit the word 'given,' which is not expressed at all in the original, and read, 'because neither was Jesus glorified.'"—Alford.

Chap. XXIII.

John 7 : 39-44.

October, J.C. 33.

saying, said, Of a truth this is the Prophet. Others said, This is the Christ. But some said, Shall Christ come out of Galilee? Hath not the Scripture said, That Christ cometh of the seed of David, and out of the town of Bethlehem, where David was? So there was a division among the people because of him. And some of them would have taken him; but no man laid hands on him.

Then came the officers to the chief priests and Pharisees; and they said unto them, Why have ye not brought him? The officers answered, Never man spake like this man. Then answered them the Pharisees, Are ye also deceived? Have any of the rulers, or of the Pharisees believed on him? But this people who knoweth not the law are cursed. Nicodemus saith unto them (he that came to Jesus by night, being one of them), Doth our law judge any man before it hear him, and know what he doeth? They answered and said unto him, Art thou also of Galilee? Search, and look: for Christ cometh of the seed of David.—"Several passages of Scripture, which they explained of the Messiah and his birth. See Is. 11 : 1; Jer. 23 : 5; Mic. 5 : 2; Ps. 89 : 36."—Kuinoel.

Never man spake like this man, "was all that they could say. To listen to him was not only to be disarmed in every attempt against him, it was even to be half converted from bitter enemies to awestruck disciples. That bold disobedience to positive orders must have made them afraid of the possible consequences to themselves, but obedience would have required a courage even greater."—Farrar. "There is a power in the direct glance of a sincere and loving soul which will do more to dissipate prejudice and kindle charity than the most elaborate arguments."—George Eliot.

This people: "this rabble," who know not how to interpret the law, are cursed with judicial blindness.

Before it hear him.—More correctly, "Except it first hear him."

Art thou also of Galilee?—To be a Galilean was a term of

Chap. XXIII.

John 7 : 45-53.

October, J.C. 33.

out of Galilee ariseth no prophet. And every man went unto his own house. Jesus went unto the mount of Olives.

And early in the morning he came again into the temple, and all the people came unto him ; and he sat down and taught them. And the scribes and Pharisees brought unto him a woman taken in adultery : and reproach. They knew well he was not of Galilee, but they meant to ask whether he also had become a follower of the despised Galilean. Art thou also one of the Galilean sect, one of the believers in Jesus of Galilee ?

Out of Galilee ariseth no prophet—"hath arisen."—Alford. Galilee had produced four, or, perhaps, five great prophets, as Jonas (2 Kings 14 : 25), Nahum, Habakkuk, Amos, and probably Elisha. In view of these facts, Doddridge and Campbell attribute this false assertion to the ignorance or forgetfulness of the priests, or the hurry of anger.

Every man went unto his own house.—"Now follows a marvelous termination of this whole affair. That so strong a combination should of itself melt away, and all these persons, like waves of the sea, be broken asunder by their own impetuosity : who does not recognize in it the hand of God bringing them to this pass ? But God remains ever like himself."—Calvin. But there is no need of supposing any supernatural interposition. Lampe surmises that the meeting was broken up, without any thing being concluded upon, on account of the evening sacrifice. For at the time of evening sacrifice, says Lightfoot, it was usual to break up all meetings and adjourn all business. "Cocceius informs us, that though the smaller councils sat only to the sixth hour of the day, yet the great Sanhedrin sat to the time of the evening sacrifice."—Bloomfield.

Mount of Olives.—The mountain about a mile directly east of Jerusalem. The garden of Gethsemane, to which Jesus was accustomed to resort (John 18 : 2), was on the western side of that mountain ; and Bethany, the home of Martha and Mary, on the east of it (11 : 1). Some commentators, and among them Scott, are of opinion that Jesus passed his nights during this visit to Jerusalem with the family at Bethany.

A woman taken in adultery.—Tischendorf, Meyer, Alford, Tholuck, Trench, and other eminent critics, reject as not genuine the account of the adulterous woman. In reference to it Alford remarks : "All the most ancient MSS. omit it : so do the ancient

Chap. XXIII.

John 8 : 2-7.

October, J.C. 33.

when they had set her in the midst, they say unto him, Master, this woman was taken in adultery, in the very act. Now Moses in the law commanded us, that such should be stoned : but what sayest thou ? 'This they said, tempting him, that they might have to accuse him. But Jesus stooped down, and with his finger wrote on the ground, as though he heard them not. So when they continued asking him, he lifted up himself, and said unto them, He that is without sin among you, let him first cast a stone at her. And again he stooped down,

The Woman
taken in Adultery.

Syriac version, and all the early Fathers. The Cambridge MS. alone, of our principal ones, contains it, and that in a form widely differing from our text. . . . Its insertion here entirely breaks the context, and is foreign to the manifest design of [John's Gospel.] On the other hand, Horne remarks : " There could be no possible inducement for fabricating such a passage. It has internal evidence of authenticity, the testimony of the Vulgate, in which it is uniformly found, and the express acknowledgment of its genuineness by Chrysostom, Ferome, Augustine, and Ambrose. Add to this, that the plain and simple style is that of the evangelist, and that every circumstance is completely in character, exactly what might be expected from the Scribes and Pharisees, and from our Lord ; while his answer, though perfectly suited to the purpose, would scarcely have ever been thought of by human ingenuity."

That they might have to accuse him.—If Jesus had condemned the woman, the Pharisees would have said that he usurped civil jurisdiction and disregarded his own precept, " Be ye merciful ;" if he had refused to condemn her, they would have charged him with sanctioning adultery, and teaching disobedience to the law of Moses.

Jesus stooped down.—" Christ intended, by doing nothing, to show how unworthy they were of being heard ; just as if any one, while another was speaking to him, were to draw lines on the wall, or to turn his back, or to show by any other sign that he was not attending to what was said."—Calvin.

Let him first cast a stone at her.—" Let him first cast the stone at her." The fatal stone, which was first cast, in form, by one of the accusers or witnesses, and served as a signal for the bystanders to commence the stoning. (Deut. 13 : 9 ; 17 : 7.)

Chap. XXIII.

John 8 : 7-12.

October, J.C. 33.

and wrote on the ground. And they which heard it, being convicted by their own conscience, went out one by one, beginning at the eldest, even unto the last : and Jesus was left alone, and the woman standing in the midst. When Jesus had lifted up himself, and saw none but the woman, he said unto her, Woman, where are those thine accusers? hath no man condemned thee? She said, No man, Lord. And Jesus said unto her, Neither do I condemn thee : go, and sin no more.

Then spake Jesus again unto them, saying, I am the light of the world : he that followeth me shall not walk

Beginning at the first, even unto the last, “denotes that all her accusers went out, one after another, from the first to the last, of every age and station.”—Markland.

Neither do I condemn thee.—“Were the critical evidence against the genuineness of this passage far more overwhelming than it is, it would yet bear upon its surface the strongest possible proof of its own authentic truthfulness. It is hardly too much to say that the mixture which it displays of tragedy and of tenderness—the contrast which it involves between low, cruel cunning and exalted nobility of intellect and emotion—transcends all power of human imagination to have invented ; while the picture of a divine insight reading the inmost secrets of the heart, and a yet diviner love, which sees those inmost secrets with larger eyes than ours, furnishes us with a conception of Christ’s power and person at once too lofty and too original to have been founded on any thing but fact.”—Farrar.

I am the light of the world.—Jesus was now seated in the Treasury—“either some special building in the temple so called, or that part of the Court of the Woman which contained the thirteen chests with trumpet-shaped openings into which the people, and especially the Pharisees, cast their gifts. In this court, and therefore close beside him, were two gigantic candelabra, fifty cubits high, and sumptuously gilded, on the summit of which, nightly, during the Feast of Tabernacles, lamps were lit which shed their soft light all over the city. In allusion to these lamps, on which some circumstance of the moment may have concentrated the attention of the hearers, Christ exclaimed to them, “I am the Light of the world.”—Farrar. Isa. 42 : 6 ; 49 : 6 ; Mal. 4 : 2. “One striking peculiarity in Jesus

Chap. XXIII.

John 8 : 12-18.

October, J.C. 33.

in darkness, but shall have the light of life. The Pharisees therefore said unto him, Thou bearest record of thyself ; thy record is not true. Jesus answered and said unto them, Though I bear record of myself, yet my record is true : for I know whence I came, and whither I go : but ye cannot tell whence I come, and whither I go. Ye judge after the flesh, I judge no man. And yet if I judge, my judgment is true : for I am not alone, but I and the Father that sent me. It is also written in your law, that the testimony of two men is true. I am one that bear witness of myself ; and the Father that sent me beareth witness of me. Then said they unto him, Where is thy Father ? Jesus answered, Ye neither

Jesus Reproves
the Jews.

is the extent and vastness of his views. Whilst all around him looked for a Messiah to liberate God's ancient people—whilst to every Jew, Judea was the exclusive object of pride and hope, Jesus came, declaring himself to be the deliverer and light of the world ; and in his whole teaching and life, you see a consciousness, which never forsakes him, of a relation to the whole human race. The idea of blessing mankind, of spreading a universal religion, was the most magnificent which had ever entered man's mind. All previous religions had been given to particular nations. No conqueror, legislator, philosopher, in the extravagance of ambition, had ever dreamed of subjecting all nations to a common faith."—Channing.

The Pharisees said unto him.—Christ's teaching was subject to perpetual interruptions. It was "not that of a sermon, but of a dialogue ; not with honest inquirers or perplexed skeptics, but with bigoted, resolute foes."—Abbott. They now accuse him of self-glorification.

Record.—"Testimony."

Ye judge after the flesh.—According to his lowly appearance, and condition in life, and biased by their passions and prejudices.

I judge no man.—Kuinoel explains this passage, "I judge no man thus—that is, after the flesh and outward appearance ; and therefore ought not to be so judged by you."—Bloomfield.

Where is thy father ?—Spoken in insult and derision.

know me, nor my Father : if ye had known me, ye should have known my Father also. These words spake Jesus in the treasury, as he taught in the temple : and no man laid hands on him, for his hour was not yet come.

'Then said Jesus again unto them, I go my way, and ye shall seek me, and shall die in your sins : whither I go, ye cannot come. Then said the Jews, Will he kill himself ? because he saith, Whither I go, ye cannot come. And he said unto them, Ye are from beneath ; I am from above : ye are of this world ; I am not of this world. I said therefore unto you, that ye shall die in your sins : for if ye believe not that I am he, ye shall die in your sins. Then said they unto him, Who art thou ? And Jesus saith unto them, Even the same that I said unto you from the beginning. I have many things to say, and to judge of you : but he that sent me is true ; and I speak to the world those things which I have heard of him. They understood not that he spake to them of the Father. Then said Jesus unto them, When ye have lifted up the Son of man, then shall ye know that I am he, and that I do nothing of myself ; but as my Father hath taught me, I speak these things.

Will he kill himself?—"This appears to have been a willful perversion of our Lord's meaning. What ! will he make away with himself, to get away from this our pretended persecution ? (See John 7 : 20). Thus imputing to him what involved, even according to the opinion of the Jews, great criminality ; for we find from Jes. Bell, 3 : 14, that the Pharisees supposed the lowest pit of hell to be reserved for self-murderers."—Bloomfield.

Even the same that I said unto you from the beginning, is a wrong rendering of the original : read, "In very deed that same which I speak unto you."—Alford. "Altogether that which I am telling you."—Farrar.

Chap. XXIII.

John 8 : 29-40.

October, J.C. 33.

And he that sent me is with me : the Father hath not left me alone ; for I do always those things that please him. As he spake these words, many believed on him.

Then said Jesus to those Jews which believed on him, If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed ; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free.

They answered him, We be Abraham's seed, and were never in bondage to any man : how sayest thou, Ye shall be made free ? Jesus answered them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, Whosoever committeth sin is the servant of sin. And the servant abideth not in the house forever, but the Son abideth ever. If the Son therefore shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed. I know that ye are Abraham's seed ; but ye seek to kill me, because my word hath no place in you. I speak that which I have seen with my Father : and ye do that which ye have seen with your father. They answered

The truth shall make you free.—"The condition of a sinner is that of a captive or a slave to sin. He is one who serves and obeys the dictates of an evil heart, and the corrupt desires of an evil nature."—Bloomfield. See Rom. 6 : 16-20 ; 2 Peter 2 : 19.

We be Abraham's seed.—"They were absorbed with pride when they thought of the purity of their ancestral origin, and the privilege of their exclusive monotheism ; but he told them that in very truth they were, by spiritual affinity, the affinity of cruelty and falsehood, children of him who was a liar and a murderer from the beginning."—Farrar.

The servant.—The slave, the bondman.

The servant abideth not.—The slave has no claim to remain continually in the same family ; but may, at the pleasure of his owner, be sold to another.

Son . . . shall make you free.—Perhaps an allusion to a custom among the Romans of a son's liberating, after his father's death, such as were born slaves in his house.

My word hath no place, "gaineth no ground in you."—Alford.

Chap. XXIII.

John 8 : 40-53.

October, J.C. 33.

and said unto him, Abraham is our father. Jesus saith unto them, If ye were Abraham's children, ye would do the works of Abraham. But now ye seek to kill me, a man that hath told you the truth, which I have heard of God : this did not Abraham. Ye do the deeds of your father. Then said they to him, We be not born of fornication ; we have one Father, even God. Jesus said unto them, If God were your Father, ye would love me : for I proceeded forth and came from God ; neither came I of myself, but he sent me. Why do ye not understand my speech ? even because ye cannot hear my word. Ye are of your father the devil, and the lusts of your father ye will do : he was a murderer from the beginning, and abode not in the truth ; because there is no truth in him. When he speaketh a lie, he speaketh of his own : for he is a liar, and the father of it. And because I tell you the truth, ye believe me not. Which of you convinceth me of sin ? And if I say the truth, why do ye not believe me ? He that is of God, heareth God's words : ye therefore hear them not, because ye are not of God.

Then answered the Jews, and said unto him, Say we not well that thou art a Samaritan, and hast a devil ? Jesus answered, I have not a devil ; but I honor my Father, and ye do dishonor me. And I seek not mine own glory : there is one that seeketh and judgeth. Verily, verily, I say unto you, If a man keep my say-

Ye cannot hear my word.—"Ye will not." "It searches your hearts, detects your hypocrisy, and exposes your iniquitous intentions ; and as ye are determined not to leave your sins, so ye are purposed not to hear my doctrine."—A. Clarke. "The account Josephus gives of the wickedness of the Jews about this time, abundantly vindicates this assertion of our Lord from any appearance of undue severity."—Doddridge.

Chap. XXIII.

John 8 : 53-58.

October, J.C. 33.

ing, he shall never see death. Then said the Jews unto him, Now we know that thou hast a devil. Abraham is dead, and the prophets ; and thou sayest, If a man keep my saying, he shall never taste of death. Art thou greater than our father Abraham which is dead ? and the prophets are dead : whom makest thou thyself ? Jesus answered, If I honor myself, my honor is nothing : it is my Father that honoreth me, of whom ye say, that he is your God. Jesus Proclaims his own Eternity. Yet ye have not known him ; but I know him : and if I should say, I know him not, I shall be a liar like unto you : but I know him, and keep his saying. Your father Abraham rejoiced to see my day : and he saw it, and was glad. Then said the Jews unto him, Thou art not yet fifty years old, and hast thou seen Abraham ? Jesus said unto them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, Before Abraham was, I am.

Rejoiced to see my day.—He saw it in prophetic vision.

Before Abraham was—"was made" (Alford) ; created or existed. His charge that they were children of the devil had stung them to a fury which became uncontrollable when he asserted an existence prior to Abraham. "He said not, 'Before Abraham was, I was,' but, 'I am.' As the Father useth this expression I AM, so also doth Christ, for it signifieth continuous being, irrespective of all time. On which account the expression seemed to the Jews blasphemous."—Chrysostom.

I am.—"Divinity has no past or future, but always the present ; and therefore Jesus does not say, 'Before Abraham was, I was,' but, 'I am.'"—Gregory. "He is not eternity nor infinity, but eternal and infinite. He is not duration nor space, but he endures and is present, endures always and is present everywhere."—Sir Isaac Newton. "Religion passes out of the law of reason only where the eye of reason has reached its own horizon ; and faith is then but its continuation, even as the day softens away into sweet twilight, and twilight, hushed and breathless, steals into darkness. It is night, sacred night ; the up-raised eye views only the starry heaven, which manifests itself alone ; and the outward beholding is fixed on the sparks, twink-

Then took they up stones to cast at him : but Jesus hid himself, and went out of the temple, going through the midst of them, and so passed by.

ling in the awful depth (though suns of other worlds), only to preserve the soul steady and collected in its pure act of inward adoration to the great 'I am,' and to 'the Filial Word,' that reaffirmeth it from Eternity to Eternity, whose choral echo is the Universe."—Coleridge.

Then they took up stones to cast at him. "With a burst of impetuous fury—one of those paroxysms of sudden, uncontrollable, frantic rage to which this people has in all ages been liable upon any collision with its religious convictions—they took up stones to stone him. But the very blindness of their rage made it more easy to elude them. With perfect calmness he departed unhurt out of the temple."—Farrar. The unfinished condition of the temple buildings would supply them with huge stones close at hand. The clause, "Going through the midst of them, and so passed by," is not found in several ancient MSS., and, in the opinion of many critics, should be omitted.

CHAPTER XXIV.

THE MAN BORN BLIND.

AND as Jesus passed by, he saw a man which was blind from his birth.

And his disciples asked him, saying, Master, who did sin, this man, or his parents, that he was born blind?

As Jesus passed by.—Was the blind man healed directly after the events recorded in the last chapter? “So say many, bringing the attempt to stone him and the miracle into immediate connection. But it is more probable that some interval elapsed. It is not likely that Jesus, when ‘he hid himself and went out of the temple,’ was accompanied by his disciples; yet they were with him when he saw the blind man. Nor would they in such a moment be likely to ask speculative questions respecting the cause of the man’s blindness. We conclude, then, that the Sabbath on which the man was healed was not the eighth day of the feast, but the first week Sabbath following.”—Andrews.

Saw a man which was blind.—“Acts 3 : 2 supplies an example to prove that such as from bodily infirmities were obliged to depend upon charity, resorted to the gates or the avenues of the temple, and at the times of prayer in particular. This man was evidently an object of this description.”—Greswell.

Who did sin?—“The Jews were trained to regard special suffering as the necessary and immediate consequence of special sin. Perhaps the disciples supposed that the words of our Lord to the paralytic might seem to sanction such an impression. They asked, therefore, how this man came to be born blind. Could it be in consequence of the sins of his parents? If not, was there any way of supposing that it could have been for his own? They were therefore perplexed.” “We can hardly imagine that those simple-minded Galileans were familiar with the doctrine of metempsychosis, or the Rabbinic fancy of anti-natal sin, or the Platonic and Alexandrian fancy of pre-existence.”—Farrar. “They did not see how it must have been the sin and suffering, not of this man as an individual, but of him as making part of a great whole, which were thus connected together; how the fact of this calamity, reaching back to his birth, excluded the uncharitable suspicion that wherever there was a more than ordinary sufferer there was a more than ordinary sinner, leaving only the most true thought, that a great sin must be cleaving to a race of which any member could so suffer.”—Trench.

Chap. XXIV.

John 9 : 3-5.

J.C. 33.

Jesus answered, Neither hath this man sinned, nor his parents ; but that the works of God should be made manifest in him. I must work the works of him that sent me, while it is day : the night cometh, when no man can work. As long as I am in the world, I am the light of the world.

Neither hath this man sinned.—Neither did this man sin. “ Into the unprofitable regions of such barren speculations our Lord refused to follow them, and he declined, as always, the tendency to infer and to sit in judgment upon the sins of others.”—Farrar. “ Men have never been disposed to separate those things which are not the proper subjects of human contemplation from those which are ; what I mean is, of the origin of evil. If God be all-good and all-powerful, how did evil arise and exist ? But the irreligionist, with the malice to embarrass, and the religionist, with the vanity of doing what no one was able to do before, have been always forward in writing upon this subject. He must know little of philosophy who fancies he can solve the difficulty. He must know less of religion who fancies that the want of a solution can affect our belief in God.”—Bishop Warburton.

But that the works of God.—That, “ by means of it, the works of God should be made manifest.”—Farrar. The Greek does not imply that the man had been born blind solely to exhibit the divine mercy in his healing.

The night cometh.—The night of his death. Its shadows were already about him. From this time forward he continually alludes to his approaching end. “ The night comes, it will come certainly, may come suddenly, is coming nearer and nearer. We can not compute how high our sun is ; it may go down at noon ; nor can we promise ourselves a twilight between the day of life and the night of death. When the night comes we can not work, because the light afforded us to work by is extinguished ; the grave is a land of darkness, and our work can not be done in the dark.”—Henry.

“ Now it is day ; be doing, every one,
For the night cometh wherein can work none.”

Goethe.

As long as I am in the world, I am the light of the world. “ What fitter task for me than this of opening the eyes of the blind ? What work could become me better than this—which is so apt a symbol of my greater spiritual work—the restoring of the darkened spiritual vision of the race of men ?”—Trench. “ It was prophesied that the Messiah should open the eyes of

When he had thus spoken, he spat on the ground, and made clay of the spittle, and he anointed the eyes of the blind man with the clay, and said unto him, Go, wash in the pool of Siloam (which is by interpretation, Sent). He

Jesus Cures
the Man Born Blind.

the blind (Isa. 29 : 18 ; 35 : 5 ; 42 : 7). The direct reference is to Christ's fulfillment of these prophecies (Luke 4 : 18, 21). But it is true, in a larger sense, that just so far as Christ is in the world, and accepted by the world, he becomes its light, intellectual, moral, and spiritual (John 1 : 9)."—Abbott.

Anointed the eyes : smeared them with the clay. "It would be erroneous to suppose that the Lord used natural remedies except as channels for the conveying of his power. In other healings of the blind no such means were employed. Was the moistened clay the conductor of the healing power, and the washing merely designed to remove the hindrances which the medium of cure would itself, if suffered to remain, have opposed even to the restored organs of vision? Thus I should understand it. Probably the reasons which induced the use of these means were ethical ; it was perhaps a help for the weak faith of the man to find that something external was done."—Trench, condensed. "Rather it was a requirement of faith which exacted obedience as a condition of cure. It is noticeable, however, that Christ never cured without giving the healed something to do, as a test of his faith and obedience. Even in the three cases of raising from the dead he called on the mourners, to indicate by their obedience to his direction their faith in him (Matt. 9 : 24, 25 ; Luke 7 : 14 ; John 11 : 39, 40). When he was asked to heal, the simple request served as an indication of faith ; when, as here, he volunteered the cure, he seems always to have required some act as an evidence of faith. Comp. John 5 : 6-8."—Abbott.

Siloam.—"One of the pools in the vicinity of Jerusalem, entitled also Siloah or Shiloah (Neh. 3 : 15 ; Isa. 8 : 6). It is identified with a pool or tank still found in the vicinity of Jerusalem, which stands to the south of the temple mount, and consists of an oblong tank, partly hewn out of the rock and partly built of masonry, measuring about fifty-three feet in length, eighteen feet in width, and nineteen feet in depth, with a flight of steps leading down to the bottom. Several columns stand out of the side walls, extending from the top downward into the reservoir, the design of which it is now difficult to conjecture. The water passes out of this reservoir through an open channel cut in the rock, which is covered for a short distance, and a few went his way therefore, and washed, and came seeing.

yards off is partly dammed up by the people of the adjoining village of Siloam, for the purpose of washing their clothes, and then divided into small streams to irrigate the gardens below. The water flows into this reservoir from an artificial cave or basin under the cliff. This cave is entered by a small archway hewn in the rock. It is irregular in form, and decreases in size as it proceeds, from about fifteen to three feet in height. It is connected with what is known as the Fountain of the Virgin by a remarkable conduit cut through the very heart of the rock in a zigzag form, measuring some seventeen hundred and fifty feet, while the distance in a straight line is only eleven hundred feet. This remarkable fact was discovered by Dr. Edward Robinson, who had the hardihood to crawl through the passage."—Abbott. For an interesting account of Siloam, see Robinson's Biblical Researches, vol. 9, pp. 493-8, and 501 ; and Porter's Hand Book, vol. I, p. 140.

Which is by interpretation, Sent.—Jesus was here the "sender," not the "sent ;" but probably the name recalled to the Evangelist that Jesus was the Sent of God (John 7 : 29 ; 8 : 42) to open the eyes of the spiritually blind. "The Lord sent the blind man to wash, not in, as our version has it, but at the pool of Siloam ; for it was the clay from his eye that was to be washed off ; and the Evangelist is careful to throw in a remark, not for the purpose of telling us that Siloam was an 'aqueduct,' as some think, but to give higher significance to the miracle." Further reference is made to "the inner meaning here—the parallelism between 'the Sent One' (Luke 4 : 18 ; John 10 : 36) and 'the Sent Water,' the missioned one and the missioned pool. . . . Job 5 : 10, 'he sendeth waters upon the fields ;' and Ez. 31 : 4, 'she sent out her little rivers unto all the trees of the field.' . . . The Talmudists coincide with the Evangelist, and say that Shiloah was so called because it sent forth its waters to water the gardens."—Smith's Bib. Dict.

He went therefore, etc.—"Compare this with the cure of Naaman (2 Kings 5 : 11, 13), who was in like manner bid to wash in Jordan, and only reluctantly, and after angry resistance, consented. Observe how great the trial to this blind man's faith, directed to take so considerable a walk, in his blindness, as a condition of cure. Observe, too, in the miracle a parable of redemption. The whole world lieth in darkness from the beginning (Ps. 107 : 10 ; Matt. 4 : 16 ; 1 John 5 : 19). Christ, the light of the world, comes to call us out of darkness into marvelous light (Acts 26 : 18 ; 2 Cor. 4 : 6 ; Col. 1 : 13 ; 1 Pet. 2 : 9). The condition of receiving that light is faith, exemplified by

Chap. XXIV.

John 9 : 8-13.

J.C. 33.

The neighbors, therefore, and they which before had seen him that he was blind, said, Is not this he that sat and begged? Some said, This is he; others said, He is like him: but he said, I am he. Therefore said they unto him, How were thine eyes opened? He answered and said, A man that is called Jesus made clay, and anointed mine eyes, and said unto me, Go to the pool of Siloam, and wash: and I went and washed, and I received sight. Then said they unto him, Where is he? He said, I know not.

They brought to the Pharisees him that aforetime was obedience, without which the soul remains in darkness (John 1 : 5; 3 : 19); and he often calls us to prove our faith by walking, in obedience to his direction, in the darkness for a while, in order that we may come into the light."—Abbott.

The neighbors.—The man at first probably returned to his own home, but the neighbors failed to recognize him. He was no longer the blind beggar who asked alms by the wayside. A new glow was on his face, and a new spirit pervaded his whole being. It altered his every feature, and they doubted his identity; but he joyfully assured them, "I am he!"

Is not this he that sat and begged?—"Apparently he was a well-known beggar, like the one described in Acts 3 : 2, 10. Compare Luke 18 : 35. He is described as one that sat and begged, in contrast with such as beg from door to door. Beggars of this description, having a regular place, where they may always be found soliciting alms, are a not uncommon sight in the East."—Abbott.

They brought him to the Pharisees.—The neighbors were amazed, and, with probably no evil intentions, took the man to their spiritual leaders, that he might relate to them his wonderful restoration. It was the Sabbath, but the lesser Sanhedrin was in session daily. First, they asked how he had received his sight, and the man told his simple story. Many doubted, and would not believe till they had called his parents; others said, 'This man is not a prophet sent of God, for he has broken the Sabbath.' The Jews believed that human spittle was efficacious in diseases of the eye, which were very prevalent among them; but "the Rabbis had forbidden any man to smear even one of his eyes with spittle on that day. Jesus had not only smeared both the man's eyes, but had actually mingled the

Chap. XXIV.

John 9 : 14-16.

J.C. 33.

blind. And it was the Sabbath-day when Jesus made the clay, and opened his eyes. Then The Man Before the Sanhedrin. again the Pharisees also asked him how he had received his sight. He said unto them, He put clay upon mine eyes, and I washed, and do see.

Therefore said some of the Pharisees, This man is not of God, because he keepeth not the Sabbath-day. Others said, How can a man that is a sinner do such miracles? And there was a division among them.

saliva with clay!"—Farrar. Clearly, therefore, Jesus had broken the Sabbath; but if they charged him with that, they admitted the healing, and gave encouragement to those among them, who said, "How can a sinner do such miracles?" They could come to no conclusion, and in their perplexity turned to the wretched mendicant who had often, it may be, begged an alms of them at the temple gate, and asked his opinion. "What sayest thou of him that hath opened thy eyes?" (Vulgate). He was no longer blind, and he answered promptly, "He is a prophet." "It was a Jewish maxim that a prophet might dispense with the observance of the Sabbath."—Adam Clarke. Throughout the whole of this narrative there is a self-verifying naturalness that bears irresistible evidence to its truth; and by it this blind beggar gives now as convincing testimony to the reality of this miracle and the power of Christ as he did then, when he stood unabashed before the highest aristocracy of Judea.

Some said . . . Others said.—"It is a mistake to suppose that all the Pharisees were hypocrites. Among them were such men as Nicodemus, Joseph of Arimathea, Gamaliel, Saul of Tarsus. (See Matt. 3 : 7.) But the honest Pharisees were timid, and were easily overborne by their opponents. For account of similar conflict, see John 7 : 47-52. Observe the inherent vice of Pharisaism, ancient and modern; it puts the ceremonial above humanity; it is of the essence of Christianity that it regards all ceremonials and observances as for humanity (Mark 2 : 27; Matt. 12 : 8)."—Abbott.

This man is not of God, because he keepeth not the Sabbath. "There are a good many pious people who are as careful of their religion as of their best service of china, only using it on holy occasions for fear it should get chipped or flawed in work-day wear."—*Douglas Ferrol*d.

Chap. XXIV.

John 9 : 17-23.

J.C. 33.

'They say unto the blind man again, What sayest thou of him, that he hath opened thine eyes? He said, He is a prophet.

But the Jews did not believe concerning him, that he had been blind, and received his sight, until they called the parents of him that had received his sight. And they asked them, saying, Is this your son, who ye say was born blind? How then doth he now see? His parents answered them and said, We know that this is our son, and that he was born blind; but by what means he now seeth, we know not; or who hath opened his eyes, we know not: he is of age; ask him: he shall speak for himself.

These words spake his parents, because they feared the Jews: for the Jews had agreed already, that if any man did confess that Jesus was Christ, he should be put out of the Synagogue. Therefore said his parents, He is of age; ask him.

The parents.—"They saw the kind of nature with which they had to deal, and anxious for any loophole by which they could deny or set aside the miracle, they sent for the man's parents."—Farrar. "They desire to get a lie from them, and that they should say their son had not been born blind. But neither in this quarter do they find any help."—Trench.

He is of age; ask him.—Telling the fact would not necessarily be 'confessing that Jesus was the Christ;' but ecclesiastics have never been scrupulous in enforcing their own laws, and the Pharisees would easily have found a pretext for excommunicating the parents. "The parents also clung to the plain truth, while, with a certain Judaic servility and cunning, they refused to draw any inferences which would lay them open to unpleasant consequences."—Farrar. "There is something of selfishness in the manner in which they extricate themselves from the difficulty, leaving their son in it."—Trench.

Put out of the synagogue.—"Among the Jews there were two grades of excommunication—the one for lighter offences, of which they mentioned twenty-four causes; the other for greater offences. The first excluded a man for thirty days from the

Chap. XXIV.

John 9 : 23-27.

J.C. 33.

Then again called they the man that was blind, and said unto him, Give God the praise : we know that this man is a sinner.

He answered and said, Whether he be a sinner or no,
 The First Con- I know not : one thing I know, that, fession. whereas I was blind, now I see.

Then said they to him again, What did he to thee ?
 how opened he thine eyes ?

privilege of entering a synagogue, and from coming nearer to his wife or friends than four cubits. The other was a solemn exclusion forever from the worship of the synagogue, attended with awful maledictions and curses, and an exclusion from all intercourse with the people. This was called the curse, and so thoroughly excluded the person from all communion whatever with his countrymen that they were not allowed to sell to him any thing, even the necessities of life."—Buxtorf.

Then again called they the man.—"The man had been removed while his parents were being examined. The Pharisees now summon him again, and evidently by their address would have him to believe that they had gotten to the root of all, and discovered the whole fraud, so that any longer persisting in it would be idle. They are as men seeking to obtain confession from one they suspect, by assuring him that others have confessed, and so that for him to stand out in denying will only make matters the worse for him in the end."—Trench. They would have him think that they now know it to be all a collusion between Jesus and himself, and they solemnly charge him—using the Jewish formula of adjuration (see Josh. 7 : 19)—to "Give glory to God. Remember you are in his presence, and speak as unto him ! We know this man is a sinner !" Thus they attempted to overbear the man by their august authority and confident assertions. But he is "of sturdier stuff than his parents. He is not to be overawed by their authority, or knocked down by their assertions. He breathed quite freely in the halo-atmosphere of their superior sanctity."—Farrar. "Whether he is a sinner," he replies, "I do not know ; but this I do know, that I who am known by all as a blind man now see."—Alford.

Give God the praise "sets the reader of this passage quite upon a wrong track."—Trench. It is an incorrect rendering of the original ; the true meaning is given in the preceding note.

Then said they to him again.—"They perceive that they can gain nothing in this way, and they require him to tell over

Chap. XXIV.

John 9 : 27-30.

J.C. 33.

He answered them, I have told you already, and ye did not hear : wherefore would ye hear it again ? will ye also be his disciples ?

'Then they reviled him, and said, Thou art his disciple ; but we are Moses' disciples. We know that God spake unto Moses ; as for this fellow, we know not from whence he is.

The man answered and said unto them, Why, herein again the manner of his cure, hoping either to detect some contradictions in his story, or to find something they can better lay hold of and wrest into a charge against Christ. But the man has grown weary of the examinations to which his inquisitors are submitting him, and there is something of defiance in his answer."—Trench. "I told you once, and ye did not attend. Why do ye wish to hear again ? Is it possible that ye, too, wish to be his disciples ?" "Bold irony this—to ask these stately, ruffled, scrupulous Sanhedrists whether he was really to regard them as anxious and sincere inquirers about the claims of the Nazarene prophet."—Farrar. "Nothing could have been more stinging to them than the bare supposition of such a discipleship."—Trench. "So since authority, threats, blandishments had all failed, they broke into abuse. 'Thou art his disciple : we are the disciples of Moses ; of this man we know nothing.'"—Farrar. And now follows a scene which is at once one of the most striking and most ludicrous in all history. A ragged mendicant, only that morning begging his bread by the wayside, expounding theology to this conclave of high ecclesiastics, who sat in "the seat of Moses," and embodied all the sanctity and all the erudition of Judaism ! Luther at Worms was not such a spectacle. That was heroic ; this was equally so, for the man had at stake that which his countrymen valued more than life ; but added to this heroic element was a touch of incongruity and absurdity that made the scene supremely ludicrous. This blind man has been fitly called "The first Confessor." He certainly showed a better knowledge of the Scriptures than these self-righteous Pharisees, with all their fine-drawn, hair-splitting exegesis. It was a remark of Chemnitz, "You will often find more solid theology among tailors and shoemakers than among cardinals, bishops, and abbots." "How strong is truth, and how weak is falsehood ! Truth, though she take hold only of ordinary men, maketh them appear glorious ; falsehood, even with the strong, makes them appear weak."—Chrysostom.

is a marvelous thing, that ye know not from whence he is, and yet he hath opened mine eyes. Now we know that God heareth not sinners : but if any man be a worshiper of God, and doeth his will, him he heareth. Since the world began was it not heard that any man opened the eyes of one that was born blind. If this man were not of God, he could do nothing.

They answered and said unto him, Thou wast altogether born in sins, and dost thou teach us ? And they cast him out.

A marvelous thing.—"This was frankly, firmly, and truly spoken."—Augustine.

God heareth not sinners.—"Men in their sins, and not desiring to be delivered out of them."—Trench. The man, even if he was without sight, had read the Old Testament. See Isa. 1 : 15 ; 59 : 12 ; Prov. 1 : 28 ; 15 : 8 ; 28 : 9 ; Ps. 50 : 16 ; 66 : 18 ; 109 : 7 ; Job. 27 : 9 ; 35 : 13 ; Jer. 14 : 12 ; Mic. 3 : 4 ; Zech. 7 : 13.

Since the world began it never was heard that any man opened the eyes of one born blind. No similar miracle is anywhere else recorded in Scripture. The giving of sight to one born blind was considered an impossibility till 1728, when Dr. Cheselden, by couching the eyes of a youth of twelve years, enabled him to see perfectly. Similar operations have since been equally successful.

They cast him out.—Unable to longer control their transport of rage, they "rudely flung him from the hall of judgment," and, "according to the decree which had gone before, declared him to have come under those sharp spiritual censures which they had threatened against any that should join themselves to the Lord."—Trench. These censures were greatly dreaded by the Jews. "Our Lord often alludes to them, not as though they were a slight matter, but as among the sharpest trials his servants would have to endure."—Trench. "The narrative of this miracle has a special value in apologetics. How often do we hear the wish expressed that Christ's miracles had been put on documentary record, and had been subjected to a thorough judicial investigation ! Here we have the very thing that is desired : judicial personages, and these, too, the avowed enemies of Christ, investigate a miracle in repeated hearings, and yet it holds its ground."—Tholuck. "The case

Chap. XXIV.

John 9 : 35-39.

J.C. 33.

Jesus heard that they had cast him out ; and when he had found him, he said unto him, Dost thou believe on the Son of God ?

He answered and said, Who is he, Lord, that I might believe on him ?

And Jesus said unto him, Thou hast both seen him, and it is he that talketh with thee.

And he said, Lord, I believe. And he worshiped him.

is chiefly remarkable from the subsequent investigation to which it led. It seems almost to satisfy the demands of modern skepticism. The people brought the subject of the case to the Supreme Court. The case was judicially investigated. The blind man's identity was established by his own testimony, and corroborated by that of his parents. That he was born blind was established by the same indisputable evidence. The value of this evidence is enhanced by the fact that his parents were reluctant witnesses, and that the man himself had so little interest to further the cause of Christ that he did not even so much as know who he was ; and, finally, so clear was the case that, after the utmost endeavor to browbeat the witness, the court resorted to the sorry expedient of excommunicating him, that they might thus cast discredit on his story."—Abbott.

Jesus heard that they had cast him out, and went in search of him, who had so soon been made to suffer for the Son of Man's sake.

When he had found him he said unto him, Dost thou believe on the Son of God ? "The man knows what the title means—that it is equivalent to Messiah, but he knows not any one who has a right to claim it as his own."—Trench. And he asks, "Who is he, Lord, that I might believe on him ?" And Jesus answers,

Thou hast seen him, and it is he that talketh with thee. Professor Westcott notices here the striking fact that this spontaneous revelation to the outcast from the synagogue finds its only parallel in the similar revelation (John 4 : 26) to the outcast from the nation—the abandoned woman of Samaria.

Lord, I believe, and he worshiped him. Did homage to him as the Messiah. Fell down at his feet, as one more than man. The Syriac renders the phrase, "he worshiped him."

And Jesus said, For judgment I am come into

thus : "and casting himself down he adored him ;" the Persic, "and he bowed down and adored Christ ;" the Arabic, "and he adored him ;" the Vulgate, "and falling down he adored him." The scales had fallen from his eyes, and now he saw all things clearly. "When one born blind receives his sight, the visible creation seems to have just started into being, all is so new ! and yet all things are as they were from the beginning ; the change is in him : so, when the soul is quickened into spiritual life, we see, and see with wonder, a meaning and force and power in divine things, as if they were all just discovered to mankind ; whereas we can not but acknowledge that the same objects were presented to us before. But the fact is that, till we were quickened by God, we had no sense that could be suitably affected by eternal things. They were spread abroad before us ; but we looked at them as at a picture, which is looked at a few minutes and then forgotten ; they had no hold upon us ; they made no impression, they scarcely appeared real, and sometimes we doubted whether they had any existence : but we are now quickened to feel those things to be true which before we only thought to be so."—Henry Martyn. "The history of the blind man illustrates the growth of faith, as well as its conditions. At first he knew nothing of Jesus ; but without knowledge or definite hope he obeys Christ's direction, goes to the pool of Siloam, washes, sees. He still knows nothing of the Healer but that he is 'a man that is called Jesus.' Despite the timidity of his parents, and the threatening of the Pharisees, he maintains the truth, defends the unknown, asserts him to be a prophet, and a man of God. Finally, he finds in him the Messiah, the Son of God. Fidelity in that which is least is the condition of receiving larger gifts in knowledge and faith."—Abbott.

For judgment I am come into this world.—"I am come to reveal every man's innermost state. I am the touchstone. Much that seemed true shall at my touch be proved false, to be merely dross ; much that for its little sightliness was nothing accounted of shall prove true metal ; many whom men esteemed to be seeing, such as the spiritual chiefs of this nation, shall be shown to be blind ; many whom men accounted altogether unenlightened shall, when my light touches them, be shown to have powers of spiritual vision undreamed of before."—Trench. "Christ was the King of Truth, and therefore his open setting up of his banner in the world was at once, and of necessity, a ranging of men in their true ranks, as lovers of truth and lovers of a lie."—Augustine. (See Luke 2 : 34, 35 ; 1 Pet. 2 : 6, 8 ; 2 Cor. 2 : 16.) "In the two characters of the Pharisees and the

Chap. XXIV.

John 9 : 39-41.

J.C. 33.

this world ; that they which see not might see, and that they which see might be made blind.

And some of the Pharisees which were with him heard these words, and said unto him, Are we blind also ?

Jesus said unto them, If ye were blind, ye should person they thus cast out we have a pattern of the believer and the unbeliever, which will hold true to the end of the world ; where the temper of the Pharisee is, there will Christ be unknown or rejected ; where the other temper is—of the man that was born blind—there will Christ be valued, and nowhere else.”—Jones, of Nayland. “ Contrast John 8 : 15 ; 12 : 47. Christ does not hesitate to state truths at different times in forms which make his statements apparently contradictory. He does not come to announce judgment or condemnation, but to provide mercy ; nevertheless, he has come for judgment. Since he draws to himself all that love the divine character and the divine life, and repels all that are worldly and selfish, he does not condemn, but they that reject him are self-condemned, testifying that they love darkness rather than light, because their deeds are evil.”—Abbott. The words in the text were no doubt addressed to his disciples, but they were overheard by some of the Pharisees, who were “ ever restlessly and discontentedly hovering about him, and in their morbid egotism always on the lookout for some reflection on themselves.”—Farrar.

That they which see not might see.—“ Christ’s coming gave moral and spiritual sight to the publicans who were without moral culture, but opened their hearts to receive Christ’s instructions ; and it darkened such moral sense as the Pharisees already possessed, since they closed their eyes to the clear revelation which Christ brought. Thus Christ is both savor of life unto life and of death unto death (2 Cor. 2 : 16), both the cornerstone and the stone of stumbling (1 Pet. 2 : 6-8 ; compare Matt. 3 : 12).”—Abbott.

Are we blind also ?—“ The form of the original implies a strong expectation of a negative reply. It might be rendered, ‘ Surely we are not blind also.’ ”—Abbott. “ The answer of Jesus was that in natural blindness there would have been no guilt, but to those who only stumbled in the blindness of willful error a claim to the possession of sight was a self-condemnation.”—Farrar.

If ye were blind ye should have no sin.—“ This is not to be interpreted away as equivalent to, Your sin would be less. It is have no sin : but now ye say, We see ; therefore your sin remaineth.

Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that entereth not by literally true that sin is in the proportion of knowledge, so that one who is, by no fault of his own, absolutely ignorant of moral distinction, is absolutely free from moral responsibility.”—Abbott.

Ye say, We see ; therefore your sin remains.—“ They had the law and the prophets, which foretold the Messiah (John 5 : 39), and they had the knowledge of his works and the moral capacity to judge them, and did adjudge that God was with him (John 3 : 2), and that he could not be a sinner (John 9 : 16). This was enough to render them guilty in not following out their convictions by a public confession of Christ as a prophet, which they really saw him to be. Comp. John 15 : 24 ; and with the entire passage (verses 39-41), Rom. 2 : 17-24.”—Abbott.

Verily, verily I say unto you.—“ The figure [in this parable] is drawn from the spectacle likely at any evening to be witnessed on the hillsides of Judea, a flock of sheep gathered from the different fields in which they had been wandering, and following their shepherd, who conducts them to the sheepfold, which they enter, one by one, for protection, the shepherd going before and leading them in. To understand aright its meaning, two facts, often forgotten, must be borne in mind : (1) that the metaphor is used in the Old Testament, and for a double purpose ; sometimes the shepherd is the religious teacher of Israel, whose unfaithfulness is rebuked in the prophets (Jer. 23 : 1-4 ; Ezek., chap. 34) ; sometimes the shepherd is the Lord, who leads, defends, and feeds the soul which trusts in him (Ps. 23 ; Isaiah 40, 11) ; (2) the parable is closely connected with the discourse concerning blindness, growing out of the cure of the blind man, and is given for the purpose of emphasizing and carrying out the warnings therein contained against the Pharisees as blind leaders of the blind (Matt. 15 : 14). I understand, then, that it is a parable with a double application. First, Christ compares the Pharisees to shepherds, himself to the door, and declares that they alone are true shepherds who enter into Israel through—that is, under command from, and with the authority of—Christ as the Messiah ; all others are thieves and robbers (John 10 : 7-10). He then changes the application, retaining the figure, declares himself to be the shepherd, whose praises David and Isaiah sang, and indicates the nature of the service which he will render to his sheep—namely, giving his life for them. The parable itself embraces verses 1-6, the first application, a lesson

Chap. XXIV.

John 10 : 1-2.

J.C. 33.

the door into the sheepfold, but climbeth up some other way, the same is a thief and a robber. But he that entereth in by the door

Apologue of the Sheepfold.

against the false Pharisaical teachers ; verses 7-10, the second application, a lesson concerning himself as the good shepherd, verses 11-18. The first application is interpreted by Ezekiel, chap. 34 ; the second by Psalm 23 and Isaiah 40 : 11. The ordinary interpretation which regards Christ as referring to himself throughout as shepherd necessarily supposes that he employs a mixed metaphor, in which, without any apparent reason, he alternately represents himself as the door and the shepherd."—Abbott.

The sheepfold.—"Those low, flat buildings on the sheltered side of the valley are sheepfolds. They are called marah ; and when the nights are cold the flocks are shut up in them, but in ordinary weather they are merely kept within the yard. This, you observe, is defended by a wide stone wall, crowned all around with sharp thorns, which the prowling wolf will rarely attempt to scale. The nimer, however, and the fahed, the leopard and panther of this country, when pressed with hunger, will overleap this thorny hedge, and with one tremendous bound land among the frightened fold. Then is the time to try the nerve and heart of the faithful shepherd. These humble types of him who leadeth Joseph like a flock never leave their helpless charge alone, but accompany them by day and abide with them by night."—Thomson. The sheepfolds are sometimes constructed of wattled-work, twigs and branches of trees woven together, high and strong enough to secure the flock against wild beasts. "The sheepfold in this parable answers primarily to Israel, the then visible and organic church of God, but secondarily to the church of Christ in all ages, the visible and external organization, in which the professed disciples of Christ, his sheep, are gathered for better protection. He that enters not by the door, but furtively climbs up some other way, marks himself thereby as evil disposed."—Abbott.

He that entereth in by the door, the same is a shepherd of the sheep.—"Not, as in our English version, the shepherd. The definite article is wanting. Christ does not declare that the evidence that he is the shepherd consists in the fact that he entered through the door, for he is himself the door. He declares to the Pharisees, who reject him as their Messiah, that there is a double test of the religious teacher ; (1) he must enter into the church by the way by which he directs the sheep to enter. There is not one salvation for the teacher and another for the is the shepherd of the sheep. To him the porter openeth ; and the sheep hear his voice : and he calleth his own sheep by name, and leadeth them out. And when he putteth forth his own sheep, he goeth before them, and the sheep follow him : for they know his voice. And a stranger will they not follow, but will flee from him : for they know not the voice of strangers.

taught ; the door is the same to all ; and (2) he must enter by the one only door—Jesus Christ. Whoever comes in the name and with the authority of Jesus Christ is a shepherd of the sheep ; whoever comes to preach any other gospel comes to rob the sheep of their Saviour and salvation (Gal. 1 : 8, 9 ; 2 John 10 : 10).”—Abbott.

Porter.—Watch was kept at the door by a servant furnished with arms, the “porter.”

The sheep hear his voice.—“This is true to the letter. They are so tame and so trained that they follow their keeper with the utmost docility. He leads them forth from the fold just where he pleases.”—Thomson. “Two flocks were moving slowly up the slope of the hill, the one of goats, the other of sheep. The shepherd was going before the sheep, and they followed as he led the way to the Jaffa gate ; we could not but remember the Saviour’s words, ‘When he putteth forth his own sheep, he goeth before them, and the sheep follow him : for they know his voice.’”

He calleth his own sheep by name.—“Speaks to them individually, indicating Christ’s regard for each one of his followers. In the morning the shepherd comes, is admitted by the ‘porter,’ and calls the bell-wether ; the particular animals had, and in our own day still have, their own names.”—Tholuck.

And they follow him.—“How think you is Christ to be followed, except by the law which he gave, and the example which he set before us ?”—Paulinus.

A stranger will they not follow.—“A traveler asserted to a Syrian shepherd that the sheep knew the dress of their master, and not his voice ; the shepherd, on the other hand, maintained that it was the voice they knew. To settle the point, he and the traveler changed dresses and went among the sheep. The traveler in the shepherd’s dress called on the sheep, and tried to lead them ; but they knew not his voice, and never moved. On the other hand, they ran at once at the call of their owner, though thus disguised.”—Narrative of Mission to the Jews.

Chap. XXIV.

John 10 : 6-8.

J.C. 33.

This parable spake Jesus unto them : but they understood not what things they were which he spake unto them.

Then said Jesus unto them again, Verily, verily, I say unto you, I am the door of the sheep. All that ever came before me are thieves and robbers : but the

All that ever came before me.—“The words are directed chiefly against the Scribes and Pharisees, considered as teachers, whose doctrine was far from breathing the same spirit with his, and whose chief object was not like that of the good Shepherd—to feed and to protect the flock—but, like that of the robber, or of the wolf, to devour them.”—Horne. On this passage Bloomfield remarks : “It is almost universally agreed that by thieves and robbers we are only to understand rapacious persons, chiefly intent on gain. That most of the high priests under the second temple at least were such the History of Josephus will abundantly testify ; nay, it is clear that almost all of them for the last sixty or seventy years had been such—persons who bought their office, and then made as much of it as they could for the short time they were allowed to hold it. The traits of their characters, as delineated by Josephus, exactly correspond to those adverted to in the present comparison—John 10 : 10, 12, 13—namely, avarice and extortion, united with the utmost timidity and neglect of protecting those under their governance. That our Lord meant chiefly the high priests of a recent period is plain from the use of the present tense, ‘are thieves and robbers.’ Now, that the sheep should not listen to their spiritual admonitions might be expected ; and that they did not is attested by what we find in Josephus.” “I am inclined,” says Abbott, “to take before as an adverb signifying precedence in rank or authority, as it does in Col. 1 : 17 ; James 5 : 12, and 1 Pet. 4 : 8, and to understand the passage, All whosoever come claiming precedence above me are thieves and robbers. The verb come is in the aorist tense, and does not necessarily indicate a coming in the past only, but would be properly used for the enunciation of a general principle. The prophets of the Old Testament claimed no such precedence above Christ. On the contrary, they were but his heralds ; and John the Baptist distinctly disavowed such precedence (Matt. 3 : 14 ; John 1 : 26, 27 ; 3 : 30). The Pharisees, on the other hand, denied Christ’s right to teach, because he did not belong to their schools (John 7 : 15), and in their conference with the blind man had put themselves above Christ (John 9 : 16, 24). Where there is no general agreement among scholars I hesitate to offer an sheep did not hear them. I am the door : by me if any man enter in, he shall be saved, and shall go in and out, and find pasture. The thief cometh not, but for interpretation which differs from all, but this appears to me on the whole more consistent with the context, and with the teaching of the New Testament elsewhere, than any other, and not inconsistent with the original. If this be a correct interpretation, Christ's claim here is directly antagonistic to those who would make an eclectic religion by selecting truth from all the world's religious teachers, including Christ among the rest. For he declares all to be robbing the world of truth, not imparting it, who deny him the pre-eminent rank as a religious teacher. On the other hand, he does not stigmatize genuine moral teachers, such as Buddha or Socrates, as thieves and robbers, for they had no knowledge of Christ, and claimed no precedence above him."

But the sheep did not hear them.—"This has been eminently true of all teachers in the church who have put themselves above Christ ; it is the preachers of Christ who alone have secured the world's attention. This is illustrated by the history of Paul (2 Cor. 4 : 5), Luther, Wesley, and in our own times Spurgeon, Moody, and others."—Abbott.

I am the door ; by me if any enter in he shall be safe. "Christ is not only the door by whom the shepherd (the teacher) can alone enter in to feed the flock ; he is also the door by which alone the sheep (the disciples) can enter into the church and into security (Acts 4 : 12). The extent and assurance of this safety is expressed below (verses 28, 29). And observe, the promise is not merely shall be saved in the future, but shall be safe—that is, from the time of entering the door" (Chap. 3 : 18, 36 ; Rom. 8 : 1, 28, 31, etc.).—Abbott.

Shall go in and out, and find pasture.—"To go in and out is to transact the business of each day's life ; its rest and labor, the beginning and end of every work. The Hebrew phrase denotes a man's whole life and conversation. The promises connected therewith seem to imply that in their daily walk, it may be in the world's dusty lane and crowded mart, the people of God will find spiritual support and consolation, even meat for their souls, which the world knows not of."—Burton. "The meaning is that he who thus enters the door shall be blessed in all his ways. His pasture is the bread of life and water of life, promised in Chaps. 4 : 14 ; 6 : 48-51. So that Christ is at once the door, the shepherd, and the pasture ; the entrance, the guardian and guide, and the food of the disciple."—Abbott.

The thief cometh not but to steal, etc.—The false teach-

Chap. XXIV.

John 10 : 10, 11.

J.C. 33.

to steal, and to kill, and to destroy : I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly. I am the good shepherd : Christ the Good Shepherd.
the good shepherd giveth his life for the ers before alluded to. The terms are in the original exceedingly graphic, and describe what was often done by the roving bands of marauders who then infested Judea, and who used to destroy what they could not carry off.

That they might have life, and have it more abundantly. The words should be translated, "and that they might have it super-abundantly." Sheep, in order to thrive, must have not merely sufficient, but exuberant, pasturage ; and "It is written, eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things that God hath prepared for them that love him." "A contrast between false religion and the true, heathenism or Pharisaism and Christianity. The false religion comes to deprive men of their liberty, their property, their earthly happiness, to kill their natural and free life, and to destroy, finally, the soul. The true religion comes first to give this present life more abundant development, and then through that to give eternal life. Hence, whatever form of religion tends to deprive mankind of its free, natural, and joyous life is anti-Christian ; the constant tendency of Christ's teaching and influence is to make the whole life—social, intellectual, moral, and spiritual—more abundant."—Abbott.

The good shepherd.—This title—which is applied to Jehovah in Psalm 23, and Ezek. 34 : 12-23, and prophetically to Christ in Isa. 40 : 9, 10, and Zech. 13 : 7—is here appropriated by Jesus to himself. It is also applied to him by Paul in Acts 20 : 28, by Peter in 1 Pet. 5 : 1, 4, and by the author of the Epistle to the Hebrews in Heb. 13 : 20, 21. The Twenty-third Psalm—in which "the Psalmist describes himself as one of Jehovah's flock, safe under his care, absolved from all anxieties by the sense of his protection"—is, says Professor Seeley "the most complete picture of happiness that ever was or can be drawn."

Giveth his life for the sheep.—This frequently happens in the present unsettled condition of Syria, and we know that in the time of Christ the country was infested with robbers and overrun with roving bands of marauders. On this subject Dr. Thomson remarks : "The faithful shepherd has often to put his life in his hand to defend his flock. I have known more than one case in which he had literally to lay it down in the contest. A poor, faithful fellow last spring, between Tiberias and Tabor, instead of fleeing, actually fought three Bedouin robbers until he sheep. But he that is an hireling, and not the shepherd, whose own the sheep are not, seeth the wolf coming, and leaveth the sheep, and fleeth ; and the wolf catcheth them, and scattereth the sheep. The hireling fleeth, because he is an hireling, and careth not for the sheep. I am the good shepherd, and know my was hacked to pieces with their khanjars, and died among the sheep he was defending." "This is not a prophecy, equivalent to, I am about to die for my sheep ; it is the enunciation of a general principle by which every good shepherd can be distinguished from the hireling ; for every good shepherd is ready to sacrifice his life for his sheep because they are his ; the hireling flees when danger threatens, because he is an hireling and has no real interest in the sheep. Neither is the expression to lay down the life a circumlocution for die. Christ rarely uses circumlocution of any kind. The good shepherd may or may not be called on to die for his sheep ; but he always lays down his life for them. To lay down the life is to consecrate it, to devote it to the flock ; as a mother, who is always ready to die for her children, but who, living or dying, belongs to her children and surrenders herself to them. So we ought also to lay down our lives for the brethren (1 John 3 : 16), though comparatively few are ever called on to die for them. Wickliffe and Luther as truly laid down their lives for their flocks as Huss and Tyndale. The sacrifice of Christ consisted, not merely in his death—which was indeed in its mere physical aspects the least part of it—but in his whole incarnation. His entire life, from his advent to the grave, was laid down for his sheep. This laying down of his life includes his death ; but it includes much more. The whole thirty years was a living sacrifice for sinful humanity (Phil. 2 : 5-8)."—Abbott.

The hireling.—False teachers began to appear early in the church. Speaking of them, Paul says : "For all seek their own, not the things that are Christ's" (Phil. 2 : 21). They were predicted by Isaiah (56 : 9), Ezekiel (34 : 2, 6), and Zechariah (11 : 16, 17) ; and the Apostles forewarned the early Christians that they would, after their departure, bring in "damnable heresies," even denying the Lord that bought them" (Acts 20 : 28, 30 ; 2 Pet. 2 : 1-3 ; 1 John 2 : 18 ; 4 : 3.)

I know my sheep.—"The foundation of God standeth sure, having this seal : The Lord knoweth them that are his" (2 Tim. 2 : 19 ; Nahum 1 : 7). The original word indicates more than mere knowledge ; a constant care, and strong affection. It is

Chap. XXIV.

John 10 : 14-18.

J.C. 33.

sheep, and am known of mine. As the Father knoweth me, even so know I the Father : and I lay down my life for the sheep. And other sheep I have, which are not of this fold : them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice ; and there shall be one fold, and one shepherd. Therefore doth my Father love me, because I lay down my life, that I might take it again. No man taketh it from me, but I lay it down of myself. I have power to lay it down, and I have power to take it again. This commandment have I received of my Father.

only Christ who can say I know my sheep. "If you would think rightly of the Son of Man, think of the Person who knows thoroughly everything that each one of you is feeling, and can not utter to others or to himself—every temptation from riches, from poverty, from solicitude, from society, from gifts of intellect, from the want of them, from the gladness of the spirit, from the barrenness and dreariness of it, from the warmth of affection and from the drying up of affection, from the anguish of doubt and the dullness of indifference, from the whirlwind of passion and the calm which succeeds it, from the vile thoughts which spring out of fleshly appetites and indulgences, from the darker, more terrible suggestions which are presented to the inner will. Believe that he knows all these, that he knows you. And then believe this also, that all he knows is through intense, inmost sympathy, not with the evil that is assaulting you, but with you who are assaulted by it. Believe that knowledge, in this the Scriptural sense of it—the human as well as the divine sense of it—is absolutely inseparable from sympathy."—Maurice.

As the Father knoweth me, even so, etc. The misplacing of the period here obscures the meaning. The whole sentence should read : "I am the good shepherd, and know my sheep, and am known of mine ; even as the Father knoweth me, and I know the Father." "The knowledge which the Lord Jesus has of his people, and they of him, is compared with that which the Father has of him and he of the Father."—Alford.

There shall be one fold.—More correctly, "one flock." "It is not true that there is to be in the Christian Church one fold ; one flock there is, but it is contained in many folds."—Alford.

This commandment.—This charge, or commission, received I from my Father. "In this whole passage our Lord affirms that he is about to undergo death voluntarily ; that the

The Jews Divided.

There was a division therefore again among the Jews for these sayings. And malice of those who were plotting against his life could avail nothing ; that no force could take away his life, if he were unwilling to part with it ; that he freely lays it down for his flock. He asserts, moreover, that he lays down his life so as to receive it back, and therefore that his death is not to be considered as coming under the common law of mortality, by which all that go down to the tomb return to the dust ; but that it is altogether peculiar, since, after a few days, he will rise from the grave and return to life. He then affirms that his death happens, not by any fate or necessity, but by the eternal counsels of his Father."—Tittman, condensed. "The word rendered power includes both power and right (see Chap. 1 : 12, note) ; the word rendered commandment is not equivalent to authority ; the original word always means law or command. Christ's disciples have no authority to frame self-sacrifices for themselves ; doing this is always characteristic of a corrupt and quasi pagan religion. They are to bear with cheerful heroism whatever self-sacrifice the providence of God may lay upon them. So also they have never a right to seek death, but are always to seek to live to the glory of God, and for their fellow-men. But Christ voluntarily chose his life of humiliation and cross-bearing ; voluntarily sought its privations ; and finally went, not to an inevitable death, but to one which he might easily have avoided by flight if he had acted according to the directions which he gave his followers, and on which the apostles subsequently acted. He might have fled from Jerusalem on the fatal night of his arrest, as he had done before, and this without leaving his sheep to be seized or scattered by the wolf ; or he might have been protected by supernatural power (Matt. 26 : 53). He did not, because he had a peculiar authority given to him, which his followers do not possess, to lay down his own life, both in the self-assumed humiliation of the incarnation and in the final tragedy of his death. And this peculiar authority he possessed because in all his incarnation and passion and death he was carrying out the will and obeying the command of his Father. To us the divine command is interpreted by Providence. Christ needed no such interpreter, for he knew the Father's will, knowing the Father, even as he was known by the Father."—Abbott.

There was a division, therefore, among the Jews. "These divine mysteries were more than they could understand."—Farrar

Chap. XXIV.

John 10 : 20, 21.

J.C. 33.

many of them said, He hath a devil, and is mad ; why hear ye him ? Others said, These are not the words of him that hath a devil. Can a devil open the eyes of the blind ?

Many of them said, He hath a devil, and is mad.—"It is worthy of observation in what manner the Jews resisted the force of the miracle related in this chapter, and the conclusion to which it led, after they had failed in discrediting its evidence. If it should be inquired how a turn of thought so different from what prevails at present should obtain currency with the ancient Jews, the answer is found in two opinions which then prevailed. The one was their expectation of a Messiah of a kind totally contrary to what the appearance of Jesus bespoke him to be ; the other, their persuasion of the agency of demons in the production of supernatural effects (Matt. 12 : 24). The first put them upon seeking out some excuses to themselves for not receiving Jesus in the character in which he claimed to be received, and the second supplied them with just such an excuse as they wanted."—Paley.

PART V.

FROM THE FINAL DEPARTURE OF JESUS FROM GALILEE

TO THE

ARRIVAL AT BETHANY ;

OR FROM

NOVEMBER, J.C. 33, TO APRIL, J.C. 34.

TIME—SIX MONTHS, LESS SIX DAYS.

CHAPTER XXV.

FINAL DEPARTURE FROM GALILEE.

AND it came to pass, when the time was come that he should be received up, he steadfastly set his face to “Immediately after the events recorded in the last chapter, John narrates another incident that occurred two months subsequently, at the Feast of Dedication, which took place on the twentieth of December. In accordance with the main purpose of his Gospel, which was to narrate that work of the Christ in Judea, and especially in Jerusalem, which the Synoptists had omitted, he says nothing of an intermediate and final visit to Galilee, or of those last journeys to Jerusalem respecting parts of which the other evangelists supply us with so many details. And yet that Jesus must have returned to Galilee is clear, not only from the other evangelists, but also from the nature of the case, and from certain incidental facts in the narrative of St. John himself. (See John 10 : 25, which evidently refers to his last discourse to them two months before, and verse 40 again.) Besides, the expression of John 10 : 22—‘And it was the Dedication at Jerusalem’—would have little meaning if a new visit were not implied ; and those words are perhaps added for the very reason that the Dedication might be kept anywhere else.

. . . This great journey, therefore, from Galilee to Jerusalem, so rich in occasions which called forth some of his most memorable utterances, must have been either a journey to the Feast of Tabernacles or to the Feast of Dedication. That it could not have been the former may be regarded as settled, not only on other grounds, but decisively because that was a rapid and a secret journey, this an eminently public and leisurely one.”—Farrar.

The chronology of this period of Christ’s life, including the incidents and teachings in Luke, chapters 10 : 1 to 18 : 34, is very uncertain. The hypothesis which is adopted here in the text and the accompanying note is a very common one ; perhaps the most common one ; and where all is hypothesis, discussion is neither very important or profitable. For reasons which I have stated more fully in my “Life of Christ” and my “Commentary on Luke” (chap. 10, prel. note), I do not, however, agree with this hypothesis. I do not believe that Christ ever returned to any public ministry in Galilee after he once left it ; I think that he spent the three months intervening between the feasts of Taber-

Chap. XXV.

Luke 9 : 51-53.

Nov. J.C. 33.

go to Jerusalem. And sent messengers before his face : and they went, and entered into a village of the Samaritans, to make ready for him. And they did not receive him, because his face was as though he would go to Jerusalem.

nacles and Dedication in or about Jerusalem ; that after the latter feast, he retired to Perea—the region beyond the Jordan ; and that the ministry so briefly referred to in Matthew 19 : 1, and Mark 10 : 1, occurred at that time, and during that ministry. Most of the incidents and instructions in Luke 10 : 1-18 : 34 belong to that ministry. The appointment of the seventy I put during the Perean ministry and suppose that they were commissioned for a service in that larger territory as the twelve for their special mission in Galilee. The journey through Samaria I think probable was his last journey to Jerusalem, to the passion, though that is quite uncertain.—L. A.

When the time was come.—"When the days were being fulfilled," or, as we should say, "When the time was near."

Received up is generally understood to refer to his ascension to heaven.

He steadfastly set his face.—"He not only had but showed the fixed purpose to go to Jerusalem. He saw what was before him there, and went to meet it."—Schaff. "His steadfastness itself indicated the conflict within, over which he triumphed in thus going to Jerusalem. Compare the description in Mark 10 : 32."—Abbott.

A village of the Samaritans.—The direct route from Galilee to Jerusalem lay through Samaria. (See note on page 103.) The village referred to is conjectured by Lichtenstein and Farrar to have been a little town called En-garim, or the Fountain of Gardens, situated at the foot of the range of hills which form the northern limit of Samaria and overlooking the plain of Esdraelon. It is an insignificant place, and its inhabitants are, even now, noted for their rudeness to strangers. Thomson says, "They are fanatical, rude, and rebellious."

To make ready for him.—"To provide food and shelter for him and the large party accompanying him. Yet they probably also announced his coming as the Messiah."—Schaff.

They did not receive him.—The bitter hostility between Jews and Samaritans receives several illustrations in the Gospels. (See notes on page 104.) "Previously, when he was passing through Samaria on his journey northward, he had found Samaritans not only willing to receive, but anxious to retain, his

Chap. XXV.

Luke 9 : 54-56.

Nov. J.C. 33.

And when his disciples James and John saw this, they said, Lord, wilt thou that we command fire to come down from heaven, and consume them, even as Elias did ?

But he turned, and rebuked them, and said, Ye know not what manner of spirit ye are of. For the Son of presence among them, and eager to listen to his words. But now in two respects the circumstances were different ; for now he was professedly traveling to the city which they hated and the temple which they despised, and now he was attended, not by a few apostles, but by a great multitude, who were accompanying him as their acknowledged Prophet and Messiah."—Farrar. "The refusal to receive Christ was a distinct refusal to recognize him as a prophet, or a leader worthy of reverence ; it was also a recognized indignity in the East, where hospitality is a recognized duty, and where the traveler is habitually welcomed as a guest, unless some distinct cause exists for refusing to receive him. The act is interpreted by 2 John, vers. 9 and 10 ; it was an emphatic repudiation of him as a heretic, a teacher of falsehood."—Abbott.

Wilt thou that we command fire.—"There is some doubt whether the added words, as Elias did, is not a gloss added by a copyist, in explanation of the proposition. There is no doubt, however, that there was a reference in the disciples' minds to 2 Kings 1 : 9-12. Their proposal indicates their spirit ; they were full of zeal for their Master ; believed that he was on his way to Jerusalem to enter into his kingdom, remembered the glory in which they had seen him with Moses and Elijah, on the Mount of Transfiguration, and were impatient for the disclosure of his power and authority. It was the same spirit which led Peter to rebuke the Lord for prophesying his passion, and to draw his sword to resist the arrest."—Abbott. "There is nothing so trying, so absolutely exasperating, as a failure to find food and shelter, and common civility, after the fatigue of travel, and especially for a large multitude to begin a fresh journey when they expected rest. Full, therefore, of the Messianic Kingdom, which now at last they thought was on the eve of being mightily proclaimed, the two brothers wanted to usher it in with a blaze of Sinaitic vengeance, and so to astonish and restore the flagging spirits of followers who would naturally be discouraged by so immediate and decided a repulse."—Farrar. "What wonder," says St. Ambrose, "that the Sons of Thunder wished to flash lightning?"

Ye know not what manner of spirit ye are of.—"All the man is not come to destroy men's lives, but to save them. And they went to another village.

After these things the Lord appointed other seventy words of our Lord's rebuke are omitted in the best manuscripts, but found in many early versions. Some take the clause as a question : Know ye not what manner of spirit ? etc. The thought is : ' Ye know not of what spirit you are the instruments when speaking thus ; you think that you are working a miracle of faith in my service, but you are obeying a spirit alien from mine.'—Godet, following Augustine and Calvin. " But in the uncertainty of the MSS., the internal evidence may be accepted as decisive ; and that is in favor of the ordinary reading."—Abbott. " He had come to save, not to destroy, and if any heard his words and believed not, he judged them not. And so, without a word of anger, he went to a different village ; and doubtless St. John, who by that time did know of what spirit he was, remembered these words of Christ when he went with Peter into Samaria to confirm the recent converts, and to bestow upon them the gift of the Holy Ghost."—Farrar. " This incident illustrates the Christian method of meeting insult and indignity—not by penalty, but by patience, and, when possible, by avoidance. But it illustrates much more. The anger of the disciples was not aroused by a personal affront, but by one offered to their Lord ; it was excited, not by self-conceit or pride, but by love and zeal for Christ. Zeal for him, when uniting with the lower passions, produces not piety but fanaticism ; such zeal, so uniting, is not a Christian spirit ; it may even result in a devilish spirit. Christ condemns, impliedly, all attempts to coerce respect for him, or to punish the want of it ; and so not only all religious persecution, but also all that wrath and bitterness which is so unhappily common in religious controversies. The office of Christianity is wholly remedial, not punitive ; its instruments are the forbearance and long-suffering of love, not judgment and penalty ; light and warmth, not fire from heaven. We are to be patient, not merely with wrong personal to ourselves, but with the spirit of irreligion and infidelity, and with affronts offered to our Lord. We are not to hate even the enemies of Christ."—Abbott.

Appointed other seventy.—" Up to this time Jesus had not openly and expressly declared himself to be the Messiah, either in Judea or in Galilee. But the time had now come when his Messianic character must be publicly asserted, that the whole nation might know that he was the Christ, the Son of David, the King of Israel ; and if rejected, he must be rejected as such. It must be a national act, at Jerusalem the national capital, and not

Chap. XXV.

Luke 10 : 1-3.

Nov. J.C. 33.

also, and sent them two and two before his face into every city and place, whither he himself would come. Seventy Disciples Sent Out.

Therefore said he unto them, The harvest truly is great, but the laborers are few : pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he would send forth laborers into his harvest. Go your ways : behold, I send you be done in ignorance. To this end his messengers shall go before him into every place where he designed to go, and announce the kingdom of God at hand in the person of the King. Here, then, we find the grand peculiarity of the Lord's last journey to Jerusalem. As he knew, and had declared to his apostles, he went up to die. . . . It is thus the mission of the seventy, who were sent 'two and two before his face into every city and place whither he himself would come,' that gives to this last journey its distinctive character. Going before him, they announced that he was about to follow them on his way to Jerusalem, and thus prepared all who heard them to see in him, not a mere prophet, the risen John, or Elijah, or any other ; but the Christ. They were his heralds or forerunners, and their work was to announce his approach, and prepare his way."—Condensed from Andrews.

These things.—The events just related. This opposes the view that the mission of the seventy preceded the rejection in the Samaritan village.

Other seventy.—"Or, 'seventy others,' either in addition to the twelve, or to the messengers spoken of in Luke 9 : 52. The former is more probable from the similarity of the instruction given to both. The chief purpose was not to train them, as in the case of the twelve, but actually to prepare the people in these places for his coming. The whole was a final appeal, and also a preparation for the final entry into Jerusalem. That our Lord should follow and actually visit thirty-five places is not remarkable, in view of his great and constant activity."—Schaff. "The mission of so large a number to go before him two and two, and prepare for his arrival in every place he intended to visit, implies for this journey of proclamation an immense publicity."—Farrar.

Go your ways.—"This implies urgency. The seventy are not forbidden to go to the Gentiles and Samaritans (Matt. 10 : 5.) Possibly they did visit the latter ; and besides their route was made known to them in advance, which was not the case when the twelve were sent out."—Schaff. "These instructions are

Chap. XXV.

Luke 10 : 3-6.

Nov. J.C. 33.

forth as lambs among wolves. Carry neither purse, nor scrip, nor shoes ; and salute no man by the way. And into whatsoever house ye enter, first say, Peace be to this house. And if the son of peace be there, your peace substantially the same as those given to the twelve in Matthew, ch. 10. Some matters given there are omitted here ; but there is nothing here not contained there ; at least the differences are little more than verbal. To the direction, I send you forth as lambs among wolves, Christ adds in Matthew the direction, Be ye therefore wise as serpents, etc. The direction, Salute no man by the way, "is peculiar to Luke." The customary salutations among Eastern nations are formal and tedious, and consume much time. If an Oriental meets an acquaintance, he stops, however urgent his business, to make and answer an endless number of inquiries. "If two Arabs of equal rank meet each other, they extend to each other the right hand, and having clasped, they elevate them as if to kiss them. Each one draws back his hand, and kisses it instead of his friend's, and then places it upon his forehead. The parties then continue the salutation by kissing each other's beard. They give thanks to God that they are once more permitted to see their friend—they pray to the Almighty in his behalf. Sometimes they repeat not less than ten times the ceremony of grasping hands and kissing."—Burder's Oriental Customs. These formal salutations are said to often consume from one to two hours. To avoid a like waste of time the disciples were forbidden to go "from house to house." It is still the custom in Palestine, when a stranger arrives in a village, for the neighbors to invite him to eat and lodge with them. The custom involves much ostentation and hypocrisy ; but a failure to observe it is strongly resented, and often leads to alienation and feuds among neighbors. "On the one hand, the [seventy] were not to hesitate from a false delicacy to receive the hospitality proffered them ; nor, on the other hand, discontented with it, were they to go from house to house seeking for better accommodations or for social enjoyment."—Abbott.

Peace be to this house.—This was a common form of salutation among the Jews, strongly expressive of good-will ; and it is still in use throughout the East.

Son of peace.—One disposed to peace. In the Hebrew idiom, a man who has any good or bad quality is called the son of it. "A son of peace" (the article is wanting in the original) is one who receives the salutation—i.e., is ready to welcome the Gospel message of peace."—Abbott.

Chap. XXV.

Luke 10 : 6-13.

Nov. J.C. 33.

shall rest upon it : if not, it shall turn to you again. And in the same house remain, eating and drinking such things as they give : for the laborer is worthy of his hire. Go not from house to house. And into whatsoever city ye enter, and they receive you, Instructions to the Seventy. eat such things as are set before you.

And heal the sick that are therein, and say unto them, The kingdom of God is come nigh unto you. But into whatsoever city ye enter, and they receive you not, go your ways out into the streets of the same, and say, Even the very dust of your city, which cleaveth on us, we do wipe off against you : notwithstanding, be ye sure of this, that the kingdom of God is come nigh unto you. But I say unto you, that it shall be more tolerable in that day for Sodom, than for that city.

Woe unto thee, Chorazin ! woe unto thee, Bethsaida !

Your peace shall rest.—“Your prayer shall not be ineffectual.” The world “peace” in Scripture comprehends blessings of all kinds.

Be ye sure of this.—“Despite your rejection, the kingdom of God is come nigh unto you.” “This word of love (ver. 9) becomes now a word of warning and of future judgment. How often men thus transform God’s blessings into a curse for themselves !”—Schaff. “Whether accepted or rejected, the kingdom of God draws nigh, a power in us or a power over us.”—Abbott.

Woe unto thee, Chorazin, etc.—(See note on page .) “The connection here is different. It is highly probable that our Lord uttered such words twice. In this case these towns furnished an example of the rejection spoken of in vers. 10 and 11. This was his solemn farewell of these favored places, and the connection implies that they had already rejected him and been forsaken by him. The view that these awful woes were uttered at a distance from the places themselves furnishes new proof how heavily this judgment lay on the heart of Jesus.”—Schaff. The very generation that rejected Christ was doomed to see, in bitter agony, these words fulfilled. It was not thirty years before the Romans swept in over those beautiful cities, leaving them only heaps of ruins. Any one who reads in the Jewish War of Josephus the sickening details of the slaughter and destruction

Chap. XXV.

Luke 10 : 13-16, 25.

Nov. J.C. 33.

for if the mighty works had been done in Tyre and Sidon, which have been done in you, they had a great while ago repented, sitting in sackcloth and ashes. But it shall be more tolerable for Tyre and Sidon at the judgment, than for you. And thou, Capernaum, which art exalted to heaven, shalt be thrust down to hell.

He that heareth you heareth me ; and he that despiseth you despiseth me ; and he that despiseth me despiseth him that sent me.

And, behold, a certain lawyer stood up, and tempted him, saying, Master, what shall I do to inherit eternal life ?

which fell upon the whole district of Galilee will not wonder that the Jewish historian himself exclaimed, "It was God who brought the Romans to punish the Galileans !"

A certain lawyer.—"One versed in the Jewish law, both the Old Testament and the Rabbinical comments thereon. The term theologian would more nearly describe his character."—Abbott. This incident, peculiar to Luke, must be distinguished from a later one, mentioned by Matthew, Mark, and Luke—namely, that of the rich young ruler whom Jesus loved. A similar question was put in that case, receiving at first a similar answer. But otherwise the occurrences differ, especially in the second question put to our Lord and in his reply. It is impossible to suppose that Luke gives two different accounts of the same occurrence (comp. chap. 18 : 18-23). The fact that the same question was put on two different occasions by two different persons, eliciting in each case the same reply, shows that in cases where two evangelists narrate similar occurrences or sayings in different connections, both may be strictly accurate. The time and place of this incident are uncertain ; but it probably occurred not long after the mission of the seventy—between the Feast of Tabernacles and that of the Dedication."—Schaff. We have, in our arrangement of the text, let this incident directly follow the sending out of the seventy, because, allowing any chronological character at all to Luke's Gospel, that seems its natural position. Very many suppose it to have occurred at, or near, Jerusalem, because of the local allusions in the parable ; but these would be familiar to every Jew, for every boy after the age of twelve went up three times a year to the festivals.

And tempted him.—"More properly, tried him. The spirit of Chap. XXV.

Luke 10 : 26, 27.

Nov. J.C. 33.

He said unto him, What is written in the law ? how readest thou ?

And he answering said, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with the inquirer appears to have been neither malicious nor hostile, but self-confident. His language is respectful ; he addresses Christ as Master, but his object was not to obtain guidance for himself, rather to measure the ability of the Nazarene Rabbi. Probably his conscience had been aroused by the preaching of Jesus, which Luke has not reported, but which everywhere included a demand for repentance. Fully recognizing the appropriateness of this preaching for the publicans and sinners, who were Christ's principal auditors, he did not entertain the idea that he needed repentance himself. Hence the question, What shall I do to inherit eternal life ? Christ answers him as he answered the rich young ruler (Matt. 19 : 16-22)—in such a way as awakened in him a sense that he also needed to be justified (ver. 29).—Abbott. “The man who is certain he is right is almost sure to be wrong, and he has the additional misfortune of inevitably remaining so. All our theories are fixed upon uncertain data, and all of them want alteration and support. Ever since the world began opinion has changed with the progress of things, and it is something more than absurd to suppose that we have a sure claim to perfection, or that we are in possession of the highest stretch of intellect which has or can result from human thought.”—Faraday.

What is written in the law ?—“Christ's principle of action in such cases is to throw the inquirer back upon his own moral sense, to require him to measure himself, not by any new standard of righteousness with which he is unfamiliar, but with that which his own conscience already recognizes. Each soul must be convicted by its own moral sense, not by that of another. So Christ refers this lawyer to his own understanding of the law.”—Abbott.

How readest thou ?—This form was used by the Rabbins to call out a quotation from Scripture. “How” means “to what purport.” “If we read the law spiritually, recognizing its purpose (1 Tim. 1 : 5), we shall realize that, whatever our outward life has been, we have not in spirit and in character conformed to its requirements. Compare Luke 8 : 18.”—Abbott.

Thou shalt love the Lord thy God, etc.—This answer of the lawyer showed intelligence ; he gives the sum of the whole law. But his knowledge of the law exceeded his self-knowledge. In

Chap. XXV.

Luke 10 : 27-29.

Nov. J.C. 33.

all thy strength, and with all thy mind ; and thy neighbour as thyself.

And he said unto him, Thou hast answered right : this do, and thou shalt live.

But he, willing to justify himself, said unto Jesus, And who is my neighbour ?

fact he shows, by adding from Lev. 19 : 18, " and thy neighbor as thyself," that he had some conception of our Lord's teachings. The Jews had written upon their phylacteries and recited night and morning, not this passage, but Deut. 11 : 13, etc. Hence it is incorrect to suppose that our Lord pointed to the man's phylactery, when he said, " How readest thou ?"

Thou hast answered right ; this do, and thou shalt live.—" Christ dismisses him summarily, almost abruptly ; makes no attempt to convict him of disobedience, throws him back upon his own consciousness. Is this reply unevangelical ? Is it inconsistent with Rom. 3 : 20 ? No. He that does this shall live ; he needs no evangel ; they that be sick need a physician, not they that are whole ; the Gospel is for those, and only for those, who are conscious that they have not done this, and still desire to enter into life. The preaching of the law here, and everywhere in the New Testament, is to produce conviction of sin and the sense of the need of a Saviour (Rom., chap. 7)."—Abbott.

Willing to justify himself.—The effect of Christ's teaching shows the result at which he aimed. The inquirer's own conscience became his accuser ; he knew that he had not fulfilled this divine law. The question which followed was put to cover his confusion, by leading Christ away from the practical and personal question to one that was theoretical and measurably abstract.

Who is my neighbor ?—" The Jews in practice considered none but a Jew a neighbor of a Jew. No part of the Jewish character contributed to prejudice the Greeks and Romans against them more than this well-known trait ; so repulsive, so unsociable, and so repugnant to the first and commonest principles of humanity !"—Greswell. " This second question Christ does not answer ; he does not tell the lawyer who is the neighbor to whom kindness should be shown, but he depicts, in a dramatic form, an act which illustrates the law of love, and bids the inquirer measure his life by the law so interpreted."—Abbott. " Had he asked the man's own opinion on this question, he well knew how narrow and false it would have been ; he therefore answered it

And Jesus answering said, A certain man went down from Jerusalem to Jericho, and fell among thieves, which stripped him of his raiment, and wounded him, and departed, leaving him half dead. And by chance there came down a certain priest that way ; and when he saw him, he passed by himself, or rather gave to the lawyer the means of answering it, by one of his most striking parables."—Farrar.

Parable of the Good Samaritan.

A certain man.—A Jew is meant ; but this is not made prominent, since the main lesson of the parable is not love to enemies, but love to man as, man, humanity, philanthropy.

Down from Jerusalem to Jericho.—Jericho is in the valley of the Jordan, about seventeen miles from Jerusalem, and on considerably lower ground. The road between the two places passes through what is called the "Wilderness of Jericho"—a rocky, mountainous region, sparsely inhabited, and still infested with robbers. Josephus says that at this time Judea was overrun with highwaymen, who committed the greatest excesses, and that this road was particularly dangerous. By Jerome it is called the Red or Bloody Way, and in his time a Roman fort and garrison were needed there for the protection of travelers. This man is represented as literally surrounded by such robbers, who stripped him of all he had, and left him in a half-dying condition. Thus he was in need of speedy help. "The very scenery," says Buckingham, "in a portion of the road, the bold, projecting crags, the dark shadows in which every thing lies buried below, the towering height of the cliffs above, and the forbidding desolation which everywhere reigns around, seem to tempt to robbery and murder, and occasion a dread of it in those who pass that way." The road is still dangerous.

By chance.—"In the language of common life. As a fact, most opportunities of doing good come, as it were, 'by chance,' though providentially ordered of God."—Schaff. Bengel remarks that "many good opportunities are hidden under that which may seem accidental."

A certain priest.—"The naturalness of the parable is remarkable. Jericho was a priestly city, and the priests would go to and from Jerusalem to perform their duties in the order of their courses. The case is more pointed if this one is regarded as coming from priestly duty in the house of God."—Schaff.

Passed by on the other side.—Conduct altogether inexcusable, since by the Mosaic law not even a fallen beast of burden

Chap. XXV.

Luke 10 : 31-34.

Nov. J.C. 33.

on the other side. And likewise a Levite, when he was at the place, came and looked on him, and passed by on the other side. But a certain Samaritan, as he journeyed, came where he was ; and when he saw him, he had compassion on him. And went to him, and bound up his wounds, pouring in oil and wine, and set him on was to be passed by, even if it were an enemy's. (See Ex. 23 : 4-5.)

Likewise a Levite.—He did more than the priest—he looked on him, possibly to see if the wounded man was a brother Jew, and thus had a claim on his kindness. But the man was too far gone to speak, and hence the Levite too passed by on the other side. "Every man who passes indifferently and unconcernedly the abodes of wretchedness, ignorance, and crime, repeats the experience of this priest and Levite."—Abbott.

A certain Samaritan.—On the history and character of the Samaritans see note on pages 104-5. "The natural and religious prejudices of the Samaritan would have rendered him little disposed to show kindness to a Jew ; his conduct, therefore, forms the more striking contrast to that of the priest and Levite."—Bloomfield.

He was moved with compassion.—"From this feeling all the subsequent actions flow. The first step in becoming 'good Samaritans' is to obtain this feeling. But law, good resolutions, beautiful moral examples, and the whole array of human contrivances, fail to create it. It is learned from Christ. 'Mark the beautiful climax. First the compassionate heart, then the helping hand, next the ready foot, finally the true-hearted charge.'"—Van Oosterzee. "Incidentally Christ teaches what are the manifestations and what the constituent elements of a genuine charity. The Samaritan has compassion, a feeling for and with the sufferer ; his feeling leads him not to escape the sight of suffering, but to succor the sufferer ; he does this not through another, but by a personal and a disagreeable service ; at a real self-sacrifice, too, for he sets the wounded man on his own beast and walks himself ; he enlists others, and he contributes money as well as service, and service as well as money."—Abbott. "A man bountiful in bestowing external things gives something apart from himself ; but he who has tears and lamentations for a neighbor's woe hath imparted to him something of himself."—Gregory.

Oil and wine were usual remedies for wounds in the East. On Eastern inns, see note on page 43. This, however, was evi-

Chap. XXV.

Luke 10: 34-37.

Nov. J.C. 33.

his own beast, and brought him to an inn, and took care of him. And on the morrow when he departed, he took out two pence and gave them to the host, and said unto him, Take care of him ; and whatsoever thou spendest more, when I come again I will repay thee. Which now of these three, thinkest thou, was neighbour unto him that fell among the thieves ?

And he said, He that shewed mercy on him. Then said Jesus unto him, Go, and do thou likewise.

dently something more than a caravanserai for the mere shelter of travelers, for there was a host, to whose care he entrusted the wounded traveler and who was able to provide for him. Two pence (denarii) was two days' wages of a laboring man (Matt. 20 : 9, 10). It was therefore not an insignificant sum ; moreover, it was accompanied by a promise to give whatever further sum might be necessary for the wounded man's keeping.

Which was neighbor?—"Which became neighbor ;" they had been strangers. "It is not place, but love, which makes neighborhood."—Wordsworth.

"Good the strife when men the palm contest Which most shall love, which most oblige the rest."

"Have love ! Not love alone for one,
But man, as man, thy brother call ;
And scatter, like the circling sun,
Thy charities on all."—Schiller.

"The moral lesson inculcated in the parable is, that every man who is so situated as to require the good offices of his fellow-men, without regard to place, nation, or consanguinity, must be regarded and treated as their neighbor."—Greswell. "Every one who, moved by a genuine compassion, turns aside from his ordinary associations at some self-sacrifice to lift up the down-trodden and restore the fainting and the suffering, whatever may be his creed or his nation, repeats the experience of the good Samaritan. This drama is perpetually repeated ; and in the nineteenth century, as in the first, the orthodoxy of a noble life is better than that of mere creeds and churchly tradition."—Abbott.

Go, and do thou likewise.—The best comment we can make on this passage will be Izaak Walton's account of an incident in the life of that sweet poet and "saintly country parson," George Herbert. "In another walk," writes the good Izaak, "he saw a poor man with a poorer horse that was fallen under his load ; they were both in distress, and needed present help, which

Chap. XXV.

Luke 10 : 37.

Nov. J.C. 33.

Mr. Herbert perceiving, put off his canonical coat and helped the poor man to unload, and after to load his horse. The poor man blessed him for it ; and he blessed the poor man ; and was so like the good Samaritan that he gave him money to refresh both himself and his horse ; and told him that ' If he loved himself, he should be merciful to his beast.' Thus he left the poor man, and at his coming to the musical friends at Salisbury, they began to wonder that Mr. George Herbert, who used to be so trim and neat, came into that company so soiled and discomposed ; but he told them the occasion ; and when one of the company told him, ' He had disparaged himself by so dirty an employment,' his answer was, that ' The thought of what he had done would prove music to him at midnight, and that the omission of it would have upbraided and made discord in his conscience, whensoever he should pass by that place ; for if I be bound to pray for all that are in distress, I am sure that I am bound, so far as it is in my power, to practise what I pray for. And though I do not wish for the like occasion every day, yet, let me tell you, I would not willingly pass one day of my life without comforting a sad soul or showing mercy ; and I praise God for this occasion. And now let us tune our instruments.' "

Chap. XXVI.

Matt. 19 : 1, 2 ; Mark 10 : 1.

Nov. J.C. 33.

CHAPTER XXVI.

IN PEREA.

AND it came to pass, that when Jesus had finished these sayings, he departed from Galilee, and came into the coasts of Judea, beyond Jordan. And great multitudes followed him ; and he ^{Departs for Perea.} healed them ; and as he was wont, taught them again.

The coasts of Judea, beyond Jordan.—Perea was at this time one of the most fertile and populous districts of Syria. "A pleatau whose plains are elevated two or three hundred feet above the level of the sea, it appears to possess a still greater elevation by reason of its western border, the Jordan valley, which is sunk one thousand feet below that level. . . . Its mountain streams are never wholly dry ; forests of oak cap its hill-tops ; grassy downs afford on its plains admirable pasturage. Now, as in ancient times, it is characteristically 'a place for cattle.' The high hills of Bashan, the oaks of Bashan, the strong bulls of Bashan, have been made ever-memorable by the sayings of the poet king."—Abbott's "Jesus of Nazareth." It was within the jurisdiction of Herod Antipas, and included the district of Gilead, and, in its southern portion, the ten flourishing cities which went by the name of Decapolis. "Along the river Jordan the ruins of one hundred and twenty-seven villages have been counted. Its population was not homogeneous. It formed a part of the Holy Land ; and it was a part of Christ's mission to offer the Gospel to the entire Jewish people before turning from them to the Gentiles. But in Perea the Israelites were intermixed with a Gentile population ; the cities of Decapolis were Roman cities ; the sheep of Israel, in this heathen society, were wandering sheep—to the haughty Judean lost sheep. To this era of Christ's ministry naturally belong, therefore, the marvelous trio of parables—the lost sheep, the lost coin, the lost son ; it is here that, in the parable of the good Samaritan, he rebukes pride of caste and race ; and in the parables of the rich fool and of Dives and Lazarus, the pride of wealth. Of this ministry Matthew and Mark give a brief account (Matt. 19 : 1–20 : 16 ; Mark 10 : 1–31). Some few of the incidents and instructions recorded by Luke as in this era seem, from the parallel accounts in Matthew and Mark, to belong to the Galilean ministry ; of course they may have been repetitions. (See, for examples,

And it came to pass, that as he was praying in a certain place, when he ceased, one of his disciples said unto him, Lord, teach us to pray, as John also taught his disciples. And he said unto them, When ye pray, say :

Jesus Teaches
how to Pray.

Luke 13 : 18-21 ; II : 14-26 ; 17 : 1, 2 ")—Abbott on Luke. Perea is now the haunt of lawless bands of Bedouins, and few of the many travelers who annually visit Palestine venture among its ruinous solitudes. The few who have explored it (see Porter's "Giant Cities of Bashan") speak of its extensive ruins as indicating a once dense population. In the time of Christ it was traversed by Roman roads, which made it a favorite route for the Galileans in going to, and returning from, the annual festivals.

As he was praying in a certain place.—"The time and place of the following incident are indefinite, but it can not be a part of the Sermon on the Mount, put out of its place. A definite occasion is stated in [Luke II] ver. 1, and vers. 5-8 are not found anywhere else. The allusion to John the Baptist (implying his death) points to a later date than that of the Sermon on the Mount."—Schaff.

Teach us to pray.—"There is nothing that cuts the air so swiftly ; nothing that takes so sublime, so happy, and so auspicious a flight as prayer ; which bears the soul on its pinions and leaves far behind all the dangers, and even the delights, of this low world of ours."—Archbishop Leighton. "If the bounties of heaven were given to man without prayer, they would be received without acknowledgment. Prayer, administering the perpetual lesson of humility, of hope, and of love, makes us feel our connection with heaven through every touch of our necessities ; it binds us to Providence by a chain of daily benefits ; it impresses the hearts of all with a perpetual remembrance of the God of all."—Croly. "The words of prayer are no part of the spirit of prayer. Words may be the body of it, but the spirit of prayer always consists in holiness—that is, in holy desires and holy actions."—Jeremy Taylor.

As John also taught his disciples.—"Many learned men suppose that the Jewish masters used to give their followers some short form of prayer, as a peculiar badge of their relation to them. This John the Baptist had probably done, though we know not now what it was."—Adam Clarke.

When ye pray, say.—"That this is not a positive command to repeat the words of the Lord's prayer whenever we pray is evident from the briefer form here recorded. These were the words of our Lord on a second occasion, when the substance (not the exact form) of the prayer was repeated. Luke wrote after Christianity had made considerable progress; the twofold form indicates that in his day the Lord's prayer was not yet in universal use as a form of prayer. It is impossible to say how early the liturgical use of it began. If our Lord gave but one form, the briefer one was probably enlarged into the longer one; but it is almost certain that both were given."—Schaff. "The Lord's prayer [in Luke] stands thus in the most ancient MSS.: 'Father, Hallowed be thy name. Thy kingdom come. Give us day by day our daily bread. And forgive us our sins; for we ourselves also forgive every one that is indebted to us. And lead us not into temptation.' This shorter form has been, in later MSS., filled in and altered from St. Matthew. It is to be noticed that several of the early fathers state that St. Luke, instead of 'thy kingdom come,' wrote, 'let that Holy Spirit come upon us and purify us.'" —Alford. (See notes on pages 187 and 189.)

Our Father which art in heaven, Hallowed be thy

Our Father who art in heaven, lit.—"Our Father, the (one) in the heavens. A form of address almost unknown, and to a certain extent unwarranted, before Christ came. The added phrase, 'in the heavens,' shows 'the infinite difference between this and every other human relationship of a similar kind. He is no weak, helpless earthly parent.'"—Alford. "The word 'our' implies at once our fellowship with Christ and with one another. The very preface to the Lord's prayer is a denial of Atheism, Pantheism, and Deism, since it recognizes a God, a Personal God, who is our Father through Christ."—Schaff. "Christ hath taught us to say, 'Our Father,' a form of speech which he never used himself. Sometimes he calls him 'the Father,' sometimes 'my Father,' sometimes 'your,' but never 'our.' He makes no such conjunction of us to himself as to make no distinction between us and himself; so conjoining us as to distinguish, though so distinguishing as not to separate us."—Bishop Pearson. "Let us come back to our original childship as 'sons of God.' In the loftiness thereof let us live. There can be no dignity without the conviction of the truth of that. Earth may heap its treasures in our laps, and set crowns upon our heads, but we can never come to any real greatness if we do not recognize our relationship to God."—Charles F. Deems. "Let us say: 'Our Father which art;' when we least remember thee, fix the thought of thy Being deeper than all other thoughts within us; and may we thy children dwell in it, and find our home and rest in it now and forever."—Fredrick D. Maurice. Philips Brooks, in his "Influence of Jesus," shows how the fatherhood of God is the centre and sum of all Christ's teaching.

Chap. XXVI.

Luke 11 : 3, 4.

Nov. J.C. 33.

name. Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done, as in heaven, so in earth. Give us day by day our daily bread. And forgive us our sins ; for we also forgive Hallowed be thy name.—" ' Hallowed ' means made holy ; in this case it can only mean recognized, treated as sacred, and thus glorified."—Schaff. " You ask that what was ever holy may be Hallowed in thee."—Augustine.

Thy kingdom come.—" The Messiah's kingdom, which in organized form had not yet come, but was proclaimed by the Lord himself as at hand. It did speedily come, as opposed to the Old Testament theocracy ; but in its fullness, including the triumph of Christ's kingdom over the kingdom of darkness, it has not yet come."—Schaff.

Thy will be done.—" What is resignation ? It is putting God between one's self and one's grief."—Madame Svetchine. " It is not miserable to be blind ; he only is miserable who can not acquiesce in his blindness."—Milton. " A man enjoys the greatest peace of mind when he has once settled himself in a firm and steadfast belief of God's Providence, and an absolute dependence upon his design and will."—Quesnel.

" Though all things in confusion seem,
I know God's will is still supreme:
What must be, let it be—I rest Firmly on this, his will is best."

From the German of Speratus.

As in heaven, so in earth.—" Let these [Christian] principles be adopted and carried out, and we have an entirely different world from that which could exist on any others—a world from which the chief causes of unhappiness are removed."—Mark Hopkins.

Give us day by day our daily bread.—" This verse may be thus more exactly translated : ' Our sufficient (or needful) bread give us for the day.' "—Schaff. " Lord, take from thy servants sad carefulness and all distrust, and give us only such a proportion of temporal things as may enable us with comfort to do our duty."—Jeremy Taylor.

Forgive us our sins includes less than the phrase in Matthew, Forgive us our debts. The one implies only positive transgressions, the other all unfulfilled obligations.

For we also forgive every one that is indebted to us " implies, more distinctly than the language in Matthew, that prayer can only be acceptably offered to God by one who is living in allegiance to that law of love which is the law of God."—Abbott. " ' Forgive us our trespasses ' " is an older rendering, but the present translation is, it seems to us, much better. Forgiving

Chap. XXVI.

Luke 11 : 5, 6.

Nov. J.C. 33.

every one that is indebted to us. And lead us not into temptation ; but deliver us from evil.

And he said unto them, Which of you shall have a friend, and shall go unto him at midnight, and say unto him, Friend, lend me three loaves : for a friend of mine in his journey is come to me, and I have nothing to set before him ?

Parable of the Friend at Midnight.

‘ our debtors ’ is a much more inclusive phrase, and involves a much more difficult duty than merely forgiving “ ‘ those that trespass against us. ’ ”—Eggleston.

“ Consider this—

That in the course of justice none of us
Should see salvation ; we do pray for mercy ;
And that same prayer doth teach us all to render
The deeds of mercy.”—Shakespeare.

“ How would you be

If he, which is the top of judgment, should But judge you as you are ? O think of that :
And mercy then will breathe within your lips
Like man new made.”—Shakespeare.

Lead us not into temptation.—“ What we are taught to seek or shun in prayer, we should equally pursue or avoid in action. Very earnestly, therefore, should we avoid temptation, seeking to walk so guardedly in the path of obedience that we may never tempt the devil to tempt us. We are not to enter the thicket in search of the lion.”—Spurgeon.

“ Teach us how to live this prayer ;
Reverently thy plans to share ;
More than echoes of thy voice,
Make us partners in thy choice.
Let our deeds be syllables
Of the prayer our spirit swells :
In us thy desire fulfil ;
By us work thy gracious will.”

Helen Hunt Jackson.

Which of you shall have a friend.—“ The question is, What will happen in these supposed circumstances ? The argument of this parable is : ‘ If selfish man can be won by prayer and opportunity to give, ’ much more certainly shall the bountiful Lord bestow. ’ ”—Trench. “ The purpose is, as in the similar parable of the unjust judge (Luke 18 : 1-8), not only to enjoin and encourage persevering prayer, but to declare the certainty that prayer will be heard (vers. 9-13). ”—Schaff.

Shall go unto him at midnight.—“ In the East it was, and is, the custom to travel late at night, for coolness’ sake.”—Alford. It was, however, the hour when it would be the most inconvenient to be disturbed.

And he from within shall answer and say, Trouble me not : the door is now shut, and my children are with me in bed ; I cannot rise and give thee. I say unto you, Though he will not rise and give him because he is his friend, yet because of his importunity he will rise and give him as many as he needeth.

Lend me three loaves. — “ It was usual with the Jews to borrow bread of one another ; and certain rules are laid down when and upon what condition this is to be done.”—Gill. He asks for one loaf for the traveler, one for himself—to eat with his guest—and one that there might be abundance.

Trouble me not.—“ The half-vexed tone is true to nature. The one asked is selfish, and his reluctance is real. But God’s reluctance is apparent only, and even this appearance arises from reasons which work for our best good. This contrast is borne out by ver. 13.”—Schaff.

The door is now shut.—“ Barred too, as the original implies.”—Schaff.

My children are with me, “ having gone to bed, and remaining there. I can not—i.e., ‘ will not,’ because of the trouble of unbarring the door, and the danger of disturbing the children, whose repose is more to him than his friend’s request.”—Schaff.

In bed.—“ The meaning is, in the same sleeping-room. We learn from Sir J. Chardin, and other travelers, that it is usual in the East for a whole family to sleep in the same room, each laying his mattress on the floor.”—Hewlett.

Importunity. — Literally, impudence, shamelessness. “ It is presupposed here that the postulant goes on knocking and asking.”—Alford. “ God wishes a faith which is not ashamed of endurance, and which therewith entertains the highest expectations.”—Van Oosterzee. “ This parable must be read in the light of the customs of the East, where inns are exceptional, and where travelers are dependent upon hospitality. It illustrates intercessory prayer, the request being preferred by one, not for himself but for another, whose need he feels but is unable to supply. Like the parable of the unjust judge, Christ here employs the lower to illustrate the higher. If a selfish and indolent man, who will not rise from his bed for the sake of benevolence, will yield to importunity, and that the importunity which approximates impudence, much more will God, from sympathy and benevolence, yield to the importunity of his children when inspired by spiritual earnestness. There is nothing in this teaching inconsistent with Matt. 6 : 7 ; for repetitions that spring from intensity

And I say unto you, Ask, and it shall be given you ; seek, and ye shall find ; knock, and it shall be opened unto you. For every one that asketh, receiveth ; and he that seeketh, findeth ;^{Ask, Seek, Knock.} and to him that knocketh, it shall be opened. If a son shall ask bread of any of you that is a father, will he give him a stone ? or if he ask a fish, will he for a fish give him a serpent ? Or if he shall ask an egg, will he offer him a scorpion ? If ye then, being evil, know how to give good of feeling are not ' vain repetitions ' (Matt. 26 : 44). If the delay of a divine answer to prayer could be attributed to God's disapproval of our request, importunity would be impertinent ; but when the delay is caused by our unreadiness to receive, importunity becomes a necessary condition of the grant. With the lesson of this parable, comp. Gen. 32 : 23 ; Ps. 55 : 17 ; 1 Thess. 3 : 10 ; 5 : 17 ; 1 Tim. 5 : 5 ; 2 Tim. 1 : 3."—Abbott.

Ask ; it shall be given you.—" See Matt. 7 : 7, 8. But the words are not taken from that discourse : they apply the lesson of the parable—namely, that God will, even when he seems to delay, hear and answer prayer. The law of his kingdom is here laid down in literal terms."—Schaff. " As the Saviour has just urged perseverance in prayer, he now speaks of the certainty of being heard, and gives his disciples to understand that it is in no case in vain, and that an uttered wish is surely fulfilled—that is, if it belongs to those good gifts which are now represented under the image of bread, fish, and egg. But if any one should in his foolishness beg a scorpion or a serpent, the Father would be no Father if he could fulfill such a wish."—Van Oosterzee. " God denies a Christian nothing but with a design to give him something better."—Cecil. " He wishes to give who advises us to ask ; he desires to be bountiful who is anxious for our petitions. . . . If you are not so far wanting to yourself as to desist from praying, God will not be so unmerciful to you as to desist from giving."—Augustine. " Oh, the ocean of divine bounty, boundless, bottomless ! Oh, our wretched unworthiness, if we be either niggardly to ourselves in not asking blessings, or unthankful to our God in not acknowledging them !"—Bishop Hall. " Verses [Luke 11] 9-13 correspond with Matt. 7 : 7-11. I have shown there [Abbott on Matthew] that they clearly belong to the Sermon on the Mount, of which they form an integral part ; it seems to me irrational to suppose that Matthew borrowed and incorporated them there ; and improbable that Luke

Chap. XXVI.

Luke II : 13, 29-33.

Nov. J.C. 33.

gifts unto your children, how much more shall your heavenly Father give the Holy Spirit to them that ask him?

And when the people were gathered thick together, he began to say, This is an evil generation : they seek a sign ; and there shall no sign be given it, but the sign of Jonas the prophet. For as Jonas was a sign unto the Ninevites, so shall also the Son of man be to this generation. The queen of the south shall rise up in the judgment with the men of this generation, and condemn them : for she came from the utmost parts of the earth, to hear the wisdom of Solomon ; and behold, a greater than Solomon is here. The men of Nineveh shall rise up in the judgment with this generation, and shall condemn it : for they repented at the preaching of Jonas ; and behold, a greater than Jonas is here. No man when he hath lighted a candle, putteth it in a se-borrowed and incorporated them here. More probably they were twice uttered by Christ on different occasions, and in different connections. Verse 12 is peculiar to Luke."—Abbott.

Will he give him a scorpion?—Give in the margin, and this is better than offered. "Scorpions are a pest in Palestine well known by every traveler, who often finds them under his pillow, inside his dress, or wakes to find them crawling over his face or hands. The natives build a ring of fire with dry grass around the scorpion, when in despair it stings itself and dies. The white body resembles an egg. Alford notes that the serpent and the scorpion are positively mischievous. When we ask for good, God will not give us evil ; we often ask for evil, and God gives us good. In Matthew the promise is, that the heavenly Father will give good things ; in Luke, that he will give the Holy Spirit—that is, himself (Eph. 3 : 15-19). This gift of himself necessarily carries with it the gift of all good things."—Abbott.

Your heavenly Father, lit.—"Father from heaven," implying his coming down to us with his blessings.

When the people were gathered thickly together.—"Possibly in expectation of the 'sign ;' but the controversy with the Pharisees would attract an increasing crowd."—Schaff.

No man when he hath lighted a candle.—The thoughts of these verses—33-36—occur in Matt. 5 : 15 ; 6 : 22, 23. (See notes

Chap. XXVI.

Luke 11 : 33-36.

Nov. J.C. 33.

cret place, neither under a bushel, but on a candlestick, that they which come in may see the light. The light of the body is the eye : therefore when thine eye is single, thy whole body also is full of light ; but when thine eye is evil, thy body also is full of darkness. Take heed therefore, that the light which is in thee be not darkness. If thy whole body therefore be full of light, on page 171.) " Here the connection is different. They wished a sign ; a greater sign than Jonah is granted them, but to perceive it they must not (as they do) cover the light with a bushel, shut the eyes of their understanding."—Schaff.

The light of the body is the eye.—As a window is called a light, because it lets light into the room.

If thine eye be single.—" Clear without blemish ; if the crystal humor and pupil were colored, the eye could not see any other color ; therefore hath the wisdom of God (wonderful in all his works) made the eye like a clear glass window, to let in light to the house, without any color in it, that so we might have a right apprehension of things sensible ; and so proportionably is it with things intellectual."—Assembly's Ann. " Let your eye be singly fixed on him : aim only at pleasing God ; and while you do this, your whole soul will be full of wisdom, holiness, and happiness."—Bloomfield.

" He hath no skill to utter lies,
His very soul is in his eyes ;
Single his aim in all, and true."

William Wordsworth.

" On earth we have nothing to do with success, or with its results, but only being true to God and for God ; for it is sincerity and not success which is the sweet savor before God."—F. W. Robertson. " A pure soul acts in simplicity and without certainty, being persuaded that what is good comes from God, and what is not good from self."—Guyon. " Infinite toil would not enable you to sweep away a mist ; but by ascending a little you may often look over it altogether. So it is with our moral improvement ; we wrestle fiercely with a vicious habit, which would have no hold upon us if we ascended into a higher moral atmosphere."—Arthur Helps.

If thy whole body therefore be full of light.—" If thou art filled with wisdom, having no part dark, giving way to no sin or folly, then that heavenly principle will, like the clear flame of a lamp in a room that was dark before, shed its light into all thy powers and faculties. When the light of Christ dwells fully in

Chap. XXVI.

Luke 11 : 36, 27, 28.

Nov. J.C. 33.

having no part dark, the whole shall be full of light ; as when the bright shining of a candle doth give thee light.

And it came to pass, as he spake these things, a certain woman of the company lifted up her voice, and said unto him, Blessed is the womb that bare thee, and the paps which thou hast sucked. But he said, Yea, rather, blessed are they that hear the word of God and keep it.

the heart, it extends its influence to every thought, word, and action ; and directs its possessor how he is to act in all places and circumstances."—Bloomfield. "If then the soul be so, having no part darkened by prejudice or selfish lusts, and approach thus to his teaching, it shall be wholly illuminated by it, as 'by the candle of the Lord, searching its inward parts.' So this saying is not tautological ; for the second clause expresses the further result and waxing onward of the shining light, arising from the singleness of the eye, and becomes, in its spiritual significance, a weighty declaration of truth."—Alford. "He that has light within his own clear breast may sit in the center and enjoy bright day."—Milton. Dr. Howard Crosby has suggested an interpretation of this passage which is different from any of the foregoing. "It is certainly original and striking. It accords with the Greek, and is sustained by ver. 36 here. He renders the word light as equivalent to radiance, and the word darkness as equivalent to gloom. We have then the declaration : 'The eye gives radiance to the face and person ; when the eye is dark the whole person is gloomy and forbidding ; so if the religion within us be one of gloom and darkness, our whole life and influence will be repellent ; but if thy whole body (nature) be full of radiance (a religion of hope and love), having no part dark, the whole (life and influence) shall be full of radiance, as when the bright shining of a candle doth give thee light.' "—Abbott.

A certain woman.—Herself a mother, we infer from her language. Tradition calls her "Marcella, a maid-servant of Martha."

Blessed is the womb.—"A natural expression of womanly enthusiasm at the sayings and doings of Christ. His mother was blessed (Luke 1 : 28), but he nevertheless rectifies the woman's view. The ground of her blessedness, as in the case of all the human race, unto whom in the highest sense 'a child is born, a son is given,' is that she too belonged to them that hear the word of God and keep it."—Schaff.

Chap. XXVI.

Luke II : 37-39.

Nov. J.C. 33.

And as he spake, a certain Pharisee besought him to dine with him ; and he went in and sat down to meat. And when the Pharisee saw it, he marveled that he had not first washed before dinner. And the Lord said unto him, Now do ye Pharisees make clean the outside

A certain Pharisee.—"Christ, who was the guest of publicans and sinners, did not refuse invitations from Pharisees. He went into any company willing to receive him, but made every social gathering an occasion for religious instruction."—Abbott. "At the table of a Pharisee, upon the sight of the clean outside of his cup, our Lord discovers his inward parts, 'full of ravening and wickedness.' At Jacob's well he poureth forth to the woman of Samaria the water of life. After he had supped with his disciples, he takes the cup, and calls the wine his blood, and himself the true Vine. Thus did wisdom publish itself in every place, upon every occasion ; the well, the table, the highway-side—every place was a pulpit, every occasion a text and every good lesson a sermon."—Farindon.

Besought him to dine with him.—Asked or invited him. "Besought" is too strong a word. It was an ordinary invitation. "This meal, as also that in John 21 : 12-15, was not what we now understand by dinner, an afternoon meal, but the first meal of the day, the breakfast, or déjeuner, in the prime of the morning."—Alford.

Sat down.—Reclined at table.

He marveled he had not first washed. (See note on page 306.)

The Lord said unto him.—"This discourse closely resembles the great denunciation of the Pharisees (Matt. 23) ; but the circumstances of the two are entirely different ; the one was uttered just before our Lord departed solemnly and finally from the temple, but in this case Luke definitely fixes the place in the house of a Pharisee. A repetition of these fearful words is highly probable. The Pharisees had already become his constant and bitter enemies. Hence the rebuke at this earlier date is quite as natural as that in his final discourse he would sum up and repeat the woes already pronounced."—Schaff. "It is probable, that the Pharisee had purposely collected together many of his brethren to meet Jesus, with a design to insnare him, of which Jesus was fully aware. This may account for the remarkable sharpness of his reproofs and warnings."—Scott. "The form of our Lord's opening remark indicates that the Pharisee 'marveled' orally, and that the others present of that sect had assented to the censure. This was rudeness to the of the cup and the platter ; but your inward part is full of ravening and wickedness. Ye fools, did not he that made that which is without, make that which is within also ? But rather give alms of such things as ye have ;

guest, calling for rebuke. There is no proof that the invitation was given out of friendliness."—Schaff.

Now.—"Not in contrast to some previous time, but rather in the sense : full well, here is a proof of the way in which, ye Pharisees, etc. Others of this party were doubtless present."—Schaff.

The outside of the cup and of the platter.—(Comp. Matt. 23 : 25.) "There Christ declares that cleansing that which is within makes clean that which is without ; here, that if a real reverence for God induced the ceremonial scrupulousness of the Pharisees they would also be spiritually scrupulous, since the same God made both soul and body. The term fools is literally thoughtless ones. It is a different word from that used in Matt. 5 : 22, and does not imply bitterness or contempt."—Abbott.

Ravening.—"Rapacity." The original word is translated extortion in Matt. 23 : 25.

But rather give alms, etc.—"The true rendering of this passage is, 'But rather give in compassion those things which are within, and behold all things are clean unto you.' This verse is peculiar to Luke. There is some difficulty about the proper interpretation, which is relieved by noting the exact significance of the original, as I have given it. Christ says not, give alms, the outward gift, but give compassion, the inward feeling ; he says not of such things as ye have, but those things which are within ; thus he does not make mere almsgiving an atonement and reparation for sin, but he declares that works of mercy out of a sincere heart are a condition of true spiritual cleansing. (Comp. Hosea 6 : 6 ; Isa. 58 : 6-8.) Speaking to the Pharisees, who were covetous (Luke 16 : 14), he declares that a genuine compassion, bestowed on the needy, from within, is more cleansing to the soul in God's sight than purification and lustration."—Abbott. (Isa. 58 : 3-12 ; Dan. 4 : 27 ; Matt. 5 : 7 ; 25 : 34-40.) "Pilate washed his hands, as a token that he was pure from the blood of Jesus, when he gave him up to be crucified ; and the Pharisees washed their hands, as a profession of holiness and piety, while their hearts were full of rapacity and iniquity. But the observance in both cases was vain and inefficacious ; and the conduct of Zaccheus, who, having made large restitution to all whom he had wronged, gave half of his remaining goods to the poor, was a far better proof of love to God and man, as well as of sincere repentance and faith, and a far better method of seek-

Chap. XXVI.

Luke II : 41-44.

Nov. J.C. 33.

and behold, all things are clean unto you. But woe unto you, Pharisees ! for ye tithe mint, and rue, and all manner of herbs, and pass over judgment and the love of God : these ought ye to have done, and not to leave the other undone. Woe unto you, Pharisees ! for ye love the uppermost seats in the synagogues, and greetings in the markets. Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites ! for ye are as graves which appear not, and the men that walk over them are not aware of them.

ing the sanctified and comfortable use of outward things.”—Campbell. “Every thing about the true Christian resembles the purity of his soul ; and he is always clean without, because he is always pure within.”—William Law. “It is a much easier thing to whitewash a house on the outside than to take away the rotten beams and moldered bricks and rebuild it with solid materials. If Noah, instead of pitching the ark to keep out the water, had only painted it, to make a fair show, he would have perished like others by the flood.”—J. Thornton.

Ye tithe mint and rue.—“‘Pay tithe of.’ These were almost valueless ; but, by apparent attention to little things, the scribes and Pharisees deceived those over whose consciences they ruled in religious matters. They were over-exact in small matters, but neglected ‘the weightier matters of the law.’” Rue “was a small shrubby plant, common in gardens. It had a strong, unpleasant smell, and a bitterish, penetrating taste.”—Harris.

Judgment and the love of God.—“Man, as to his inner life, is an intelligent being, whose understanding should be enlightened by the Word of God, that so he may have an accurate judgment of what is true and good. But man has not only the power of discernment, he has also affections, the right direction and regulating of which is morality ; and the great principle of all true morality is ‘THE LOVE OF GOD.’”—Bloomfield.

The uppermost seats.—“Christ’s disciple loves the uppermost place indeed, but at spiritual banquets, where he may feed on the choicest morsels of spiritual food ; for, with the apostles, who ‘sit upon twelve thrones,’ he loves the chief seats, and he loves greetings made in the heavenly market-place—that is, in the heavenly congregation.”—Origen.

Hypocrites !—“Hypocrisy is not merely for a man to deceive others, knowing all the while that he is deceiving them, but to deceive himself and others at the same time, to aim at their

Chap. XXVI.

Luke 11 : 45, 46.

Nov. J.C. 33.

Then answered one of the lawyers, and said unto him, Master, thus saying, thou reproachest us also. And he said, Woe unto you also, ye lawyers ! for ye lade men with burdens grievous to be borne, and ye your-praise by a religious profession, without perceiving that he loves their praise more than God's, and that he is professing far more than he practices."—J. H. Newman.

As graves which appear not.—(See Matt. 23 : 27.) "The 'whited sepulchres' were those of the rich, and the application is to external beauty covering inner corruption ; here humbler tombs are spoken of, which in the course of time would be unnoticed by those passing over them, thus causing defilement. There the pretence of Pharisaism is brought out ; here its insidiousness. This difference is an incidental evidence that the two discourses were uttered—one in the capital (where the splendid sepulchres were more common), the other in the humbler provinces."—Schaff. "The sepulchres or burying-places of the common class of people were mere excavations in the earth, such as are commonly made at the present day in the East. Persons who sustained a higher rank owned subterranean recesses, crypts, or caverns, which were, in some instances, the work of nature, and in some were merely artificial excavations of the earth, and in others were cut out from rocks (Gen. 23 : 2 ; Josh. 10 : 27 ; Isa. 22 : 16 ; 2 Kings 13 : 21 ; John 11 : 38 ; 19 : 41 ; Matt. 27 : 52, 60.) Numerous sepulchres of this kind still remain."—Jahn.

One of the lawyers.—"Or, one of the doctors of the law, which I choose rather than lawyer, because the word lawyer naturally suggests to us a modern idea of an office which did not exist among the Jews at this time, and has strangely misled some interpreters. These Jewish lawyers (as our translators call them) were the most considerable species of scribes, who applied themselves peculiarly to study and explain the law. Probably some of them were Pharisees ; but it was no ways essential to their office that they should be so."—Doddridge. Their position corresponded to that of the modern Theologian, or Doctor of Divinity.

Thou reproachest us also.—"Who are in official, ecclesiastical position. The man was not a Sadducee, but a Pharisee, and probably felt that the censure applied to him. He would shelter his character behind his office ! Doubtless he would imply, as his successors have done : in touching us, the God-appointed officials, you are blaspheming."—Schaff.

With burdens grievous to be borne.—"The metaphor is taken from the custom of portage in the East, where men often

Chap. XXVI.

Luke 11 : 46-50.

Nov. J.C. 33.

selves touch not the burdens with one of your fingers. Woe unto you ! for ye build the sepulchres of the prophets, and your fathers killed them. Truly ye bear witness, that ye allow the deeds of your fathers : for they indeed killed them, and ye build their sepulchres. Therefore also said the wisdom of God, I will send them prophets and apostles, and some of them they shall slay and persecute : that the blood of all the do the work done by beasts of burden with us. An Eastern porter will often carry a barrel of flour or a bale of cotton."—Abbott.

Ye build the sepulchres of the prophets.—"This he charges upon the lawyers as a crime, and as a continuation of, and participation in, the murder of the prophets. I understand his meaning to be this : Your fathers killed the prophets, you are burying them out of sight ; by your interpretations and Rabbinical additions and qualifications, making the Word of God of none effect, through your traditions (Mark 7 : 13), you are building their sepulchres ; so you are doing what the fathers did. They silenced the prophets by violence, you by your teachings. This interpretation accords with ver. 52. and with the actual facts ; for, as in the mediæval ages, the Romish church buried the Bible beneath its legends and traditions, which they pretended to rear to its honor, so in the time of Christ the lawyers took the Bible away from the common people ; the Talmud was a sepulchre reared above the buried Word of God. Wherever the teacher covers and conceals the Scripture by human tradition, creed, or philosophy, he is guilty of the crime here charged by Christ."—Abbott.

Therefore also said the wisdom of God.—"Comp. Matt. 23 : 34, where 'I' is used ; so that Christ represents himself as 'the wisdom of God.' This seems to be a quotation, but there is no passage in the Old Testament which fully corresponds, and the form is an unusual one for such a quotation. Explanations : 1. An amplification of 2 Chron. 24 : 19, made by him who is 'the wisdom of God.' That passage speaks of the sending of prophets and their rejection, and is connected with the dying words of Zechariah, 'The Lord look upon it and require it.' This is on the whole preferable. 2. Our Lord refers to his own words, as spoken on some former occasion. This is possible, but leaves us in uncertainty."—Schaff. There is a passage in the Apocryphal book, 2 Esdras 1 : 30-33, remarkably analogous to the one here quoted.

prophets, which was shed from the foundation of the world, may be required of this generation ; from the blood of Abel unto the blood of Zacharias, which perished between the altar and the temple : verily I say unto you, It shall be required of this generation. Woe

The blood of Abel.—"The crime of Cain, who, through envy, shed the blood of his brother, was committed by the men of that generation, who hated Jesus, for a like reason as Cain hated Abel. And the blood of Christ, although it speaketh better things than that of Abel, in behalf of the repentant and believing ; yet upon the nation generally the imprecation, 'His blood be on us and on our children,' has brought a punishment like to that of Cain. A mark was set upon him, and he was driven out from the presence of the Lord, to be a fugitive and a vagabond on the earth. Such has been the case of the Jews from that generation downward."—Bloomfield.

Zachariah.—"The case of Zachariah was a marked one in view of the place 'between the sanctuary and the altar,' and of his deathcry, 'The Lord seeth and will avenge it.'"—Schaff. "All the martyrs from Abel to Zachariah" seems to have been a proverb : and it might naturally arise from observing that Abel was the first, and Zachariah, in Chronicles, the last, eminently good man, of whose murder the Scripture speaks.

Ye slew—that is, your nation. In their present conduct they were partakers of the same sin.

Between the temple—i.e., the temple proper, and the altar which stood in front of it.

It shall be required of this generation.—"This expression is not to be interpreted as implying that those individual crimes, which happened before the time of the people then living, would be laid to their charge ; but that, with every species of cruelty, oppression, and murder, which had been exemplified in former ages, they of that age would be found chargeable, inasmuch as they had permitted no kind of wickedness to be peculiar to those who had preceded them, but had carefully imitated, and even exceeded, all the most atrocious deeds of their ancestors from the beginning of the world. There is no hyperbole in the representation. The account given of them by Josephus, who was no Christian, but one of themselves, shows in the strongest light how justly they are here characterized by our Lord. The war between the Romans and the Jews, which lasted five years, and ended with the taking and destruction of Jerusalem, began about thirty-three years after the giving of this warning by our Lord.

Chap. XXVI.

Luke 11 : 52-54.

Nov. J.C. 33.

unto you, lawyers ! for ye have taken away the key of knowledge ; ye entered not in yourselves, and them that were entering in ye hindered.

And as he said these things unto them, the scribes and the Pharisees began to urge him vehemently, and to provoke him to speak of many things : laying wait for him and seeking to catch something out of his mouth, that they might accuse him.

The sufferings of the Jews, both during the war and at its termination, are unequaled in the history of nations (see Josephus, de Bell. Jua).—Greswell.

The key of knowledge.—"Those who were made doctors of the law had a key given to them at their ordination, or appointment, which they afterward wore as a badge of their office. Thus emblematically did they profess to open the true meaning of the law and the prophets."—Greswell. "Knowledge of the truth is represented as the key to the kingdom of heaven ; knowledge, not mere emotion, but this is not the knowledge of worldly wisdom, but of spiritual apprehension, the product of humility and docility (see Luke 10 : 21 ; 11 : 28 ; 1 Cor. 2 : 6-12). The scribes and lawyers had taught a kind of knowledge ; but they had not themselves and they deprived the people of spiritual apprehension of the truth."—Abbott.

To press upon him vehemently.—Or, "to be very spiteful," intensely embittered against him. The former sense would seem preferable, as including both their feeling toward him and their actual following of him with hostile purpose, but the latter sense is the more accurate reading of the Greek.

To provoke him to speak of many (or "more") things.—To catechise him on a variety of subjects, so as to take him off his guard. "Literally, to extemporize, in order that they might catch up something hastily and inconsiderately uttered."—Bloomfield.

Laying wait for him to catch something out of his mouth.—"This is the form of the verse. The figure is borrowed from hunting. It was not only that they waited for something to suit their purpose, but they hunted for it, since the expressions represent both the beating up of game and the lying in wait to capture it."—Schaff.

CHAPTER XXVII.

TEACHINGS IN PEREA.

In the mean time, when there were gathered together an innumerable multitude of people, insomuch that they trode one upon another, he began to say unto his disciples first of all, Beware ye of the leaven of the Pharisees, which is hypocrisy. For

Warnings Against Hypocrisy.

In the mean time.—"Luke—chapter 12—is made up of a series of discourses following each other in immediate succession, but with less of unity and logical connection than are found in most of our Lord's recorded sermons. Some have therefore thought that Luke here records a compilation of our Lord's teachings, delivered on very different occasions, one section alone (vers. 13-21) being peculiar and in its proper place. This is possible, yet even in that case the order and arrangement of the Evangelist suggest new views of the truth elsewhere recorded. In itself the chapter seems to contain a series of discourses delivered on one definite occasion. The only evidence that it is other than what it seems is furnished by the similarity of the sayings to those found in different connections in the other gospels. In view of the acknowledged repetitions in our Lord's teachings, this evidence is insufficient. It is probable that the crowd was gathering again while our Lord was in the house of the Pharisee, that on coming forth he began a discourse to his disciples, following up the thoughts uttered there; and that as new occasions immediately presented themselves, he continued his discourses with a variation in the theme. The section may be thus divided: Vers. 1-12, warning against hypocrisy; vers. 13-21, against covetousness, occasioned by the request of one present about a division of inheritance; vers. 22-34, against worldly care, or lessons of trust in God. In the first part the tone of warning predominates, in the second instruction, in the third encouragement and comfort."—Schaff.

An innumerable multitude.—"It would be more exactly rendered, many myriads; but lest every English reader should not know that a myriad is ten thousand, I render it, many thousands; nor is it necessary to take the word in its strictest sense."—Doddridge. "One of the many indications of the popularity of Christ as a preacher. Comp. Mark 1 : 33 ; 2 : 2 ; 3 : 9 ; 6 : 31, etc."—Abbott.

Chap. XXVII.

Luke 12 : 2, 3.

J.C. 33.

there is nothing covered, that shall not be revealed ; neither hid, that shall not be known. Therefore, whatsoever ye have spoken in darkness, shall be heard in the light ; and that which ye have spoken in the ear in closets, shall be proclaimed upon the housetops. And

First of all.—"This belongs with the following, not with the preceding, clause : Beware ye, first of all, of the leaven. Hypocrisy is the greatest danger which threatens the Christian, the one most to be guarded against."—Abbott. "It is like leaven, or yeast, because, first, it may exist without being at once detected. Leaven mixed in flour is not known until it produces its effects. Second, It is insinuating. Leaven will soon pervade the whole mass. So hypocrisy, if undetected and unremoved, will soon pervade all our exercises and feelings. Third, Yeast makes bread appear greater in quantity than it actually is, and by hypocrisy men seek to be more highly esteemed than in truth they deserve."—Bloomfield. (See note on page .) The connection is : "Beware of hypocrisy (ver. 1), for all shall be made evident in the end (ver. 2), and ye are witnesses and sharers in this unfolding of the truth (ver. 3). In this your work ye need not fear men, for your Father has you in his keeping (ver. 4-7), and the confession of my name is a glorious thing (ver. 8) ; but the rejection of it (ver. 9), and especially the ascription of my works to the evil one (ver. 10), a fearful one. And in this confession ye shall be helped by the Holy Spirit in the hour of need (vers. 11, 12)."—Alford.

Which is hypocrisy.—"Not strictly that the leaven was hypocrisy, but that their leaven (doctrine) was of such a kind that its essence was hypocrisy. This is reason why they should beware of it."—Schaff.

In closets.—Literally, "inner chambers," the most retired parts of a dwelling.

Proclaimed upon the housetops.—(See notes on page 284.) "The flat house top is the resort of the inmates, and the place where many household operations are carried on in Eastern cities where the streets are narrow, and private yards and gardens are but a few feet square. It is also the most conspicuous, and therefore a usual place for the promulgation of any news, public or private. People in the streets below and on all the neighboring house tops compose an audience. The roof is ordinarily enclosed with a low parapet of masonry or a higher one of lattice-work. Vines are often trained for shade, or in their absence matting is used. Sleeping on the house top in dry

I say unto you, my friends, Be not afraid of them that kill the body, and after that, have no more that they can do. But I will forewarn you whom ye shall fear : Fear him, which after he hath killed, hath power to cast into hell ; yea, I say unto you, Fear him. Are not five weather is a common custom.”—Abbott. “ Our Lord spent most of his life in villages, and accordingly the reference here is to a custom observed only in such places, never in cities. At the present day, local governors in country districts cause their commands thus to be published. Their proclamations are generally made in the evening, after the people have returned from their labors in the field. The public crier ascends the highest roof at hand, and lifts up his voice in a long-drawn call upon all faithful subjects to give ear and obey.”—Thomson.

Be not afraid of them that kill the body.—“ Let not the fear of man make you act as hypocrites, or conceal any thing which I have commissioned you to publish.”—Bloomfield.

“ A valiant man
Ought not to undergo or tempt a danger,
But worthily, and by selected ways,
He undertakes by reason, not by chance.
His valor is the salt t’ his other virtues,
They’re all unseasoned without it.”—Ben Jonson

“ The brave man is not he who feels no fear,
For that were stupid and irrational ;
But he whose noble soul its fear subdues,
And bravely dares the danger nature shrinks from.”

Joanna Baillie.

“ Though death and the grave still lie at the gate of immortality, as if to prevent entrance, the weary pilgrim of the cross, when the shades and dews of nightfall come on, bears his burden into the very presence of the monsters ; lays it on the ground between them, stretches himself on it as on a pallet and pillow of down, rests his left hand on the serpent’s head, twists the fingers of his right hand in the lion’s beard ; and sighs, ere his eyelids close in sleep, ‘ O death ! where is thy sting ? O grave ! where is thy victory ? Thanks be unto God, which giveth ’ us ‘ the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ ; ’ and then he dreams of heaven, until the morning dawns, and the gate opens, and he awakes in the likeness of God, and is satisfied.”—Thomas H. Stockton.

Hath power to cast into hell.—“ God alone is the dispenser of life and death, temporal and eternal. Hence reverence and awe, not fear and terror, are required, as the change of terms implies.”—Schaff.

Chap. XXVII.

Luke 12 : 6, 7.

J.C. 33.

sparrows sold for two farthings, and not one of them is forgotten before God ? But even the very hairs of your Sparrows.—"Little birds (sparrows, white-throats, and others) are sold in the market in the Eastern cities at the present day in bunches of five or more. When very plenty, two farthings a bunch would be an adequate price. They are caught for market mostly by children by means of little cages with a door which closes with a spring, or by twigs besmeared with bird-lime. They bring the lowest price of any game, and were the smallest living creatures offered in sacrifice under the Mosaic dispensation. It was the cleansed leper, usually reduced by his separation to great poverty, who was permitted to bring this small offering (Lev. 14 : 4)."—Abbott. "These birds are snared and caught in great numbers, but as they are small, and not much relished for food, five sparrows may still be sold for two farthings ; and when we see their countless numbers, and the eagerness with which they are destroyed as a worthless nuisance, we can better appreciate the assurance that our heavenly Father, who takes care of them, so that not one can fall to the ground without his notice, will surely take care of us, who are of more value than many sparrows."—Thomson. (Ps. 102 : 7 ; Matt. 10 : 27.

"His sermons were the healthful talk
That shorter made the mountain-walk,
His wayside texts were flowers and birds,
Where mingled with his gracious words
The rustle of the tamarisk-tree
And ripple-wash of Galilee."—J. G. Whittier,

"The child leans on its parent's breast,
Leaves there its cares and is at rest ;
The bird sits singing by his nest,
And tells aloud
His trust in God, and so is blest
'Neath every cloud.

"He has no store, he sows no seed ;
Yet sings aloud, and doth not heed ;
By flowing stream or grassy mead,
He sings to shame
Men who forget, in fear of need,
A Father's name."—Isaac Williams.

Not one of them is forgotten before God.—"The meanest living thing, because it has life, excels in value the sun."—Augustine.

Even the very hairs of your head are all numbered.—"They have been estimated to number 140,000."—Abbott. "The word 'your' is emphatic, asserting a special care for Christ's disciples : 'Of you the hairs of the head are all numbered.' This refers to all who truly confess Christ."—Schaff.

Chap. XXVII.

Luke 12 : 7-11.

J.C. 33.

head are all numbered. Fear not therefore : ye are of more value than many sparrows. Also I say unto you, Whosoever shall confess me before men, him shall the Son of man also confess before the angels of God. But he that denieth me before men, shall be denied before the angels of God. And whosoever shall speak a word against the Son of man, it shall be forgiven him : but unto him that blasphemeth against the Holy Ghost, it shall not be forgiven. And when they bring you unto Fear not therefore, for his wisdom can not be surprised, his power can not be forced, his love can not forget itself.

“ A Power I can not understand
Is sheltering me with loving hand ;
It calls me by the dearest name,
My love to win, my fear to tame ;
Each day my daily food provides,
And night and day from danger hides
Me safe ; the food, the warmth I take,
Yet all the while ungrateful make Restless and piteous complaints,
And strive to break the kind restraints.”—H. Hunt Jackson.

Shall be denied before the angels.—“ Nothing can be more majestic than this view which Christ gives of himself. To be renounced by him is spoken of as a circumstance which would expose a man to the contempt of the whole angelic world, and leave him no remaining shelter of hope.”—Doddridge.

It shall not be forgiven.—There is a point in the soul's downward career when man cannot be forgiven, because he has then so abused his powers, and disorganized his nature, that he is no longer capable of restoration. “ Every time a man does wrong, that he yields to his lower propensities (in preference to his higher sentiments, where their impulses clash), he loses self-control ; he gives to his passions power over him ; he weakens (too) the practical supremacy of conscience, and becomes more perfectly a slave. The design of the Christian religion, in this respect, is to bring us under the dominion of conscience enlightened by revelation, and deliver us from the slavery of evil propensity” (for) “ by every act of vicious indulgence we give our passions more uncontrolled power over us, and diminish the power of reason and conscience, . . . according to the universal law of our faculties, that they are strengthened by use and weakened by disuse. . . . Thus, by every act of sin, we not only incur new guilt, the synagogues, and unto magistrates, and powers, take ye no thought how or what thing ye shall answer, or what ye shall say : for the Holy Ghost shall teach you in the same hour what ye ought to say.

And one of the company said unto him, Master, speak to my brother, that he divide the inheritance but we strengthen the bias toward sin, during the whole of our subsequent being. Hence every vicious act renders our return to virtue more difficult, and more hopeless. The tendency of such a course is to give to habit the power which ought to be exerted by our will. And hence it is not improbable that the conditions of our being may be such as to allow of arriving at a state in which reformation may be actually impossible. That the Holy Scriptures allude to such a condition (comp. Ex. 4 : 21 ; 14 : 4 ; Josh. 11 : 20 ; 1 Sam. 18 : 12 ; 28 : 6, etc.) during the present life, is evident. Such also is probably the condition of the wicked in another world."—Wayland.

One of the company.—Literally, "one out of the multitude." He had overheard the remarks addressed to the disciples, and "his request may have been suggested by our Lord's previous declarations about Providential care, or by his notion that the Messiah would set all things right. So that he manifested some confidence in the Lord by thus addressing him."—Schaff. "The man perceives Christ's moral power over men, and proposes to use it for his own personal benefit. It is this attempt to use Christ for a personal and pecuniary benefit which he rebukes. The fault, in a different form, is common in our own day."—Abbott. "We can not cast the first stone at this poor simpleton, who had no other use for the Redeemer's word than to gain by means of it a few more acres of the earth for himself ; in every age some men may be found who hang on the skirts of the church for the sake of some immediate temporal benefit."—Arnot.

That he divide the inheritance with me.—"According to the civil law of the Jews, the eldest brother received a double portion of the inheritance, burdened with the obligation of supporting his mother and unmarried sisters. As to the younger members, it would appear from the Parable of the Prodigal Son that the single share of property which accrued to them was sometimes paid in money. This man was perhaps one of these younger members, who was not satisfied with the sum allotted to him, or who, after having spent it, still claimed, under some pretext or other, a part of the patrimony."—Godet. "That he with me. And he said unto him, Man, who made me a judge, or a divider over you? And he said unto felt himself wronged is evident, and the outburst is true to nature."—Riddle. "Possibly he had an idea that the Messias, or the great Rabbi, to whom he was listening, was come to set all things right; and with that feeling which we all have of the surpassing injustice of our own wrongs, broke out with this inopportune request."—Alford.

Man, who made me a judge, or a divider.—"The original translated judge seems equivalent to arbitrator or referee. The word translated divider denotes a divider of an inheritance among the heirs."—Grotius. "We learn from Seneca that it was the law in his time for the elder brother to divide the inheritance, and the younger to take his choice of the portion."—Bloomfield. "The answer exhibits no personal displeasure against the bearer of the unseemly request, but only shows that the Saviour was by no means minded to enter upon a sphere which could not possibly be his own."—Van Oosterzee. "He declined here, as in every other case, to interfere in the affairs of civil life."—Trench. "It was not his office to determine the boundaries of civil right, nor to lay down the rules of the descent of property. Of course there was a spiritual and moral principle involved in this question; but he would not suffer his sublime mission to degenerate into the mere task of deciding casuistry. He asserted principles of love, unselfishness, order, which would decide all questions; but the questions themselves he would not decide. He would lay down the great political principle, 'Render unto Cæsar the things that be Cæsar's, and unto God the things which are God's;' but he would not determine whether a particular tax was due to Cæsar or not. So, too, he would say, justice, like mercy and truth, is one of the weightier matters of the law; but he would not decide whether, in this definite case, this or that brother had justice on his side. It was for themselves to determine that."—F. W. Robertson. "When Moses interfered between his brethren, he was reproached in language resembling this (Exod. 2 : 14). Christ declines to decide, or even discuss, a purely worldly case. Moses founded a state, Christ a spiritual kingdom. Hence Christ's ministers are not 'judges' in secular matters."—Riddle. And it is "not the business of the church to undertake the settlement of personal secular disputes. The attempt to do this in the middle ages brought corruption within and oppression without. His work and that of his followers is to instil such principles and produce such a spirit among men that they will peaceably settle their own disputes. There is nothing in 1 Cor. 6 : 1-8 incon-

Chap. XXVII.

Luke 12 : 15, 16.

J.C. 33.

them, 'Take heed, and beware of covetousness : for a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth. And he spake a parable unto them, saying, The ground of sistent with this view, for Paul there neither assumes to be judge nor advises the church to do so, but admonishes the members to settle their controversies by amicable arbitration."—Abbott.

Against Covetousness.

Take heed and beware.—"This double admonition indicates the dangerously subtle character of covetousness. It is a weed which checks the best grains in the best soils (Matt. 13 : 22)."—Abbott.

Of covetousness.—The best MSS. have "all"—that is, every kind of covetousness. "In the original the word is a very expressive one. It means the desire of having more—not of having more because there is not enough ; more when he has enough ; more, more, ever more."—F. W. Robertson. "A man may be said to be given to covetousness when his thoughts are wholly taken up about the world ; when he takes more pains for the getting of earth than for the getting of heaven ; when all his discourse is about the world ; when he doth so set his heart upon worldly things that for the sake of them he will part with the heavenly ; when he overloads himself with worldly business ; when his heart is so set upon the world that to get it he cares not what unlawful, indirect means he useth."—Richard Watson. "It was covetousness which caused the unjust brother to withhold ; it was covetousness which made the defrauded brother indignantly complain to a stranger. It is covetousness which is at the bottom of all lawsuits, all social grievances, all political factions. So St. James traces the genealogy (ch. 4 : 1). Covetousness : the covetousness of all ; of the oppressed as well as the oppressor : for the cry, 'Divide,' has its root in covetousness just as truly as 'I will not.'"—Robertson.

A man's life.—"Life is here used, agreeably to the Hebrew idiom, for 'happiness,' or 'the enjoyment of life.'"—Hewlett. "One's true life is blessedness."—Trench. "The word life is used in its pregnant sense, emphatically his life, including time and eternity. This is self-evident from the parable and its application."—Alford.

For a man's life consisteth not, etc.—"This clause, which is assigned as a reason for the caution, implies that the cause of all covetousness is a deteriorated moral sense, which regards possession as more than character, having as more than being. For a comparison of the two kinds of wealth—that of property and that of character—see 1 Tim. 6 : 9-11. The commonness of this disease a certain rich man brought forth plentifully : and he among men is indicated by the question so often asked, What is he worth? as though man's worth were measured by the value of the purse."—Abbott. "To the question, What is a man worth? the world replies by enumerating what he has; the Son of man, by estimating what he is. Not what he has, but what he is—that, through time and through eternity, is his real and proper life. He declared the presence of the soul; he announced the dignity of the spiritual man; he revealed the being that we are—not that which is supported by meat and drink, but that whose very life is in truth, integrity, honor, purity. The other brother had the inheritance; the price he paid for that advantage was a hard heart. The injured brother had no inheritance; but instead he had, or might have had, innocence and the conscious joy of knowing that he was not the injurer. The price which the rich man pays for his wealth is the temptation to be selfish. If you will be rich, you must be content to pay the price of falling into temptation and a snare, and many foolish and hurtful lusts. If that price be too high to pay, then you must be content with the quiet valleys of existence, where alone it is well with us; kept out of the inheritance, but having instead God for your portion, peace, and quietness, and rest with Christ."—Robertson.

A certain rich man.—"Jesus is accustomed to set in vivid contrast the appearances of the present and the realities of the future. It is this contrast which invests with a singular awe the simple story of the rich fool. He is a well-to-do and worldly-wise Peræan farmer. He has abundant land. His barns are bursting with plenty. His stores perplex him. 'What shall I do,' he says to himself, 'because I have no room where to bestow my fruits?' This is a very common trouble among capitalists. He does not know how to invest. He forms his resolution to pull down his barns and build greater. The thought of the needy and the suffering, and of the means of real usefulness to others which his possessions afford to him, has never occurred to his selfish soul. He has no other message to himself than, 'Take thine ease; eat, drink, and be merry.' He will, that is, retire on his fortune. To men he seems wise, prudent, sagacious. God calls him to his account with a sharp rebuke of his folly: 'Fool! this night thy soul shall be required of thee. Then whose shall those things be which thou hast provided?' Not every one is wise who knows how to acquire. He only is truly wise who knows how to impart.'"—Abbott's "Jesus of Nazareth." "Some men are called sagacious merely on account of their avarice, whereas a child can clench its fist the moment it is born."—Shenstone.

thought within himself, saying, What shall I do, because I have no room where to bestow my fruits? And he said, This will I do : I will pull down my barns, and build greater ; and there will I bestow all my fruits and my goods. And I will say to my soul, Soul, thou hast Brought forth plentifully.—"By God's blessing, not by fraud or injustice, did this man's wealth increase. The seeming innocence of the process is its danger ; there is nothing to awaken qualms of conscience as his possessions increase."—Schaff.

He thought within himself.—"The curtain is here drawn back, and we are admitted into the inner council-chamber of a worldling's heart, rejoicing over his abundance, and realizing to the very letter the making 'provision for the flesh to fulfill the lusts thereof.'"—Trench.

What shall I do?—"He does not appear as a grasping speculator, but as one whom wealth, by a very natural process, has made discontented, anxious, and perplexed."—Schaff.

No room where to bestow my fruits.—"Thou hast barns—the bosoms of the needy, the houses of the widows, the mouths of orphans and of infants."—Ambrose. "The poor man's hand is the treasury of Christ. All my superfluity shall be there hoarded up, where I know it will be safely kept and surely returned to me."—Bishop Hall.

This will I do, etc.—"He proposed to do just what every man of ordinary business sagacity would do. He was not a 'fool' from a commercial point of view. He represents the great mass of successful men."—Schaff.

I will pull down my barns.—"Barns are depositories and granaries. Those in the East are pits built under ground, with an opening at the top. In these the grain could be stored so as to be more safe, both from thieves and from vermin. We found them often open like a coal-vault, near the road. He proposes to enlarge these pits by pulling down the walls or sides and extending them."—Jacobus.

There will I bestow all my fruits.—"My grain" in the best MSS. Thus far his language is that of worldly prudence ; but it soon degenerates into a desire for ease and sensual gratification. "If any one spoke to him about it he would probably, in hypocrisy and thanklessness, say something about the 'blessing of God ;' but what he says to himself runs quite differently—he calls it my fruits ; thinks only of the field and its produce instead of thinking on God ; rests in the my without any thought of his neighbor."—Stier.

much goods laid up for many years ; take thine ease, eat, drink, and be merry. But God said unto him, Thou fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee :

Soul . . . take thine ease, eat, drink, and be merry.—"His plans of felicity, it may be observed, rise no higher than to this satisfying of the flesh ; so that there is an irony as melancholy as it is profound in making him address this speech, not to his body, but to his soul."—Trench. "When men retire from active life, to rest on their wealth, idleness proves as disquieting as business. In their unrest and dissatisfaction they too often begin to revel, as this man would do, to have occupation. The soul is made to find rest and delight in God ; forgetting him in selfishness, there is nothing left for it but some such unsatisfying gratification as this. The form of sensuality in many cases may be more refined—may even call itself love of art—but the nature of it remains the same. The godless rich man must sooner or later become a sensualist. Vers. 16-19 form a most graphic picture of a worldly life. Its sinfulness is the more insidious when not outwardly immoral. Modern materialism can offer the soul nothing better than this. The picture is true to life, though sometimes two generations are required to fill it out ; the father gathering, the son saying, 'Soul, take thine ease,' etc. Novelists are continually expanding these verses into volumes, but they too often fail to show the true nature of covetousness."—Riddle.

"Nor man nor nature satisfy Whom only God created."—Mrs. Browning.

But God said.—Not by any direct communication to him ; the language is dramatic and parabolic.

Thou fool.—Unthinking one. "The Greek word so translated means, literally, without mind, or sense, or understanding. Let us mark that just when the rich man was scheming cunningly, and thinking himself very wise, God says to him, 'Thou fool.'"—Ryle. "This title is opposed to the opinion of his own prudence and foresight which he entertained ; 'this night,' to the many years that he promised to himself ; and that 'soul,' which he purposed to nourish and make fat, it is declared shall be inexorably 'required' and painfully rendered up."—Trench. "The man whom all the world praises as shrewd and sagacious is often the one whom God calls 'fool ;' the man whom all the world calls rich and prosperous is the one whom God calls poverty-stricken (Rev. 3 : 17)."—Abbott. "1. He was a fool in that he failed to lay up treasure in heaven. 2. A fool in that he failed to be thankful to God. 3. A fool in thinking his soul

Chap. XXVII.

Luke 12 : 20, 21.

J.C. 33.

then whose shall those things be which thou hast provided? So is he that layeth up treasure for himself, and is not rich toward God.

would be satisfied with worldly goods. 4. A fool in counting on many years of life. 5. A fool in thinking his soul his own. 6. A fool in trusting to uncertain riches, which may take to themselves wings and fly away."—Eggleston.

This night thy soul shall be required of thee.—Literally, "This night thy soul they shall require of thee." "They are God's ministering angels, whose demands the poor rich fool can not resist."—Abbott.

Then whose shall those things be?—"The dissipation of wealth on the death of the possessor is one of the common experiences of life. To guard against it has been one of the great objects of men, the most successful method being by the law of primogeniture and entail. This dissipation of wealth is elsewhere in Scripture urged as an argument against setting the heart on earthly accumulation (Eccles. 2 : 18-21 ; Ps. 39 : 6 ; Jer. 17 : 11)."—Abbott. "Inherited riches are rarely a blessing, and the strife among heirs in answering this very clause is one of the saddest pages of social life."—Schaff.

So is he that layeth up treasure for himself, and is not rich toward God, "or does not enrich himself toward God. Self and God are here contemplated as the two poles between which the soul is placed, for one or other of which it must determine, and then make that one the end of all its aims and efforts."—Trench. "This is the character of him who gives nothing to God's glory—neither money, affection, thought, time, nor interest; plenty to give to the world, but nothing to give to God. Those are the truly rich, who have property which will be recognized at the day of judgment. Many owners of millions are paupers before God."—Ryle. "The evil is not in the treasure nor in laying up treasure, but in laying up treasure for himself. Worldliness springs from selfishness, and the sin is in the selfishness. But the selfishness springs from godlessness, as the next clause shows. It is from a case like this, where the person condemned is honest, respectable, and prosperous, that we learn what Christ thinks of sin. It is devotion to self, not to God. Hence laying up treasure for self is a sin, in Christ's view no less than open crime."—Riddle. "I can not call riches better than the baggage of virtue, for as the baggage is to an army, so is riches to virtue; it can not be spared nor left behind, but it hindereth the march; yea, and the care of it sometimes loseth or disturbeth the victory. Of great riches there is no real use,

And he said unto his disciples, Therefore I say unto except it be in the distribution ; the rest is but conceit. So saith Solomon, 'Where much is, there are many to consume it ; and what hath the owner but the sight of it with his eyes?' The personal fruition in any man can not reach to feel great riches ; there is a custody of them, or a power of dole and donation of them, or a fame of them, but no solid use to the owner."—Lord Bacon. "Let a man have all the world can give him, if he has a groveling, unlettered, undevout mind ; let him have his gardens, his fields, his woods, and his lawns, for grandeur, ornament, plenty, and gratification, while at the same time God is not in all his thoughts ; and let another have neither field nor garden ; let him only look at nature with an enlightened mind—a mind which can see and adore the Creator in his works, can consider them as demonstrations of his power, his wisdom, his goodness, and truth—this man is greater, as well as happier, in his poverty than the other in his riches."—William Jones (of Nayland). "The worldly spirit makes possession the object of life. Christ makes being, character, the object. The world asks, 'What do you possess?' God asks, 'What are you?' A gentleman once said to a wicked man, 'You do not look as if you had prospered by your wickedness.' 'I have not prospered at it,' cried the man. 'With half the time and energy I have spent, I might have been a man of property and character. But I am a homeless wretch ; twice I have been in State prison. I have made acquaintance with all sorts of miseries ; but I tell you, my worst punishment is in being what I am.' Without doubt it would be delightful to have the possessions of an angel ; but it would be ten thousand times better to be an angel. Not what have I, but what am I ? not what shall I gain, but what shall I be ? is the true question of life."—Peloubet.

"Just as if death were near, enjoy thy wealth :

Be frugal, as if sure of years of health :

Sparing or spending, be thy wisdom seen

In keeping always to the golden mien."—William Hay.

And he said unto his disciples.—"Nearly all the teachings which follow in this chapter are found in Matthew in other connections, but with more or less difference in phraseology. There is nothing in Luke's language here, as there was in ver. 1, to indicate the time or place of these sayings of our Lord, and whether they belong to his Perea ministry, and were repetitions of what he had previously taught in Galilee, or whether Luke, in ignorance of or indifference to, the time and place of their utterance, has put them here, is a question neither easy nor important to be determined in respect to most of them."—Abbott. But

Chap. XXVII.

Luke 12 : 22, 23.

J.C. 33.

you, 'Take no thought for your life, what ye shall eat ; neither for the body, what ye shall put on. The life is more than meat, and the body is more than raiment.

the connection of these passages with what precedes is close, and, though previously spoken, they were peculiarly applicable to this occasion. One reason, doubtless, for the wonderful verbal agreement in the various reports of our Lord's discourses found in the Synoptic Gospels, was the fact that his frequent repetition of the same ideas in nearly the same words impressed them indelibly on the minds of his disciples.

Therefore, "since worldly riches are of so little use, be not anxious. God who cares for your higher life will provide for the lower, and since he provides food for the ravens and clothing for the lilies, he will certainly, being a Father, provide for you, his children."—Schaff. "Our Lord having thus warned his hearers against covetousness, and knowing how often it springs from a distrust in God's providential care, goes on to teach them where they may find that which shall be the best preservative against all such over-anxious thoughts for the future—namely, in the assurance of the love and care of a heavenly Father (verses 22-30), so that the connection is as close as it is beautiful between this parable and the instructions which immediately follow."—Trench.

Take no thought.—"Take not anxious thought."—Alford. "Keep ever before you a firm intention of serving God always and with your whole heart, and then 'take no thought for the morrow.' Only strive to do your very best 'to-day.' When to-morrow arrives, it will have become 'to-day,' and then it will be time enough to take thought for it. In all such matters we must have absolute trust and confidence in God ; we must gather our provision of manna for the day that is passing, no more, never doubting but that God will send it again to-morrow, and the next day, and as long as we need it."—Francis de Sales. Almost exactly parallel is Matt. 6 : 24-34. (See notes on page 193).

The life is more than meat.—"If he can give you life, he can give you means to support it ; and would he furnish the greater, and not the less ? The idea is, that he has given you life and a body, without your care. He will give you food and raiment, which are the lesser gifts."—Jacobus. "As the life is more than meat which serves it, and the body than raiment which clothes it, so the soul is more than either ; for both life and body exist only for the development of the soul. But our anxieties are not for the soul, but only about the outer things—the mere food and raiment."—Abbott.

Consider the ravens : for they neither sow nor reap : which neither have storehouse, nor barn ; and God feedeth them. How much more are ye better than the fowls ? And which of you with taking thought can add to his stature one cubit ? If ye then be not able to do that thing which is least, why take ye thought for the rest ? Consider the lilies how they grow : Against Worldly Carefulness. they toil not, they spin not ; and yet I say unto you, that Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these. If then God so clothe the grass, which is to-day in the field, and to-morrow is cast into the oven, how much more will he clothe you, O ye of little faith ? And seek not ye what ye shall eat, or what ye shall drink, neither be ye of doubtful mind. For all these things do the nations of the world seek after : and your Father knoweth that ye have need Consider the ravens.—"The ravens are often spoken of in Scripture as objects of the divine care. (See Job 38 : 41 ; Ps. 147 : 9.) The term raven includes the crow, rook, jackdaw, and the like. There is special significance in these references, since 'every raven after his kind' was unclean (Lev. 11 : 15)."—Abbott. "It is a fact that God's care is more evident in some instances of it than in others to the dim and often bewildered vision of humanity. Upon such instances men seize, and call them Providences. It is well that they can ; but it would be gloriously better if they could believe that the whole matter is one grand Providence."—George Macdonald.

Neither be ye of doubtful mind.—"The word in the original is derived from 'meteor,' and is explained by some : do not rise in fancy to high demands, creating imagined necessities, thus making yourselves more ill-contented and more disposed to unbelieving anxiety. Others interpret (as in E. V.) : do not be fluctuating—that is, anxious, tossed between hope and fear. This suits the connection, but is a less usual sense."—Schaff. "Literally, raised in the air. The same metaphor is common in the English ; the phrase might well be rendered, Be not in suspense. Religious indecision Christ condemns."—Abbott.

of these things. But rather seek ye the kingdom of God, and all these things shall be added unto you.

Fear not, little flock ; for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom. Sell that ye have,

All these things shall be added unto you.—He gives food to animals, he clothes the flowers in beauty : how much more will he feed and clothe his children ! (Compare Rom. 8 : 32.) " In the example borrowed from nature, it is important to mark how all the figures employed—sowing, reaping, storehouse, barn—are connected with the Parable of the Foolish Rich Man. All these labors, all these provisions, in the midst of which the rich man died—the ravens knew nothing of them ; and yet they live ! The will of God is thus a surer guaranty of existence than the possession of superabundance."—Godet. The truth is plain, easily proven, but the lesson of trust is hard to learn. Many Christians have obtained the mastery over other sins, but fail even to recognize this sin. " You turn it exactly round : food is meant to serve life, but life forsooth serves food ; clothes are to serve the body, but the body forsooth must serve the clothing ; and so blind is the world that it sees not this."—Luther. " Anxiety about these things is akin to covetousness ; the one forgets to trust God, the other trusts wealth instead of God. Both are dangerous, because insidious, and not linked directly with what is in itself evil. Hence these are likely to be the besetting sins of Christians."—Riddle.

Fear not, little flock.—Campbell renders this, "My little flock," which is expressive of tenderness at the same time that it suggests the actually small number of the disciples. But, few as they were, to them would be given the kingdom ; first, in themselves, and then throughout the world. The grain of mustard seed was yet to grow, till its branches should overshadow the earth. " In the ever-proceeding warfare of good against evil, right against wrong, truth against error, there can be no real defeat, no absolute discomfiture."—Horace Greeley.

Sell what ye have, and give alms.—" Comp. Matt. 6 : 19-21 ; but this is stronger. The connection of thought is with ver. 17 (' what shall I do ? '), telling how earthly riches should be invested. But there is also a close connection with what precedes : Since God provides for our temporal wants as well as our higher spiritual ones, use his temporal gifts so as to promote your spiritual welfare. The first, but not exclusive, application is to the apostles, who must be thus unencumbered in their ministry. If this course of conduct promoted their spiritual welfare, it will that of all Christians. The precept will not be and give alms : provide yourselves bags which wax not old, a treasure in the heavens that faileth not, where no thief approacheth, neither moth corrupteth. For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also. Let your loins be girded about, and your lights burning ; and ye yourselves like unto men that wait for their lord, when he will return from the wedding ;

 On Watchfulness. that, when he cometh and knocketh, they may open unto him immediately. Blessed are those servants, whom the lord when he cometh shall find understood too literally, except by those who apply it only to ascetics who assume vows of poverty. Our Lord's words are diametrically opposed to modern socialism. The latter would make laws to take away wealth, the former inculcate love that gives away."—Schaff.

Bags which wax not old.—Alluding to the danger of losing money out of a hole worn in an old purse, which was attached to the girdle. Such is frequently the gain of this world, and so are its treasures hoarded up and put into "a bag with holes" (Haggai 1 : 6). "There is no use of money equal to that of beneficence ; here the enjoyment grows on reflection."—Henry Mackenzie. "Men resemble the gods in nothing so much as in doing good to their fellow-creatures."—Cicero.

Let your loins be girded about.—"The long Oriental robe requires to be taken up and the skirt fastened under the girdle to allow freedom in walking. The lesson is that he is best prepared for death who is always ready for Christian work."—Abbott.

And the lights burning.—"As interpreted by Matt. 25 : 3-8, the lesson is that only he is prepared for either death or work who is supplied with the oil of divine grace."—Abbott.

That wait for their Lord.—"There is a slight reference to, or rather another presentation of, the truth set forth in the Parable of the Virgins. But the image here is of servants waiting for their Lord to return from the wedding ; left at home and bound to be in readiness to receive him. . . . The main thought here only is that he is away at a feast, and will return. But in the background lies the wedding in all its truth—not brought out here, but elsewhere."—Alford.

May open unto him immediately.—"The Christian must be ready for the summons whenever it comes ; he must need no special preparation for death."—Abbott.

Chap. XXVII.

Luke 12 : 37-42.

J.C. 33.

watching : verily I say unto you, that he shall gird himself, and make them to sit down to meat, and will come forth and serve them. And if he shall come in the second watch, or come in the third watch, and find them so, blessed are those servants. And this know, that if the good man of the house had known what hour the thief would come, he would have watched, and not have suffered his house to be broken through. Be ye therefore ready also : for the Son of man cometh at an hour when ye think not.

Then Peter said unto him, Lord, speakest thou this parable unto us, or even to all? And the Lord said, Come forth and serve them.—"See Rev. 3 : 20, 21, where the same similitude is presented, and the promise carried on yet further—to the sharing of his throne. The Lord himself in that great day of his glory—the marriage-supper of the Lamb—will invert the order of human requirements, and in the fullness of his grace and love will serve his brethren. Compare the washing of the disciples' feet in John 13 : 1, which was a foreshadowing of the last great act of self-abasing love."—Alford.

In the second watch—in the third watch (from 9 P.M. to 3 A.M.).—"The first and fourth watches are not mentioned (as in Mark 13 : 35). The middle watches are the time of soundest sleep. Even if our Lord delays longer than the servants thought, a faithful servant can thus show his fidelity."—Schaff. "Weddings were then generally celebrated at night, and the return of the guests might be uncertain ; the servants, therefore, when waiting for their master, must watch, that they might open to him without delay."—Scott.

But know this, etc.—A new figure (of the thief in the night) brings out the unexpected return. (See Matt. 24 : 43, 44.)

To us, or even to all?—"The question was probably put in a wrong spirit, with reference to the high reward promised, rather than to the duty enjoined. The language is so characteristic of Peter as to furnish striking evidence of the accuracy of Luke."—Schaff. "Jesus continues his teaching as if he took no account of Peter's question ; but in reality he gives such a turn to the warning which follows about watchfulness that it includes the precise answer to the question."—Godet.

Chap. XXVII.

Luke 12 : 42-47.

J.C. 33.

Who then is that faithful and wise steward, whom his lord shall make ruler over his household, to give them their portion of meat in due season? Blessed is that servant, whom his lord when he cometh shall find so doing. Of a truth I say unto you, that he will make him ruler over all that he hath. But and if that servant say in his heart, My lord delayeth his coming; and shall begin to beat the men-servants, and maidens, and to eat and drink, and to be drunken; the lord of that servant will come in a day when he looketh not for him, and at an hour when he is not aware, and will cut him in sunder, and will appoint him his portion with the unbelievers. And that servant which knew his lord's will, and prepared not himself,

Cut him in sunder.—“Cutting asunder was a method of putting criminals to death which prevailed among the Chaldeans and Persians, and consisted in having the left hand and right foot, or right hand and left foot, or both feet and hands, cut off at the joints (Dan. 2 : 5; Matt. 24 : 51).”—Fahn. Sometimes it was done by the sword, sometimes by saws. It was practiced among the Hebrews (1 Sam. 15 : 33; 1 Kings 3 : 25; Heb. 11 : 37), and also among the Egyptians and Romans. Isaiah is reported to have been sawn asunder. Some suppose that the sense here simply is, shall deprive him of his office, and cut him off from the family. In reference to this passage, Schaff remarks: “Extreme punishment is here meant, but the peculiar expression indicates something further—a fearful separating of the conscience and the conduct, so that the condemning power of the former is a constant scourge against the continued evil of the latter. This will be a terrible element of future retribution.”

With the unbelievers.—Literally, the unfaithful.

And that servant which knew his Lord's will . . . shall be beaten with many stripes. The Jews did not inflict more than forty stripes for one offence (Deut. 25 : 3). For smaller offences they inflicted four, five, six, or more, according to the nature of the crime. “The last clause of ver. 48 affords the key to the interpretation of this confessedly difficult passage. The principle which Christ here annunciates as that on which God will act in the day of judgment is that which men recognize as just, and

Chap. XXVII.

Luke 12 : 47-49.

J.C. 33.

neither did according to his will, shall be beaten with many stripes. But he that knew not, and did commit things worthy of stripes, shall be beaten with few stripes. For unto whomsoever much is given, of him shall be much required ; and to whom men have committed much, of him they will ask the more.

I am come to send fire on the earth, and what will I, upon which they act in their dealings with one another. This principle is that guilt is according to the knowledge of the criminal. The language of the whole passage is relative. No one perfectly comprehends his Lord's will ; no one is without some knowledge of it ; absolute ignorance would be a perfect palliation, but ignorance never is absolute. That servant which knew his Lord's will is, primarily, he that lives in the light of revelation ; he that knew not, the heathen ; but there are degrees of knowledge in Christendom, and he that knows is the educated ; he that knows not, he that has been brought up in an atmosphere of ignorance, superstition, and crime. The whole passage is interpreted by Rom. 2 : 6-23. "The severity of God only endures till the sinner is brought to recognize his guilt ; it is indeed, like Joseph's harshness with his brethren, nothing more than love in disguise ; and having done its work, having brought him to the acknowledgment of his guilt and misery, reappears as grace again, granting him more than even he had dared to ask or hope, loosing the bands of his sins, and letting him go free."—Trench. "God himself, we have always understood, hates sin with a most authentic, celestial, and eternal hatred—a hatred, a hostility, inexorable, unappeasable, which blasts the scoundrel, and all scoundrels ultimately, into black annihilation and disappearance from the sum of things. The path of it is the path of a flaming sword ; he that has eyes may see it, walking inexorable, divinely beautiful and divinely terrible, through the chaotic gulf of Human History, and everywhere burning, as with unquenchable fire, the false and the deadworthy from the true and lifeworthy, making all human history, and the biography of every man, a God's Cosmos, in place of a Devil's Chaos. So it is in the end ; even so, to every man who is a man, and not a mutinous beast, and has eyes to see."—Thomas Carlyle.

I am come to send fire.—"I think it clear that fire here symbolizes, not, as Alford, following the older commentators, the gift of the Holy Ghost, but conflict and persecution. This is indicated (1) by the connection ; Christ is speaking here, not

Chap. XXVII.

Luke 12 : 49-51.

J.C. 33.

if it be already kindled? But I have a baptism to be baptized with; and how am I straitened till it be accomplished! Suppose ye that I am come to give peace on earth? I tell you, Nay; of the coming of the Holy Ghost, but of the divisions which were not merely an incident, but one of the objects of his ministry, the fan by which he is ever separating the wheat from the chaff, and which is one of the 'all things' that work together for the good of them that love God; (2) by the peculiar force of the language, which is not I am come to send fire, but I am come to cast fire, or, as Godet, to throw a firebrand; (3) by the very passages to which Alford refers in support of the other interpretation. In Matt. 3 : 16, John the Baptist speaks of the Holy Ghost and fire, a clear indication that the fire was not, as used by him, a symbol for the Holy Ghost, but for the persecution and the trial which would consume the dross and purify the gold."—Abbott on Luke. "Christianity, as a powerful stimulus applied to the human mind, first develops all the tendencies of the soul; and afterward, by its atoning influence on the heart, reconciles them. Christ is the Prince of Peace. He came to make peace between man and God, between man and man, between law and love, reason and faith, freedom and order, progress and conservatism. But he first sends the sword, afterward the olive-branch. Nevertheless, universal unity is the object and end of Christianity."—James Freeman Clarke.

And what will I if it be already kindled?—"The utterance is broken in the original, and betokens a conflict of soul, like that in John 12 : 27, 28. In the opposition by the Pharisees (ch. 11 : 53, 54), Christ perceives the beginning of this fire; conflicting emotions, of sorrow in the present and prospective conflicts, and joy in their final result, find an utterance in this language of perplexity. What will I—that is, what more would I, since it is already kindled? This interpretation is confirmed by the language of the next verse."—Abbott.

I have a baptism to be baptized with.—The same baptism of fire which he was to minister to his church through the ages that waited for his second coming.

And how am I straitened till it be accomplished!—"Either urged on, or distressed, perplexed. The original will bear either translation. The latter seems to me to be preferable. Every glimpse into the future, every view of that load of sin and sorrow which was laid on him for us all, produced in a measure that inexplicable experience of anguish which was consummated in

Chap. XXVII.

Luke 12 : 51-57.

J.C. 33.

but rather division : for from henceforth there shall be five in one house divided, three against two, and two against three. The father shall be divided against the son, and the son against the father ; the mother against the daughter, and the daughter against the mother ; the mother-in-law against her daughter-in-law, and the daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law.

And he said also to the people, When ye see a cloud rise out of the west, straightway ye say, There cometh a shower ; and so it is. And when ye see the south wind blow, ye say, There will be heat ; and it cometh to pass. Ye hypocrites, ye can discern the face of the sky, and of the earth ; but how is it, that ye do not discern this time ? Yea, and why even of yourselves judge Gethsemane, and in the cry upon the cross, ' My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me ? ' We must never forget that he bore our sins and sufferings, not in his body only or chiefly, but in his heart."—Abbott.

But rather division.—" Opposition and war are not the right fruits of the Gospel any more than ivy is the fruit of the oak-tree, though it creep upon it. But, presupposing the malice and corruption of men, the tidings of salvation, though they exhort unto peace, yet they will beget division : for Satan reigns in the wicked, and it makes him rage to hear celestial doctrine preached ; and that impiety, which was asleep before, is roused with the noise of the Gospel and grows tumultuous : this is an accidental misfortune, not a proper effect."—Bishop Hacket.

A cloud rise out of the west.—" The cloud," alluding to a well-known phenomenon, regarded as a certain prognostic of rainy weather. We learn both from Scripture (see 1 Kings 18 : 44) and from the accounts of travelers in the East that a small cloud, like a man's hand, is often the forerunner of violent storms of wind and rain. In Judea the west wind, blowing from the sea, usually brought rain. The connection with what precedes is close : the discord as already begun arises from the fact that the mass of the people do not discern the time.

And why even of yourselves.—" The connection appears to me to be as follows : If you were wise you would see the signs of destructive storm gathering to overwhelm this nation, and

Chap. XXVII.

Luke 12 : 57-59.

J.C. 33.

ye not what is right ? When thou goest with thine adversary to the magistrate, as thou art in the way, give diligence that thou mayest be delivered from him ; lest he hale thee to the judge, and the judge deliver thee to the officer, and the officer cast thee into prison. I tell thee, thou shalt not depart thence, till thou hast paid the very last mite.

would avoid the impending doom. But why, apart from these considerations, do you not of yourselves judge and do what is right."—Abbott.

When thou goest with thine adversary, etc.—" See Matt. 5 : 25, 26. But the phraseology, and I think the application, is different in the two passages. Here the adversary is the Roman Government ; it brings the Jewish nation really to the bar of God, who is the magistrate ; wisdom would dictate that the Jews should seek diligently to be delivered from him, in this case not, as in Matthew, by agreeing with the adversary (Matt. 5 : 25), but by securing the approving judgment of the Divine magistrate, by of their selves judging and doing what is right. If this interpretation be correct, the passage points out the true way of national safety in all times of national danger."—Abbott.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

JESUS JOURNEYS TOWARD JERUSALEM.

THERE were present at that season some that told him of the Galileans, whose blood Pilate had mingled with their sacrifices. And Jesus answering, said unto them, Suppose ye that these Slaughter of Galileans.
 Galileans were sinners above all the Galileans, because

There were present.—"At that very season," is the literal rendering. Probably at the close of the discourse recorded in the last chapter.

Some that told him.—"The eagerness of men to be the first narrators of evil tidings—an eagerness which can only spring from a certain secret pleasure in them, though that be most often unacknowledged, even to themselves—was perhaps what moved some of those present to tell the Lord of a new outrage which Pilate had committed. These persons understood rightly that he was speaking, in the words which conclude the last chapter, of the severe judgments which men bring upon themselves through their sins; but, as is generally the manner of men, instead of applying these words to their own consciences, they made application of them only to others."—Trench.

Of the Galileans whose blood Pilate had mingled, etc.—"The historical fact is otherwise unknown. It must have occurred at some feast in Jerusalem, when riots often took place, and in the outer court of the temple. Such slaughters were frequent, and would not be particularly recorded by historians."—Alford. Josephus relates that Archelaus, the son of Herod the Great, put to death three thousand Jews whilst they were sacrificing in the temple.

Suppose ye that these Galileans were sinners, etc.—"Those who told of the massacre thought that death under such circumstances was peculiarly terrible; and from this they inferred that these Galileans had been great sinners. Our Lord perceives their reasoning, and first corrects the mistake they made, adding an appropriate warning. He does not deny that they were sinners; but only that their fate proved them to be especially great sinners. Job's friends made the same mistake."—Schaff.

they suffered such things? I tell you, Nay : but, except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish.

Or those eighteen, upon whom the tower in Siloam fell, and slew them, think ye that they were sinners

Except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish.—These words were literally fulfilled in the destruction which fell upon the Jewish people during the war with the Romans, about forty years after this time ; particularly at the taking of Jerusalem, when many thousands perished, like these Galileans, in the temple, and round the altar, by the hands of the Roman soldiers : when Jerusalem was overthrown, and the nation itself perished.

Those eighteen.—"An allusion to an occurrence then well known, but about which we have no further information."—Schaff.

The tower in Siloam.—"Probably a tower of the city wall near the pool of Siloam, or in that district, which may have been called by the name of the pool mentioned in John 9 : 7. The village named 'Silwân' occupies the site of the ancient suburb where the valley of Tyropœon opens into that of the Kidron."—Schaff.

Offenders.—"Literally, 'debtors' (not the same word as in ver. 2), as in the Lord's prayer (Matt. 6 : 12) ; there is no reason for supposing that they were actual debtors imprisoned in the tower. This accident (as it is supposed to have been) is classed by our Lord with the slaughter by Pilate. All such events are under God's control. He is just in permitting them, but we are unjust in drawing uncharitable inferences from them."—Schaff. Jesus was probably now on the borders of Judea, and these remarks were addressed to Jews, who despised Galileans. He reminds them that a like calamity had also befallen themselves—even "dwellers in Jerusalem"—and predicts that unless they repent, the entire nation will perish in a similar manner. And the threatened destruction did come upon "all," since during the siege the city was full of people from the provinces ; and multitudes perished amid the ruin and rubbish of the city and its falling walls. The following passage from Josephus, who was an eye-witness, is a striking comment on this prediction : "One faction of the zealots made themselves masters of the inner court of the temple, the other of the outer, whence they annoyed the former with their military engines, from which the darts were shot with such force that they reached the altar, and even the temple itself, and struck both the priests and the sacrificers ; so that many who had come hither from the extremities of the earth did themselves fall before their sacrifices, and sprinkled with their own

Chap. XXVIII.

Luke 13 : 4-8.

J.C. 33.

above all men that dwelt in Jerusalem? I tell you, Nay : but, except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish.

He spake also this parable : A certain man had a fig tree planted in his vineyard ; and he came and sought fruit thereon, and found none. Then said he unto the dresser of his vineyard, Be- hold, these three years I come seeking fruit on this fig tree, and find none : cut it down ; why cumbereth it the ground ?

Parable of Barren
Fig Tree.

And he answering said unto him, Lord, let it alone this year also, till I shall dig about it, and dung it.

blood that holy altar. Then were the bodies of aliens mixed with those of the Jews, and the bodies of the priests with those of the profane ; and the blood, flowing from all kinds of carcasses, stood in pools within the sacred precincts of the temple."

The fig-tree is exhaustive of the soil, and very difficult of cultivation. To make it produce well it is necessary to plow and dig about it frequently, and to manure the roots thoroughly.

Vine dresser.—The cultivator of the vineyard.

These three years.—The planted tree would ordinarily yield fruit within three years. "Three years are the time of a full trial, at the end of which the inference of incurable sterility may be drawn."—Godet. "Some refer this to the three years of our Lord's ministry, now so nearly ended."—Schaff.

Cut it down.—St. Basil remarks on this passage : "This is peculiar to the clemency of God toward men, that he does not bring in punishment silently or secretly ; but by his threatenings first proclaims them to be at hand, thus inviting sinners to repentance."

Why cumbereth it the ground?—"The 'cumbering' the ground implies something more than that it occupied the place which might have been filled by another and fruit-bearing tree ; the barren tree injured the land, spreading injurious shade, and drawing off to itself the fatness and nourishment that should have gone to the trees that would have made a return."—Trench. "No man is merely useless. Like the unfruitful tree, he is a despoiler if he be not a fruit-bearer."—Abbott.

Till I shall dig about it, and dung it.—That is, "hollow out the earth from about the stem, filling up the space with manure, as one may now see done to the orange trees in the south of Italy."—Trench.

And if it bear fruit, well : and if not, then after that thou shalt cut it down.

After that thou shalt cut it down.—“ The period of grace is also one of probation ; if the divine grace proves inefficacious, the unfruitful shall be destroyed. It seems to me impossible to reconcile Christ’s language in the preceding instruction and in this parable, with the idea of a universal restoration. . . . The attempt to answer specifically the question, What is the fig-tree, what the vineyard, who the owner, who the dresser of the vineyard, etc., is worse than in vain. The beauty of the allegory is destroyed by this attempt to press to a literal interpretation all its details. But the following hints are clear : 1. The imagery is borrowed from the parable, familiar to Christ’s auditors, in Isaiah 5 : 1-7, and from other uses in the Old Testament of the same figure, likening God’s people to a tree in a vineyard. 2. The fig-tree in a vineyard points rather to an individual in a favored community, enjoying the means of grace and spiritual culture, than to a nation (the Jewish) in the world. 3. It is therefore primarily an admonition to the individual Jew, who was planted in the midst of God’s special people, prided himself on that fact, and yet brought forth no fruit ; but, secondarily, and with equal force, it applies to the individual of our own day, in the midst of a Christian community, enjoying Christian advantages, but bringing forth in life and character no Christian fruit to God’s glory or man’s benefit. 4. It emphasizes the truth, so often inculcated by Christ, that the test, and the only test, of character, is fruit-bearing ; and though Christ does not here indicate what are Christian fruits, they are abundantly and clearly indicated elsewhere. (See especially Gal. 5 : 22, 23.) 5. It illustrates the patience and long suffering of God toward us—his waiting to be gracious, and it emphasizes this truth by its solemn close : If not, then after that thou shalt cut it down. For the divine grace is not ignorance, indifference, or unconcern, as is shown by the certainty of divine judgment on the finally unfruitful.”—Abbott. Greswell, understanding the parable to apply to the Jewish nation, sees in it a foreshadowing of the curse inflicted, some few months later, upon the barren fig-tree near Jerusalem. The parable is related only by Luke, the curse inflicted on the living tree only by Matthew and Mark. Greswell says : “ The fig-tree on mount Olivet, and the fig-tree in the parable, bear the same typical relation ; and the curse pronounced upon the former is but the execution of the sentence which had been already passed upon the latter, and only for a time suspended ” (Vol. I., Diss. 1, p. 25.)

Chap. XXVIII.

Luke 13 : 10-14.

J.C. 33.

And he was teaching in one of the synagogues on the Sabbath. And behold, there was a woman which had a spirit of infirmity eighteen years, and was bowed together, and could in no wise lift up herself. And when Jesus saw her, he called her to him, and said unto her, Woman, thou art loosed from thine infirmity. And he laid his hands on her : and immediately she was made straight, and glorified God.

And the ruler of the synagogue answered with indignation, because that Jesus had healed on the Sabbath day, and said unto the people, There are six days in which men ought to work : in them therefore come and be healed, and not on the Sabbath day.

In one of the synagogues.—There is no notice of Christ's teaching in a synagogue after the delivery of the discourse in John 6 : 22-71, which occurred about the time of the previous Passover. Hence it has been inferred that the increasing opposition of the Pharisees had succeeded in excluding him, perhaps by a formal excommunication, from the local houses of worship throughout Galilee. If this inference be correct, it is an additional evidence that he was now in Perea, where, if his enemies were as violent, they were not as well organized as in Galilee.

A spirit of infirmity.—This suggests a form of demoniacal possession ; and ver. 16 seems to expressly state that Satanic influence had produced her infirmity. Our Lord, however, did not heal demoniacs by laying on of hands, but by a word of command ; and it may be that he here spoke only in accordance with the current thought of the time, which attributed nearly all diseases to the influence of evil spirits. The case was apparently one of paralysis.

He called to her, and said to her.—"This miracle is peculiar, in that there is no evidence of any act of faith on the part of the woman. It can hardly be inferred, from ver. 14, that she came for the purpose of being healed."—Abbott.

The ruler of the Synagogue.—"The president of the college of elders, who answered in some respects to the pastor of a modern church, but was more an executive officer and less a teacher."—Abbott.

The Lord then answered him, and said, Thou hypocrite, doth not each one of you on the Sabbath loose his ox or his ass from the stall, and lead him away to watering? And ought not this woman, being a daughter of Abraham, whom Satan hath bound, lo, these eighteen years, be loosed from this bond on the Sabbath day?

And when he had said these things, all his adversaries were ashamed : and all the people rejoiced for all the glorious things that were done by him.

Then said he, Unto what is the kingdom of God like? and whereunto shall I resemble it? It is like a Thou hypocrite.—The ruler's indignation may have been genuine. The Rabbinical laws forbade works of healing on the Sabbath, and this may have been a shock to his narrow bigotry. And yet he seemed more offended with Christ than disturbed on the violation of the Sabbath. "Therefore drew he down upon himself that sharp rebuke from him, whose sharpest rebuke was uttered only in love, and who would have torn, if that had been possible, from off this man's heart the veil which was hiding his true self even from his own eyes. Every word of Christ's answer is significant. It is not a defence of his breaking the Sabbath, but a declaration that he has not broken it at all."—Trench.

All his adversaries.—A number must have been present.

All the multitude rejoiced.—"This does not oppose the view that the miracle occurred in Perea, late in the ministry. Although Galilee had been abandoned by him, and Jerusalem had been repeatedly hostile, we infer, from Matt. 18 : 2, that he was still heard with gladness in Perea ; in fact, some such wave of popularity must have preceded the entry into Jerusalem."—Schaff.

Unto what is the kingdom of God like? (See notes on pages 239-254.) These parables were no doubt repeated on this occasion. They have an appropriate connection with what precedes. "In them our Lord teaches that his kingdom—the kingdom of God—should ultimately triumph over all opposition, should grow externally and internally. Such instruction was peculiarly apt just before he began his actual journey to death at Jerusalem."—Schaff.

Chap. XXVIII.

Luke 13 : 19-23.

J.C. 33.

grain of mustard seed, which a man took, and cast into his garden, and it grew, and waxed a great tree ; and the fowls of the air lodged in the branches of it. And again he said, Whereunto shall I liken the kingdom of God ? It is like leaven, which a woman took and hid in three measures of meal, till the whole was leavened.

The Mustard Seed
and Leaven.

And he went through the cities and villages, teaching, and journeying toward Jerusalem.

Then said one unto him, Lord, are there few that be

Three measures of meal.—In these measures, in which the leaven was hid, Bloomfield sees a reference to the preceding systems of which Christianity is a development. He says : " There have been three grand dispensations—the Patriarchal, the Mosaic, and the Christian ; but, throughout all, the children of God have the same faith, and the same word of promise, whereby the same will of God is wrought in them all ; and this in the soul, body, and spirit of each."

And he went about through all the cities and villages, is the correct rendering ; and it implies an extended circuit, during which he probably preached in all the places where he had been preceded by the seventy.

Toward Jerusalem.—" This was on his last journey to Jerusalem, which he reached on Friday evening, March 30th, A.D. 30, six days before the Passover, and seven before his crucifixion, Friday, April 6th."—Peloubet.

Said one unto him.—" The inquirer can hardly have been a disciple of Jesus (see ver. 28), but most likely a Jew from the multitude."—Alford.

Are there few that be saved ?—" The question was prompted largely by frivolous curiosity, as well as by pride. Most discussions of a kindred character arise from the same motives. Final and eternal salvation is implied. Incidentally Jewish pride is rebuked, but rather because it was formal than because it was national."—Riddle. " Christ never answers questions in theoretical theology. To the questioner he replies in effect, Never mind ; do you strive to enter into the heavenly kingdom. Similar in spirit is his answer to the lawyer in Luke 10 : 29, to that of Peter in Luke 12 : 41, and to that of Judas (not Iscariot) in John 14 : 22."—Abbott.

saved? And he said unto them, Strive to enter in at the strait gate: for many, I say unto you, will seek to enter in, and shall not be able. When once the Master of the house is risen Strive to enter.—" 'Strain every nerve.' " The term is taken from the Grecian games, where they wrestled, and ran the race, in order to win the crown of laurel which belonged to the victor. It is the term, too, from which is our word 'agonize.'—Jacobus. "The connection of thought is this: Instead of asking curious questions as to the number who are saved, it is a man's first duty to strive most earnestly to obtain salvation himself; and since many will not obtain it, the effort should be to obtain it in the right way."—Riddle. In what follows, "the Messianic kingdom is represented under the figure of a palace, into which men do not enter, as might appear natural, by a magnificent portal, but by a narrow gate, low, and scarcely visible, a mere postern. Those invited refuse to pass in thereby; then it is closed, and they in vain supplicate the master of the house to re-open it; it remains closed, and they are, and continue to be, excluded."—Godet. "The striving to enter in must be in accord with the mighty working of God in us (Col. 1 : 29); it must be fervent and with prayer (Col. 4 : 12); it is characterized by Paul as the good fight, or strife, in contrast with the strife after secular rewards (1 Tim. 6 : 12 ; 2 Tim. 4 : 7); to oppose us in this strife are the world, the flesh, and the devil (2 Cor. 4 : 4 ; Gal. 5 : 17 ; Eph. 6 : 12); to conquer in it we must put on the whole armor of God (Eph. 6 : 13). The lesson which Christ inculcates is that, though always a simple, it is not always an easy thing, to enter into Christ's kingdom."—Abbott.

At the strait gate.—"Or, 'through the narrow door.' Compare Matt. 7 : 13, where the correct reading is 'gate.' The figure there is of the entrance to a 'way'; here to a house or palace (see above and ver. 25). A misapprehension as to this difference led some early copyists to alter 'door' to 'gate' in this passage. 'Strait' means 'narrow,' but many confuse it with 'straight.' It implies difficulty, not directness or correctness."—Riddle. "Observe, the gate is put before the way (Matt. 7 : 14). It is not, therefore, the gate out of life, at the end of the pilgrimage, but the gate into the Christian life, as Bunyan represents it in Pilgrim's Progress. As here used, the gate is not equivalent to the door in John 10 : 2. The strait gate is the spirit of real and hearty allegiance to Jesus Christ, by which we enter unto him."—Abbott. "The gate to eternal life must be narrow, by the very nature of things. There are a

Chap. XXVIII.

Luke 13 : 25.

J.C. 33.

up, and hath shut to the door, and ye begin to stand without, and to knock at the door, saying, Lord, Lord, thousand wrong ways, but only one right one. The needle may point in a myriad of directions : only one is due north. Faithful obedience to Christ is the necessary way to eternal life."—Peloubet.

Seek to enter in.—"We must not understand, 'shall seek to enter in by it, and shall not be able.' The emphasis of the command is, Seek to enter at the narrow door ; for many shall seek to enter (elsewhere), and shall not be able. After 'enter' is to be supplied, in both places, unto salvation, or into the kingdom of God."—Alford. "'Seek' is not so strong as 'strive.' Earnest to some extent, these seek to enter in some other way. It is probably implied that more earnestness would lead to the narrow door of repentance and faith."—Schaff.

And shall not be able.—It is a moral impossibility to enter in any other way. "It is not because the gate is difficult to find, but because we are unwilling to find and enter in through the gate, that there are few who enter. It is wide enough to admit any soul, but too narrow to admit any sin. Observe, too, that not only the gate is strait, but the subsequent way is narrow. Like a mountain path cut in the rocks, a little deviation is attended with dangerous consequences—deviation, not from circumscribed rules, but from the spirit of Christ's precepts. Though the way is narrow, it is a highway, in which mere ignorance can not go astray ; though compressed, it is, to him whose heart is fully set to walk in it, the way of life and liberty."—Abbott. "What follows points to formalism as the mistake most common among those present."—Riddle. "If my religion is only a formal compliance with those modes of worship which are in fashion where I live, if it cost me no pain or trouble, if it lays me under no rules and restraint, if I have no careful thoughts and sober reflections about it—is it not great weakness to think that I am striving to enter in at the strait gate?"—William Law.

When once the Master . . . hath shut to the door.—"From the time that." "This introduces a new thought. A time will come when it will be altogether impossible to enter by any way ; hence the importance of striving now to enter by the right way. The impossibility of entering referred to in ver. 24 is a present moral one, but this verse points to a future time when it will be too late."—Riddle. "In this verse is a reason why this 'strive' is so important."—Alford. "Allusion is made to nuptial feasts. These were celebrated by night. The house was filled with lights. Thus they who were admitted had the benefit of light ; but open unto us ; and he shall answer and say unto you, I know you not whence ye are : then shall ye begin to say, We have eaten and drunk in thy presence, and thou hast taught in our streets. But he shall say, I tell they who were excluded were in darkness outside the house—'outer darkness,' which necessarily appeared more gloomy compared with the light within. The guests entered by a narrow wicket gate, at which the porter stood to prevent the unbidden from rushing in. When all that had been invited were arrived, the door was shut, and not opened to those who stood without, however much they knocked."—Peloubet. "This door is shut either when there is no more space for repentance (Matt. 12 : 32 ; Heb. 6 : 4-6), or when death calls the soul to judgment. Thus Christ teaches in this passage the threefold conditions of salvation—an earnest spirit, the way of self-sacrifice, the present time."—Abbott.

I know you not.—"It is not that he disclaims an outward knowledge, but he does not know them in that sense in which the Lord says, 'I know my sheep, and am known of mine.' This knowledge is of necessity reciprocal ; so that Augustine's, though it may seem at first a slight, is indeed a very profound remark, when explaining, I know you not, he observes it is nothing else than 'Ye know not me.'"—Trench.

Whence ye are.—"Ye are none of my family, have no relationship with me."—Alford. "The full form of this denial and its repetition (ver. 27) emphasize the thought that those thus applying are not members of the family, nor expected guests. Morally they are strangers to God."—Riddle.

We did eat and drink in thy presence.—"The plea is previous acquaintanceship. As applied to those then addressed, it refers to actual participation in ordinary meals with our Lord. More generally it refers to external connection with Christ, without actual communion with him."—Schaff. "To have eaten with one is evidence of acquaintanceship or friendship. So the sinner may allege that he was a professed follower of Jesus, and had some evidence that Jesus was his friend."—Barnes.

Didst teach in our streets.—"The figure is dropped for a moment here : the householder represents our Lord. The clause had a literal application then, but it also refers to all among whom the Gospel is preached. Notice the earnestness is not that of those seeking for mercy, but of those claiming a right, and basing their claim on something merely external. It is the mistake of Phariseism to the very last."—Schaff. "Compare Matt. 7 : 22. 'There religious work for the Lord, here the enjoy-you, I know you not whence ye are ; depart from me, all ye workers of iniquity. There shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth, when ye shall see Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, and all the prophets, in the kingdom of God, and you yourselves thrust out. And they shall come from the east, and from the west, and from the north, and from the south, and shall sit down in the kingdom of God. And, behold, there are last which shall be first ; and there are first which shall be last.

The same day there came certain of the Pharisees, saying unto him, Get thee out, and depart hence ; for Herod will kill thee. Warned Against Herod.

ment of Christian privileges and the receipt of Christian instruction on earth, are made the ground for admission to Christ's eternal kingdom. Both are disallowed ; neither enjoying religious privileges, receiving religious instruction, or engaging in so-called religious work, is an entering into the strait gate. All these may coexist with practical injustice in the daily life." —Abbott. (See Eph. 5 : 1-6.)

Depart from me.—Terrible words to be uttered by Infinite Love ! "Depart from me" into the outer darkness, where is no ray of sun, or moon, or stars, where the light never comes, and only ever-deepening night gathers around the soul forever ! Who shall measure the import of those words, or count the loss to that soul thus banished from all that is good and true, and doomed to wander amid all that is evil and false, for time without end—eternal ? Who can realize the awful calamity, or who find fit tears to weep over the fate of the soul that is lost ?

When ye shall see Abraham . . . in the kingdom of God, and you yourselves thrust out.

"Of all sad words of tongue or pen,
The saddest are these, It might have been."—Whittier.

There are last which shall be first, and there are first which shall be last.—"Many who are first in privileges shall be last in character. Many who are first in opportunities shall be last in usefulness. Many who are first in earthly riches shall be last in treasures in heaven. Many who seem first and most prominent on earth shall be last and least in heaven."—Peloubet.

Certain of the Pharisees.—"They may have been sent by Herod, and were the agents best adapted for his purpose, because

And he said unto them, Go ye, and tell that fox, Behold, I cast out devils, and I do cures to-day and to-morrow, and the third day I shall be perfected. Never-their party was in opposition to him. Our Lord's reply intimates this. Herod may not have wished to kill Jesus, but the desire now to see him and now to get him out of his territory agrees entirely with the character of that ruler. To threaten thus without really purposing to carry out the threat, to use Pharisees, his opponents, to report the threat, is the cunning of 'that fox.'—Schaff.

Depart hence.—Our Lord was probably in Perea, part of Herod's territory, and in that part too in which John the Baptist had been put to death.

Tell that fox.—"Indeed was he a fox, since he had now administered the government thirty years, and personated many parts—that of a servant to Tiberius, a master to the Galileans, a friend to Sejanus, Artabanus, his brothers Archelaus, Philip, the other Herod, all the wishes and interests of each of whom were diametrically opposite to those of the other, and to the wishes and interests of Herod himself."—Wetstein, in Bloomfield. "An appropriate characterization of Herod, whose history is one of intrigue and cunning. It is almost the only case in which Christ applies an opprobrious epithet to an individual. The fact is no less significant than this one remarkable exception to the general principle of his life. In this case, by a single word, he indicated to the people, the Pharisees and Herod, that he understood the design; and the word was one sure to be remembered and repeated. By his undisguised contempt he defeated the attempt to overawe the people by this unholy combination between an apostate church and a wicked king."—Abbott.

I do cures to-day and to-morrow, and the third day I shall be perfected.—Some give these words a literal signification, and render the passage, "To-day and to-morrow, and the third day I shall come to the end," meaning he shall then terminate his stay in Herod's dominions. Others "refer them to his present work ('to-day'), his future labors ('to-morrow'), and his sufferings at Jerusalem ('the third day')." Such a sense would not only be unusual, but it is opposed by the next verse, where the third day is a day of journeying, not of death. The word used is in the present tense, because our Lord would tell Herod that the future to him is certain."—Schaff. Mr. Abbott, who supposes a different order of events from the one followed in the text, remarks on this passage as follows: "The language is enigmatical; there is difficulty in its interpretation. I believe, theless I must walk to-day, and to-morrow, and the however, (1) that the word days is to be taken in its literal signification. The attempt to interpret the first day as equivalent to Christ's present working, to-morrow as the time intermediate the present and his passion, and the third day as the passion week, seems to me forced and unnatural ; (2) I shall be perfected, clearly refers to the finishing of Christ's career by his passion and death. The same Greek word is used in this sense in John 4 : 34 ; 5 : 36 ; 17 : 4 ; comp. Acts 20 : 24. I believe then that we are to understand Christ's reply to the Pharisees to be, that he will remain but two days longer in that district, and that then will begin that passion at Jerusalem which was the perfecting of his ministry. May these two days be those referred to in John 11 : 6 ? It is true Christ tarried, after the resurrection of Lazarus, in Ephraim (John 11 : 54) ; but this was only with his disciples. His public ministry, except as it was perfected in the passion week, came to an end when he left Perea to go to Bethany." "The first interpretation can hardly be the correct one, because the word here rendered 'perfected' is the same as that translated 'finished' in John 17 : 4 ; and there the reference is to the completion of Christ's work. The phrase was a Hebrew form of expression, and both in this and the following passage seems not to denote three days, but an indefinite period, during which Jesus would work, and at its close have his work accomplished. And in this view, what sublimity there is in the expression ! What other man ever so outlined his career, or could say, when his work was done, 'It is finished !' All other lives, however great their achievements, have been failures ; he only has done the work that was given him to do (John 17 : 4), his life only has been 'perfected.' All other men have come short of their aims, all others, when looking back on their lives, have had to mourn over duties unfulfilled, and ends unaccomplished."

—J. R. G.

"So much to do ! So little done !
Ah ! yesternight I saw the sun
Sink beamless down the vaulted gray,
The ghastly ghost of Yesterday.

"So little done ! So much to do !
Each morning breaks on conflicts new ;
But eager, brave, I'll join the fray
And fight the battle of To-day.

"So much to do ! So little done !
But when it's o'er—the victory won—
Oh ! then, my soul, this strife and sorrow
Will end in that great, glad To-morrow."

Edmund Kirke.

day following : for it cannot be that a prophet perish out of Jerusalem.

And the seventy returned again with joy, saying, Lord, even the devils are subject unto us through thy name.

And he said unto them, I beheld Satan as lightning

The lament over Jerusalem (Luke 13 : 34, 35) is here omitted. "See Matt. 23 : 27-39. The discourse in which it there appears is not reported by Luke, who gives barely a brief suggestion of it. It seems to me more probable that Luke has here inserted this apostrophe to Jerusalem out of its place, than that Christ repeated it on this occasion ; because (1) an appeal to Jerusalem, in Perea, seems not probable, though it might have been suggested by the close of the previous sentence ; (2) it is not true that Jerusalem did not see Christ until his second coming, and to suppose that the close of ver. 35 refers to the greetings given him on his triumphal entry into Jerusalem (Matt. 21 : 9) deprives it of its significance, and gives to the same words here and in Matt. 23 : 39 a radically different meaning."—Abbott.

The seventy returned again.—How long the seventy were away on their mission, or in what order they returned, it is impossible to determine. But they must have been absent a considerable time, for they were to go two by two, and as each couple would doubtless visit more than a single city, a period of some length would naturally elapse before they all gathered together again to Jesus. They probably returned from time to time, as they fulfilled their commission, and had all rejoined him when he set out from Perea to attend the Feast of Dedication. With no more definite data to go upon, we insert their return at this period.

Even the devils.—"Rather, demons, which in Greek is properly a different word from devil. The word devil is seldom used in the original in the plural."—Whedon.

Through thy name.—This was the distinction between the miracles of our Lord and those of his disciples. One was wrought by an original or inherent, the other by a derived power.

I beheld.—"Literally, 'was beholding.' The form of this expression, as well as the fact that it was addressed to the seventy, opposes every view of the passage which refers it to a past point of time. 'I was beholding,' while you were exercising this power. It means, however, not a vision, 'but a spirit-

Chap. XXVIII.

Luke 10 : 19.

J.C. 33.

fall from heaven. Behold, I give unto you power to tread on serpents and scorpions, and ^{Return of the Seventy.} over all the power of the enemy : and nothing shall by any means hurt you. Notwithstanding—ual intuition of the God-man before whom even the secrets of the world of spirits are discovered and lie open.'"—Van Oosterzee. [For reasons stated in my Commentary on Luke 10 : 17, I prefer the historical interpretation to that adopted by Oosterzee.—L. A.]

As lightning.—(See Zech. 9 : 14). "This expresses not only the suddenness of his fall, but the fact that he was an angel of light."—Jacobus.

From heaven—(See Isa. 14 : 9-15 ; Rev. 12 : 7-12). "From his high position as seeming ruler over the world, as lightning falls from the sky."—Peloubet. The Jews thought the air to be the abode of evil spirits. Satan is called the "Prince of the power of the air" (Eph. 2 : 2). "The whole life and work of Jesus Christ implies a victory over Satan, which he himself was continually beholding ; yet the marked success of so many laborers at such a time was not a trifle. It was the token of the final triumph, in which such human agents were to be employed. This view therefore gives a practical lesson of encouragement for us in our conflict, which is not 'against flesh and blood, but against principalities,' etc. (Eph. 6 : 12)."—Riddle.

Power to tread on serpents and scorpions.—"Though the miracle-working power remained in the church after the ascension of our Lord, Christianity was made less dependent on such external signs and tokens, and more and more on the moral and spiritual power of the word itself. With this promise compare the still more general one of Ps. 91. Such signs as are indicated here are not needed in this age, when the divine nature of Christianity is witnessed by such historical evidences as are afforded by the moral, the religious, the social, the political, and even the commercial, development which has everywhere attended on and resulted from its progress. I can hardly conceive that occasion ever can arise for the further fulfillment of this promise. Christianity is itself a greater sign than any the apostles wrought."—Abbott.

All the power of the enemy.—This includes what precedes, and "embraces all the agencies of nature, of human society, of things belonging to the spiritual order, which the prince of this world can use to obstruct the work of Jesus."—Godet.

By any means hurt you.—"Or, 'in any wise injure you.' This probably also refers to the 'power of the enemy : ' from ing, in this rejoice not, that the spirits are subject unto you ; but rather rejoice, because your names are written in heaven.

In that hour Jesus rejoiced in spirit, and said, I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, that thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and Satan's evils may come apparent hurt, but never real injury."—Abbott. "The devil is not able with all his might and malice—no, though he raise his whole forces, and muster all the powers of darkness into one band, to do us any harm in our souls, in our bodies, in our children, in our friends, in our goods—no, nor so much as in any small thing that we have, without special leave and sufferance of our God."—Bishop Sanderson.

Your names written in heaven.—"The seventy knew undoubtedly, as we also do, the beautiful figure of the Old Testament, which depicts to us the Eternal One with a book before his face wherein he notes down the names and deeds of his faithful servants (Exod. 32 : 32, 33 ; Mal. 3 : 16 ; compare Rev. 3 : 5)." —Van Oosterzee. "It was the ancient custom that citizens in any commonwealth should be enrolled in a book ; and when any were admitted to the rights of citizenship, their names were registered on this list. They were to rejoice that they were enrolled as citizens of heaven."—Jacobus.

In that hour.—Or, that very hour. "This definite expression fixes the time, although on a previous occasion the same thoughts were uttered (Matt. 11 : 25-27). But our Lord might well repeat such weighty words. Besides, in Matthew they form a confession, here an expression, of joy. Both passages resemble the more profound utterances found in the Gospel of John, regarding the relation of our Lord to the Father."—Riddle.

Rejoiced.—" 'Rejoice' is too weak a word. It is 'exulted in spirit'—evidently giving visible expression to his unusual emotions, while, at the same time, the words 'in spirit' are meant to convey to the reader the depth of them."—Jamieson.

I thank thee.—"The very same sublime words were uttered by our Lord on a former similar occasion (Matt. 11 : 25-27)." —Peloubet.

From the wise and prudent.—"The wise in philosophy, the prudent in worldly affairs. Observe that the contrast is not with the unwise and imprudent, but with babes. The doctrine conveyed is that religious truth is not acquired by any mere intellectual process, however good in itself ; it is revealed not to philosophical wisdom or intellectual culture, or practical sagacity in

Chap. XXVIII.

Luke 10 : 21, 22.

J.C. 33.

hast revealed them unto babes : even so, Father ; for so it seemed good in thy sight. All things are delivered to me of my Father : and no man knoweth who the affairs, but to childlike humility and docility."—Abbott. "The wise man is but a clever infant, spelling letters from a hieroglyphical prophetic book, the lexicon of which lies in eternity."—Carlyle.

To babes.—"To the poor, ignorant, and obscure ; the teachable, simple, and humble—such as his disciples were."—Barnes.

For so it seemed good (or, "was well-pleasing") in thy sight.—"The word translated 'for' also means 'that ;' and some prefer to take it here in that sense. In either case, the final ground of thanksgiving is God's good pleasure, which involves his wisdom and goodness. If our Lord, with his great knowledge (ver. 22), could thus glorify God's good pleasure, much more should we, when we can not understand his dealings. The spirit of 'babes' will always lead us to do this. His will is sovereign, but never tyrannical ; our response should be grateful, never self-willed."—Riddle.

All things are delivered to me.—The same truth is repeatedly announced in the New Testament. (See John 3 : 35 ; 6 : 46 ; 10 : 15 ; Matt. 28 : 18 ; Col. 1 : 16, 17.) "It means that Christ has control over all things, for the good of his church ; that the government of the universe is committed to him as Mediator, that he may redeem his people, and guide them to glory (Eph. 1 : 20, 21, 22)."—Barnes.

Of my Father.—"The experience through which Jesus has just passed has transported him, as it were, into the bosom of his Father. He plunges into it, and his words become an echo of the joys of his eternal generation."—Godet.

No man knoweth who the Son is.—"That is, such is the nature of the Son of God, such the mystery of the union between the divine and human nature, such his exalted character as divine, that no mortal can fully comprehend him. None but God fully knows him."—Barnes. "This is one of the most convincing testimonies for the true Godhead of Christ. One who was only a created spirit, or an immaculate man, could not possibly, without blasphemy against God, testify this of himself."—Van Oosterzee. "This great truth of Christ's power over all things, of a man who is almighty, rests upon the greater mystery—namely, the person of Christ the Son as related to the Father—a mystery thoroughly known only to the Father and the Son. If men object that it is a mystery which their reason can not of itself discover, they only confirm our Lord's words."—Riddle.

Son is, but the Father ; and who the Father is, but the Son, and he to whom the Son will reveal him.

And he turned him unto his disciples, and said privately, Blessed are the eyes which see the things that ye see. For I tell you, that many prophets and kings have desired to see those things which ye see, and have not seen them ; and to hear those things which ye hear, and have not heard them.

Who the Father is, but the Son.—"No man knows the Father except he add to the knowledge gained from other sources that special knowledge of God's grace and love which the Son affords, nor unless his study of nature is under the direction of and in submission to the Son. Philosophy is in so far right that, to the Christless, God is the Unknowable. For the way in which the Son reveals the Father, and to whom he will reveal him, see John 14 : 15-24."—Abhatt. "Nor can men by their unassisted reason know God the Father, either as the Father of Christ, or as their Father. In regard to this, men are not so ready to confess their ignorance, but all history proves that without Christ there is now no proper knowledge of God."—Riddle. "How can man understand God, since he does not yet understand his own mind, with which he endeavors to understand him?"—Augustine.

And he to whom the Son will (or, "willeth to") reveal him.—"The future conquest of the world by Jesus and his disciples rests on the relation which he sustains to God, and with which he identifies his people. The perfect knowledge of God is, in the end, the sceptre of the universe."—Godet.

For I tell you that many prophets and kings have desired to see those things which ye see.—"One of the sublimest utterances of our Lord. He proclaims himself as him in whom alone not only the expectation of the earlier time is fulfilled, but in whom also the ornament and crown of mankind has appeared."—Van Oosterzee. "The Old Testament saints desired to see, looked forward in faith, set forth in types, songs, and prophecies, the wonderful truth which was personally and fully revealed in Jesus Christ. Compare especially the affecting words of David in his final royal prophecy of the Messiah (2 Sam. 23 : 5) : 'This is all my salvation, and all my desire.' None of these were blessed as the disciples had been. Notice, too, the blessing was not in what they obtained so much as in what they saw. We are 'heirs of all the ages : ' what others worked for, prayed for, hoped for, that we are blessed in seeing and enjoying."—Riddle.

CHAPTER XXIX.

JESUS AT THE FEAST OF DEDICATION.

Now it came to pass, as they went, that he entered into a certain village : and a certain woman named

As they went.—"That the visit at Bethany, mentioned by Luke only, took place at this time, can not be positively affirmed, but it can not well be put earlier. Not improbably it is placed by the evangelist in its present position in the narrative upon other than chronological grounds."—Andrews.

A certain village.—Bethany lies about two miles east of Jerusalem, "on the eastern slope of the Mount of Olives, fully a mile from the summit, and not very far from the point at which the road to Jericho begins its more sudden descent toward the Jordan valley." "It looks as if it were shut out from the whole world. No town, village, or human habitation is visible from it. The wilderness appears in front through an opening in the rocky glen, and the steep side of Olivet rises close behind. When Jesus retired from Jerusalem to Bethany, no sound of the busy world followed him, no noisy crowd broke in upon his meditations."—Porter's "Syria's Holy Places." "Embowered in fruity vegetation that gave it its name—the 'House of Dates'—and shut out from the busy city by the mountainous wall of Olivet, it was doubtless once 'the perfection of retirement and repose, of seclusion, and a lovely place.'"—Abbott. It is still a lovely spot, though a scene of ruin and poverty ; the soil is good, but miserably neglected. The ravine in which it lies is terraced, and the terraces are covered with fruit-trees or waving grain. Though occupying an elevated position, it is overshadowed on the north and west by the mount of Olives, and looking toward the south-east presents a view of parts of the plain of Jordan and the Dead Sea. It is a most charming seclusion, and a fitting place of quiet retirement, such as Jesus sought, from the mad-dened Pharisees.

"It seems an humble village ; few its homes,
And few and poor its dwellers ; cottage roofs,
Except one single turret, are they all ;
Yet save the neighboring city, it were hard,
If Palestine were searched, to find a spot
On which the Christian traveler should muse,
With fonder interest, than Bethany."

It is a noticeable fact that Christ's great miracle has been to it a new baptism, conferring a new name. It is now called El-

Chap. XXIX.

Luke 10 : 38-40.

J.C. 33.

Martha received him into her house. And she had a sister called Mary, which also sat at Jesus' feet, and heard his word. But Martha was cumbered about much serving, and came to him,

Jesus at the house of Martha.

Azari-yeh, which may be interpreted, "The Place of Lazarus" (Porter's "Syria"). The very name of Bethany is unknown to the native inhabitants, and it seems to have borne the name of Lazarus from as far back as the third century. The place is at present, according to Robinson, "a poor village of some twenty families; its inhabitants, apparently, are without thought of industry. In the walls of a few of the houses are marks of antiquity—large hewn stones, some of them beveled, but they have all obviously belonged to more ancient edifices, and been employed again and again in the construction of successive dwellings or other buildings."

Martha received him into her house.—"In this passage Martha is described as possessing a house of her own in the village. Whether she was a widow, or lived unmarried, with her sister and Lazarus, can not be determined. The evangelists are remarkably sparing in their historic notices of the persons mentioned by them. They confine themselves to what is barely necessary, and devote themselves rather to the delineation of their spiritual life."—Olshausen. "The indication here, and in John (chaps. 11, 12 : 1, 9), is that Martha was the head of the household, and therefore probably the elder sister. Simon, perhaps the father, or possibly the husband, was a leper (Matt. 26 : 6), and either dead or absent."—Abbott, on Luke. "They were a family of wealth and social distinction; owned their house; had their family tomb in their garden, as did only the wealthier classes; esteemed three hundred dollars' worth of ointment not too costly a token of honor to pay to Jesus. Pharisees in faith, they belonged to the more enlightened and liberal of that party. They possessed many distinguished friends among that class in Jerusalem. But neither party friendships nor party prejudices were able to keep them from Christ. There are indications that it was a true home. The sisters and their brother were tenderly attached to each other. Their commingled affections flowed out unselfishly toward Jesus. The quiet simplicity of their love, and the willing service of their hands, unambitious of honors in his expected kingdom, drew Jesus to them. He loved Martha and her sister and Lazarus."—Abbott's "Jesus of Nazareth," condensed.

Martha was cumbered with much serving.—"Literally, 'was drawn off.' That is, her attention was drawn off from the Chap. XXIX.

Luke 10 : 40-42.

J.C. 33.

and said, Lord, dost thou not care that my sister hath left me to serve alone? bid her therefore that she help me. And Jesus answered and said unto her, Martha, Martha, thou art careful and troubled about many things: but one thing is needful; and Mary hath chosen that good part, which shall not be taken away from her.

presence of her Lord by her very anxiety to prepare for him a worthy entertainment."—Abbott.

And came to him.—"Busy, restless Christians are constantly thinking that the Lord approves their conduct more than that of the quieter class; they are perfectly conscientious in disturbing those who sit as pupils at the Lord's feet."—Schaff.

Left me to serve alone.—"This suggests that Mary had been helping her sister, but felt that she could use the time more profitably."—Schaff. "This notable difference in their manner of receiving the Lord may have arisen from the different lights under which they regarded his person. Martha may have regarded him as come to establish a temporal kingdom; and therefore she was 'cumbered with much serving,' in order to do him the greatest honor. Mary, on the other hand, viewing him as a spiritual teacher and deliverer, waited upon him in silent attention, and 'sat at his feet.' As is the nature and degree of our faith, so is our conduct; according to our inward apprehension of the Lord is our outward demeanor toward him."—Ford.

Thou art careful and troubled about many things.—"The first word refers more to internal anxiety, the second to the external bustle; both together describe the habit of such a character."—Schaff. "Careful implies the cause, troubled the result. A mind divided between concern respecting the inward and the outer life is always perturbed, never knowing the perfect peace of the mind that is stayed on God. Christ does not rebuke Martha for serving, but for being careful and troubled about much serving; and he does not chide her till she asks him to chide her sister."—Abbott. "Many Christians who have borne the loss of a dear child or all their property with the most heroic Christian fortitude have been entirely vanquished by the breaking of a dish or the blunders of a servant."—Newton.

But one thing is needful.—"As in so many other instances, these words of Christ have a twofold meaning. Primarily, there was no need of the much serving; Christ did not care for bodily indulgence; simple food, a single dish, what was necessary for physical support, was all-sufficient for him. But, secondly, one thing only is essential, viz., that bread of life which

And it was at Jerusalem the feast of the dedication, and it was winter. And Jesus walked in the temple in Christ alone can give, and which Mary was solicitous to receive. These interpretations are not inconsistent ; the one is dependent on the other. It is because spiritual good is the one thing needful, that simple provision for the body suffices, and that much serving is needless. In studying this incident observe, (1) Both Martha and Mary were disciples of Christ. They represent not the contrast between the follower of Christ and the follower of the world, but between different types of piety in the church. (2) Martha's much serving was for her Lord. She desired to prepare a worthy entertainment—one worthy as an offering to him and worthy as a manifestation of her own hospitality. Love and pride combined to prompt her activity. (3) A social lesson lies on the surface of the incident. Much serving is not the best serving. The housekeeper is not always a homekeeper. Less supper and more host, rather than less host and more supper, give the best entertainment. (4) The religious lesson is one pre-eminently needed in our era. Not he who works most for Christ, but he who receives most from Christ, serves him best. To sit at his feet and learn is always more acceptable than to be careful and troubled about much serving. (5) Both types—the meditative and the active—are needed in the church ; both are combined in the well-developed character. Christ did much serving, going about doing good, ministering to the body as well as to the soul ; but he also sought opportunities for retirement, solitude, and communion with God."—Abbott. "O busy Marthas, in your round of teaching, visiting, working, planning, and almsgiving, go often to recruit your strength and to learn your duty by taking Mary's lowly place at the feet of your loving Lord. Let us ever bear in mind that the most effective preachers and philanthropists have been those who waited humbly and hungrily for the guidance and grace which the Lord Jesus gave them. As examples of this fact, let me point you to the apostles, and to Augustine, Luther, Pascal, Calvin, the Wesleys, Wilberforce, Payson ; William Allen, the Quaker philanthropist ; Bunyan, the wonderful allegorist ; Martyn, the self-denying missionary ; and Edwards, the majestic man of thought. All these master-spirits drew their inspiration from a daily communion with their Divine Lord."—Theodore L. Cuyler.

It was at Jerusalem, the feast of the Dedication.—"For a considerable period Jesus had avoided Jerusalem ; at the Feast of Tabernacles he went up secretly. Now he seeks publicity. There is no reason why he should longer avoid Jerusalem. He

Chap. XXIX.

John 10 : 24.

J.C. 33.

Solomon's porch. Then came the Jews round about will present himself before the priests and scribes and rulers, that they may show forth what is in their hearts—show whether they can yet recognize in him the Messiah. And the Feast of Dedication had special significance as the time of such a visit. It was appointed in commemoration of the national deliverance by the Maccabees from the oppression of the Syrians (B.C. 164), and of the cleansing of the temple and restoration of the appointed worship. It should have reminded the Jews of the sins that brought them under the tyranny of Antiochus, but it served only to feed their pride, to foster their hate of Roman rule, and to turn their hearts away from the true deliverer. A Judas Maccabeus they would have welcomed ; but Jesus, whose first work must be to deliver them from sin, found no favor in their eyes."—Andrews, condensed. This feast, unlike the other festivals which were observed only at Jerusalem, was celebrated throughout the whole of Judea, and by "every one in his own city." "It brought together the haughtiest of the Jewish autocrats, and the more narrow-minded and bigoted of the Jewish people. In this feast there was nothing to attract Jesus save the opportunity once more to speak to the heart of Judaism."—Abbott. It lasted eight days, and began this year on the nineteenth of December.

In Solomon's porch.—"The word 'porch' rather means what we should call a veranda or colonnade. It was one of those long-covered walks under a roof supported by columns, on one side at least, which the inhabitants of hot countries appear to find absolutely needful. Singularly enough, one sect of heathen philosophers at Athens was called 'Stoics,' from its meeting in a place called 'Stoa,' here rendered a porch, while another was called 'Peripatetics,' from its habit of 'walking about' during its discussions, just as our Lord did in this verse. The cloisters of a cathedral or abbey, perhaps, are most like the building called a 'porch' here."—Ryle. "Several porticoes, or piazas, were erected round the temple, in which persons might walk, and the doctors and other masters might communicate oral instruction to their followers, sheltered from the inclemency of the weather."—Tittman. The one called Solomon's is generally supposed to have been at the south-east corner of the temple area, overlooking the valley of the Kedron. Kinnoel remarks: "It looked toward the east, and is therefore called by Josephus the Eastern porch. It was the only part left uninjured when the Babylonians destroyed the temple. Hence, king Agrippa though solicited by the people, could not be induced to demolish this ancient pile, even for the purpose of building it anew." It is thus described by Josephus: "Upon the southern part of the

Chap. XXIX.

John 10 : 24, 25.

J.C. 33.

him, and said unto him, How long dost thou make us to doubt? If thou be the Christ, tell us plainly. Jesus answered them, I told you, and ye believed not : the works that I do in my Father's inclosure, internally, a broad portico ran along the wall, supported by four rows of columns, which divided it into three parts, thus forming a triple colonnade or portico. Of these the two external parts were each thirty feet wide, and the middle one forty-five feet. The height of the two external porticoes was more than fifty feet, while that of the middle one was double, or more than a hundred feet. The length was a stadium, extending from valley to valley. Such was the elevation of the middle portico above the adjacent valley, that if from its roof one attempted to look down into the gulf below, his eyes became dark and dizzy before they could penetrate to the immense depth."—Antiq. 15 : 11-15. Dr. Robinson, Bib. Res., vol. I., p. 422-7, says : "We first noticed these large stones at the south-east corner of the inclosure, where, perhaps, they are as conspicuous, and form as great a portion of the wall, as in any part. Here are several courses, both on the east and south sides, alternating with each other, in which the stones measure from seventeen to nineteen feet in length, by three or four feet in height, while one block at the corner is seven and a half feet thick. . . . There seems little room for hesitation in referring them back to the days of Solomon, or rather of his successors, who, according to Josephus, built up here immense walls, immovable for all time."

If thou be the Christ, tell us plainly.—"The manner in which the Jews gather around him, and the character of their question, 'How long dost thou make us to doubt? If thou be the Christ, tell us plainly,' clearly indicate that in some way their attention had been especially drawn to him as something more than a prophet, as indeed the Christ. If we compare this language with that uttered but two months earlier at the feast of Tabernacles, it appears evident that his Messianic claims had now become prominent. It is to be noticed that no mention is made of any preliminary teaching or healing, nothing to call forth the question. He is silent till it is addressed him by the people, and this was as soon as he appeared in the temple."—Andrews.

I told you, and ye believed not.—Jesus had not expressly declared to them that he was the Christ, but he had distinctly assumed a far higher character than that of the Messiah they ex-

Chap. XXIX.

John 10 : 25-28.

J.C. 33.

name, they bear witness of me. But ye believe not, because ye are not of my sheep, as I said unto you. My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me : and I give unto them eternal life ; and they shall never perish, neither shall any man pluck them out of pected. He claimed to be the fountain of life (John 5 : 26), the judge of mankind (John 5 : 28, 29), and in such mysterious union with the Father (John 5 : 18) as they understood to denote equality with God. These high assumptions he had made on each of his previous visits to Jerusalem, and so plainly as not to be misunderstood.

Ye believe not, because ye are not of my sheep.—They were sunk in worldliness, and in no condition to receive spiritual truth. "With the heart man believeth unto righteousness" (Rom. 10 : 10), and evidence that would be convincing to a Nathaniel would be altogether unsatisfactory to a Caiaphas. And it is so with all truth. It must be approached with a guileless, teachable, child-like spirit. Bacon says : "The kingdom of man, which is founded on the sciences, can not be entered otherwise than the kingdom of God—that is, in the condition of a little child." The study of Christ requires every imagination to be brought down, and every high thing that exalteth itself against the knowledge of God (2 Cor. 10 : 5). "No progress can be made in religion, or in science, till the pride which exalts itself to judge over God, and to decide what he ought to have done, is repressed and till the man takes his place as a learner at the feet of Jesus as the philosopher takes his place at the feet of nature."—Mark Hopkins.

My sheep hear my voice.—"The sheep, though the most simple creature, is superior to all animals in this, that he soon hears his shepherd's voice, and will follow no other. Also he is clever enough to hang entirely on his shepherd, and to seek help from him alone. He can not help himself, nor find pasture for himself, nor heal himself, nor guard against wolves, but depends wholly and solely on the help of another."—Luther. And thus it is with the Christian ; thus he ever looks to the Good Shepherd. "His reference to the figure of the sheep (ver. 26), as it had been used by him at the Feast of Tabernacles (10 : 1-18), is not strange, for probably most of those now present—priests, scribes, and Pharisees—were residents in Jerusalem, and had heard his words at that time."—Andrews.

Neither shall any man.—This clause should read, "And none shall," including all powers both human and diabolical.

my hand. My Father, which gave them me, is greater than all ; and no man is able to pluck them out of my Father's hand. I and my Father are one.

Then the Jews took up stones again to stone him. Jesus answered them, Many good works have I shewed you from my Father ; for which of those works do ye stone me ?

The Jews answered him, saying, For a good work we stone thee not ; but for blasphemy ; and because that thou, being a man, makest thyself God.

Jesus answered them, is it not written in your law, I

No man is able to pluck them out of my Father's hand.—"Read, 'None is able to pluck out of my Father's hand'—that is, that which he holdeth fast none can tear away."—Alford.

Then the Jews took up stones.—"Therefore the Jews," occasioned by his apparent blasphemy in assuming union and equality with God. "They had demanded that he speak plainly. They mobbed him when he did. With that same majestic mien that had already carried him through two similar scenes, he quelled the populace for the moment. He cited against them their own Hebraic Scriptures. He repeated, in language stronger, if that were possible, than before, his mystical union with his Father. Then he bade adieu to the city which so strangely belied its name—Inheritance of Peace."—Abbott.

Is it not written in your law ?—"The passage here quoted by our Saviour was peculiarly applicable to the circumstances. Ps. 82 speaks of God as standing 'in the congregation of the mighty,' pleading in behalf of 'the poor and needy,' represented in the person of Christ, God in our nature, the language of whose life is expressed in the words of the psalm (vers. 3, 4), 'Defend the poor and fatherless : do justice to the afflicted and needy. Deliver the poor and needy : rid them out of the hand of the wicked.' The result is expressed in Jno. 11 : 49-53. The psalm proceeds (vers. 6-8), 'I have said, Ye are gods ; and all of you are children of the most high. (7), But ye shall die like men, and fall like one of the princes. (8), Arise, O God, judge the earth : for thou shalt inherit all nations.' That the doom above denounced awaited those who persecuted in the person of Christ, the poor and needy, was speedily proved by the fact ; and that he being truly God, as well as man, did arise, and is the appointed Judge of the earth ; and that he will, in

Chap. XXIX.

John 10 : 34-40.

J.C. 33.

said, Ye are gods? If he called them gods, unto whom the word of God came, and the Scripture cannot be broken; say ye of him, whom the Father hath sanctified, and sent into the world, Thou blasphemest; because I said, I am the Son of God? If I do not the works of my Father, believe me not. But if I do, though ye believe not me, believe the works; that ye may know, and believe, that the Father is in me, and I in him.

Therefore they sought again to take him; but he escaped out of their hand. And went away again opposition to the narrow notions of the Jews, inherit all nations, is equally true."—Bloomfield.

I said, ye are gods.—"What he saith is of this kind: If those who have received this honor by grace are not found fault with for calling themselves gods, how can he deserve to be rebuked who hath this by nature?"—Chrysostom.

The Scripture can not be broken.—"Made void."—Alford. Can not be questioned or gainsaid.

Sanctified.—"Set apart as the holy one of God. The word is from a Hebrew original, which signifies to set apart from common use and apply to a sacred purpose."—Bloomfield.

If I do not the works of my Father.—Meaning, "If I had not done the same works which my Father doth, ye might refuse to believe my words; but since they bear the same stamp and impress, you should at least believe them, if you will not believe my words; and then would you understand that the Father is in me, and I in the Father."—Tittman.

That ye may know and believe.—"Read, 'Perceive and know.'"—Alford.

The Father is in me, and I in him.—"By these words our Lord meant communion of mind and equality of power. It is plain that the Jews clearly understood that he claimed and ascribed to himself the attributes of Godhead, and made himself equal with the Father."—Bloomfield. Under this impression Jesus left them, and it can not be doubted that he intended to leave them with this impression.

Escaped out of their hands, gives the idea of a hasty flight, and that is not at all conveyed by the original, which is simply, "and he passed away from them." The godlike majesty which now shone from him overawed his would-be murderers.

beyond Jordan into the place where John at first baptized ; and there he abode. And many resorted unto him, and said, John did no miracle : but all things that John spake of this man were true. And many believed on him there.

The place where John at first baptized.—"Why this mention of the place of our Lord's retreat? Not to show historical accuracy, nor for the mere information of the readers ; but because it is connected with the testimony of John, and with the effects of that testimony and its verification by fact in causing many to believe on him there."—Alford.

And there he abode.—"This implies that he made no long circuits through the surrounding towns, but remained in the town or district of Bethany. How long he sojourned there before he went up to raise Lazarus does not clearly appear. It is inferred by some—from John 11 : 7, 8, 'The Jews of late sought to stone thee,'—that he had then but just come from Jerusalem ; but much stress can not be laid on this. It was four months to the Passover, and it is not improbable that a half of this time, or more, was spent beyond Jordan, in the neighborhood of Bethany."—Condensed from Andrews. He was now again in the jurisdiction of Herod, but he was in less danger from the wiles of "that fox" than from the deadlier malice of his enemies at Jerusalem.

CHAPTER XXX.

THE GREAT SUPPER.

AND it came to pass, as he went into the house of one of the chief Pharisees to eat bread on the Sabbath-day, that they watched him.

Jesus Dines with a Pharisee.

As he went.—"When he had come."—Alford.

One of the chief Pharisees.—"The Pharisee by whom the Lord was invited to eat bread is described as 'one of the chief Pharisees.' This may denote that he was of high social position, but probably includes some official distinction, as that he was chief of a synagogue, or member of the Sanhedrin. His motive in thus seeking the Lord's society does not clearly appear; and it is possible that, unlike most of his sect, he wished to show him some mark of respect, perhaps as a prophet, perhaps as the Messiah. Still the Lord's words (v. 12) imply that he made the feast in a self-seeking, ostentatious spirit, and under the pretence of hospitality he may have hidden an evil design."—Andrews. "It is probable that this was a splendid entertainment, and the guests distinguished persons."—Trench.

Eat bread on the Sabbath day.—"Every week the pious Jew repeated that Thanksgiving day which New England enjoys but once a year. Walking, social visiting, even games and dancing, were a part of the Pharisaic observance of the Sabbath day. . . . 'Meet the Sabbath with a lively hunger; let thy table be covered with fish, flesh, and generous wine.' 'Let the seats be soft, and adorned with beautiful cushions, and let elegance smile in the furniture of the table.' 'Assume all thy sprightliness.' 'Utter nothing but what is provocative of mirth and good humor.' 'Walk leisurely, for the law requires it, as it does also longer sleep in the morning.' 'Be resolute and merry, though ruined in debt.' Such are some of the Rabbinical precepts concerning the Sabbath."—Abbott's Jesus of Nazareth. "The idea of the Sabbath among the Jews was not at all that of a day to be austere kept, but very much to the contrary."—Trench. "It is noteworthy that Christ, who rebukes the legalism and asceticism with which the Pharisees hedged about the Sabbath, and the spirit of inhumanity which they concealed under a pretence of Sabbath observance, utters no word of condemnation of the social freedom which characterized the day. Observe, too, that, while he accepts all invitations, he makes every social gathering an occasion of direct religious instruction."—Abbott on Luke.

And behold, there was a certain man before him which had the dropsy. And Jesus answering, spake unto the lawyers and Pharisees, saying, Is it lawful to heal on the Sabbath-day? And they held their peace. And he ^{Heals of the Dropsy.} took him, and healed him, and let him go : and answered them, saying, Which of you shall have an ass or an ox fallen into a pit, and

They watched him.—"The invitation seems not to have been given in good faith, but in the hope that the nearer and more accurate watching of the Lord's words and ways, which such an opportunity would give, might afford some new matter of accusation against him. Such was, probably, the spring of the apparent courtesy which they showed him now, and so did they reverence the sacred laws of hospitality!"—Trench.

A certain man which had the dropsy.—"The appearance of the dropsical man at such a feast it is not easy to explain. He could hardly, if severely ill, have been invited as a guest; and it is said that after the Lord had 'healed him he let him go,' as if he were only accidentally present. Nor is it probable that he came merely as a spectator, although Eastern customs permit strangers to enter houses at all hours with great freedom, and they are often present at feasts merely to look on. Some have therefore supposed that he was intentionally brought in by the Pharisees, to see if the Lord would heal him on that day. But it is more probable that he came in faith to be healed, and unable, perhaps, to approach the Lord before he entered into the house, now forced himself into the room where he was. Had he been a mere tool in the hands of the Pharisees, it may well be doubted whether the Lord would have healed him."—Andrews.

Answering, the unspoken thoughts of the Pharisees.

Is it lawful?—"The Pharisees were watching Christ; Christ tries the Pharisees. According to Rabbinical law it was unlawful."—Abbott. "This unexpected question evidently embarrassed them. If they answered yes, the occasion of finding fault was taken away; if no, they could be charged with want of compassion."—Schaff.

They held their peace.—They would not approve, they could not gainsay.

Let him go.—"Sent him away. He was not a guest. The rebuke was not given until after the man had been sent away."—Schaff.

Which of you shall have an ass or an ox.—"Some manuscripts, and these the better ones, for ass read son. The verse

Chap. XXX.

Luke 14 : 5-8.

J.C. 33.

will not straightway pull him out on the Sabbath-day ? And they could not answer him again to these things.

And he put forth a parable to those which were bidden, when he marked how they chose out the chief rooms ; saying unto them, When thou art bidden of any man to a wedding, sit not down in the highest room, will then read, Which of you shall have a son, or even an ox, fallen into a pit ? The argument here is precisely the same as in Matt. 12 : 11." — Abbott. Alford adopts the new reading, Trench prefers the older one, Schaff says the weight of authority is for the reading, "a son." "As on other occasions (Matt. 12 : 11 ; Luke 13 : 15), the Lord brings back those persons to their own experience, and lets them feel the keen contradiction in which their blame of Christ's free work of love sets them with themselves, in that, where their worldly interests were at hazard, they did that very thing whereof they made now an occasion against him." — Olshausen.

And he put forth a parable.—"The word 'parable' is here to be taken in a wider sense, not in that of an invented narrative, but in that of a parabolic address." — Lange. "The language implies that we are to look in this teaching for a spiritual meaning beneath the social instruction which lies on the surface." — Abbott. The section covered by this chapter has been aptly entitled, "The Son of Man eating and drinking." "It belongs to the peculiarities of Luke, that he loves to represent to us the Saviour as sitting at a social table, where he most beautifully reveals his pure humanity. This time he glorifies the meal through table-talk which, more than that of any other, was 'seasoned with salt' (Col. 4 : 6), and, according to the exceedingly vivid and internally credible account of Luke, was addressed, first to the guests (vers. 7-10), then to the host (vers. 11-14), finally an occasion being given (ver. 15) to both (vers. 16-24)." — Van Oosterzee.

Highest room.—"The word 'room' is used in the original sense of the word as equivalent to space or place. In the East, in the time of Christ, tables were ordinarily arranged around an open square (in the manner described on page 223, see also Matt. 26 : 20). The middle place on each couch of the triclinium was considered the place of honor, here designated as the chief room. 'At a large feast there would be many of these.' — Alford. "In our democratic society we can not well appreciate the bitterness of the contention which often took place among guests for these places of honor. It was probably such a strife that Luke re-lest a more honorable man than thou be bidden of him ; and he that bade thee and him come and say to thee, Give this man place ; and thou begin with shame to take the lowest room. But when thou art bidden, go and sit down in the lowest room ; that when he that bade thee cometh, he may say unto thee, Friend, go up higher : then shalt thou have worship in the presence of them that sit at meat with thee. For whosoever exalteth himself shall be abased, and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted.

fers to in chap. 22 : 24. A strife for ecclesiastical pre-eminence, not in real power, but only in title and dignity, between the Archbishops of Canterbury and York, agitated all England for a long time, and was finally settled by making the one primate of England, and the other primate of all England."—Abbott.

Worship.—Respect, honor, reverence.

Whosoever exalteth himself, etc.—“ This is the enunciation of a general law of absolutely universal application ; but the final abasement or exaltation may not come until the future life. See Isaiah 5 : 12-15 ; also James 4 : 10 ; 1 Peter 5 : 5, 6.” —Abbott. “ The highest and most profitable lesson is the true knowledge and lowly esteem of ourselves.”—Thomas A. Kempis. “ Whatever you are from nature, keep to it ; never desert your own line of talent. If Providence only intended you to write posies for rings, or mottoes for twelfth-cakes, keep to posies and mottoes ; a good motto for a twelfth-cake is more respectable than a villainous epic poem in twelve books. Be what nature intended you for, and you will succeed ; be any thing else, and you will be ten thousand times worse than nothing.”—Sydney Smith. “ The universal axiom, in which all complacence is included, and from which flow all the formalities which custom has established in civilized nations, is that no person should give any preference to himself ; a rule so comprehensive and certain that perhaps it is not easy for the mind to imagine an incivility without supposing it to be broken.” —Samuel Johnson. “ The three sources of ill-manners are pride, ill-nature, and want of sense ; so that every person who is already endowed with humility, good nature, and good sense will learn good manners with little or no teaching. Christianity is the best foundation of what we call good manners ; and of two persons who have equal knowledge of the world, he that is the

Then said he also to him that bade him, When thou makest a dinner or a supper, call not thy friends, nor thy brethren, neither thy kinsmen, nor thy rich neighbors ; lest they also bid thee again, and a recompense be made thee. But when thou makest a feast, call the poor, the maimed, the lame, the blind ; and thou shalt best Christian will be the best gentleman."—Jones (of Nayland). Compare also Proverbs, 25 : 6, 7.

When thou makest a dinner.—"The composition of the company before him seems to have given occasion for this saying of our Lord. The Pharisee, his host, had doubtless, with the view mentioned in verse 1 [to watch him], invited the principal persons of the place, and with the intention of courting their favor and getting a return. The Lord rebukes him in this spirit ; and it has been well remarked that the intercourse and civilities of social life among friends and neighbors are here presupposed, with this caution, that our means are not to be sumptuously laid out upon them, but upon something far better—the providing for the poor and maimed and lame and blind."—Alford. (See notes on pages 417.) "It was probably in a town in Perea, neither a large city nor a rural district, but just of that intermediate kind, where questions of position are deemed so important. The whole account is exceedingly apt and true to life."—Schaff.

Call not thy friends.—"Call" here means more than 'invite ;' it implies a loud calling, an ostentatious invitation, so that the whole town knows of the entertainment. The word will bear pondering wherever people sound a trumpet before their feasts. This is not a positive prohibition of entertaining one's friends and neighbors. Such intercourse is taken for granted. What is forbidden is the thought that this is hospitality, or in itself praiseworthy. Social entertainments in the East are often occasions, as with us, of great display. Each course consists of a single dish ; sometimes as many as forty or fifty courses are given. The drawing-room is ordinarily one that opens directly upon the court-yard. The flowers and fountain in the yard, where there is often music, and sometimes dancing, add to the attractions of the scene. In the richer mansions the room itself is often elaborately decorated. The practice of reclining at meals is no longer in vogue."—Abbott.

Call the poor, the maimed, the lame, the blind.—"It is as common in the East for a rich man to give a feast to the poor, the maimed, and the blind, as it is in England for a nobleman to entertain men of his own degree. Does he wish to gain some be blessed : for they cannot recompense thee : for thou shalt be recompensed at the resurrection of the just.

And when one of them that sat at meat with him heard these things, he said unto him, Blessed is he that shall eat bread in the kingdom of God.

temporal or spiritual blessing? he orders his head servant to prepare a feast for one or two hundred poor guests. Messengers are then dispatched into the streets and lanes to inform the indigent that on such a day rice and curry will be given to all who are there at the appointed time. Long before the hour the visitors may be seen bending their steps toward the house. There goes the old man who is scarcely able to move his palsied limbs, while he talks to himself about better days ; and there the despised widow moves with a hesitating step. There the sanyasi or pandaram boldly brushes along, and scowls upon all who offer the least impediment to his progress. These objects, suffering under every possible disease of our nature, congregate together, without a single kindred association excepting the one which occupies their expectations. What a motley scene is that given in such a village !"—Roberts.

For thou shalt be recompensed, etc.—“ Earthly recompense amounts to nothing ; it gives no blessing. All outlay with the hope of return is a mere squandering upon self. But providing for the poor is lending to the Lord ; he will repay it, and his promise is the security for the blessedness referred to. Our Lord, of course, does not here encourage charity for the purpose of obtaining a future reward.”—Schaff.

At the resurrection of the just.—So in Jno. 5 : 29. The Pharisees believed in two resurrections : one to take place at the coming of the Messiah (who would thus establish an earthly kingdom, to which the Pharisee here evidently alludes by “ the kingdom of God ”) ; the other, the final resurrection, to be followed by a state of retribution.

Blessed is he that shall eat.—The Jews had gross notions of a splendid feast at the coming of the Messiah, which this man seems to have entertained. The paraphrase is, “ They are happy that shall share in the privileges and pleasures of Messiah's kingdom upon earth, and be admitted to all the delightful entertainments of the heavenly world at the resurrection of the just.” To eat bread was a usual phrase for a meal, whether of common provisions or luxuries (2 Sam. 9 : 7 ; 12 : 17). “ The company this ‘ one ’ was in, and the parable which his remark called forth, oppose the view that he sympathized with our

Chap. XXX.

Luke 14 : 16-17.

J.C. 33.

Then said he unto him, A certain man made a great supper, and bade many : and sent his servant at sup-

Lord. Some think it was merely an attempt at a diversion, since our Lord's remarks were unpleasantly telling. It is more probable that the man, hearing of the resurrection of the just, at once thought of the great feast (the millennial feast) which the Jews expected would follow, and thus spoke with the common Jewish idea that his admission to that feast was a certainty."—Schaff.

Then said he unto him.—"Our Lord, in answering through this parable, accepts as correct the expectation of a blessed state of the 'just' after their resurrection, himself representing it, as the Jews had done, under the figure of a feast. The parable answers the remark by suggesting this thought : 'You speak of the blessedness of those who are guests at this feast ; but what if you, and those like you, refuse to accept the invitation already given, and thus reject what you seem to praise ?' "—Riddle.

A certain man.—"There is a similarity between this parable and the one spoken in Matt. 22 : but the two are distinct, and spoken on different occasions."—Whedon. "In the parable of the marriage feast, it is a king who invites to the wedding of his son (Matt. 22 : 2). That was spoken in the temple during the closing controversies with the Jews, and is therefore much more pronounced in its severity and prediction of judgment. In both the giver of the feast represents God."—Riddle.

A great supper.—"This may be distinguished from the marriage feast. The former refers immediately to Gospel privileges, the latter to their culmination in the marriage-supper of the Lamb."—Riddle. "A feast is frequently employed in Scripture to be a symbol of what is provided for the soul in the great gift of the Saviour Christ Jesus. Man not only needs bread for the body, but also for his immortal soul. The first thing in this great feast provided is the forgiveness of sin ; the next, regeneration of heart."—Cummings.

Bade many.—"Those who might be presumed the most favorably disposed for the embracing of the truth ; the most religious among the people, the priests and elders, the scribes and Pharisees. Christ still bids many : all are bidden."—Trench.

Sent his servant at supper-time.—In addition to a first and formal invitation, it was usual among the Jews to send a servant with a second on the eve of the entertainment (comp. Matt. 22 : 3), and the custom still prevails in the East. Dr. Thomson says, in regard to the present custom : "If a sheik, beg, or emeer invites, he always sends a servant to call you at the proper time. This servant often repeats the very formula mentioned per-time, to say to them that were bidden, Come, for all things are now ready. And they all with one consent began to make excuse. The

Parable of the Great Supper.

in Luke 14 : 17 : 'Tefüddülû, el 'asha hâder'—'Come, for the supper is ready.' The fact that this custom is mainly confined to the wealthy and to the nobility is in strict agreement with the parable, where the certain man who made the great supper, and bade many, is supposed to be of this class. It is true now, as then, that to refuse is a high insult to the maker of the feast, nor would such excuses as those in the parable be more acceptable to a Druse emeer than they were to the lord of this 'great supper.' " "And such was the hospitality of ancient Greece and Rome. When a person provided an entertainment for his friends or neighbors, he sent round a number of servants to invite the guests : these were called vocatores by the Romans, and κλητω-ρες by the Greeks. The day when the entertainment is to be given is fixed some considerable time before ; and, in the evening of the day appointed, a messenger comes to bid the guests to the feast. They were not now asked for the first time, but had already accepted the invitation when the day was appointed, and were therefore already pledged to attend at the hour when they might be summoned. They were not taken unprepared, and could not in consistency and decency plead any prior engagement. They could not now refuse without violating their word and insulting the master of the feast, and therefore justly subjected themselves to punishment. The terms of the parable exactly accord with established custom, and contain nothing of the harshness to which infidels object."—Paxton. "The invitation of the Old Testament bade the whole Jewish nation to God's kingdom ; John the Baptist and Jesus, with the message, 'The kingdom of God is at hand,' brought the second invitation. 'Come, for all things are now ready,' was the burden of their ministry (Gal. 4 : 4). But it is also the Gospel message to-day. On God's part all is ready ; the guest has simply to accept the invitation and come."—Abbott.

All things are now ready.—"There was, beyond a doubt, in the world's history a time when, more than any other, it might be said, 'All things are now ready ;' a fullness of time in which, when it was arrived, and not till then, the kingdom of heaven was set up, and men invited—the Jew first, and afterward the Gentile—to enter into it."—Trench.

And they all with one [mind] began to make excuse.—"The translators supply the word 'consent,' but this implies combined action, and that is not indicated by the original. The spiritual

Chap. XXX.

Luke 14 : 18-21.

J.C. 33.

first said unto him, I have bought a piece of ground, and I must needs go and see it : I pray thee have me excused. And another said, I have bought five yoke of oxen, and I go to prove them : I pray thee have me excused. And another said, I have married a wife : and therefore I cannot come. So that servant came, and shewed his lord these things. Then the master of lesson is that all excuses for neglect of religion and rejection of Christ have one common cause—a disrelish of spiritual things.”

—Abbott. “The excuses which are mentioned are such as plainly indicated, on the part of those who made them, a slighting both of the entertainment and of him who had prepared it. Real friends would never make such excuses. The excuses were a mere pretence, to cover up the dislike which the persons felt ; and thus they manifested a spirit worthy to be frowned on.”—Alford.
 “Their excusing themselves shows that the obligation to come was in some measure acknowledged.”—Riddle.

The first said unto him, etc.—“The first pleads property, the second business, the third domestic duties ; the first necessity, the second his plans, the third simply his will ; the first is in language respectful, the second less so, the third is abrupt and almost insulting. Neither of them is kept away by any thing intrinsically sinful. Neither of them proffers a good excuse, for the farm and the oxen could have waited, and the wife could have come with her husband ; the claims of this life and the other are not inconsistent. Comp. 1 Cor. 7 : 29 for the Christian spirit respecting property, business, and domestic ties.”—Abbott.

The master of the house being angry.—“Such an intimation, dropped incidentally in the teaching of Christ, is very significant. The references elsewhere in the Bible to the ‘wrath of God’ are not human misinterpretations of the divine character.”
—Abbott. “The anger was natural on the part of ‘the master of the house.’ While God’s anger is not like that of man, he has a holy wrath against sin, which exceeds man’s wrath even as his love exceeds ours. Worldly excuses are all in vain ; for they all assume that what we want to do is preferred to what God would have us do. That is the attitude of sin, which is antagonism to God. He must hate it because he is what he is, and it is what it is. In Matt. 22 : 7 we have the punishment represented ; what was then prophesied was soon fulfilled in the case of the refusing Jews.”—Riddle.

Chap. XXX.

Luke 14 : 23, 24.

J.C. 33.

the house being angry, said to his servant, Go out quickly into the streets and lanes of the city, and bring in hither the poor, and the maimed, and the halt, and the blind. And the servant said, Lord, it is done as thou hast commanded, and yet there is room. And the lord said unto the servant, Go out into the highways and hedges, and compel them to come in, that my house

Go out quickly into the streets and lanes of the city.—"Those in the streets and lanes are interpreted by many of the commentators to mean the Jews; those in the highways and hedges the Gentiles."—Abbott.

And yet there is room.—"The provisions made for the feast were ample; the servant would have the place filled with guests. 'Not only nature, but grace also, abhors a vacuum.'"—Bengel.

Go out into the highways and hedges.—"This refers to the extension of the Gospel invitation among the Gentiles. As this was a work of time, 'quickly' is not added here. The sending outside of the city for guests did not take place until after the servant had returned to his lord. So the calling of the Gentiles was not until after the ascension of Christ."—Riddle. "The parable, hitherto historic, becomes prophetic here, for it declares how God had a larger purpose of 'grace' than could be satisfied by the coming in of a part and remnant of the Jewish people; that he had prepared a feast, at which more should sit down than they—founded a church with room in it for Gentile as for Jew—those, too, being fellow-citizens with the saints, and of the household of God."—Trench.

Compel them to come in.—Constrain them, moral constraint being intended. "This expression must be carefully interpreted. It does not sanction any literal compulsion or force in pressing the Gospel on men's acceptance. Least of all does it sanction the least approach to intolerance or persecution of men because of their religious opinions. Bishop Pearce says, 'Compel them by arguments, not by force. The nature of the parable shows this plainly. It was a feast to which they were invited.'"—Ryle. "Not as if they would make the 'excuses' of the first class, but because it would be hard to get them over two difficulties. 1. 'We are not in fit company for such a feast.' 2. 'We have no proper dress, and are ill in order for such a presence.' How fitly does this represent the difficulties and fears of the sincere! How is this met? 'Take no excuse: make them come as they are; bring them along with you.'"—Famie.

Chap. XXX.

Luke 14 : 24.

J.C. 33.

may be filled. For I say unto you, That none of those men which were bidden shall taste of my supper.

son. "The compelling is that of love. When pride declines the Gospel the Master is angry, and no further invitation is sent ; when humility hesitates, love compels."—Abbott.

I say unto you that none.—"Our Lord here appears to throw off the veil of the parable, and proclaim the supper his own, intimating that when transferred and transformed into its final glorious form, and the refusers themselves would give all for another opportunity, he will not allow one of them to taste it."—Jamieson

"None of those men . . . shall taste of my supper."—"As if he would say : This is the eating bread in the kingdom of God, to which you look forward ; though it is God's feast, to which God has invited, it is 'my supper,' given in my honor, though I have come 'in the form of a servant' to invite you ; and none of you will enter, because in refusing me you refuse to obey the second summons of God who has before invited you through his word. This discourse probably increased the already pronounced hostility."—Schaff. "The spiritual lesson [of this parable] to the Christian is twofold : 1. That it is the spiritually poor, maimed, halt, and blind that are worthy, since need is worth in love's eyes. 2. So that when the Gospel is rejected by the rich and prosperous, guests for Christ's kingdom may always be found among the poor and unfortunate. This truth was amply illustrated by the ministry of Wesley and Whitefield, and is again in our own day by that of Mr. Moody. Directly opposed to Christ's method is that of soliciting those that refuse, by luxurious churches, fine choirs, and proffers of social consideration. The Gospel, as Christ preached it, never goes begging."—Abbott.

CHAPTER XXXI.

THE PARABLES IN PEREA.

AND there went great multitudes with him : and he turned, and said unto them, If any man come to me, and hate not his father, and mother, and wife, and children, and brethren, and sisters, yea, and his own life also, he cannot be my disciple. And whosoever doth not bear his

What is required of Christ's Disciples.

And there went great multitudes with him.—This discourse was probably not connected with the one in the preceding chapter. The words "there were going with him" (the correct rendering of the text) imply that it was addressed, during a journey, to the throng which so customarily attended him. "He knew that they had generally very erroneous notions of his kingdom, and were not prepared to submit to the losses and privations, or to encounter the various dangers and difficulties, which certainly awaited his true disciples. He therefore turned himself, and addressed them in a manner which was apparently calculated to drive them from him."—Scott. The same remarks he had, in substance, made before (Matt. 10 : 37), but he here adds new illustrations.

Hate not his father and mother . . . and his own life also.—See Matt. 10 : 37, where the words are "loveth more than me." "The demand is for supreme love to Christ : 'father and mother,' etc., are placed here as objects which may and often do interfere with this supreme love. In so far as they do this, they are to be hated, not actively and personally, but generally. The meaning will best appear, if we notice the crowning thought : 'yea, and his own life also.' This can not, of course, mean that a man should actively hate his life or soul, for then he must kill himself to become a Christian. All belonging solely to the sphere of the lower life, as opposed to the life of the Spirit, must be opposed in heart—that is, actually hated. The power to love implies the power to hate."—Schaff. Alford remarks : "This hate is not only consistent with, but absolutely necessary to, the very highest kind of love. It is that element in love which makes a man a wise and Christian friend—not for time only but for eternity." "All else, high as it may be in itself, must appear loss if it occasion the loss of Christ, whom none can gain but those who seek and desire him alone ; for that very knowledge of Christ, itself

Chap. XXXI.

Luke 14 : 27, 28.

J. C. 33.

cross, and come after me, cannot be my disciple. For which of you, intending to build a tower, sitteth not sufficing for all, in itself comprehending all, outshines and eclipses all beside."—Neander. "Every thing which I had I devoted unto him who adopted and redeemed me—health, riches, reputation, eloquence itself, of which the choicest fruit was the reflection that I was possessed of something which I might despise for Christ."—Gregory Nazianzen.

Bear his cross.—"Take it up ; a willing assumption, not a patient submission, is implied."—Abbott. "Every path that leads to heaven is trodden by willing feet. No one is ever driven to paradise."—Crosby. "While our Lord had foretold his death, he had not announced that he would be crucified ; so that this saying must have sounded strangely to the multitude."—Schaff. "There is an allusion here to the custom of the Romans, who obliged criminals to bear the cross, on which they were to suffer, to the place of execution. The cross here stands for death in its most frightful and ignominious form, but includes all minor sufferings to be endured for the truth ; the words had, therefore, probably a prophetic reference to the manner of Christ's death, and implied that those who would not follow him to die for the truth were not worthy of him."—Watson and Bloomfield. "Some men will follow Christ on certain conditions—if he will not lead them through rough roads, if he will not enjoin them any painful tasks, if the sun and wind do not annoy them, if he will remit a part of his plan and order. But the true Christian, who has the spirit of Jesus, will say, as Ruth said to Naomi, 'Whither thou goest, I will go,' whatever difficulties and dangers may be in the way."—Cecil. "Self-denial is not peculiar to Christians. He who goes downward often puts forth as much force to kill a noble nature as another does to annihilate a sinful one."—H. B. Stowe. "Your Lord will not give you painted crosses. He pareth not all the bitterness from the cross, neither taketh he the sharp edge quite from it ; for in that case it should be of your selecting, and not of his, which would have as little reason in it as it would have profit for us."—Rutherford.

"To praise the cross while yet untried, Comes oft of self-conceit and pride ;
But when it presses, to embrace
And love it, only comes of grace."—Tersteegen.

Intending to build a tower.—See Matt. 21 : 33. "A tower was a place of defence or observation, erected on high places, or in vineyards. It was made high, so as to enable one to see an enemy when he approached, and strong, so that it could not be easily taken. In eastern countries at present such towers are down first and counteth the cost, whether he have sufficient to finish it? Lest haply after he hath laid the foundation, and is not able to finish it, all that behold it begin to mock him, saying, This man began to build, and was not able to finish. Or what king, going to make war against another king, sitteth not down first and consulteth whether he be able with ten thousand to meet him that cometh against him with twenty thousand? Or often eighty feet high and thirty feet square. They were for the keepers who defended the vineyard from thieves and wild animals, especially from foxes (S. of Sol. 1 : 4 ; 2 : 15).”—Greswell. Bloomfield, however, remarks that “the best philologists agree that the original word here means a large and splendid mansion.” There is a variety of interpretations to these two short parables. Andrews understands both of them to refer to Christ himself. “He compares himself,” he says, “to a man who wishes to build a tower, his church ; and to a king who goes to make war with another king—with the prince of the world ; and they who would aid him in this building, or in this warfare, must be ready to sacrifice all.” In reference to that of the Builder, Abbott remarks : “Building is in the New Testament a common metaphor to express the process by which character is formed, little by little, until the whole soul becomes a temple of God, for the indwelling of his Spirit. See Matt. 7 : 24 ; 1 Cor. 3 : 11-16 ; 8 : 1, where edifieth is equivalent to buildeth ; and 1 Pet. 2 : 5. In framing the resolution to begin a Christian life, it is necessary to consider what it will cost, of self-renunciation, to maintain a consistent Christian character. The result of this counting the cost is always the discovery, I have not sufficient to finish ; then comes either the abandonment of the plan, before it is fairly undertaken, or a going unto Christ, who is our only and our complete sufficiency in and for all things (2 Cor. 3 : 5).” On the parable of the “Two Kings” Alford comments as follows : “The two kings here are, the man desirous to become a disciple, to work out his salvation, and God, with whose just and holy law he is naturally at variance ; these two are going to engage in war ; and the question for each man to sit down and ask himself is, ‘Can I, with my ten thousand, stand the charge of him who cometh against me with twenty thousand?’” Another interpretation is that of Godet : “The Christian is a king, but a king engaged in a struggle, and a struggle with an enemy materially stronger than himself. Therefore, before defying him with a

Chap. XXXI.

Luke 14 : 32-35.

J.C. 33.

else, while the other is yet a great way off, he sendeth an ambassage, and desireth conditions of peace. So likewise, whosoever he be of you that forsaketh not all that he hath, he cannot be my disciple.

Salt is good : but if the salt have lost his savor, wherewith shall it be seasoned ? It is neither fit for the land, nor yet for the dunghill ; but men cast it out. He that hath ears to hear, let him hear.

declaration of war by the open profession of the Gospel, a man must have taken counsel with himself, and become assured that he is willing to accept the extreme consequences of this position, even to the giving up of his life if demanded. The lesson is therefore 'a warning, which Jesus gives to those who profess discipleship, but who have not decided to risk every thing, to make their submission as early as possible to the world and its prince. Better avoid celebrating a Palm-day than end after such a demonstration with a Good Friday. Rather remain an honorable unknown, religiously, than, what is sadder in the world, an inconsistent Christian.' " Upon these comments Abbott remarks : " The latter seems to me the better interpretation. Christ enforces the alternative of Matt. 6 : 24. As Joshua, in Josh. 24 : 15, and Elijah, in 1 Kings 18 : 21, Christ compels a choice. In effect he bids those who are not willing to take up their cross in order to follow him to abandon all thought of becoming his disciples, and go back to their allegiance to the world. Underlying this, as the other parable, is the deep truth of the soul's need of God ; no man can enter upon the life-campaign against the world, the flesh, and the devil, without alliance with and reinforcements from an Almighty Saviour."

Forsaketh not all that he hath.—Literally, Doth not separate himself from all. How this is to be done Paul interprets in 1 Cor. 7 : 29-31.

Salt is good, but if the salt have lost his savor.—Matt. 5 : 13 ; Mark 9 : 50. " The Christian is the salt of the earth ; the savor is the spirit of self-sacrifice, by which Christ's disciples are to purify and save the world."—Abbott. " He told his apostles that this self-denial (verse 33) was peculiarly necessary for them, because it was the spiritual salt that would preserve them from apostasy, and others from corruption ; as it would not only enervate the temptation to which they were exposed, but its beauty, appearing with great luster in their behavior, would allure others to become disciples and true subjects of his kingdom,"—MacKnight.

Then drew near unto him all the publicans and sinners for to hear him. And the Pharisees and Scribes murmured, saying, 'This man receiveth sinners, and eateth with them.'

And he spake this parable unto them, saying, What

All the publicans and sinners.—"Of these publicans and sinners, the first were men infamous among their countrymen by their very occupation ; the second such as, till awakened by him to repentance and a sense of their past sins, had been notorious transgressors of God's holy law. He did not repel them, nor seem to fear, as the Pharisees would have done, pollution from their touch ; but, being come to seek and to save that which was lost, received them graciously, instructed them further in his doctrine, and lived in familiar intercourse with them."—Trench. "Tenderness of affection toward the most abandoned sinners is the highest instance of a divine and godlike soul."—William Law.

And the Pharisees and Scribes murmured.—See notes on pp. 68, 69. These were the orthodox Jews. They murmured not because he taught, but because he ate, with sinners, and otherwise mingled freely with them in social intercourse. "This was deemed by the Pharisees a lowering of himself, and perhaps of them, since they had admitted him as a guest at their entertainments (Luke 14 : 1, etc.). The murmur was occasioned by the present concourse, but it referred to the habitual conduct of our Lord."—Schaff. "The modern Christian, who mingles socially and freely with modern sinners, is always liable to the same criticism from modern Pharisees. The pride of propriety never understands the liberty of love. Observe how in this sentence, as in a similar accusation at another time, the Pharisees unconsciously told a sublime truth. It is the glory of Christ that he 'receiveth sinners and eateth with them' (Rev. 3 : 20.)"—Abbott.

He spake this parable.—"The three parables which follow, like the seven of the thirteenth chapter of Matthew, form one discourse ; they were delivered at one time and with one object. The direct object, indicated by the introductory verses (1, 2), and by the culmination of the three parables in the father's declaration to the elder son (verse 32), is to point out the spirit which the saved should manifest toward the lost, a spirit seeking to reclaim them ; and toward the repentant, a spirit ready to welcome them. The three must be taken together in order to understand the change wrought in the human soul in redemption. The prodigal son never, in fact, returns to his father's

Chap. XXXI.

Luke 15 : 4.

J.C. 33.

man of you having an hundred sheep, if he lose one of house unless the father comes after him ; the lost sheep and the lost coin are never recovered without voluntarily returning to the shepherd and owner. Looked at as a representative of human duty, the first two parables represent the duty of the church to seek and to save the lost, the third the duty to welcome the repentant to a full, free, and unrepachable pardon. All represent the joyfulness of religion, both as an earthly experience and in the heavenly state. Continuing the comparison, we may note the progression and climax in the series ; in the first, the shepherd of a hundred sheep misses the one out of the hundred ; in the second, the woman, owning but ten pieces of money, loses a tenth of her property, and searches for it with greater concern ; in the third, the father of two sons loses one, who becomes to him by sin and separation as dead, and in whose death is the keenest conceivable loss the heart can suffer."—Abbott. "Thus we find ourselves moving in ever narrower, and so intenser circles of hope and fear and love, drawing, in each successive parable, nearer to the innermost center and heart of the truth."—Trench. Bengel and others regard the parable of the lost sheep as representing a stupid and bewildered sinner ; that of the lost piece of money as representing a sinner unconscious of himself and of his own real worth ; that of the prodigal son as setting forth the most aggravated case, a conscious and voluntary sinner.

What man of you.—The parable is an argumentum ad hominem, as in Matt. 12 : 11, 12. If men will take such pains for a lost sheep, how much more should the disciples of Christ for a lost soul.

Having an hundred sheep.—This same parable was repeated on another occasion. See Matt. 18 : 12, 13, and notes on page . "In reading and interpreting it bear in mind its double application. 1. It is a parable of redeeming love. As such, it is borrowed from and to be interpreted by the Old Testament (Ezek. 34 : 12, 13 ; Isaiah 40 : 17 ; Psalm 23). Christ comes to seek and to save that which was lost (Matt. 18 : 11), perseveres until he finds it, patiently bears it back himself through the weary way to the fold again, rejoices in the labor and weariness, because recompensed by his own love, and seeks to have the church on earth and in heaven rejoice with him. 2. It parabolically illustrates what the spirit of Christ's church should be ; it should go out after the lost (Matt. 28 : 19), should persevere despite failure and rebuff (Gal. 4 : 16-20), should bear patiently with the weakness and failures of the recovered, bearing them and forbearing with them (Gal. 6 : 2), and should do them, doth not leave the ninety and nine in the wilderness, and go after that which is lost, until he find it?

this work of redeeming love with joy, transfiguring all sorrow and making jubilant all fatigue."—Abbott.

If he lose one of them.—"A natural and apt type of the sinner is a lost sheep, without wisdom to return to the protection of the shepherd, and without any means of protection in himself from the dangers of the wilderness."—Abbott.

Doth not leave the ninety-and-nine in the wilderness.—"The term 'wilderness' signifies not necessarily a desert place, but simply wildness—that is, an uninhabited place, and therefore presumptively good pasture land."—Abbott. "By it we suppose intended, not a bleak, desolate wild, but a pasture, like those unfenced commons stretching out for leagues—to which, in the old world, sheep are often driven—like our own wide prairies of the West."—W. R. Williams.

Go after that which is lost.—"The Good Shepherd goes himself; he does not send another—man, angel, or archangel. It is by personal work, not by proxy, we are to seek and to save that which is lost."—Abbott. "From his flock one sheep is missing. It has quitted its fellows. When they come to be counted at even, it is not found. In its defencelessness, and wilfulness, or witlessness, it is little likely to return; and if encountering the wolf or the lion, its fate is fixed. It can neither escape by fight nor by flight. It has gone nibbling the grass, bleating in its loneliness, and straying in its bewilderment; and now, as the night gathers and the shadows deepen, whither is it tending, and what shall become of it? The shepherd stops not to reckon. In his pity he can not afford that the poor beast perish; he leaves the ninety-and-nine in the wilderness pastures, and, as Matthew states it, 'goeth into the mountains,' where many a rough steep must be clambered, and many a precipice may yawn for the unguarded foot, and many a den may harbor its noxious serpents or its ferocious beasts of prey. Toil, peril, and discomfort are braved. The poor waif is found"—W. R. Williams. "The argument of this verse furnishes a conclusive answer to what is called the astronomical objection to the doctrine of redemption" (Abbott), which is, that the earth being but as a grain of sand compared with the wide universe of God, it is absurd to suppose that Deity would incarnate himself here, live, as man, a life of privation, and die a death of ignominy, to save a handful of lost souls. But the parable teaches that he went after the stray sheep, because it was astray. The ninety-and-nine did not need his care. On this subject Williams remarks: "The tininess of our planet, it may be, is not preventing it from serving

Chap. XXXI.

Luke 15 : 5-7.

J.C. 33.

And when he hath found it, he layeth it on his shoulders, rejoicing. And when he cometh home, he calleth together his friends and neighbours, saying unto them, Rejoice with me ; for I have found my sheep which was lost. I say unto you, that

Parable of the Lost Sheep.

as the great battle-field of God's moral universe. How oft a spot of military encounter, itself not larger than one of the city wards, may yet in our recent national struggle have decided, by the battle there fought, the political destinies of the broad continent ! So it is in God's government of our world and race. On our small nook of a globe may yet gather and center all the solitudes of heaven, and all the fierce hopes of hell. Good and evil may come here, into one long and dread death-grapple. The apostle said he was a spectacle to men and angels. And all the church on earth, widely dispersed, and variously schooled, affords a spectacle of divine wisdom and faithfulness, into which angels, stooping down, desire to look, catching thus profounder glimpses than the Godhead, not enshrouded, and not incarnate, elsewhere allows them. These angels of light might have swerved had not Christ's care and skill in saving the saved of earth so developed new wonders of Divine Truth and Grace, before unsuspected."

Until he find it.—"A hint of what is the patience and perseverance of Christ, and what should be the patience and perseverance of the Christian."—Abbott.

He layeth it on his shoulders.—"He is, however tired, willing to be yet more fatigued, so that his poor charge be saved from further exhaustion, and from continued exposure to peril. He lays it on his shoulders, not with upbraiding and grudging, chiding at its folly, but rejoicing at the recovery. And reaching home, he summons his neighbors to congratulate him, and rejoice with him, over the success of his pursuit and the restoration, to its fellows and to its fold, of his estrayed and imperiled charge."—W. R. Williams.

I say unto you.—"Christ applies the parable. There is a significance in this dignified, and even majestic, utterance. I, who know ; I who, when I tell you of heavenly things, tell you of mine own (John 1 : 51), announce to you this.'"—Abbott.
 "'I say unto you,' I, Jesus, the son of the Father, ever in the Father's bosom, and fully in the Father's confidence ; I, Jesus, the Lord of angels, intimately acquainted with all their employments, and cognizant of all their angelic sympathies ; I, the Maker of your race on the earth, and of their shining ranks on likewise joy shall be in heaven over one sinner that repenteth, more than over ninety and nine just persons which need no repentance.

high, the Creator also, utter it. I say unto you, 'There is joy' in that bright, far, holy heaven, among its white-robed and holy tenantry, over one such sinner that comes penitent to my teachings, and sits, docile and contrite, at my feet ; however degraded his past condition, and however vile his offences, and however forlorn his aspect and his prospects, there is more joy in the world of light over him than over ninety-and-nine just persons, who need no repentance."—W. R. Williams.

Joy shall be in heaven.—"We sometimes wish the privilege of reading our neighbor's heart. But here, opened by the hand of the Incarnate Revealer and Redeemer, we have a window into the very heart of God. We see his feelings of compassion toward our race and our own selves. He leaves the society of the sinless and the angelic, and the anthems of seraphim and cherubim, and the communion of heaven, for an earthly allotment of toil and exposure. He must traverse 'dark mountains' when he confronts the contradiction of sinners, and the assaults of the tempter, and he becomes denied of earth and buffeted of hell. To lift the victim of sin, and the heir of wrath, to his shoulders, as the recovered and ransomed one, that shoulder must bear the cross of shame and agony ; that soul of his must stoop to the yoke of denial, mockery, and betrayal. He must encounter the hidings of the face of the Father. Weary he sits at the well of Samaria. But, more weary, he faints under the weight of the cross they have made him bear. More weary, hangs he nailed to its wood, the jeer, the shout, the blasphemy, all jangling wildly in his ears, as he is ready to give up the Ghost, crying in his extremity, as the God-forsaken one, 'Eloi, Eloi, Lama Sabac-thani !'—"My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?"—W. R. Williams.

Ninety-and-nine just persons, which need no repentance.—"Who then are the just ? We suppose the more proper allusion to be to the angels, who, keeping their first estate, have never sinned ; or, if there be other beings like man, inhabiting other worlds, whose Eden was never marred and forfeited by sin, then we are taught that over their performance in holiness there is not the loud acclaim of joy that there is over each and every conversion of a sinner from our own lost and doomed race."—W. R. Williams. In this view Alford coincides, but a different application of the words is made by Schaff and Abbott. "This is the main point of the parable," says Schaff. "The 'ninety-and-

Either what woman, having ten pieces of silver, if she lose one piece doth not light a candle, The Lost Piece of Silver. and sweep the house, and seek diligently till she find it? And when she hath found it, she nine ' represent those who think themselves righteous. It was the opposition of this class which occasioned the parable. In Matthew the inhabitants of other unfallen worlds may be meant, but that application is less apt here." Abbott also thinks the words can not apply to worlds that have not fallen. "For though the language would apply to them," he says, "yet they are not directly referred to throughout the parable. Christ here, as in many other instances, takes the Pharisees at their own estimate. Assuming," he says in effect, "that you are what you think yourselves to be—just persons that need no repentance—there would be more joy in heaven over these repentent publicans and sinners than over you. The case is analogous to, and illustrated by, that of Luke 7 : 36-47."

"Wearily for me thou soughtest ;
On the cross my soul thou boughtest ;
Lose not all for which thou wroughtest,"

Medieval Hymn.

What woman having ten pieces of silver.—"The women in Syria, and throughout the East generally, wear pieces of silver, as ornaments, upon their heads. these being secured upon their tarboosh, or red skull-cap, by means of holes bored in them. The rich have gold ; the poorer silver. These have all been presents ; the first given at the birth of the child, and the rest added, one by one, as particular events occurred in the wearer's life. Now I think it not unlikely that the ten pieces of silver alluded to by our Saviour were those which formed the wreath round the woman's forehead. The loss of one of these coins would be considered, as indeed it is, a serious misfortune ; and we can easily imagine the diligence with which a woman would light a candle, and sweep the house, and search for one of these missing pieces of silver ; and when she had found it, how she would call upon her neighbors to rejoice with her at finding what, from long possession, she had become so much attached to. It is to be observed that it does not appear to be the loss of the mere value of the coin so much as the loss of that particular piece of silver which leads the woman to be so active in her endeavors to find it again. The pieces of silver thus worn are seldom, if ever, spent, but descend as heirlooms from mother to daughter, and hence, from their antiquity, would come to acquire, in the eyes of the woman, a worth for which no equivalent could be found.”—Rev. Joseph W. Ayre, “Diary of Eastern Travel,” pp. 64, 65. Other travelers say that the women of Nazareth still wear around the forehead and face a similar roll of silver coins, which they call “semedi ;” and as the customs of the East are permanent and unchanging, there is no doubt that this custom existed in the time of Christ.

calleth her friends and her neighbors together, saying, Rejoice with me ; for I have found the piece which I had lost. Likewise, I say unto you, There is joy in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth.

Light a candle.—A lamp. The houses of the lower ranks were anciently very dark ; some of those to be now seen in Herculaneum and Pompeii have no windows at all, and others only loop-holes. “The cottage homes of Palestine, in which our Lord so often lodged, and in one of which he was reared at Nazareth, are often furnished only with a floor of hard earth, and the chambers are often lit only by windows high up in the wall, like the narrow slits and loop-holes of our barns, admitting but little of the outer sunlight. Indeed, many of the ancient homes had no light but by the door. On the hard, beaten earth, coin or trinket once dropped may be soon covered among the litter brought in by the sandals of the traveler, or the crumbs and fragments flung to the dogs or the household animals, when these are permitted to enter.”—W. R. Williams.

I have found the piece which I had lost.—“In the first parable Christ employs a figure which addresses itself to the minds of the men in the audience, Palestine, and especially Perea, being a pastoral country ; then he uses one which addresses itself to the women [many of whom, doubtless, wearing this peculiar head-dress, were among his auditory], finally, one which addresses itself to the universal heart. The lesson of the first two parables is the same, except that the former brings out more clearly the self-sacrifice of the Saviour—a sacrifice involved in all successful labor for the salvation of souls ; this one brings out more clearly, by the lighting of the candle and the sweeping, the thoroughness of the search made by Christ and to be made by us. The former again implies the Saviour’s pity for the wandering and perishing. the latter God’s personal ownership in the soul and his sense of personal loss in its loss, a phase of truth which interprets the woman’s language, ‘I have found the piece which I had lost.’ The piece of money, or drachma, was worth about eight pence, and was equivalent to a day’s wages.”—Abbott.

Chap. XXXI.

Luke 15 : 11, 13.

J.C. 33.

And he said, A certain man had two sons : and the younger of them said to his father, Father, give me the portion of goods that falleth to me. And he divided unto them his living. And

The Prodigal Son.

A certain man had two sons.—"In a story as simple as it is sublime—a story which the world is never tired of repeating—Jesus both portrays the experience of the soul and unlocks the heart of God, that he may disclose the treasures of his divine love. The key with which he does this is the one word, 'Father.'"—Abbott. "Never certainly in human language was so much—such a world of love and wisdom and tenderness—compressed into such few immortal words. Every line, every touch, of the picture is full of beautiful, eternal significance."—Farrar. "Those who object to all use of fiction must explain as best they may this story, for such it is. There is not even an application attached to it; the reader is left to make that for himself. As a representation of redeeming love, it has been well called the Gospel in the Gospel; in comparison with others, 'the crown and pearl of all his (Christ's) parables.'"—Stier. "Merely in an artistic view this is true, every detail being at once true to the external life, and true to the spiritual experience which our Lord would portray. As a disclosure of divine love, we can hardly realize how truly it was a revelation. Contrast with it that conception of God which prevailed in the nominally Christian church in the days of the Inquisition. As a representation of human duty, we still do not realize its meaning. Contrast with it the ordinary feeling in a so-called Christian community toward the erring and the fallen. It may be regarded as consisting of five facts—vers. 11-13, sin; vers. 14-16, its results; vers. 17-20, repentance; vers. 20-24, the divine forgiveness; vers. 25-32, the Pharisaic reception of the repentant. . . . The two sons represent, not angels and men, for the spirit of the elder is any thing but angelic; nor Jews and Gentiles, for the question of the admission of Gentiles was not at this period of Christ's ministry publicly raised; that belongs to a later era in the history of the church. Primarily, the elder son represents the Pharisees, the younger son the publicans and sinners (vers. 1, 2); secondarily, the elder son the self-righteous and proud, the younger son the self-abased and penitent."—Abbott.

Give me the portion of goods; or, "thy substance."—"Such requests were not unknown in those days, since the portions were legally defined. That of the younger son would be one third, that of the elder two thirds (Deut. 21 : 17)."—Riddle. "A demand, not a request. There is no evidence that under Jewish not many days after, the younger son gathered all together, and took his journey into a far country, and law the son had a right to make this demand. It was as illegal as it was unfilial. It represents the first step in sin, the demand of the soul for independence of God, the claim to own, in contradistinction to the spirit which accepts all things from God as steward and trustee. The sinner's demand is, Give me my portion of goods ; the Christian's prayer is, Give me day by day my daily bread."—Abbott.

Divided unto them his living.—"That is, the estate, the possessions on which they lived. He will let the young man discover, by bitter experience, the folly of his request. Such at least is the dealing of God : he has constituted man a spiritual being—that is, a being with a will ; and when his service no longer appears a perfect freedom, and man promises himself something better elsewhere, he is allowed to make the trial. He shall discover, and, if need be, by most painful proof, that the only true freedom is freedom in God ; that to depart from him is not to throw off the yoke, but to exchange a light yoke for a heavy one, and one gracious master for a thousand imperious tyrants and lords."—Trench. "Its spiritual significance is illustrated by Rom. 1 : 21-28, and itself illustrates that passage. It is a striking rebuke of all attempt at religious compulsion, and is even a hint to parents that legal restraint, attempted in the case of sons that have reached a relatively mature age, is not according to God's method, 'who does not compel the inclinations of a depraved heart, which can only be cured by experiencing the results of sin.'"—Abbott. "But, remember, the discretion of a father oftentimes prevents the destruction of a child."—Quarles.

Not many days after.—"A certain interval of time elapses before he actually forsakes his father's house. It is a fine and delicate touch—the apostasy of the heart, as St. Bernard well observes, often running before the apostasy of the life. The divergence of the sinner's will and God's does not immediately appear."—Trench.

Gathered all together.—"His means were now all in a movable form, and he was fully prepared for a profligate squander."—Whedon. "By this gathering together of all, and departing, seems intimated the collecting, on man's part, of all his energies and powers, with the deliberate determination of getting, through their help, all the gratification he can out of the world—the open preference of the creature to the Creator."—Trench.

Far country.—"His next purpose is a due distance, where the will of God shall never seem to reach him, and, if possible, beyond the reach of his eye."—Whedon. "The far country is

Chap. XXXI.

Luke 15 : 13, 14.

J.C. 33.

there wasted his substance with riotous living. And when he had spent all, there arose a mighty famine in that land ; and he began to be in want. And he went forgetfulness of God."—Augustine. "We are always far from God when we are living without respect to, or trust in, or obedience under, him ; though he is never far from us. In this respect the imagery of the parable, being taken from human experience, is necessarily imperfect. The heavenly Father never loses sight of or ceases to care for, watch over, and protect his prodigal son. Even the famine and the hunger are Gospel messengers sent from him."—Abbott.

And there wasted his substance with riotous living.—"This ordinary English translation pictorially illustrates his course, which was clearly one of dissipation. But the Greek is, literally, 'Scattered what he had, living unsavingly,' and this more literal translation embodies the spiritual truth represented in the picture. For the worldly life is always a wasteful life ; he that gathers not with Christ scattereth abroad (Matt. 12 : 30), and he that gathers not for eternity lives unsavingly, and dies a pauper (chap. 12 : 16-21)."—Abbott. "The sinner's substance is wasted, when his character, his faculties, God's promises and helps—all that could fit him for usefulness and heaven—are used for selfish purposes, and he fails of the great purposes for which he was created."—Peloubet.

And when he had spent all, there arose a mighty famine in that land.—"There is always a mighty famine in the 'far country ;' but the soul rarely feels or knows it until all that is spent which for the time gave pleasure, though never real satisfaction. It is 'a famine of truth and love, and of all whereby the spirit of man indeed lives.'"—Trench. "But more than this, there is often a famine of the very things that gave pleasure ; power is taken away, fame blasted, friends depart, in old age pleasures of the senses fail ; and in this experience of famine the soul always begins to feel its own want of a something which the far country can not supply."—Abbott.

He began to be in want.—"Figuratively, the experiences of Solomon in biblical history, and of Byron in secular history, illustrate what is this want in time of famine. Even more strikingly is it illustrated by the autobiography of John Stuart Mill."—Abbott. "It is recorded in Colton's 'Lacon' that John Maddocks and Henry Quin, Esquires, the former in the clear, unincumbered possession of £6000 per annum, and both in full possession of health as well as competence, destroyed themselves for no other reason but because they were tired of the unvaried repetitions and inand joined himself to a citizen of that country ; and he sent him into his fields to feed swine. And he would fain have filled his belly with the husks that the swine insipid amusements of life. A similar instance is related in the Memoirs of Lord Peterborough. A young nobleman, blessed with health, riches, and a cultivated mind, terminated his own life because he was weary of existence !"—Eggleston. "There is no funeral so sad to follow as the funeral of our own youth, which we have been pampering with fond desires, ambitious hopes, and all the bright berries that hang in poisonous clusters over the path of life."—Walter Savage Landor. "This sense of want is itself the voice of God calling the prodigal home. Soul-weariness is Christ's invitation, 'Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest.'"—Abbott.

And he went and joined himself to a citizen.—"The sinner sells himself to the world ; he cntangles himself more deeply in it. Our Lord gives us a hint here of that awful mystery in the downward progress of souls by which he who begins by using the world to be a servant to minister to his pleasures submits in the end to a reversing of the relationship between them, so that the world uses him as its drudge, and sin as its slave. He becomes cheap in the sight of that very world for the sake of which he has forfeited all."—Trench.

Sent him to feed swine.—"The business of the devil's servants is to make provision for the flesh, to fulfill the lusts thereof ; and that is no better than feeding noisy, greedy, dirty swine."—Henry. "Men often run into riot and drunkenness, and baser sins, to try and deaden the hunger of their souls."—Peloubet. The feeding of swine was to a Jew the basest and vilest of all employments ; and peculiarly degrading. Herodotus says that in Egypt no swineherd was permitted to mingle in civil society, or to enter the temple of the gods.

He fain.—"Major says that this expression does not mean that he desired and was unable to gratify his desire. It rather signifies, 'He was glad—he was only too happy.'"—Ryle. "But all that he could hope was just to fill his belly. None but God can satisfy the longings of the immortal soul."—Trench.

With the husks.—Not what we call "husks," but the pods or beans of the carob-tree. "This tree is common in Syria ; it produces long slender pods shaped like a horn or sickle, containing a sweetish pulp, and several brown shining seeds like beans. These pods are sometimes used as food by the poorer classes in the East, and swine are commonly fed with them."—Robinson. "Horace alludes to living upon husks, as upon vile food (Ep.

Chap XXXI.

Luke 15 : 16, 17.

J.C. 33.

did eat ; and no man gave unto him. And when he came to himself, he said, How many hired servants of my father's have bread enough and to spare, and I II., 1 : 23). Pliny calls them the food of pigs (N. H., 23 : 79). They are still used in Spain, etc., as food for cattle, and were often given to horses by British soldiers in the peninsular war. They are imported into Britain, and called locust-beans by the farmers."—Biblical Museum. "The pod alone is eaten, so that 'husks' partially expresses the sense ; although it usually conveys the wrong impression that the swine's food could not be eaten at all by men. If the prodigal obtained his desire, we are to think of him as actually feeding with the unclean animals ; if not, that he was in absolute want, when swine had enough. In either case the description is of fearful misery."—Riddle.

No man gave unto him.—That is, gave him good satisfying food. "The husks he had before him, and could take ; but any thing that could satisfy the soul was not to be found in that land. The whole description is wonderful, and for nothing more than the evident relation in which his punishment stands to his sin."—Trench. "The Greek implies, not that the prodigal would have eaten of these husks, and no man gave him, but that he did eat them, no one giving to him any thing better."—Abbott.

Came to himself.—"These words imply that he had been beside himself, acting the part of a madman and a fool. Sin is here represented as madness ; and who acts so contrary to sound reason and the reality of things as a sinner?"—Guthrie. "To come to one's self, and to come to God, are one and the same thing."—Trench. "As one awaking from a dream, he comes to a consciousness of his true state."—Peloubet. "Excess of pleasure, like intemperance in wine or strong drink, inebriates the soul, and steepes the faculties, both of mind and body, in an unnatural lethargy, which the expressive language of Scripture compares, while it lasts, to a living death. Adversity and privation, solitude and reflection, dissipate the stupor, sober the understanding, and restore the powers, both of mind and of body, to their former tone and vigor."—Greswell.

Hired servants of my father.—"Not the true children of God, but all the lesser powers and things which serve God ; nature, animals, even men 'who do their work rather in the spirit of servants than of sons.'"—Peloubet.

Bread enough.—"Even these have enough to eat—not the higher joys and blessings of children and heirs, but the peace and comfort which belong to their lower natures."—Trench.

And I—a son still, though so unworthy—"perish with hunperish with hunger ! I will arise and go to my father, and will say unto him, Father, I have sinned against heaven, and before thee, and am no more worthy to be ger." In marked contrast with the case of the "hired servants." "The martyrs to vice far exceed the martyrs to virtue, both in endurance and in number."—Newman.

I will arise.—"Comparing his state with theirs, what does the prodigal determine now ? How many, even at this point, do not determine as he does ! They betake them to some other citizen of that far country, who promises them a little better fare or less contemptuous treatment. Or it may be they learn to dress their husks so that they shall look like human food ; and they then deny that they are the fodder of swine. Or glorying in their shame, and wallowing in the same sty with the beasts they feed, they proclaim that there was never intended to be any difference between the food of men and of swine."—Trench.

I will arise and go to my father.—"Against whom he had sinned, but who was his father still. God is our Father in one sense, however unworthy we are to be his children. There is none else to whom the sinner can go. He must go home."—Peloubet. "As departure from God is the essence of all sin, so returning to God is the essence of all repentance. Without this return repentance is spurious and reform transitory. Observe, too, that the remedy for all dissipation and riotous living is, not a resolution of total abstinence in the far country, but an abandonment of it, and a return to God."—Abbott.

Father, I have sinned unto heaven.—"Not against heaven, a meaning which the preposition (εις) will not bear. The true signification of the phrase is interpreted by Shakespeare : "My offence is rank ; it smells to heaven." Comp. Rev. 18 : 5 (where, however, the Greek preposition is different), and Jer. 51 : 9."—Abbott.

And before thee.—"We may injure ourselves by our evil, we may wrong our neighbor, but, strictly speaking, we can sin only against God. Comp. Psalm 51 : 4. "'Against thee, thee only, have I sinned," albeit David had sinned against himself, Bathsheba, Uriah, and the laws and order of his own kingdom. The sense of sin against God swallows up all other and lesser thoughts of sin."—Abbott.

And am no more worthy to be called thy son.—"Not his wastefulness or licentiousness, but that he has fallen away from his sonship, chiefly oppresses him. Whatever in us makes us unworthy to be called sons of God should bring us to him with like confession, be the form of that sin what it may."—Abbott.

called thy son : make me as one of thy hired servants. And he arose, and came to his father. But when he was yet a great way off, his father saw him, and had

Make me as one of thy hired servants.—Consecration always accompanies true confession. "He still clings to his sonship, though he confesses he does not even deserve the treatment of a hireling. There is no thought that he could in such a position win back his father's favor. Even if there were, the conduct of the father shows how needless such a notion is. The main point is, the sinner must make no excuse, but come just as he is, confessing truly what he is."—Riddle.

And he arose and came to his father.—"Toward," not "to." "He did not come to his father; his father came out to him. This actual setting out on the homeward journey is the turning-point in the prodigal's life. The sinner may have conviction of sin and resolution of reform in the future, and remain unsaved in the far country; it is actually arising and going that saves. To this God makes the promise of Isaiah 55 : 7. Whatever sense of sin suffices to lead to this return is sufficient; no need to wait for deeper convictions; whatever trust in God suffices to inspire to this is sufficient; no need to wait for greater faith. Note two suggestive facts in the prodigal's experience: (1) the joy and peace, the father's kiss, ring, robe, etc., are not instantly conferred; there is a way to be traveled first; often in actual experience it is a long and weary one; (2) though the prodigal brings nothing good with him, neither does he bring any thing evil. He forsakes all in turning his back on the far country."—Abbott. "In the act of fleeing to his father, the prodigal leaves his associates and his habits and his tastes behind."—Arnot.

But when he was yet a great way off.—"Rather 'While he yet held himself a great way off,' as though his courage failed when he drew near, and he dared not venture into the house and the presence of the father against whom he had so sinned. This interpretation the original will bear, though it does not require it; and this interpretation answers to that mistaken feeling of fear which is the last obstacle between a repentant soul and the heavenly Father."—Abbott.

His father saw him.—"As true to nature as it is beautiful; and yet the welcome God gives the returning sinner exceeds the figure which here represents it. The father in the parable thus meets the lost son, but God seeks us out in the 'far country.' He is waiting to be gracious, coming to meet us in mercy. He manifests his love, even before our utterance of penitence."— compassion, and ran, and fell on his neck, and kissed him. And the son said unto him, Father, I have sinned against heaven, and in thy sight, and am no

Riddle. "Possibly clothed in the rags and tatters of poverty, footsore, and galled with travel, broken down by want and privations, emaciated, perhaps, by the consequences of former riot and intemperance. When the form of a traveler, journeying toward him, appeared in the distance, so sharp-sighted is paternal tenderness, or such are the secret sympathies which connect us with the objects of our dearest affections, he discovered in that distant view the accomplishment of his fondest hopes ; he recognized in the form of that traveler, so indistinctly seen, his long-lost and unheard-of son."—Greswell.

And ran.—"The return of the sinner is expressed by the word 'going' (verse 18), but God's coming to the sinner by 'running.' God maketh greater haste to the sinner than the sinner doth to God ; God maketh much of our first inclination, and would not have it fall to the ground."—Farindon.

Fell on his neck and kissed him.—"Kissed him again and again, overwhelmed him, as it were, with kisses."—Bloomfield. "The kiss is something more than an evidence of affection, being the significant, and in the East well-understood, pledge of reconciliation and peace (Gen. 33 : 4 ; 2 Sam. 14 : 33 ; Ps. 2 : 12)." —Trench.

Father, I have sinned.—"The confession, prepared when he came to himself, is now uttered by the prodigal. But he does not say, 'Make me as one of thy hired servants' (ver. 19). The kiss has assured him of his father's love, and he will not wound it by such a request. The penitence is even greater than when he thought of this. If there was any notion of buying favor in the hireling's position, it is gone now. Those who have returned to God understand this part of the parable. After the Father's kiss, it is not humility, but pride, that makes the sinner unwilling to believe that he is a son. The former confession was a cry of despair, but this is that of repentant love."—Riddle. "The terms are the same, 'I have sinned ;' but how different is the accent ! Luther felt it profoundly. the discovery of the difference between the repentance of fear and that of love was the true principle of the Reformation."—Godet. "The fragments of stone that have hitherto remained, even in a broken heart, are utterly melted at last, as if by fire from heaven. He could not now complete the speech which he had prepared ; its later words faltered and fell inarticulate. He could not now ask for the place of a servant, for he was already in the place of a son."—

Chap. XXXI.

Luke 15 : 21-23.

J.C. 33.

more worthy to be called thy son. But the father said to his servants, Bring forth the best robe, and put it on him ; and put a ring on his hand, and shoes on his feet : and bring hither the fatted calf, and kill

Alford. " Note that it is after, and not before, the kiss of reconciliation, that this confession finds place : for the more the sinner knows and tastes of the love of God the more he grieves ever to have sinned against that love. The truest and best repentance follows, and does not precede, the sense of forgiveness. St. Bernard exhorts the penitent still to persist in taking the place of a servant. Bengel thinks it possible that his father cut him short, and so took these words out of his mouth. But this is false humility, of which we meet so much, and which often is so mightily extolled. It is the truest humility, when bidden to go up higher, to go. It is true humility in the prodigal, at his father's bidding, to accept at once the position of a son."—Trench.

But the father said.—He receives him as a son, not according to his merits, and shows how he regards him by his acts.

Bring forth—"Quickly" is to be added—"the best robe." "The rags of the swineherd are stripped off ; the best robe in the house is thrown over his naked shoulders."—Peloubet. "The original is emphatic—'a robe, the best one.' The garment meant was the upper garment worn by the higher classes among the Jews. It was not his old one, but a new one of honor. There may be an allusion to the robe of righteousness provided for us by Christ (Isa. 61 : 10 ; Rev. 3 : 18), but this need not be insisted upon."—Riddle.

A ring.—A seal ring, worn only by free men.

Shoes.—"In those days servants and slaves wore no shoes, and were thus distinguished from the members of the family. This was, therefore, tantamount to a declaration that he was not to be regarded as a servant, but as a son."—Guthrie. "That ring which we contemplate on the finger of the prodigal son, enriched with gold of the finest quality, or sparkling with diamonds of the clearest lustre ; that costly garment of exquisite texture, and corresponding tincture, which invests his limbs with purple—what are they but those gifts and graces from above which clothe the soul of the regenerate Christian ?"—Greswell.

The fatted calf.—"For a feast of joy, expressing the festal joy and rejoicing which is in heaven at the sinner's return, and no less in the Church on earth, and in his own heart also. This is the very nature of true joy—that it runs over, that it desires to impart itself ; and if this be true of the joy on earth, how much more of the yet holier joy in heaven !"—Trench.

it ; and let us eat, and be merry : for this my son was dead, and is alive again ; he was lost, and is found. And they began to be merry. Now his elder son was in the field : and as he came and drew nigh to the house, he heard music and dancing. And he called one of the servants and asked what these things meant. And he said unto him, 'Thy brother is come ; and thy father hath killed the fatted calf, because he hath received him safe and sound. And he was angry, and

Was dead.—"The state of sin is ever regarded in the Scriptures as death. The sinner is dead to the realities of life, to light and truth, and love of heaven. A tree is dead when it does not fulfill the natural functions of a tree, producing leaves and fruit and growth. The soul is dead in which are wanting the growth and fruits and principles for which it was made."—Peloubet. "There are many in the Church who come with the prayer, Make me as one of thy hired servants, and never realize that God's answer is, This, my son, was dead, and is alive again, was lost, and is found. The divine forgiveness is not merely release from punishment. It receives back the lost son to home and love, and gives to him the place and the gifts which he had thrown away. 'When he ascended up on high he . . . gave gifts unto men' (Ephes. 4 : 8)."—Abbott.

Now his elder son was in the field.—"The elder son at the return of the younger brother is not in the house, but has spent the day in hard, self-chosen, slavish service, and now first returns home at evening, when the feast was already in progress."—Van Oosterzee.

Music and dancing.—Usual at feasts in the East. Dancing in the East was usually performed by those hired for the purpose. "This is one of those by-glances into the lesser occupations and recreations of human life by which the Lord so often stamps his tacit approval on the joys and unbendings of men. Would these festal employments have been here mentioned by him on so blessed and solemn an occasion if they were really among those works of the devil which he came into the world to destroy?"—Alford.

Because he has received him safe and sound.—"How nice is the observance of all the lesser proprieties of the narrative ! The father in the midst of all his natural affection is yet full of the moral significance of his son's return ; that he has come back

Chap. XXXI.

Luke 15 : 28-30.

J.C. 33.

would not go in ; therefore came his father out, and entreated him. And he answering, said to his father, Lo, these many years do I serve thee, neither transgressed I at any time thy commandment ; and yet thou never gavest me a kid, that I might make merry with my friends : but as soon as this thy son was come, another person from what he was when he went or while he tarried in that far land : he sees into the deep of his joy, that he is receiving him now indeed a son, once ' dead,' but now ' alive ;' once ' lost' to him, but now ' found' alike by both. But the servant confines himself to the more external features of the case, to the fact that, after all he had gone through of excess and hardship, his father has yet received him ' safe and sound.'"—Trench.

And he was angry, and would not go in. " This part of the parable sets forth the reception he meets with from his fellow-men in contrast to that from his father."—Alford. " This elder is now the lost son : he has lost all childlike, filial feeling ; he betrays the hypocrite within."—Stier.

Came out and entreated him.—The father left the feast of joy to kindly urge the elder brother. This represents the long-suffering of God toward the self-righteous, the efforts to bring them to a better mind. The parable itself, spoken to the Pharisees (ver. 3), was an entreaty to the elder brother.

Lo! these many years.—" The word translated ' serve' means ' to perform the part of a slave.' The elder son, while he overrates the obedience which he himself had rendered to his father, exaggerates, at the same time, his brother's guilt. Comp. ver. 30 with ver. 13."—Lonsdale.

And yet thou never gavest me a kid.—In contrast with " the fatted calf."

With my friends.—" ' Respectable people,' he implies, in contrast with ' harlots.' Self-righteousness is dissatisfied with the reward it receives. The essential failure of Pharisaism is its want of love to God, despite its external obedience."—Schaff.

When this thy son came.—He will not say " brother." " A thousand of these delicate touches in the inspired writings escape an inattentive reader. In ver. 30 the elder son had unkindly said, ' This thy son.' The father mildly reproves him, and says, ' This thy brother.' Amazing intimation, that the best of men ought to account the worst of sinners their brethren still ; and should especially remember this relation when they show any inclination to repentance."—Greswell.

Chap. XXXI.

Luke 15 : 30-32.

J.C. 33.

which hath devoured thy living with harlots, thou hast killed for him the fatted calf. And he said unto him, Son, thou art ever with me ; and all that I have is thine. It was meet that we should make merry, and be glad : for this thy brother was dead, and is alive again ; and was lost, and is found.

Devoured thy living.—"There is a reproach of the father implied here also."—Schaff.

With harlots.—"It was pre-eminently Pharisaical to recall just then this fact."—Schaff.

He said unto him, Son.—"All of us are represented by one or the other of those two sons. Both were offenders, yet the Father calls both sons, and would save both classes of sinners here depicted."—Schaff. "That son is a sinful world ; that father is its loving God ; that experience of famine in the far country is the experience of every one that lives without God and without hope in the world ; that failure of the swineherd is the failure of every one who attempts reformation without repentance and return to his Heavenly Father ; that warm welcome is the welcome which divine love longs to accord to every wanderer weary of his sins and willing to return to his father's home. Alas ! the elder brother that murmurs at this welcome is not without his type even in the Christian Church. Alas ! despite our eulogies of this parable, society still scans the repentance and return of any one whose errors or whose sins it has condemned, regardless or strangely ignorant of its own. For the fallen one it has rarely a robe, a ring, a fatted calf, or even a heart of pitying love."—Abbott.

CHAPTER XXXII.

TEACHINGS IN PEREA.

AND he said also unto his disciples, There was a certain rich man, which had a steward ; and the same was accused unto him that he had wasted his goods. And he called him, and said unto him, How is it that I hear this of thee ? give an account of thy steward-

He said also unto his disciples.—“ The opening phrase, ‘ And he said also,’ indicates that the teachings of this chapter followed immediately upon those of the chapter preceding. The parables of the lost sheep, the lost coin, and the lost son, are a rebuke of the pride of the Pharisees ; the parables of this chapter are a rebuke of their covetousness. (See ver. 14.) This fact affords the key-note to what has been regarded the most difficult of our Lord’s parables.”—Abbott.

There was a certain rich man who had a steward.—“ Other parallel teachings of Scripture, especially of Christ (see Matt. 25 : 14-30 ; Luke 19 : 11-27, and Hag. 2 : 8 ; Psalm 50 : 10-12), represent God as master, man as steward, and property as something intrusted to his stewardship. . . . The steward is a bailiff, intrusted with the entire management of the master’s estate. Such stewardships, relatively unknown in this country, are common in Ireland, Italy, the East, and wherever property is owned in large estates, and the owners are not men of business, or are habitually or frequently absent from their estates. Such a steward or bailiff is necessarily intrusted with almost absolute power over his owner’s property.”—Abbott. “ It was one of the main duties of such a steward to dispense their portions of food to different members of the household (Luke 12 : 42) to give the servants or slaves their portion in due season, a duty which we sometimes find undertaken by the diligent mistress of the house (Prov. 31 : 15).”—Trench. Such was Eliezer, the steward of Abraham, and Joseph in the house of Potiphar. (See Gen. 24 : 2-12, and 39 : 4.)

Wasted his goods.—The original reads, “ was wasting.” He had been profuse and profligate, and had embezzled his master’s property.

Give an account of thy stewardship : for thou mayest be steward no longer.—“ There is no trial, but sentence of condemnation. We are condemned already, and the day of judgment is a day, not of trial, but of disclosure and of reckoning. Death is ship ; for thou mayest be no longer steward. Then the steward said within himself, What shall I do ? for my lord taketh away from me the stewardship : I cannot dig ; to beg I am ashamed. I am resolved what to do, that, when I am put out of the stewardship, they may receive me into their houses. So he called every one of his lord's debtors unto him, and thus God's call to us for an accounting of all things with which he has intrusted us."—Abbott. "The great truth lies in the background, that that dismissal, death itself, is the consequence of this wasting of his goods—the wages of sin is death."—Alford.

Can not dig.—Was not accustomed to labor.

To beg I am ashamed.—"Such is the honor of some men. They are not ashamed to defraud, but are ashamed to beg, or even to work. An eminent preacher once said, 'Be ashamed of nothing but sin.' If he had said, 'Be ashamed of nothing so much as of sin,' there could be no doubt of the correctness of his exhortation."—Eggleston. "A graphic picture of the perplexity and dismay of the man of the world when summoned by death to give an account of his stewardship. He has laid up for himself no treasure above ; he is conscious that he has developed no powers for service in the eternal kingdom ; he is ashamed to cast himself as a beggar, even before his God, and enter the kingdom simply as a suppliant."—Abbott.

I am resolved what to do.—Reflection brings him, as it brought the prodigal, to himself. The conclusion here is the result of cogitation. "All at once, after long reflection, he exclaims, as if striking his forehead, 'I have it.'"—Godet. "The conclusion is the one to which many a rich man is brought who, by the benefactions of his will, endeavors to compensate for the niggardliness of his life."—Abbott.

That they (that is, his lord's debtors) may receive me.

So he called every one of his lord's debtors.—"These would be either merchants or other purchasers, who had received their stores and not yet paid for them (Alford), or tenants, who paid their rent, as it is almost invariably paid in the East, and very generally on European estates, in produce. The oil is olive oil, the wheat the most common grain of Palestine ; both are productions of the soil. The measure of oil contains about sixty pints ; fifty measures would be worth several hundreds of dollars. The measure of wheat contains a little over eleven bushels ; the twenty measures remitted would amount to over a hundred dollars in value. The steward knows his men, and cal-

Chap. XXXII.

Luke 16 : 5-9.

Dec. J.C. 33.

said unto the first, How much owest thou unto my lord? And he said, An hundred measures of oil. And he said unto him, Take thy bill, and sit ^{The Unfaithful} down quickly, and write fifty. Then said ^{Steward.} he to another, And how much owest thou? And he said, An hundred measures of wheat. And he said unto him, Take thy bill, and write four-score. And the lord commended the unjust steward, because he had done wisely : for the children of this world are in their generation wiser than the children of light. And I say unto you, Make to yourselves friends of the mamculates the degree of liberality which he must show to each in order to secure their hospitality."—Abbott.

Take thy bill.—Literally "writings," in which the debt was specified, with the obligation to pay so much at stated times. "These bonds, it seems, were kept in the hands of the steward ; and of this, says Grotius, we have instances in the Roman law."—Bloomfield. "This [writing] the tenant is himself to alter, perhaps that, having a direct share in the fraud, he may be precluded from informing of it subsequently."—Abbott.

Sit down quickly.—Simply a graphic touch, indicating the haste of the whole transaction.

The lord commended.—The lord of the steward commended his shrewdness and forethought. It is not said by Luke that our Lord praised the unjust steward, but by Christ, as part of the parable, that the servant was commended by his master.

For (what follows is Christ's comment on the whole transaction, the action of the steward and the commendation of his lord) the children of this world are in their generation—not in, but unto ("for their own generation," Alford)—wiser (shrewder) than the children of light—those "who walk by the light of Divine truth," and who therefore may be expected to act with both wisdom and honesty. "The meaning is, not that the worldly-minded men are shrewder than spiritually-minded men in their management of earthly affairs ; nor merely that they are wiser in dealing with earthly affairs than spiritually-minded men with spiritual affairs ; but that in their dealings with one another men of the world get more worldly profit out of the intercourse than spiritually-minded get of spiritual profit out of their mutual intercourse."—Abbott.

And I say unto you.—What follows is Christ's way of apply-

Chap. XXXII.

Luke 16 : 9, 10.

Dec. J.C. 33.

mon of unrighteousness ; that when ye fail, they may receive you into everlasting habitations. He that is ing of the parable. If that be understood, the parable itself is no longer difficult to comprehend.

Mammon.—A Syriac word for riches.

Of unrighteousness.—The mammon of unrighteousness is not money made unrighteously, nor does the phrase imply that Christ regards all property holding as a form of selfishness. Godet explains the meaning well. "The ear of Jesus must have been constantly offended with that sort of reckless language in which men indulge without scruple: my fortune, my land, my house. He also felt to the quick man's dependence on God ; saw that there was a usurpation in this idea of ownership, a forgetfulness of the true proprietor. On hearing such language he seemed to see the former playing the landlord. It is this sin, of which the natural man is profoundly unconscious, which he lays bare in this whole parable, and which he especially designates by this expression, 'the mammon of unrighteousness.'"

That when ye fail.—"When it fails" is the preferable reading.

They may receive you into everlasting habitations.—"This is not ironical, as some would have us believe ; nor are they that receive the angels, an interpretation invented for theological reasons, and quite inconsistent with the structure of the parable, for those to whom the steward has given, receive him : nor can we say with Godet, 'to receive is not to introduce,' and that the language here assumes some other ground of claim for admission to the everlasting habitations, for the only ground in the parable for the admission of the steward to the houses of the tenants is the service which he has dishonestly rendered them. The interpretation of this declaration is to be found, first, in such passages as 2 Pet. 1 : 11, 'So an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly, into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ,' since they have an abundant entrance into the kingdom of glory, who are welcomed to it by the many whom they have served on earth ; and, secondly, in such passages as Matt. 25 : 31-46, the condition of admission to the kingdom of heaven being not merely faith, but that kind of faith which works by love.

. . . In this parable the rich man represents God, the steward man, especially the man of wealth, the stewardship his property, which is not his own, but is intrusted to him, the tenants the poor, the summons to account, death, which is a call to judgment. The parable may even be carried further ; and it may be said that the scheme of the steward has its parallel in the tendency of men

Chap. XXXII.

Luke 16 : 10-12.

Dec. J.C. 33.

faithful in that which is least, is faithful also in much ; and he that is unjust in the least, is unjust also in much. If therefore ye have not been faithful in the unrighteous mammon, who will commit to your trust the true riches ? And if ye have not been faithful in that which is another man's, who shall give you that which is your own ?

of wealth to compensate by their bequests at death for their lack of liberality in their lifetime."—Abbott.

"Christ," says the author of "Our Friends in Heaven," "teaches his creditors the right use of money. Instead of hoarding it, or squandering it, they have to make themselves friends with it. Jesus here represents those glorified spirits who had, in the days of their flesh, been befriended by their wealthy brethren still in the body, as waiting on the borders of the eternal world to receive into the heavenly temple their former benefactors, so soon as the latter should fail on earth." "He that is 'faithful in the unrighteous mammon' as God's steward will use it for the poor, and thus will indeed make to himself friends."—Eggleston.

If . . . ye have not been faithful.—"If ye have not been faithful in that worldly wealth which you know must soon be parted with, how can you expect that God will commit to you those spiritual blessings in which alone true riches consist ? Or, again, if ye have not been faithful in your stewardship of that which is intrusted to you for a season by another—namely, by God—how can ye expect that he will give you an inheritance which will be your own forever ?"—Lonsdale and Hale.

If ye have not been faithful in that which is another man's.—"None of these temporal things are yours ; you are only stewards of them, not proprietors. God is the proprietor of all ; he lodges them in your hands for a season ; but still they are his property. Rich men, understand and consider this. If your steward uses any part of your estate (so called in the language of men) any further or any otherwise than you direct, he is a knave ; he has neither conscience nor honor. Neither have you either one or the other, if you use any part of that estate, which is in truth God's, not yours, any otherwise than he directs."—Bloomfield.

Another man's.—Rather, another's—that is, God's. There is nothing in the original that answers to the word "man's." "Earthly wealth is held in trust ; the true riches are described as your own. Wealth can never form a part of our being, is never permanently in our possession ; we can have the use of

Chap. XXXII.

Luke 16 : 13-17.

Dec. J.C. 33.

No servant can serve two masters : for either he will hate the one, and love the other ; or else he will hold to the one, and despise the other. Ye cannot serve God and mammon.

And the Pharisees also, who were covetous, heard all these things, and they derided him. And he said unto Jesus Reproves the Pharisees. them, Ye are they which justify yourselves before men ; but God knoweth your hearts : for that which is highly esteemed among men, is abomination in the sight of God. The law and the prophets were until John : since that time the kingdom of God is preached, and every man presseth into it. And it is easier for heaven and earth to pass, than one it, but in no true sense own it. But that which God gives to us as true riches will form a part of our eternal being, is our inalienable possession. Because this is so much higher, we are urged to be faithful in the use of worldly wealth, believing that it is not ours, but intrusted to us to test our fidelity."—Schaff.

They derided him.—"Sneered or scoffed at him." "Their feeling was : This man makes riches of little account, but we know better ; we can keep our wealth and our piety too. Hence the next verse is aimed at their semblance of piety, which was the basis of their derision of him."—Schaff.

Is abomination in the sight of God.—"Not every thing honored by men is abominated by God ; nor are there two such different standards of judgment that what really commends itself to man's moral sense is condemned by God. But what often appears admirable to man, because he sees only the outward and deceitful appearance, is known to God to be abominable, because he sees the motive out of which it springs. This declaration gives partial interpretation to Matt. 7 : 1, 'Judge not.' It indicates that we are to be cautious in commendatory as well as in condemnatory judgments."—Abbott.

It is easier for heaven and earth to pass.—"These aphorisms appear in Matthew in different connections. I regard their introduction in this place as due to Luke, who puts them here because they are a part of Christ's general teaching respecting the religion of Pharisaism. I am not able to see that they have any very immediate connection with either the preceding or the succeeding parable."—Abbott. "Between the parable and the title of the law to fail. Whosoever putteth away his wife, and marrieth another, committeth adultery ; and whosoever marrieth her that is put away from her husband committeth adultery.

Chap. XXXII.

Luke 16 : 17-19.

Dec. J.C. 33.

There was a certain rich man, which was clothed in purple and fine linen and fared sumptuously every day :

occasion of it (ver. 14) we find a number of thoughts (vers. 15-18) which had been expressed by our Lord on other occasions, all appropriate to the Pharisees at this time. The connection is, however, difficult to trace."—Schaff. For ver. 16, see Matt. 11 : 12 (p. 215) ; ver. 17, Matt. 5 : 18 (p. 166) ; ver. 18, Matt. 5 : 31, 32 (p. 170.)

There was a certain rich man.—"The response of the Pharisees (ver. 14) called forth another parable, in which another phase of the same great truth is brought out—namely, that neglect of the proper application of wealth becomes the source of eternal calamity. The rich man is no great sinner, but a respectable worldly man, leading a godless life of selfishness ; the poor man was one of a class despised by the 'covetous.' Thus the sneer of the Pharisees was answered. The object of the parable was not to make a new revelation about the future state, yet while using the popular language of the day on this subject our Lord's words must reveal the truth."—Schaff.

In purple and fine linen.—"The extreme costliness of the purple dye of antiquity is well known ; the honor, too, in which this color was held. It was accounted the royal color ; the purple garment was then, as now, in the East, a royal gift—that is, the true sea-purple. . . . Its rarity arose from the exceeding small quantity (but a few drops) of the liquid which served for dyeing found in each fish. All modern inquiries have failed to discover what shell-fish it exactly was which yielded the precious dye."—Trench.

Fared sumptuously every day.—"The description implies one devoting himself to selfish and sensual enjoyment. "The expression may have reference to more than food, and (as Greswell observes) extend to every pleasure, satisfaction, and convenience, of dress, gayety, etc., which wealth can supply, to minister to the daily enjoyment, amusement, and self satisfaction of a rich voluptuary ; in short, whatever is comprehended in the description of St. John, 1 Ep. 2 : 16—"For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life, is not of the Father, but is of the world."—Bloomfield. "He is not charged with injuring any person, or defrauding

Chap. XXXII.

Luke 16 : 20, 21.

Dec. J.C. 33.

and there was a certain beggar named Lazarus, which The Rich Man and Lazarus. was laid at his gate, full of sores, and desiring to be fed with the crumbs which fell from the rich man's table : moreover, the dogs his neighbor. The only fault recorded is, that 'he fared sumptuously every day,' while Lazarus 'lay at his gate' perishing for want of common necessities. He was one of that set of men (a numerous set) who are very hospitable to those that do not want, and very unfriendly to those that do."—Jeremiah Seed. "A smooth and easy life, an uninterrupted enjoyment of the goods of providence, full meals, soft raiment, well-furnished homes, the pleasures of sense, the feeling of security, the consciousness of wealth—these, and the like, if we are not careful, choke up all the avenues of the soul through which the light and breath of heaven might get to us."—Newman.

"Think'st thou the man whose mansions hold
 The worldling's pomp and miser's gold Obtains a richer prize
 Than he who, in his cot at rest,
 Finds heavenly peace a willing guest,
 And bears the promise in his breast
 Of treasure in the skies?"—Mrs. Sigourney.

There was a certain beggar named Lazarus.—"Beggary, such as is here depicted, is much more common in the East than with us, and in the absence of any more systematic provision, almsgiving to the poor was insisted upon by the Old Testament (Job 29 : 13 ; Ps. 41 : 1 ; 112 : 9 ; Prov. 14 : 31)."—Abbott. "In every tongue in Europe a 'lazar' is now regarded as a descriptive name of the poor. It is singular enough the rich man's name is not mentioned, whereas that of the beggar is. In this world the name of the rich man was sounded by a thousand trumpets. In the heavenly world all is reversed. Greatness alone is prominent here ; goodness alone will be prominent there."—Cummings. "Does not Christ seem to you to have been reading from that book where he found the name of the poor man written, but found not the name of the rich ? For that book is 'the Book of Life.'"—Augustine.

Full of sores.—As persons of this destitute condition often are, from the cutaneous disorders produced by meagre diet and bad living, especially in Eastern countries.

Desiring to be fed.—"From the circumstance afterward introduced of the rich man asking for Lazarus to administer relief to him in his torments, it should seem that he regarded himself, in some measure, as a benefactor to him in having relieved him with the scraps from his table ; yet he was undoubtedly came and licked his sores. And it came to pass, that the beggar died, and was carried by the angels into Abraham's bosom. The rich man also died, and was buried :

guilty of the neglect here intimated, of omitting to make himself acquainted with the miserable condition of Lazarus, so as to effectually relieve his sufferings and restore him to health and strength."—Bloomfield.

The dogs came and licked his sores.—"What a picture of misery is here painted in a few words!"—Eggleston "This touch not only adds to the dramatic force of the picture, by indicating his nakedness and forsaken condition ; it also brings out the inhumanity of man by depicting the sympathy of the brutes."—Abbott.

The beggar died.—"No mention is made of his burial. It was 'only a pauper whom nobody knows,' and his funeral attracted no attention."—Riddle.

Was carried by the angels.—"The contrast of the reversed positions begins already ; rich men were pall-bearers of their associate, but the beggar was borne by angels."—Riddle.

Abraham's bosom.—"Every Jew understood by 'Abraham's bosom' a place of perfect repose, communion and intimacy with the great and good in the age to come. We leave behind us at death that only which enables the soul to communicate with the outward and material world. All that constitutes the man—thinking, feeling, knowing—lives forever, without suspension of the continuity of its conscious life. The outward tent is struck, but the divine inhabitant lives. The ceasing of the pulse, the standing still of the heart, the insensibility of the senses, is not the destruction of the life, but only of that machinery by which it acts and manifests itself to a world of matter. The musician endures, the harp-strings only are removed. But this statement, fact, or parable, is evidence of the immortality of the soul."—Cummings.

The rich man also died, and was buried.—It would appear, subsequently to Lazarus, so that, as has been noted, the mercy of God was manifest in the order of their deaths. Lazarus was more early exempted from the miseries of his earthly lot ; Dives was allowed a longer time and space for repentance. But at last his day of grace came to an end. 'he also died and was buried.' There is a sublime irony, a stain upon all earthly glory, in this mention of his burial, connected as it is with what is immediately to follow. No doubt we are meant to infer that he had a splendid funeral—all things according to the most approved pomp of the world."—Trench.

Chap. XXXII.

Luke 16 : 23, 24.

Dec. J.C. 33.

and in hell he lifted up his eyes, being in torments, and seeth Abraham afar off, and Lazarus in his bosom. And he cried, and said, Father Abraham, have mercy on me, and send Lazarus, that he may dip the tip of his finger in water, and cool my tongue : for I am tormented

And in hell, or "Hades."—"There are two words in the New Testament which are translated 'hell'; one 'Gehenna,' the other 'Hades.' The former always means the place of punishment, the latter the state or place of departed spirits (Hebrew, 'Sheol'). In each case the context shows the more precise reference of the word, since it might mean either Gehenna or Paradise ('Abraham's bosom'), or both. Here it probably includes both, since the rich man is represented as seeing Abraham and Lazarus. On which side he was is afterward stated."—Riddle.

He lifted up his eyes.—Either, looked up to a higher place, or, now became fully conscious of his position.

Being in torments.—"Hell is truth seen too late."—Anonymous.

Seeth Abraham.—"A proof of the recognition of friends in the other world."—Peloubet.

Afar off.—Not so much in distance as in character and condition.

And he cried.—"This is the only instance in Scripture of praying to saints."—Jacobus.

Father Abraham.—"For he still clung to the hope that his fleshly privileges would profit him something; he would still plead that he has Abraham to his father, not perceiving that this, which was his glory once, was now the very stress of his guilt."—Trench.

Tip of his finger.—"He dares ask but the smallest favor."—Alford. "This shows the greatness of his distress. The sufferings of the rich man are, therefore, represented as producing burning thirst, so much so that even a drop of water would be refreshing to his tongue."—Greswell.

Tormented in this flame.—"Not subjective (that is, confined to his own feeling) only, though perhaps mainly. But where lies the limit between inner and outer to the disembodied? Hardened sinners have died crying 'Fire!' Did the fire leave them when they left their bodies?"—Alford. "Material fire could not have been here, because there was no material subject for it."—Cummings. "Flame may be regarded as a figurative expression, to represent the acutest suffering of which an immaterial nature is susceptible, by a material image of misery the most dire."—Greswell.

Chap. XXXII.

Luke 16 : 24, 25.

Dec. J.C. 33.

in this flame. But Abraham said, Son, remember that thou in thy lifetime receivedst thy good things, and likewise Lazarus evil things : but now he is comforted,

Son, remember.---“ This one word is a vivid symbol of the rich man's misery. Memory is the faculty that will survive all. The rich sufferer remembered all in that place of agony : he remembered that he not only sacrificed his soul in order to accumulate, but never distributed to others who needed what he accumulated. Memory, like a whispering-gallery, returned the deeds of a lifetime in crashes of insufferable thunder ; each sin reproduced itself, and each black deed cast its cold and horrible shadow on the spirit of him who had committed it. Lost opportunities were not the least bitter recollections of the lost rich man. Let memory alone survive, and it will strike ten thousand scorpion stings into the soul of the lost.”—Cummings. In illustration of the power of memory, De Quincey describes the experience of a lady who in her youth was nearly drowned, “ having descended within the abyss of death, and looked into its secrets as far perhaps as ever human eye can have looked, that had permission to return. At a certain stage of this descent a blow seemed to strike her ; phosphoric radiance sprang forth from her eyeballs, and immediately a mighty theater expanded in her brain. In a moment, in a twinkling of an eye, every act, every design of her past life lived again, arraying themselves not as a succession, but as parts of a coëxistence.” The writer of this, when a boy of nineteen, had a similar experience. In a moment, as by a flash of lightning, his whole past life was revealed to him, not in successive scenes, but in one embodied whole. At one glance he realized all that he had been, all that he was. It was the judgment of the Great Day.

Thy good things.---“ The emphatic ‘ thy ’ intimates that he had regarded his earthly possessions as his chief good. God had treated him according to his own estimate of these things ; had given them to him, and that was all his portion of good.”—Riddle.

Lazarus evil things.—Not “ his ” evil things, for he may have rightly viewed his afflictions as designed for good.

But now.—The best authorities prefer “ here,” making the phrase more emphatic.

He is comforted, and thou art tormented.---“ Not because the one suffered evil, and the other enjoyed luxury. Abraham does not say this. And there is not here, nor I think anywhere else in Scripture, the doctrine that ‘ the cause of an unbroken prosperity is ever a sign and augury of ultimate reprobation.’

and thou art tormented. And besides all this, between us and you there is a great gulf fixed : so that they which would pass from hence to you, cannot ; neither can they pass to us, that would come from thence. Then he said, I pray thee therefore, father, that thou wouldest send him to my father's house : for I have five brethren ; that he may testify unto them, lest they also come into this place of torment. Abraham saith unto him, They have Moses and the prophets ; let them hear them. And he said, Nay, father Abraham : but if one went unto them from the dead, they will repent. And he said unto him, If they hear not Moses and the prophets, neither will they be persuaded, though one rose from the dead.

Abraham recalls the contrast between the present condition and the past condition of the two ; the ground of the present condition is sufficiently indicated by the phrase, thy good things."—Abbott.

And besides all this.—It was morally improper to grant the request ; but it was also impossible.

There is a great gulf fixed.—"The figure is of an unfathomable abyss, which cannot be bridged over. Our Lord here makes a revelation, for the popular Jewish view did not speak of this."—Riddle.

Testify unto (or "warn") them.—"That a lost spirit should feel and express such sympathy is not to be wondered at. The misery of such will be very much heightened by the awakened and active state of those higher faculties and feelings which selfishness and the body kept down here."—Alford. "It is not necessary, on the one hand, to attribute the petition of the rich man to a selfish aim, nor to see in it, on the other, an evidence of his partial reformation, as though the fires in which he was tormented had already accomplished a partial purification. It is not even necessary to suppose that such a request could or would be preferred by the condemned in another life. It is here supposed by Christ simply to give occasion to the religious teaching embodied in Abraham's reply."—Abbott.

If they hear not Moses, etc.—"He whom the law and the prophets bring not to the conviction of his sins will be as little led to it by the sight of even one raised from the dead. After the

Chap. XXXII.

Luke 17 : 1-4.

Dec. J.C. 33.

Then said he unto the disciples, It is impossible but that offences will come : but wo unto him through whom they come ! It were better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck, and he cast into the sea, than that he should offend one of these little ones. Take heed to yourselves : If thy brother trespass against thee, rebuke him ; and if he repent, forgive him. And if he trespass against thee seven times in a day, and seven times in a day turn

Jesus Inculcates Forbearance.

first emotion of astonishment and terror, criticism will awake, saying, Hallucination ! and carnal security, shaken for a moment, will reassert itself."—Godet. "In this dialogue the rich man represents the spirit of Pharisaism, which was accustomed to demand from Jesus signs from heaven as an evidence of his divine mission and authority ; the spirit of modern skepticism, which demands new intellectual evidences for the truth of Christianity, and places its unbelief avowedly on the insufficiency of the evidences already forthcoming ; and the spirit of modern superstition, manifested in spiritism and ecclesiasticism, which, endeavoring to meet this same demand for signs and wonders in less intellectual classes of society, provides miracles and supernatural manifestations. The answer of Abraham represents the spirit of Christianity which recognizes the secret of all skepticism to be in the moral nature, which recognizes in the Word of God itself its own sufficient evidence, and which declares that no proof whatever of a purely intellectual character will suffice to convince those who are living worldly lives, and whose unbelief is rooted in worldliness of any form. The truth of the declaration put here by Christ into Abraham's mouth was strikingly verified by the effect upon the Pharisees of the resurrection of another Lazarus (John 11 : 47-50), and of our Lord's resurrection (Matt. 28 : 12-14)."—Abbott.

"Ye good distressed !
Ye noble few ! who here unbending stand
Beneath life's pressure, yet bear up awhile,
And what your bounded view, which only saw
A little part, deemed evil, is no more ;
The storms of wintry time will quickly pass,
And one unbounded spring encircle all."—Thomson.

Then said he unto the disciples.—Some of the thoughts in this section are found in Matt. 18, but the latter part is peculiar to Luke. The connection between them and what precedes is clear, and indicates that they made part of one discourse.

Chap. XXXII.

Luke 17 : 4-7.

Dec. J.C. 33.

again to thee, saying, I repent ; thou shalt forgive him.

And the apostles said unto the Lord, Increase our faith. And the Lord said, If ye had faith as a grain of mustard-seed, ye might say unto this Faith. sycamine-tree, Be thou plucked up by the root, and be thou planted in the sea ; and it should obey you.

But which of you having a servant ploughing, or feed-

Increase our faith—"Not our patience or charity or self-control, the graces immediately needed to be exercised toward the trespassing brother ; but increase our faith ; strengthen and enlarge in us the heavenly principle of these and all other graces, that, by growing at the root, we may grow in the produce of the branches, and especially, by knowing and believing more and more the forgiveness of our own sins, we may be disposed and constrained to forgive others."—Ford.

This sycamine-tree.—"The discourse was probably uttered in the open air, and the tree near by, as the mountains were on the other occasions when a similar saying was uttered."—Schaff. Of this tree, which he takes to be the sycamore, Thomson says : "It is easily propagated, merely by planting a stout branch in the ground, and watering it until it has struck roots into the soil. This it does with great rapidity, and to a vast depth. It was with reference to this latter fact that our blessed Lord selected it to illustrate the power of faith. 'If ye had faith as a grain of mustard-seed, ye might say unto this sycamine-tree, Be thou plucked up by the root, and be thou planted in the sea, and it should obey you.' Now look at this tree—its ample girth, its widespread arms branching off from the parent trunk only a few feet from the ground ; then examine its enormous roots, as thick, as numerous, and as widespread into the deep soil below as the branches extend into the air above—the very best type of invincible steadfastness. What power on earth can pluck up such a tree ? Heaven's thunderbolt may strike it down, the wild tornado may tear it to fragments, but nothing short of miraculous power can fairly pluck it up by the roots."

It should obey you.—Comp. Mark 11 : 22-26. (The barren fig-tree.) "If we here take faith, as defined in Heb. 11 : 1, as the evidence of the unseen, Christ's language is hardly hyperbolic, for it is by the developed power to see unseen verities that man has attained all his mastery over nature."—Abbott.

But which of you having a servant.—"In interpreting this

Chap. XXXII.

Luke 17 : 7-10.

Dec. J.C. 33.

ing cattle, will say unto him by and by, when he is come from the field, Go and sit down to meat? And will not rather say unto him, Make ready wherewith I may sup, and gird thyself, and serve me, till I have eaten and drunken; and afterward thou shalt eat and drink? Doth he thank that servant, because he did the things that were commanded him? Humility.

I trow not. So likewise ye, when ye shall have done all those things which are commanded you, say, We are unprofitable servants: we have done that which was our duty to do.

parable, a slight modification must be made in the language of verse 7, which should read, not 'Will say unto him by and by, when he is come from the field, Go and sit down to meat,' but, 'Will say unto him when he is come from the field, Go immediately and sit down to meat.' The picture is drawn in accordance with Oriental usages. The same one who serves in the field also frequently serves at the table. His clothes are girded about his loins to keep them out of his way while handing the dishes. The custom requires constant attendance at the table, to change each dish as soon as the master has done with it for a new one; sometimes ten or twenty, or even fifty dishes, succeed on the tables of those who fare sumptuously."—Abbott.

Say we are unprofitable servants, etc.—"Unprofitable" here does not have a bad sense. Any profit or merit would arise from the servant's doing more than his duty; but if he did all his duty, while no blame could attach to him, no merit could be allowed. Thus all works of supererogation are denied, and all claim on the ground of our goodness or fidelity."—Schaff.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

THE RAISING OF LAZARUS.

Now a certain man was sick, named Lazarus, of Bethany, the town of Mary and her sister Martha. (It was The Sisters send to Jesus. that Mary which anointed the Lord with ointment, and wiped his feet with her hair, whose brother Lazarus was sick.) Therefore his sisters sent unto him, saying, Lord, behold, he whom thou lovest is sick.

When Jesus heard that, he said, This sickness is not unto death, but for the glory of God, that the Son of

“ At this point in Luke’s narrative we insert the account given by John of the journey of Jesus to Bethany to raise Lazarus, and of his subsequent departure to Ephraim and sojourn there. The Lord waits two days after receiving the message of the sisters ere he departs for Bethany. It is not certain how long after the death of Lazarus he arrived there. Tholuck thinks it improbable that Jesus could have made the journey (perhaps 23-29 miles) in one day, and yet arrive in Bethany in season to do all that is recorded of him. He must have spent parts of two days upon the road. He supposes, therefore, that Lazarus died the night following the arrival of the messenger and was buried the next day, and that Jesus reached Bethany the fifth day. The first day was that of the burial ; the second and third were spent in waiting ; the fourth in journeying ; on the fifth he reaches Bethany and raises Lazarus.”—Andrews.

Lazarus of Bethany.—See note on page 465.

His sisters sent unto him.—“ When our heart is overwhelmed within us on occasion of the removal of those who were dearest to us in the bonds of nature and of love, what a shelter is here ! to come to this Immortal Friend, and open to him all the anguish of our souls ! ”—Doddridge.

He said, This sickness is not unto death.—“ That is, has not death for its object. Christ does not say that Lazarus will not die, but that death is not the end for which this sickness is ordained of God.”—Abbott. “ These words appear to have been the answer returned by our Lord to the message of Martha and Mary.”—Lonsdale and Hale.

Chap. XXXIII.

John 11 : 4-8.

Jan. J.C. 34.

God might be glorified thereby. Now Jesus loved Martha, and her sister, and Lazarus.

When he heard therefore that he was sick, he abode two days still in the same place where he was. Then after that saith he to his disciples, Let us go into Judea again. His disciples say

Jesus goes to Lazarus.

But for the glory of God, that the Son of God might be glorified thereby.—Comp. John 9 : 3. “He was glorified, 1, perhaps by the development of a higher spiritual life in Lazarus, through his sickness, death, and resurrection (Trench), though of this the evangelist gives us no hint ; 2, by the manifestation of the divine power of Jesus Christ, as one whom the Father always hears (ver. 42) ; 3, by the passion and death of Jesus Christ, to which the resurrection of Lazarus directly led (vers. 47-53).”—Abbott.

Jesus loved Martha, and her sister, and Lazarus.—“A perfect humanity implies a sensibility, a refinement, a grace, a beauty of character which can not be said to be required by duty. And all these the Saviour had in the highest degree. There was no pure and exquisite emotion of human nature to which he was not keenly alive ; and it is the union in him, of every thing that is tender and gentle with those higher and sterner qualities, which renders him a fit example, not for man only, but for woman.”—Mark Hopkins.

He abode two days still in the same place.—“Why ? Either because this delay was necessary to complete the work in which he was engaged, and from which he would not suffer himself to be drawn away even by considerations of personal sympathy, he himself acting on the principle, ‘Let the dead bury their dead, but go thou and preach the kingdom of God’ (Luke 9 : 60), or because this delay was necessary to the consummation of the miracle of the resurrection of Lazarus in such form as to forever prohibit the impression that death had not really taken place. The former is the better hypothesis, since in no case does Christ seem to have wrought a miracle for the mere purpose of producing by it a profound impression, and it is therefore hardly consistent to believe that he would have delayed merely for the purpose of making the miracle more startling and marvelous.”—Abbott. “Let believers learn to suspend their desires if God does not stretch out his hand to help as soon as they think necessity requires. Whatever may be his delays, he never sleeps, and never forgets his people.”—Calvin.

Chap. XXXIII.

John II : 8-II.

Jan. J.C. 34.

unto him, Master, the Jews of late sought to stone thee ; and goest thou thither again ?

Jesus answered, Are there not twelve hours in the day ? If any man walk in the day, he stumbleth not, because he seeth the light of this world. But if a man walk in the night, he stumbleth, because there is no light in him.

These things said he : and after that he saith unto them, Our friend Lazarus sleepeth ; but I go that I may awake him out of sleep.

Of late sought.—Rather, “ were but now seeking.”—Alford.

If any man walk in the day, he stumbleth not.—“ The time appointed for a man is like the hours of light given to a traveler for his journey. There is no fear of his stumbling in the day, because he sees the sun ; but as he stumbles when it has set, so man, though he walk safely till the appointed time ends, can do so no longer when it is over. Till mine is over I am safe.”—Geikie. “ The two things which of all others most want to be under a strict rule, and which are the greatest blessings both to ourselves and others when they are rightly used, are our time and our money. These talents are continual means and opportunities of doing good.”—William Law. “ Man’s life is a day, divided into ages, states, and opportunities. The consideration of this should make us not only very busy as to the work of life, but also very easy as to the perils of life ; our day shall be lengthened out till our work be done.”—Henry.

Our friend Lazarus sleepeth.—This should read, “ is fallen asleep,” meaning that he was dead. “ The word sleep is applied to death, first, because of the resemblance between them, as sleep is the ‘ kinsman of death.’ In this sense it is often used by pagan writers. But, second, in the Scriptures it is used to intimate that death will not be final ; that there will be an awaking out of this sleep, or a resurrection. It is a beautiful and tender expression, removing all that is dreadful in death, and filling the mind with the idea of calm repose after a life of toil, with reference to a resurrection, in increased vigor, and with renovated powers.”—Bloomfield.

I go that I may awake him out of sleep.—“ There seems to me to be contained in these few words one of the most powerful charms in the world to lull the bitterness of death, and to make us anxious to become such as that we may humbly venture to apply them to ourselves.”—Thomas Arnold.

Chap. XXXIII.

John II : 12-20.

Jan. J.C. 34.

Then said his disciples, Lord, if he sleep, he shall do well. Howbeit Jesus spake of his death : but they thought that he had spoken of taking of rest in sleep.

Then said Jesus unto them plainly, Lazarus is dead. And I am glad for your sakes that I was not there, to the intent ye may believe ; nevertheless, let us go unto him.

Then said Thomas, which is called Didymus, unto his fellow-disciples, Let us also go, that we may die with him.

Then when Jesus came, he found that he had lain in the grave four days already. (Now Bethany was nigh unto Jerusalem, about fifteen furlongs off.)

And many of the Jews came to Martha and Mary, to comfort them concerning their brother. Then Martha, Die with him.—He viewed the going into Judea, whence Christ had so lately escaped, as nothing but certain death. In this remark Thomas shows a true-hearted fidelity, which brings into strong relief the wonderful attractions by which Jesus “drew all men unto him.” “The little we know about Thomas shows him to have been a man of strong passions and of little faith and hope. To such a man life is full of pathos. He could not believe that Christ could with safety go into Judea again ; in this, indeed, he really forecast the result, which was the crucifixion of his Lord ; but neither could he bear to be separated from him.”—Abbott.

Bethany was nigh unto Jerusalem.—“The use of the past tense was, not is, indicates that Bethany had ceased to exist at the time when John wrote his gospel. It thus incidentally confirms the opinion that he wrote a considerable time after the destruction of Jerusalem, and when that city and its environs were lying waste.”—Abbott.

The Jews came . . . to comfort them.—“Had come.” “Bethany being so nigh to Jerusalem, many of the relatives and friends of the family came, according to the Jewish custom, to mourn with the afflicted sisters. Mourning among the Jews lasted about thirty days. The first three were termed days of weeping ; then followed seven of lamentation. During the three days the mourner did no servile work. During the seven days he did no servile work except in private, lay with his bed on the floor, did not put on his sandals, did not wash nor anoint himself, had

Chap. XXXIII.

John 11 : 20-23.

Jan. J.C. 34

as soon as she heard that Jesus was coming, went and met him : but Mary sat still in the house. Martha comes to meet Jesus. Then said Martha unto Jesus, Lord, if thou hadst been here, my brother had not died. But I know that even now, whatsoever thou wilt ask of God, God will give it thee.

Jesus saith unto her, Thy brother shall rise again.

his head covered, and neither read in the Law, the Mishna, nor the Talmud. All the thirty days he continued unshaven, wore no white or new clothes, and did not sew up the rents in his garments."—Adam Clarke. The female members of the household during this period remained at home, and sat on the ground, with rent clothes, and dust on their heads, surrounded by not less than ten friends or professional mourners. This custom is alluded to in the clause, "Mary sat in the house," and "she arose quickly."

Martha . . . went and met him.—"Geikie supposes that he thus remained without from fear of the Jews ; but Christ never stopped in the performance of a duty from considerations of fear. His reply to the remonstrances of his disciples (vers. 8-10) should have prevented this prosaic interpretation of Christ's action. To him the conventional mourning customs of Oriental society were exceedingly distasteful. He who put all the noisy mourners out of the room in which the daughter of Jairus lay dead (Mark 5 : 40), and who so gently rebuked the noisy and ostentatious lamentations of the women of Jerusalem at the time of his own crucifixion (Luke 23 : 27-31), might naturally be expected to decline to enter into the circle of formal mourners, with the alternative of either violating the precedents and rules of good society or of submitting himself in such an hour to the bondage which they imposed."—Abbott.

Lord, if thou hadst been here.—"This is the language both of reproach and of lamentation, though the reproach is implied rather than asserted. Her language expresses the very essence of soul torture at such times. We are slow to believe that our sorrow is 'for the glory of God that the Son of God may be glorified thereby,' and in our affliction continually echo Martha's 'if,' saying to ourselves, If we had not done this or if we had not done that ; if it had not been for our blunder or that of our friends or our physicians, our beloved would not have died. Chance is the God of Atheism, and is a comfortless God in the time of our trouble."—Abbott.

Chap. XXXIII.

John II : 24, 25.

Jan. J.C. 34.

Martha saith unto him, I know that he shall rise again in the resurrection at the last day.

Jesus said unto her, I am the resurrection, and the life : he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet

I know that he shall rise again in the resurrection at the last day.—"This statement of Martha's faith is to be interpreted by the belief of the orthodox Jews. This was that all the dead departed to Hades or the Under World, where they dwelt in a shadowy prison house, the righteous in Paradise, the wicked in Hell and awaiting the coming of the Messiah, who would call all the righteous from the Under World, while the wicked would be thrust back into it again. Martha believed that her brother had gone to this abode of the dead, and there was awaiting a day of judgment and of resurrection ; but she found in this faith very little consolation. Her brother, to her thought, was as if he were not, and dwelt among the dead. A vague hope of a far distant revival did not comfort her. It is in contrast to, and in correction of, this creed, that Christ utters the declaration of verses 25-26."—Abbott.

I am the resurrection, and the life.—"In me is victory over the grave ; in me is life eternal. By faith in me that becomes yours which makes death not to be death, but only the transition to a higher life."—Trench.

Though he were dead.—Have died. "What is our proof of immortality? . . . Heaven begun is the living proof that makes the heaven to come creditable. 'Christ in you is the hope of glory.' It is the eagle eye of faith which penetrates the grave, and sees far into the tranquil things of death. He alone can believe in immortality who feels the resurrection in him already."—F. W. Robertson. "We now call it death to leave this world ; but were we once out of it, and instated into the happiness of the next, we should think it were dying indeed to come into it again."—Sherlock. "The various and conflicting interpretations afforded by the commentators of this declaration of Christ agree only in being complicated and abstruse. It is essential to comfort that it should be simple truth simply expressed ; and that Christ should offer as a consolation to Mary a truth so subtle and involved in so much mystery that skillful scholarship can scarce unlock its meaning, seems to me utterly incredible. I understand these words as an embodiment of Christ's creed respecting life and immortality. Jesus is the source of the resurrection and the fountain of life. Whoever, therefore, by faith in Christ, has Christ in him the hope of glory, never knows death ; to him there is no Hades, no dark and dis-

Chap. XXXIII.

John 11 : 25, 26.

Jan. J.C. 34.

shall he live : and whosoever liveth, and believeth in me, shall never die. Believest thou this ?

mal abode of the dead, no long and weary waiting for a final great jail delivery—a judgment and an acquittal. He passes at once from the lower to the higher state ; he has already come to the general assembly and church of the first-born (Heb. 12 : 22–24). What we call death summons him simply to depart and be straightway with Christ (Phil. 1 : 23 ; Luke 23 : 43). The eternal life which Christ here and now gives to those who are by faith united to him (John 5 : 24) is never suspended ; so immortal and potent is this life principle which Christ offers to those who have received him that, if it were possible that one having died should receive it, he would by it be made to live again. Against the conception, common now, as then, of death as a long sleep, or a long and dreary waiting for a final resurrection, is Christ's teaching here that 'there is no death ; what seems so is transition.' In confirmation of this view, observe : 1. That Christ's declaration is present, not future. I am the resurrection, not I shall by and by become so. 2. The conditional clause, though he were dead, is literally even though he should die, and is fairly rendered by the phrase even if he could die. 3. Thus interpreted, Christ's declaration is responsive to Martha's confession of faith, and leads on to and agrees with the event which follows—the restoration of Lazarus to his earthly life. 4. It accords with the general teaching of the New Testament, in which Christ is represented as the source of eternal life, and the death of the saints as a doorway into his immediate presence (Acts 7 : 59 ; Rom. 14 : 8 ; 2 Cor. 5 : 8 ; 1 Thess. 5 : 10 ; 2 Tim. 4 : 8 ; 2 Pet. 1 : 11, etc.). It is not necessary to give here other interpretations, for they are complicated, incongruous, and almost impossible to classify. They are the results of various and unsuccessful endeavors to bring Christ's declaration into accord with the Pharisaic faith, which still lingers in the Christian church, of a resurrection and an eternal life postponed to the future, and an abode in death, meanwhile, in some sort of an intermediate state."—Abbott.

Believest thou this ?—"The surest means to convince one's self of a life after death is so to act in the present that one must wish it. Whoever feels that, if there is a God, he must look graciously on him, seeks for no reasons against his existence, and requires none. Whoever has offered up so much for virtue that he ought to expect indemnification in a future life, such a one requires no proof of, nor does he merely believe in, the existence of such a life ; he feels it within himself."—Fichte.

Chap. XXXIII.

John 11 : 27-32.

Jan. J.C. 34.

She saith unto him, Yea, Lord : I believe that thou art the Christ, the Son of God, which should come into the world.

And when she had so said, she went her way, and called Mary her sister secretly, saying, The Master is come, and calleth for thee. As soon as ^{Mary comes to} she heard that, she arose quickly, and ^{Jesus.} came unto him. Now Jesus was not yet come into the town, but was in that place where Martha met him. The Jews then which were with her in the house, and comforted her, when they saw Mary that she rose up hastily, and went out, followed her, saying, She goeth unto the grave to weep there.

Then when Mary was come where Jesus was, and saw

I believe that thou art the Christ.—“ Martha seems to me not to understand Christ's saying. She was conscious it was some great thing, but did not perceive the whole meaning, so that when asked one thing she answered another.”—Chrysostom. “ Upon this, evidently becoming conscious of her inability to sustain the conversation with him, she retreated and went to summon her sister. It is not stated that Jesus had expressed any desire to see Mary. He may have done so. But even if he had not, it was very natural that Martha should have retired, as she did, and told Mary that Jesus wanted her. Martha knew how her sister always listened to him with the profoundest interest, and seemed to understand him so much better than she. Mary therefore, she felt, was needed there.”—Furness.

Called Mary her sister secretly.—“ She told her tidings ‘ secretly,’ fearing, it may be, that some of their visitors from Jerusalem might be of unfriendly disposition toward the Lord ; nor was her suspicion unfounded, as the event showed.”—Trench.

Comforted her.—“ Were comforting her”—that is, trying to comfort.

She goeth unto the grave to weep there.—“ It was the custom of Jewish mourners often to visit the graves of their kindred, and especially during the first days of their mourning.”—Rosenmüller.

Chap. XXXIII.

John II : 32, 33.

Jan. J.C. 34.

him, she fell down at his feet, saying unto him, Lord, if thou hadst been here, my brother had not died.

When Jesus therefore saw her weeping, and the Jews also weeping which came with her, he groaned in the

She fell down at his feet.—"With a more passionate nature than that of Martha, her action and her attitude were both more strongly indicative of her uncontrollable emotion. Possibly she threw herself prostrate at his feet in the form of salutation ordinarily paid by an inferior to a superior in the East; yet with her face upon the ground she could hardly have carried on any conference whatever. More probably, therefore, she flung herself at first at his feet, then partially raised herself again to break forth in her reproachful complaint."—Abbott. "The same faith in Christ, as being 'the Son of God,' which Martha at fuller length expressed by her words, Mary more concisely declared by her act of adoration. . . . By her tears she implored the help which she asked not for with her lips. No more effectual, no more mighty, prayer than are our tears. Tears brought it to pass, which words could not do, that Jesus 'was troubled in his spirit.'"—Rupertus.

If thou hadst been here.—"Her language is nearly the same as that of Martha, but she adds no expression of hope; her profounder nature refuses to entertain a hope for which she can give herself no reason."—Abbott. "The words, thus repeating themselves a second time from her lips, give us a glimpse of all that had passed in that mournful house since the beloved was laid in the earth. How often during that four day's interval the sisters had said one to the other, How different the issue might have been if the Divine Friend had been with them! This had been the one thought in the hearts, the one word upon the lips of either, and therefore it was so naturally the first spoken by each, and that altogether independently of the other. This indeed is one of the finer traits of the narrative."—Trench. "The setting of a great hope is like the setting of the sun. The brightness of our life is gone, shadows of the evening fall behind us, and the world seems but a dim reflection itself—a broader shadow. We look forward into the coming lonely night; the soul withdraws itself. Then stars arise, and the night is holy."—Longfellow.

He groaned in the spirit.—"He was greatly moved in spirit."—Alford. "He visibly shuddered with emotion, and had to restrain himself by an earnest effort."—Geikie. "His susceptibility to both joy and suffering were intense. He was prone to compassion, and repeatedly melted into tears."—Mark Hopkins. "There seems to be no doubt that the Greek word

Chap. XXXIII.

John 11 : 33-35.

Jan. J.C. 34.

spirit, and was troubled, and said, Where have ye laid him? They say unto him, Lord, come and see.

Jesus wept.

rendered groan necessarily involves in it the idea of anger or indignation; it is so rendered in the Vulgate and in Luther's translation. With this agree both the lexicons and the critics generally. What was the cause of this indignation? According to some of the older commentaries, Christ was indignant with himself for his weakness in yielding to his emotions; his divinity was irritated at the emotion of his humanity, and violently repressed it. This opinion needs no refutation with those who believe that Christianity tends to intensify, not to suppress, the natural affections—that Christian sympathy weeps with those that weep as well as rejoices with those that rejoice, and who find in the tears of Christ at the grave of Lazarus not a manifestation of human weakness, but an expression of divine sympathy which draws God very near to every sorrowing heart. Others suppose that Christ saw in this scene a type of the woe that sin had wrought in the world; seeing its effects, his indignation was aroused. We may certainly believe that this profound sense of the significance of this scene of sorrow affected Christ and intensified his sympathy; that the tears that he shed were tears of sympathy, not only with Mary and Martha, but also with all sorrowing households. This, however, interprets rather his sorrow than his indignation. A simple and natural interpretation of this indignation is afforded by a consideration of the circumstances and surroundings. He was indignant at the display of the affected grief of those who were bitter enemies of the truth, and who would, as he well knew, make use of this very miracle to promote his death, and would even join with those who would seek to put Lazarus himself to death again (Luke 12 : 10). He was indignant when he saw the Jews also lamenting, and again when he heard the sneer uttered by them (see ver. 37, note).—Abbott.

And was troubled.—Literally, he troubled himself. The words "indicate a physical emotion, a bodily trembling, which might be perceived by the witnesses of this scene."—Godet.

Where have ye laid him?—"He inquired where the grave was, lest, if he had gone to it of his own knowledge, the Jews should take occasion to suspect a collusion between him and Lazarus, and a trick in the case."—Henry. It was customary with the Jews to bury their dead outside the city walls. Only the wealthier classes possessed tombs.

Jesus wept.—"This is the shortest verse in the New Testament, but one of the most consolatory, as proving (by this action, not unworthy the dignity of our exalted Redeemer) that we have indeed a high priest who can 'be touched with the feeling of our infirmities.' "—Bloomfield. "That Jesus should have wept at a grave whose inmate he was so soon to recall to life, at sorrow he was so soon to turn to joy, has been a perplexity to many who have endeavored to harmonize it with a theory rather than with the facts of human experience. They have forgotten that sympathy shares present woe, regardless of future alleviation ; forgotten that these tears are but the expression of a life-long sympathy ; forgotten that Jesus, who from the beginning saw of the travail of his soul and was satisfied, was nevertheless, from the cradle to the grave, 'a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief.' "—Abbott's "Jesus of Nazareth." "The Greek signifies simply shedding of tears—weeping silently. This silent dropping of the tears from his eyes is in contrast with the weeping over Jerusalem (Luke 19 : 41). That was a public lamentation of a prophet ; this was the expression of the personal sympathy of a friend. Beware of that false philosophy which represents Christ as weeping only as a man. In this, as in every utterance of his nature, he was God manifest in the flesh. By his tears at the grave of Lazarus he interprets to us the divine sympathy which shares all our sorrows, however much the great Sympathizer, with his clear view of final results, may, like Christ, be glad of the brief experience of grief that is soon to produce so much joy (ver. 15)."—Abbott.

Then said the Jews, Behold how he loved him ! And some of them said, Could not this man, which opened the eyes of the blind, have caused that even this man should not have died ?

Then said the Jews, Behold.—The passage should read, "The Jews therefore"—because Jesus wept—"said, Behold, how he loved him ! But some of them said, Could not this man (perhaps better rendered 'fellow'), who opened the eyes of the blind man, have caused also that this man should not have died ?" "That is, there was one part that felt kindly toward Christ on account of his love and sympathy ; but another, always ready to carp, ask why he that could open the eyes of one born blind could not have spared his friends such sorrow. These Jews of Jerusalem had hardly heard of his miracles of raising the dead, which had taken place in parts remote from them ; or, if they had heard, they did not believe. And so they did not now say a word about raising Lazarus, which did not occur to their minds, but they ask why he could not have prevented his dying at all."—Eggleston.

Chap. XXXIII.

John II : 38-40.

Jan. J.C. 34.

Jesus therefore again groaning in himself, cometh to the grave. It was a cave, and a stone lay upon it. Jesus said, Take ye away the stone.

Martha, the sister of him that was dead, saith unto him, Lord, by this time he stinketh : for he hath been dead four days.

Jesus saith unto her, Said I not unto thee, that if thou wouldest believe, thou shouldest see the glory of God ?

Again groaning in himself.—“Greatly moved in himself.”—Alford. “Euthymius translates this passage, ‘repressed his emotion.’ And when he struggled with his emotion, a certain tremor pervaded his frame, as is frequently the case with those who put a constraint on their feelings. Thus also Markland, who understands it to mean, ‘repressed the rising human passion of grief by the superior principle in him.’”—Bloomfield.

It was a cave, and a stone lay upon it.—The tomb of Palestine was a cave cut by nature, or by hand, in the solid rock. Ordinarily it was closed by a huge stone fitted into a groove, but in this case “a stone lay upon it,” indicating that it was a room sunk in the ground, with steps descending into it. The stone was probably heavy, to protect the corpse from jackals and other beasts of prey, and required the strength of several persons to move it. A cave is still shown as being the tomb occupied by the body of Lazarus. It is of only doubtful authenticity. It is, however, a most striking fact that Bethany now bears his name, being called, el-Azarîyeh or Lazarieh.

Take ye away the stone.—“He would have this stone removed, that all the standers-by might see the body dead, and that way might be made for its coming out, and it might appear to be a true body, and not a specter. He would have some of the servants remove it, that they might be witnesses that it was truly dead.”—Henry.

By this time.—The putrefaction of dead bodies is extremely rapid in hot countries.

For he hath been dead four days.—The word “dead” is not in the original ; it is, “for he hath been four days”—that is, four days in the grave. (See ver. 17.)

Shouldest see the glory of God.—This seems to be an allusion to the message which Jesus sent to the sisters from Perea. (See ver. 4.) “The faith of the sisters was to be displayed, not to any definite expectation of the work which their Lord was about to

Chap. XXXIII.

John II : 41, 42.

Jan. J.C. 34.

Then they took away the stone from the place where the dead was laid. And Jesus lifted up his eyes, and said, Father, I thank thee that thou hast heard me : and I knew that thou hearest me always : but because accomplish, but in obedience to his directions ; and in fact Martha tacitly withdraws her remonstrance, and the stone is rolled away from the grave. The performance of the miracle was itself dependent on the fulfillment of the condition, 'If thou wouldst believe.' The New Testament throughout treats faith as the power of moral and spiritual discernment, and therefore the fundamental condition of receiving the divine blessing. 'To unbelieving Martha, Jesus could no more have restored the dead brother than to the unbelieving Jairus his child' (Luke 8 : 50), or to the widow of Nain her son, if her attitude toward his compassion and his injunction, 'Weep not' (Luke 7 : 13), had been one of unbelief."—Meyer. "Observe the order in which Christ put seeing and believing. Men are always desirous to see in order to believe. Martha is called upon to give an example of the contrary course—to believe that she may see."—Abbott.

Father, I thank thee.—"Who ever prayed in this manner? Before uttering any prayer, he saith, 'I thank thee,' showing that he needed not prayer."—Chrysostom. "He was heard by the Father before he prayed ; his request was granted before it was made ; and therefore he begins with thanks."—Origen. "Christ, being about to conclude his public life and preaching by the last and most illustrious of his miracles, returns solemn thanks to his Father for the power given to his human nature to prove the authority of his mission by miracles."—Quesnel. "It is not necessary to suppose, as Alford does, a reference to some previously-uttered prayer, in Perea, for example, when the message respecting Lazarus's sickness was brought to Jesus. The language is that of the assurance of faith—faith in a God who hears the desire before it is expressed in prayer, who teaches the believing soul how and for what to pray, and who thus continually answers our prayers by anticipation. Christ regards his prayer as answered before it is presented."—Abbott.

And I knew that thou hearest me always.—"Alike when the prayer is granted, and when it is denied ; at the grave of Lazarus and in the agony of Gethsemane. God hears us when his providence says No to our petition none the less than when it says Yes. The true Christian's faith, like Christ's faith, rests not on the answer, but on the direct personal consciousness of spiritual communion with God."—Abbott.

Chap. XXXIII.

John II : 42-44.

Jan. J.C. 34.

of the people which stand by, I said it, that they may believe that thou hast sent me.

And when he thus had spoken, he cried with a loud voice, Lazarus, come forth. And he that was dead came forth, bound hand and foot with grave-clothes : and his face was bound about with a napkin.

The Raising of Lazarus.

Jesus saith unto them, Loose him, and let him go.

Because of the people which stood by.—"For the sake of the multitude."

Lazarus, come forth.—"The sublimest moment in written history is that in which Jesus stood by the tomb of the four days' dead, and having wept and prayed, shouted (for such is the word) with a loud cry, 'Lazarus, come forth.'"—Alford. "These words thrilled once more through that region of impenetrable darkness which separates us from the world to come ; and scarcely were they spoken when, like a specter, from the rocky tomb issued a figure—swathed indeed in its white and ghostly cerements, with the napkin round the head which had upheld the jaw that four days previously had dropped in death, bound hand and foot and face, but not livid, not horrible—the figure of a youth with the healthy blood of a restored life flowing through his veins ; of a life restored—so tradition tells us—for thirty more long years of life and light and love."—Farrar.

Grave-clothes.—"Literally, belts or bandages, bound round the linen shroud, by which the spices used in embalming were kept in their places."—Bloomfield.

Napkin.—"The kerchief, which was brought round the forehead and under the chin, though (if we may judge from the Egyptian mummies) it did not cover the face. But this is uncertain. Thus by 'loose' is meant 'cut,' or 'remove' the bandages, which would still leave 'around the form the sindon, or linen sheet in which the corpse was involved.'"—Bloomfield.

Loose him, and let him go.—"At the vision of the dead man alive, and staggering in the thick folds of his shroud, the bystanders stood transfixed with amazement and dread. Jesus recalled them to themselves by bidding them go to the assistance of Lazarus, and loosen the grave-clothes that he might walk freely."—Furness. "The most astonishing idea we can conceive of the most astonishing Being that exists is that he brings about things by the mere act and fiat of his will without any tedious, slow, gradual process ; that it is as easy for him to effect whatever he wills as it is to will any effect. But, behold, another, as it were, usurps his sovereign style : 'I will, be thou clean.' 'Lazarus, come forth !' It is spoke. It is done ! Nature hears his voice, and, confessing her Author, instantly obeys the dread command."—Jeremiah Seed. Nowhere does Jesus assume an aspect of more simple grandeur than at the grave of Lazarus. Weeping one moment, in sympathy with the tears of a sorrowing woman, and uttering the next those majestic words that call the dead back to dwell again among the living ! What a blending of weakness and strength, of human emotion and godlike power, is compressed into this brief narrative ! And who that reads it can fail to perceive in it the indelible impress of truth ? Such apparently incompatible traits could not have been invented. Human genius could not create, much less portray, a character in which were so strangely blended all the sensibility of a man with all the power of a God. We have an intuitive conviction that this character is no human invention—that this man, so godlike and yet so human, once trod our planet, loving and beautiful as an infant, and yet grand and wonderful as the great mountains and the starry spheres. "An instructive parallel may be traced between the experience of these sisters in their sorrow and that of many a Christian household since. 1. The burden of grief. When the sisters first sent for Christ to come he delayed. Still he often delays to answer our petitions. The house of mourning is sometimes a Christless house, not only because of our infirmity (Psalm 77 : 10), but also because of his will. We, like our Master, seem sometimes to be forsaken of our God (Matt. 27 : 46). 2. The aggravation of grief. Both sisters approach Christ with an 'if : ' 'If thou hadst been here my brother had not died.' But his death was not the result of an 'if,' but for the glory of God. There is no 'if,' nothing ever happens. Even the cup which Judas, Caiaphas, Herod, and Pilate mingle for Christ is the cup which his Father gives him (ch. 18 : 14 ; Acts 2 : 23 ; 4 : 27, 28). 3. The sympathy of Christ. The tears of Jesus are a witness to the breadth and depth of the divine sympathy. He feels the anguish of our present sorrow, though he stands by a grave so soon to be opened, perceives prophetically the resurrection so soon to take place, and knows that weeping is but for the night, and joy cometh in the morning. (See Heb. 4 : 15, 16.) 4. The true and false conception of death. We too often imagine, as Martha, the believer awaiting in Hades a future resurrection and a remote restoration to life. Our hearts are dead because buried in the graves of our loved ones. To us Christ declares here that the believer never dies, but steps at once from the lower to the higher life, through the grave into heavenly companion-

Chap. XXXIII.

John 11 : 45-49.

Jan. J.C. 34.

Then many of the Jews which came to Mary, and had seen the things which Jesus did, believed on him. But some of them went their ways to the Pharisees, and told them what things Jesus had done.

Then gathered the chief priests and the Pharisees a council, and said, What do we ? for this man doeth many miracles. If we let him ^{The Sanhedrin alarmed.} thus alone, all men will believe on him ; and the Romans shall come and take away both our place and nation.

And one of them, named Caiaphas, being the high priest that same year, said unto them, Ye know nothship (Luke 23 : 43 ; Phil. 1 : 23). 5. The power of Christ. This scene is a witness to the truth that all the dead shall hear his voice and come forth in resurrection. Death is but a sleep ; from it he will awaken all that sleep in him (Dan. 12 : 2 ; John 5 : 21-29 ; 6 : 39 ; 1 Cor. 15 : 26, 54 ; 2 Cor. 4 : 14 ; Col. 3 : 4 ; 1 Thess. 4 : 14-17 ; Rev. 1 : 18, 20 : 14). 6. A parable of redemption. Sin a spiritual death ; Christ the spiritual life-giver."—Abbott.

A council.—A meeting of the sanhedrin, or great council of the nation. (Note p. 11.) They claimed the right of regulating all the affairs of religion. "The impression which the miracle of the resurrection of Lazarus made upon the people at large was very great. It was in all its circumstances so public, and so well authenticated, that it was impossible for the most skeptical to deny it, even if it did not lead them to faith in Jesus. The ecclesiastical rulers felt that it was now high time that something should be done, and they proceed at once to call a council to determine what steps should be taken. Their deliberations ended with the resolve that he should be put to death. This may be regarded as the decisive and final rejection of Jesus by the Jewish authorities. It does not appear that to this time there had been a determination of the Sanhedrin, in formal session, that he should die."—Andrews.

What do we ?—"What are we doing?" A phrase implying, "What are we to do?"

Caiaphas.—See note page 94.

Ye know nothing at all.—"In this," says Trench, "we hear the voice of a bold, bad man silencing with ill-suppressed contempt his weak and vacillating colleagues, who could see the common danger which threatened them, and yet shrunk, though from no righteous principle, from applying the effectual remedy." His

Chap. XXXIII.

John II : 49-54.

Jan. J.C. 34.

ing at all. Nor consider that it is expedient for us, that one man should die for the people, and that the whole nation perish not.

And this spake he not of himself : but being high priest that year, he prophesied that Jesus should die for that nation ; and not for that nation only, but that also he should gather together in one the children of God that were scattered abroad. Then from that day forth they took counsel together for to put him to death.

Jesus therefore walked no more openly among the Jews ; but went thence unto a country near to the wilderness, into a city called Ephraim, and there continued with his disciples.

remarks are paraphrased by Geikie as follows : " You know nothing at all," said he, " else you would not have so much questioning and discussing. You have not considered that it is expedient for you, in view of your interests as priests and Rabbis, that this one man should die, to save Israel, as such, from the destruction that threatens it, if you let him stir up a Messianic revolt ; for, in that case, the whole nation must perish. The Romans will come with their legions and close our temple, annul our independence by abolishing our laws, and waste us with fire and sword."

He prophesied.—Unwittingly he carried out the divine intentions. Thus, " He makes the wrath of man to praise him." " It is ever the way of those who rule the earth to leave out of their reckoning him who rules the universe."—Cooper.

Ephraim " seems to have been in the wild uncultivated hill-country north-east of Jerusalem, between the central towns and the Jordan valley. A village now known as El Taiyibeh—on a conical hill, commanding a view of the whole eastern slope of the country, the valley of the Jordan, and the Dead Sea, though only sixteen miles from Jerusalem—has been thought by Dr. Robinson the site. It answers at least in its secluded privacy, and the ready access it offers to the still wilder regions beyond."—Geikie.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

THE LAST JOURNEY TO JERUSALEM.

AND the Jews' passover was nigh at hand : and many went out of the country up to Jerusalem before the passover, to purify themselves. Then sought they for Jesus, and spake among themselves, as they stood

The Jews' passover.—See notes on pages 55, 89. After the raising of Lazarus Jesus left the vicinity of Jerusalem and "went into a country near to the wilderness, into a city called Ephraim." The position of this city, "though well fitted for seculsion, was not so for teaching. We conclude, then, as the narrative plainly implies, that he was spending the few days that remained to him, not amidst crowds, nor renewing in some scattered villages the labors of his early ministry, but in the society of his disciples, teaching them such truths as they could receive, and preparing them for their labors after he should himself be taken from them. Identifying Ephraim with the modern Taiyibeh, the distance to the border line of Galilee and Samaria was not great. If he left the former early in the morning, he may have reached the latter in the afternoon. That he was accompanied by others than the twelve, appears from the statement (Matt. 20 : 17) that 'he took them apart in the way,' and from the mention of Salome (ver. 20). As the time for concealment was now past, and it was his purpose to enter Jerusalem with all publicity, it is probable that he directed his course to the Jordan with a view to meet the pilgrims from Galilee, who took this way to the feast. So soon as he came into the valley of the Jordan he would meet the larger processions that came from the neighborhood of the Sea of Galilee by the road down the west bank of the river, and in the neighborhood of Jericho would meet those who crossed the ford from the eastern side. What multitudes attended the feasts, especially this feast, appears from Josephus."—Andrews. See note page 90.

To purify themselves.—"It was customary for those who had contracted a defilement which was to be purified by a sacrifice to reserve themselves for one of the great feasts ; also for those who had entered into a vow of Naziritism to perform it at those seasons."—Whitby. "It was required too of those who had become defiled in any manner to purify themselves before they partook of the celebration of the paschal feast."—Lightfoot. (See Num. 9 : 6-13 ; 2 Chron. 30 : 17-19, Exod. 12 : 3-6.)

Then sought they for Jesus.—"The fact that he had been

Ch. XXXIV. John 11 : 56, 57 ; Luke 17 : 11, 12.

J.C. 34.

in the temple, What think ye, that he will not come to the feast? Now both the chief priests and the Pharisees had given a commandment, that, if any man knew where he were, he should show it, that they might take him.

And it came to pass, as he went to Jerusalem, that Ten Lepers
Cleansed. he passed through the midst of Samaria and Galilee. And as he entered into a certain village, there met him ten men that were lepers, present at the last two feasts in Jerusalem led the people to expect that Jesus would also be present at the passover. But, on the other hand, as he had withdrawn from public observation, and as the Jews had endeavored to learn the place of his concealment in order to arrest him, it was doubtful whether he would dare to come and brave their enmity. That many should assemble before the feast, was made necessary by the laws respecting purification."—Andrews.

He passed through the midst of Samaria and Galilee.—"Along the borders of Samaria and Galilee." That is, from west to east toward the Jordan. "As to the name and position of the village where the ten lepers met him we know nothing more than that it was on the border of Samaria. It would seem, from the gathering together of so many lepers in one place, that the Lord's journey was widely known. The title by which they address him—'Jesus, Master'—indicates faith in him as a prophet rather than a Messiah."—Andrews.

There met him ten men that were lepers.—"Their common misery had drawn them together (2 Kings 7 : 3)—nay, had even caused them to forget the fierce national antipathy which reigned between Jew and Samaritan. In this border land too it was more natural than elsewhere that they should find themselves in one company, and thus a Samaritan had found admission into this forlorn assembly."—Trench. "As is the custom in the East, this dismal society hovered near the village which they might not enter (Num. 5 : 4 ; Matt. 8 : 1)."—Whedon. "This disease was specially selected, as being the most loathsome and incurable of all, to represent the effect of the defilement of sin upon the once pure and holy body of man. The leper was the type of one dead in sin. The same emblems are used in his misery as those of mourning for the dead ; the same means of cleansing as for uncleanness through connection with death, and which were never used except on these two occasions. (Comp. Num. 19 : 6, 13, 18 with Lev. 14 : 4-7.) All this exclusion and mournful separation imported the perpetual exclusion of the abomi-

Chap. XXXIV.

Luke 17 : 12-16.

Feb.-Mar. J.C. 34.

which stood afar off : and they lifted up their voices, and said, Jesus, Master, have mercy on us. And when he saw them, he said unto them, Go shew yourselves unto the priests. And it came to pass, that as they went, they were cleansed. And one of them, when he saw that he was healed, turned back, and with a loud voice glorified God, and fell down on his face at his feet, giving him thanks : and he was a Samaritan.

nable and polluted from the true city of God, as declared (Rev. 21 : 27).”—Alford. “Leprosy was indeed nothing short of a living death, a poisoning of the springs, a corrupting of all the humors of life ; a dissolution, little by little, of the whole body, so that one limb after another actually decayed and fell away.”—Trench.

Stood afar off.—Being forbidden by the law to approach others. It was a sort of quarantine to prevent the spread of the disease, or the defilement of others. (See Lev. 13 : 46 ; Num. 5 : 2.)”—Peloubet. See note on page 145.

Go shew yourselves unto the priests.—“When a leper was cured, before he could be restored to society he was required to show himself to the priest, to make an offering, and to be officially pronounced clean. (See Lev., ch. 14 ; Matt. 8 : 4 ; note page 147.) Christ’s command thus implied a promise of cure. They were to act as if they were cleansed, and trust to Christ that the cleansing would come in his own time and way. Every miracle is a parable ; in this is a hint to those who wait before entering on practical Christian duty, until they have received some personal sense of divine pardon. To such the command of Christ is, Go, assume that I will and can cleanse you ; and begin the life of one who has been cleansed.”—Abbott.

As they went, they were cleansed.—“The meaning evidently is, that they had not gone far, and that the whole took place within a short time. They had not been to the priests, as some suppose.”—Alford. “Perhaps in the very village itself they perceived what had taken place in them—that they were healed.”—Trench.

With a loud voice.—“As the disease of leprosy made the voice husky, there may be here an allusion to the loud, clear tone which resulted from his cure.”—Riddle.

And he was a Samaritan.—It is implied that the others were Jews. “As he recognizes him to be a Samaritan, Jesus feels to the quick the difference between those simple hearts, within

Chap. XXXIV.

Luke 17 : 17-19.

Feb.-Mar. J.C. 34.

And Jesus answering, said, Were there not ten cleansed? but where are the nine? There are not found that returned to give glory to God, save this stranger. And he said unto him, Arise, go thy way : thy faith hath made thee whole.

which there yet vibrates the natural feeling of gratitude, and Jewish hearts, incrustated all over with Pharisaic pride and ingratitude ; and immediately, no doubt, the lot of his Gospel in the world is presented to his mind. But he contents himself with bringing into view the present contrast."—Godet.

Were there not ten cleansed? or, Were not the ten cleansed?—"Even the Saviour himself, who knew what was in man, who had already had so many proofs of the ingratitude of men, seems to have marveled here."—Trench. "A deaf and dumb pupil of the Abbé Sicard, on being asked what he understood by the word 'gratitude,' wrote down immediately, 'Gratitude is the memory of the heart.'"—Brown's "Philosophy of the Human Mind."

Where are the nine?—"They had probably felt that their first duty as Jews was to show themselves to the priest, as they had been commanded. This was their duty, but personal gratitude placed another duty before it."—Riddle. "What a striking illustration is this of human nature, and of the ingratitude of men! One had come back to give thanks for the favor bestowed on him; the others were heard of no more. So now. When men are restored from dangerous sickness, here and there one comes to give thanks to God; but 'where are the nine?' When men are defended from danger, when they are recovered from the perils of the sea, one acknowledges God, and renders him praise. But where are the mass of them? They give no thanks; they offer no praise. They go about their usual employments, to mingle in the scenes of pleasure and of sin, as if nothing had occurred."—Barnes.

Thy faith hath made thee whole.—Rather, saved. "The word 'saved' is used sometimes of physical as well as of spiritual healing; but this man was already made whole. Christ now gives him assurance of something more—a cleansing of the inward sin, of which the outward leprosy was but a type. All had faith enough to obey Christ's command, and go show themselves to the priest, while as yet there was no sign of cure; but only the one had the faith which is perfected in love. They all had faith and hope; but only one had the greatest of the graces—that love which is the consummation of salvation (1 Cor. 13. 13)."—Abbott. "Theirs was merely the

Chap. XXXIV.

Luke 17 : 20, 21.

Feb.—Mar. J.C. 34.

And when he was demanded of the Pharisees, when the kingdom of God should come, he answered them and said, The kingdom of God cometh ^{The Coming of Christ's Kingdom.} not with observation : neither shall they say, Lo here ! or, Lo there ! for behold, the kingdom beholding of the brazen serpent with the outward eyes, but his with the eye of inward faith ; and this faith saved him—not only healed his body, but his soul.”—Alford. “Wonderful and most instructive is the difference in our Lord’s dealing with the different sufferers and mourners that are brought in contact with him. How the physician, who is all wisdom and all tenderness, varies his treatment for the varying needs of his patients ! how he seems to resist a strong faith, that he may make it stronger yet ! how he meets a weak faith, lest it should prove altogether too weak in the trial ! how one he forgives first, and heals afterward, and another, whose heart could only be softened by first receiving an earthly benefit, he first heals and then pardons !”—Trench.

When he was demanded of the Pharisees when the kingdom of God should come.—“This demand may not have been made with an evil intent. The universal belief of the age was of a temporal kingdom, with Jerusalem as mistress of the world, a second and superior Rome. The Pharisees naturally asked of one, whose followers claimed for him that he was a great prophet, and some of them that he was the Messiah, when and how this kingdom would be established.”—Abbott.

Cometh not with observation.—In a way to be observed.

The kingdom of God is within you.—“Our Lord imposed no rigorous ceremonies on his disciples. He taught them to enter into the closet, to retire within the heart, to speak but few words, to open their heart to receive the descent of the Holy Spirit.”—Madame Guyon. “Habituate yourself to seek for the kingdom of God in your own heart. We look far and wide for it, wishing to taste the pleasure of virtue and to flatter the imagination, without being willing to submit the reason to faith and the will to God’s authority.”—Fénelon. “The declaration is not historical, but philosophical ; the assertion not of a fact, but of a law. Christ does not say that the kingdom of God is already established among the Pharisees, which was not indeed true in any sense, but that the nature of that kingdom is such that it is to be found within the heart. There is no passage so brief in Scripture which contains so much valuable and significant truth respecting the kingdom of God, or the kingdom of heaven, as these two verses. That kingdom is not to be es-

Chap. XXXIV.

Luke 17 : 21, 22,

Feb.—Mar. J.C. 34.

of God is within you. And he said unto the disciples, tablished by Christ's second coming ; he then comes not to found but to take possession of his kingdom. Great public events, whether military, political, or religious, as the Crusades, the Reformation, and so-called revival meetings, are not the coming of his kingdom, though they may help to prepare the way for it. That kingdom is righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost (Rom. 14 : 17) ; it is in the disposition and character of the individual, and in the development of a society, nurtured in the spirit and in accord with the precepts and principles of Jesus Christ ; and therefore it comes of necessity by gradual processes and in ways which attract no observation except in their results. The earthquake may prepare the heart of the jailer for the kingdom, but the kingdom does not come in the earthquake."—Abbott.

And he said unto the disciples.—“ Whether this is a fragmentary report of the discourse in the passion week, more fully reported by Matthew, and partially by Luke (in Ch. 21), or not, it clearly was not given to the Pharisees, nor in immediate connection with the preceding verses . . . I think that it is probable that, as in several other places, Matthew, who was an eye and ear witness, gave the discourse in its time, location, and connection, while Luke, a second-hand reporter, has given the same discourse, without any knowledge of or note concerning the time, place, or circumstances of the delivery, and placed it here because it was cognate to Christ's reply to the question of the Pharisees.”—Abbott.

That the two passages may be seen together there is here sub-joined a PARALLELISM OF LUKE 17 : 23-27, 30, AND MATTHEW 24 : 26, 27, 37-39.

	LUKE 17.	MATT. 24.
23	And they shall say to you, See here ; or, see there : go not after them, nor follow them.	Wherefore if they shall say unto you, Behold, he is in the desert ; go not forth : behold, he is in the secret chambers ; believe it not.	26
24	For as the lightning, that lighteneth out of the one part under heaven, shineth unto the other part under heaven ; so shall also the Son of man be in his day.	For as the lightning cometh out of the east, and shineth even unto the west ; so shall also the coming of the Son of man be. (Comp. ver. 25 with Luke 17 : 37.)	27
25	But first must he suffer many things, and be rejected of this generation.
26	And as it was in the days of Noë, so shall it be also in the days of the Son of man.	But as the days of Noë were, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be.	37
27	They did eat, they drank, they married wives, they were given in marriage, until the day that Noë entered into the ark, and the flood came, and destroyed them all.	For as in the days that were before the flood they were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage, until the day that Noë entered into the ark, and knew not until the flood came, and took them all away ;	38 39 29
28, 29	Even thus shall it be in the day when the Son of man is revealed.	so shall also the coming of the Son of man be.

Chap. XXXIV.

Luke 17 : 22-34.

Feb.-Mar. J.C. 34.

The days will come, when ye shall desire to see one of the days of the Son of man, and ye shall not see it. And they shall say to you, See here ! or, See there ! go not after them, nor follow them. For as the lighting that lighteneth out of the one part under heaven, shineth unto the other part under heaven ; so shall also the Son of man be in his day. But first must he suffer many things, and be rejected of this generation. And as it was in the days of Noë, so shall it be also in the days of the Son of man. They did eat, they drank, they married wives, they were given in marriage, until the day that Noë entered into the ark, and the flood came, and destroyed them all. Likewise also as it was in the days of Lot : they did eat, they drank, they bought, they sold, they planted, they builded ; but the same day that Lot went out of Sodom, it rained fire and brimstone from heaven, and destroyed them all. Even thus shall it be in the day when the Son of man is revealed. In that day, he which shall be upon the housetop, and his stuff in the house, let him not come down to take it away ; and he that is in the field, let him likewise not return back. Remember Lot's wife. Whosoever shall seek to save his life, shall lose it ; and whosoever shall lose his life, shall preserve it. I tell you, in that night there shall

Christ's Second Coming.

When the Son of Man is revealed.—"The word revealed (uncovered) supposes that Jesus is present, but that a veil conceals his person from the view of the world. All at once the veil is lifted, and the glorified Lord is visible to all."—Godet. (Comp. Col. 3 : 3, 4 ; 2 Thess. 1 : 7 ; 1 Pet. 1 : 7.)

In that night.—The reference here is clearly to the second coming of Christ, and this is quite apparent from the connection, as the discourse is reported by Matthew. "At this time a selection will take place—a selection which will instantaneously break all earthly relations, even the most intimate, and from be two men in one bed ; the one shall be taken, and the other shall be left. Two women shall be grinding together ; the one shall be taken, and the other left. Two men shall be in the field ; the one shall be taken, and the other left. And they answered and said unto him, Where, Lord ? And he said unto them, Wheresoever the body is, thither will the eagles be gathered together.

Chap. XXXIV. Luke 17 : 34-37 ; 18 : 1-2. Feb.-Mar. J.C. 34.

And he spake a parable unto them to this end, that men ought always to pray, and not to faint ; saying, which there will arise a new grouping of humanity in two new families or societies, the taken and the left."—Godet.

Two men in one bed.—"Upon one couch." That is, sitting together at supper, which was served in the night.

Two women shall be—Women alone are still employed in grinding corn in the East ; and when dispatch is required, or the upper millstone is heavy, a second woman is added. (See Exod. 11 : 5 ; and Isa. 47 : 2.)

Where, Lord ?—"The disciple's curiosity our Lord refuses to gratify ; he even elsewhere declares that he could not if he would (Mark 13 : 32 ; comp. Acts 1 : 7). His reply is a general one, that wherever there is corruption there the ministers of God's judgments will be assembled, each new judgment being, like the destruction of Jerusalem, a type of the final judgment."—Abbott.

He spake a parable unto them.—This and the following parable are connected, and together form a complete whole. "In order to end like the widow, one must have begun like the publican ; and in order to act as recklessly of conscience as the judge, one must have the heart of a Pharisee in his bosom."—Van Oosterzee.

Men ought always to pray, and not to faint.—"Prayer is a great privilege, but it is also a duty. In certain states of the body men lose all appetite for food. Are they to yield to this want of appetite ? If they do yield to it they are soon starved to death. Sometimes, without appetite, it becomes necessary for them to take day by day nourishment. Just so it is in respect to prayer. If I can not pray as a privilege, I am to pray as a duty, for if I be a true disciple I must pray."—Eggleston. "When God is slow in giving he only sets off his own gifts to advantage ; he does not withhold them. Blessings long desired

Chap. XXXIV.

Luke 18 : 2-5.

Feb.-Mar. J.C. 34.

There was in a city a judge, which feared not God, neither regarded man. And there was ^{The Importunate Widow.} a widow in that city; and she came unto him, saying, Avenge me of mine adversary. And he would not for a while: but afterward he said within himself, Though I fear not God, nor regard man, yet, because this widow troubleth me, I will avenge her, lest by her continual coming she weary me.

are sweeter when they come; if soon given, they lose much of their value. God reserves for thee that which he is slow to give thee, that thou mayest learn to entertain a supreme desire and longing after it."—Augustine. "It is a mercy to pray, though I never have the mercy prayed for."—William Bridge.

A judge . . . a widow.—"The judges in Eastern countries are generally irresponsible and corrupt; take bribes from either or both parties; from their decisions there is in most cases no appeal; and the proceedings in execution of their decrees are summary. In the East the position of a widow is one of absolute helplessness. In India she is regarded as suffering a special visitation of divine wrath, for her own or her ancestors' sins, is excluded from all society, and is made a common drudge and the subject of unlimited petty despotism, especially by her husband's family. The Old Testament denounces this treatment of widows, and declares them to be under God's special keeping (Exod. 22 : 22-24; Deut. 10 : 18; Deut. 24 : 17; Psalm 68 : 5; 146 : 9; Jer. 7 : 6; 22 : 3; 49 : 11; Mal. 3 : 5)."—Abbott.

Avenge me of mine adversary.—"The justice of her cause is implied throughout. She does more than ask for a decision in her favor; she demands protection and requital."—Schaff.

He would not for a while.—"The reason why the unjust judge would not heed the widow's complaints is implied to be his selfish indifference. The reason why God often appears for awhile not to heed the complaints of his people is not given. That reason lies in his own counsel, and beyond our full comprehension. There is, however, a hint of it in ver. 7: 'though he bear long with them.'"—Abbott.

Lest by her continual coming she weary me.—"If thou hast the place of a magistrate, deserve it by thy justice and dignify it with thy mercy. Be not too severe, lest thou be hated; nor too remiss, lest thou be slighted. So execute justice that thou mayest be loved; so execute mercy that thou mayest be feared."—Quarles.

And the Lord said, Hear what the unjust judge saith. And shall not God avenge his own elect, which cry day and night unto him, though he bear long with them? I tell you that he will avenge them speedily. Nevertheless, when the Son of man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth?

Avenge his own elect.—Applicable to every individual Christian, and to all bodies of Christians in all places and ages. "If a judge so lost to all respect for God's law and all regard for man's opinions will yet redress wrongs to save himself from hearing the cry of a distressed widow, how much more shall the tender, loving Father in heaven hear and deliver those who are his elect people! He may wait long, waiting only until the proper time, for when that time comes 'he will avenge them speedily.'"—Eggleston.

Though he bear long with them.—"There are two renderings of this phrase possible. It may mean, 'Though he bears long with the oppressors;' it may mean, 'When also he is patient toward his own elect.' The latter interpretation appears to me preferable, both from grammatical and from spiritual considerations. It then completes the contrast between the unjust judge and the loving All-Father, who is never vexed and impatient at the importunity of his chosen ones. But whichever interpretation be adopted, forbearance, not indifference, is indicated as the reason why God delays to answer the prayers of his children. He can not deliver them without bringing judgment on the oppressors, and he waits, that his long-suffering may become the means of their salvation (Rom. 2 : 4 ; 2 Pet. 3 : 9, 15)."—Abbott.

He will avenge them speedily.—Not suddenly, but quickly. "Not 'He will speedily come to avenge them,' but 'When he comes he will make a speedy end' (1 Sam. 3 : 12)."—Abbott. "It is hard to wait for the leisurely process of infinite immortality. God works slowly. Man flutters among his decrees like a poor moth in a garden. Does it fancy that the hard green buds will never blossom? Can it believe that the early flower already blowing was like them only a day or two ago? And presently the poor thing trembles on its wings, and droops and dies. But the roses come out one by one in their season, and Christmas brings the red berries even to the holly. If the moth had only believed!"—Edward Garrett.

Shall he find faith on the earth?—How many shall endure this long trial? "One of those mournful utterances which show how hard a burden to the heart of Christ is the unbelief of his own disciples. (Comp. Matt. 17 : 17.)"—Abbott.

Chap. XXXIV.

Luke 18 : 9, 10.

Feb.—Mar. J.C. 34.

And he spake this parable unto certain which trusted in themselves that they were righteous, ^{The Pharisee and the Publican.} and despised others : two men went up into the temple to pray ; the one a Pharisee, and the

He spake this parable.—“ This parable is spoken, not to the Pharisees, for our Lord would not in their presence have chosen a Pharisee as an example, nor concerning the Pharisees, for then it would be no parable ; but to the people, and concerning some among them (then and always) who trusted in themselves that they were righteous and despised other men.”—Alford.

Which trusted in themselves that they were righteous.—The self-sufficiency of the Pharisee had in it a certain sort of sublimity. He divided the world into two classes—saints and sinners—and all the sanctity of all the saints each individual Pharisee imagined to be centered in his own person. “ Rabbi Simeon, the son of Jochai, said ‘ The whole world is not worth thirty righteous persons, such as our father Abraham.’ If there were only thirty righteous persons in the world, I and my son would make two of them ; but if there were but twenty, I and my son would be of the number ; and if there were but five, I and my son would be of the five ; and if there were but two, I and my son would be those two ; and if there were but one, myself should be that one.” The true Pharisee thanked God every day for three things. First, That he was not created a Gentile ; second, That he was not a plebeian ; and third, That he was not born a woman. “ The Pharisees were men who rested satisfied with the outward. The form of religion, which varies in all ages, that they wanted to stereotype. The inner heart of religion, the unchangeable, justice, mercy, truth—that they could not feel. They could jangle about the breadth of a phylactery. They could discuss, as if it were a matter of life and death, ecclesiastical questions about tithes. They could decide to a furlong the length of journey allowable on the Sabbath day. But they could not look with mercy upon a broken heart, nor suffer a hungry man to rub an ear of corn on the Sabbath, nor cover the shame of a tempted sister or an erring brother. Men without souls, from whose narrow hearts the grandeur of everlasting truth was shut out.”—Robertson.

Two men went up into the temple to pray.—

“ Two went to pray ? O rather say,
One went to brag, the other to pray.
One stands up close, and treads on high
Where the other dares not lend his eye.
One nearer to God’s altar trod ;
The other to the altar’s God.”—Richard Crashaw.

other a publican. The Pharisee stood and prayed thus with himself, God, I thank thee, that I am not as other men are, extortioners, unjust, adulterers, or even as this

A Pharisee, . . . a publican.—See notes on pages 223 : 70. "The contrast begins here. The one belonged to that stricter sect of the Jews, scrupulous about obeying the law, in the letter at least ; the other was a tax-gatherer, employed by the Romans, despised by his own countrymen. The publicans were not only associated in word with 'sinners,' but were usually of low moral character."—Riddle. "The publican represented those who, although they have sinned greatly, yet feel the burden of their sins, and desire to escape from them. The parable would make us feel how much nearer is such a one to the kingdom of God than the self-complacent Pharisee, or than any who share in the spirit and temper of the Pharisee—that he, indeed, may be within it while the other is without."—Trench.

The Pharisee stood.—Or, "stood forth." "Prayer might be made standing ; the publican also stood (ver. 13). But the Pharisees loved to take a prominent position, to be 'seen of men' (Matt. 6 : 5), and the word here used indicates that this man did so" (Riddle), that others "might take note that he was engaged in his devotions."—Trench.

And prayed.—"Even in the prayer of the Pharisee self is the center of his thoughts. Though in form a prayer, his address was really a self-gratulatory soliloquy."—Abbott.

With himself.—"That is, he said over to himself what he had done. Undoubtedly his prayer never ascended higher than himself."—Peloubet. "Secret prayer has the great advantage of allowing us to speak out, and we are thus in less danger of communing with ourselves instead of communing with God."—Riddle.

God, I thank thee, that I am not as other men.—"Not merely as some other men, but as the rest of mankind—mankind in general. Observe that humility thanks God that I am what I am (1 Cor. 15 : 9, 10) ; pride thanks God that I am not like other men (comp. 2 Cor. 10 : 12). This truth is recognized [in the Book of Common Prayer] by making this parable and 1 Cor. 15 : 1-11 the Gospel and Epistle for the same Sunday—the eleventh Sunday after Trinity. Observe too that this Pharisee believes in the doctrine of total depravity ; he rates other men very low. This doctrine may be, as here, one of pride, or, as in Paul's experience, one of humility (1 Tim. 1 : 15, 16)."—Abbott. "I never feel any pity for conceited people, because I think they carry their comfort about with them."—George Eliot.

Chap. XXXIV.

Luke 18 : 11-13.

Feb.—Mar. J.C. 34.

publican. I fast twice in the week, I give tithes of all that I possess. And the publican, standing afar off, would not lift up so much as his eyes unto heaven, but Extortioners, unjust, adulterers.—"A comprehensive catalogue, including all flagrant transgressions, both against others and against self; but there is no recognition of that spirituality of the law expounded by Christ in the Sermon on the Mount (Matt. 5 : 20-48; comp. 1 Tim. 1 : 5), and of which all Pharisaism is a perpetual violation."—Abbott.

Even as this publican.—"His eye alighting on the publican, he drags him into his prayer, making him to supply the dark background on which the bright colors of his own virtues shall more gloriously appear—finding, it may be, in the deep heart-earnestness with which the penitent was beating his breast, in his downcast eyes, proofs in confirmation of the judgment which he passes upon him. He has done nothing to call for this. So perfect is he in regard to the commands of the second table."—Trench.

I fast twice in the week.—"He is as perfect in regard to the first table of the law as in the second. The Mosaic economy enjoined but one fast—only one in the whole fifty-two weeks of the year; but this Pharisee fasted twice each week. The fasts that starved his body seem only to have fed his pride."—Trench. See note page .

I give tithes (a tenth) of all that I possess.—"More correctly rendered, 'of all I acquire.'"—Alford. "God required his people to tithe the fruits of the olive and vine, the sheaves of the field, and the produce of their flocks: the sacrifice of the Pharisee rose above the requirements of the law. Anise and cummin and other common pot-herbs were all scrupulously tithed. 'I have done more than he requires. He is my debtor, rather than I his.' In this proud, arrogant man we see the spirit of self-righteousness fully developed. Although they may not come out so prominently, the elements of his character are in all who trust in themselves for salvation."—Guthrie.

Standing afar off.—"The publican did not take a conspicuous place, or strike an attitude, but remained at a distance from the holy place, toward which the face was always directed in prayer. This indicates humility before God. He was 'afar off' from the Pharisee also, and this may hint at humility before men; but he was not thinking much of other men; only of himself and God."—Riddle.

Would not lift up his eyes.—The Pharisee had probably lifted both eyes and hands toward heaven, as was customary; but the publican felt himself unworthy to do this.

smote upon his breast, saying, God be merciful to me a sinner. I tell you, this man went down to his house justified rather than the other : for every one that ex-

Smote upon his breast.—"A token of excessive grief, practised in all nations. It seems to intimate a desire in the penitent to punish the heart, through the evil propensities of which the sin deplored had been committed."—Bloomfield. "The true significance of the action is indicated by the fact that smiting upon the breast was a common gesture for the expression of great grief and shame (Luke 23 : 48)."—Abbott.

Be merciful to me a sinner—Literally, "the sinner." "The definite article rather implies, not comparison with others, but intense self-abasement, 'sinner that I am.'"—Alford. "The proud Pharisee gave thanks; the publican humbly petitions, and that too for the one thing needed by sinners, though only felt as needful by those who feel that they are sinners."—Riddle. "Prayer, it has commonly been taught, has four elements—adoration, confession, thanksgiving, petition. I hold that we must always add a fifth part—namely, total self-surrender. If a man offers prayer in the full sense, he may be assured, in the name of natural law, that he will obtain religious aid of a kind that he can receive from no other source."—Joseph Cook. "True confession is distinguished by this—that, instead of mere generalities, it is definite. The sin is felt, and as a personal thing."—Jacobus.

This man went down to his house justified rather than the other.—"It is evident that justified here does not mean made just, but absolved from sin. No change in the character of the publican is indicated, only a change in his relations to God."—Abbott. "The sense is, one returned home in the sight of God with his prayer answered, and that prayer had grasped the true object of prayer—the forgiveness of sins; the other prayed not for it, and obtained it not. Therefore he who would seek justification before God must seek it by humility and not by self-righteousness."—Alford. "Our Lord implies that the publican's prayer was answered, that God was merciful to this sinner, and this is precisely what is meant by justification—namely, God's forgiving our sins and accepting us as righteous."—Schaff.

For every one that exalteth himself shall be abased.—"This great law of the kingdom of God is in the teaching of Christ inscribed, as in letters of gold, over its entrance-gate. And in how many different forms is it repeated! (Ps. 138 : 6 ; 147 : 6 ; ch. 1 : 53). To be self-emptied, or 'poor in spirit,' is the fun-

Chap. XXXIV.

Luke 18 : 14.

Feb -Mar. J.C. 34.

alteth himself shall be abased ; and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted.

damental and indispensable preparation for the reception of the 'grace which bringeth salvation.' "—Jamieson.

"Is aught of good in thee ? Give God the praise of all.

To claim it for thine own is ever man's true fall."—Angelus Silesius.

"Gregory the Great wittily likens this Pharisee, and all who, because of their victory over certain temptations, are exalted with pride, and so perish through their very successes—to Eleazer, who killed the elephant, but was himself crushed by its falling body."—Trench.

He that humbleth himself shall be exalted.—

"He that is down needs fear no fall ;

He that is low, no pride ;

He that is humble ever shall

Have God to be his guide.

I am content with what I have,

Little be it or much ;

And, Lord, contentment still I crave,

Because thou savest such.

Fullness to such a burden is

That go on pilgrimage ;

Here little, and hereafter bliss,

Is best from age to age."—John Bunyan.

"The parable of the Pharisee and publican teaches the spirit which should pervade our prayers. The first parable encourages us to pray, and faint not. The second parable reminds us how and in what manner we ought to pray. Both should be often pondered by every true Christian."—Kyle.

CHAPTER XXXV.

TEACHINGS BY THE WAY.

THE Pharisees also came unto him, tempting him, and saying unto him, Is it lawful for a man to put away his wife for every cause ?

And he answered and said unto them,
Of Divorce. What did Moses command you ?

And they said, Moses suffered to write a bill of divorcement, and to put her away.

And Jesus answered and said unto them, Have ye not read, that he which made them at the beginning, made them male and female, and said, For this cause shall a man leave father and mother, and shall cleave to his wife : and they twain shall be one flesh ? Where-

Tempting him.—"Trying what answer he would give to a question, which, however decided by him, would expose him to censure."—Adam Clarke.

To put away his wife for every cause.—"Two celebrated schools had divided opinions on this question. That of Shammah, or Sammai, taught that it could only be done for adultery ; that of Hillel, on the most trifling occasions of dispute. The insidious motive of this question is apparent by a comparison of this with the parallel passage in Luke 16 : 18, where the judgment of Christ respecting the unlawfulness of divorce is given in illustration of his assurance that the law should endure forever. Christ's wisdom frustrated their cunning, and he effectually thwarted their aims by an appeal to their great Lawgiver. It is to be considered that Jesus was still in the dominions of Herod, who was guilty in the respect so directly condemned by our Lord, and with whom the Pharisees would doubtless be glad to embroil him. They could not have forgotten the case of the Baptist, who, for reproaching Herod's licentiousness, had been first imprisoned, and afterward beheaded."—Bloomfield.

What did Moses command you ?—"Peculiar to Mark. This question at once takes the matter out of the sphere of tradition and rabbinical hair-splitting into that of divine law."—Schaff.

Shall cleave.—"Shall be firmly cemented. A beautiful metaphor, which most forcibly intimates that nothing but death can fore they are no more twain, but one flesh. What therefore God hath joined together, let not man put asunder.

Chap. XXXV. Matt. 19 : 6-11 ; Mark 10 : 8-12. Feb. J.C. 34.

They say unto him, Why did Moses then command to give a writing of divorcement, and to put her away ?

He saith unto them, Moses, because of the hardness of your hearts, suffered you to put away your wives : but from the beginning it was not so. Whosoever shall put away his wife, except it be for fornication, and shall marry another, committeth adultery : and whoso marieth her which is put away, doth commit adultery.

And in the house his disciples asked him again of the same matter. And he saith unto them, Whosoever shall put away his wife and marry another, committeth adultery against her. And if a woman shall put away her husband, and be married to another, she committeth adultery.

His disciples say unto him, If the case of the man be so with his wife, it is not good to marry. But he separate them : as a well-glued board will break sooner in the whole wood than in the glued joint."—Adam Clarke.

One flesh.—"Not only meaning that they should be considered as one body, but also as two souls in one body, with a complete union of interests, and an indissoluble partnership of life and fortune, comfort and support, desires and inclinations, joys and sorrows."—Adam Clarke.

Let not man put asunder.—"By making marriage indissoluble he proclaimed the equal rights of woman and man within the limits of the family, and in this gave their charter of nobility to the mothers of the world. For her nobler position in the Christian era, compared with that granted her in antiquity, woman is indebted to Jesus Christ."—Geikie.

For your hardness of heart.—"Their general sinfulness, with special reference to harshness toward their wives, which this regulation was designed to counteract. It was not to encourage divorce."—Schaff. "Without doubt it is impossible to remove, all at once, from minds in their hard carnal state, every thing that offends ; for even he who aspires to perfection is raised by degrees, and not at a single bound."—Gregory.

Matt. 19 : 11-14 ; Mark 10 : 13, 14 ; Luke 18 : 15, 16.

said unto them, All men cannot receive this saying, save they to whom it is given. For there are some eunuchs, which were so born from their mother's womb : and there are some eunuchs, which were made eunuchs of men : and there be eunuchs, which have made themselves eunuchs for the kingdom of heaven's sake. He that is able to receive it, let him receive it.

And they brought young children to him, that he Jesus Blesses Little Children. should put his hands on them, and pray : but when his disciples saw it they rebuked those that brought them. But when Jesus saw it, he

All cannot receive this saying.—"Assuming that the married state is the normal one, three classes are here mentioned who should (or may) remain in celibacy : 1. Those who from natural incapacity or inaptitude have no desire to marry ; 2. Those who have been mutilated, a class very common once and not unknown now ; 3. Those who abstain from marriage, whether for the first or second time, to work the better for Christ's cause. The first case has no moral quality, the second implies misfortune, the third has a moral value."—Schaff. "Let him among you who feels able to act on the lofty principle of denying himself the nobility and holiness of family life, that he may with more entire devotion consecrate himself to my service, do so. Self-sacrifice in this, as in all things, was left by Jesus to the conscience and heart."—Geikie.

They brought young children to him.—"A beautiful custom led parents to bring their children at an early age to the Synagogue, that they might have the prayers and blessings of the elders. 'After the father of the child,' says the Talmud, 'had laid his hands on his child's head, he led him to the elders, one by one, and they also blessed him, and prayed that he might grow up famous in the law, faithful in marriage, and abundant in good works.' Children were thus brought also to any rabbi of special holiness, and hence they had been presented already more than once before Jesus. They were doubtless encouraged to do so by the sight of the women who now, as always, accompanied him on his journeys ; but the goodness that beamed in his looks, and breathed in his every word, drew them still more."—Geikie.

When his disciples saw it they rebuked those that brought them.—"They had been engaged in an interesting discussion was much displeased, and said unto the disciples, Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not : for of such is the kingdom of God. Verily I say about marriage, and they did not wish to be interrupted. It has often happened since then that theories about household relations have intertered between little children and Jesus their Saviour. The disciples had already been cautioned about the treatment of children ; see Luke 9 : 46-48, and parallel passages."—Riddle.

Matt. 19 : 14 ; Mark 10 : 14, 15 ; Luke 18 : 16, 17.

Much displeased.—It is worthy of remark that one of the few instances in which Jesus expressed displeasure with his disciples was when they would have prevented little children being brought to him.

Forbid them not.—

- " There is no sweeter story told,
In all the blessed Book,
Than how the Lord within his arms
The little children took.
- " We love him for the tender touch
That made the leper whole,
And for the wondrous words that healed
The tired, sin-sick soul ;
- " But closer to his loving self
Our human hearts are brought,
When for the little children's sake
Love's sweetest spell is wrought.
- " For their young eyes his sorrowing face
A smile of gladness wore—
A smile that for his little ones
It weareth evermore.
- " The voice that silenced priest and scribe,
For them grew low and sweet,
And still for them his gentle lips
The loving words repeat
- " ' Forbid them not ! ' O blessed Christ,
We bring them unto thee,
And pray that on their heads may rest
Thy benedicite !"—Mary B. Sleight.

Of such is the kingdom of God.—" This implies that the kingdom of God is an invisible and spiritual kingdom, and that to enter into it this disposition of heart is necessary, namely, the childlike spirit—a spirit free from crime and self-will, receiving the divine blessings, as they come, in humble dependence and submission. The doctrine is—in a single sentence—that all the qualities which make childhood beautiful are to be prolonged into the mature life, and, under the guidance of the developed reason of the adult, are to be illustrated in all the relations between man and his Maker."—McClintock.
" There are two kingdoms—one of darkness, the other of unto you, Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child, he shall not enter therein. And he called the children to him, took them up in his arms, put his hands upon them, and blessed them.

Matt. 19 : 15 ; Mark 10 : 16 ; Luke 18 : 17.

light ; one of good, the other of evil ; one of Satan, the other of God—in which every person is of necessity ; for there is no third kingdom. The children belong in the Lord's kingdom until they voluntarily depart from it, to enter, by deliberate sin, the kingdom of Satan."—Abbott.

Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child.—"If the twelve thought that these children must first become like them in order to attract the interest of the Saviour to them, our Lord, on the other hand, gives them the assurance that they must first become like children if they would become the participants of his complacent regard."—Lange. "Jesus was the first great teacher of men who showed a genuine sympathy for childhood—perhaps the only teacher of antiquity who cared for childhood as such. Plato treats of children and their games, but he treats them from the standpoint of a publicist. They are elements not to be left out in constructing society. Children, in Plato's eyes, are not to be neglected, because children will inevitably come to be men and women. But Jesus was the first who loved childhood for the sake of childhood. In the earlier stages of civilization it is the main endeavor of men to get away from childhood. It represents immaturity of body and mind, ignorance and folly. The ancients esteemed it their first duty to put away childish things. It was Jesus who, seeking to bring about a new and higher development of character, perceived that there were elements in childhood to be preserved in the highest manhood ; that a man must indeed set back again toward the innocence and simplicity of childhood if he would be truly a man. Until Jesus Christ, the world had no place for childhood in its thoughts. When he said, 'Of such is the kingdom of heaven,' it was a revelation."—Eggleston.

He took them up in his arms.—"An action good in itself is greatly recommended by an agreeable manner of doing it, an agreeable manner being to action what a lively manner of expression is to our sense ; it beautifies and adorns it, and gives it all the advantage whereof it is capable. There is the same difference between a beneficial deed, when endeared by an easy, affable deportment and when destitute of that circumstance, as between a beautiful object when enlivened by the cheerful light of the sun and when exhibited in a dim, sickly light."—Seed.

Mark 10 : 17, 18 ; Matt. 19 : 16, 17 ; Luke 18 : 18, 19.

And when he was gone forth into the way, there came a certain ruler running, and kneeling to him, who asked him, Good Master, what good thing shall I do that I may inherit eternal life ?

And Jesus said unto him, Why callest thou me good ?

A certain ruler : of the local synagogue.—Elderly men (elders) were usually selected for this distinction, but this young man seems to have been chosen an account of his social position and exemplary character.

Good Master.—"The young man accosts our Lord by a title usually applied by the Jews to their most eminent rabbis, and of which they were very proud. Hence, before he replies, he takes occasion (without rejecting the title good) to indirectly censure the adulation of the persons addressing, and the arrogance of those addressed. At the same time he proceeds upon the notion entertained of him by the young man, who evidently only regarded him in the light of an eminent teacher."—Bloomfield.

What good thing shall I do ?—Educated in a religion of formalism, which possessed the body, but not the soul, of spiritual life, he "expected to hear some new and special commands, requiring unwonted pains, and securing correspondingly great merit by faultless obedience."—Geikie. "We may remark that this young man, though self-righteous, was no hypocrite, no Pharisee ; he spoke earnestly, and really strove to keep, as he really believed he had kept, all God's commandments. . . . In spite of his error there was a nobleness and openness about him, contrasted with the hypocritical bearing of the Pharisees and scribes."—Alford.

Why callest thou me good ?—To those who see in this question a repudiation of the divinity of Jesus Christ, Stier replies, "Either there is none good but God ; Christ is good ; therefore Christ is God : or, there is not good but God ; Christ is not God ; therefore Christ is not good." There is no answer to this but to deny the sinlessness of Christ."—Abbott. "If it should be asked for what reason Christ put this question, I answer, For the same reason that he asked the Pharisees why 'David in spirit called him Lord' (Matt. 22 : 43) ; and that was to try if they were able to account for it."—William Jones of Nayland.

'All goodness flows from God, therefore 'tis his alone ;
Evil springs up in thee, that mayst thou call thy own.'

Silesius.

"There is a beauty in the name appropriated by the Saxon

Matt. 19 : 17-21 ; Mark 10 : 18-21 ; Luke 18 : 19-22.

there is none good, but one, that is God. But if thou wilt enter into life, keep the commandments. He saith unto him, Which ? Jesus said, Thou shalt do no murder. Thou shalt not commit adultery, Thou shalt not steal, Thou shalt not bear false witness, Defraud not, Honour thy father and thy mother : and Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself.

The young man saith unto him, Master, all these things have I kept from my youth up : what lack I yet ?

Then Jesus beholding him loved him, and said unto him, Yet one thing thou lackest : If thou wilt be perfect, go thy way, sell all that thou hast, and give to the nations to the Deity unequaled except by his venerated Hebrew appellation. They called him ' God,' which is literally ' Good,' the same word thus signifying the Deity and his most endearing quality."—Sharon Turner.

Keep the commandments.—"The possibility of doing this perfectly had just been denied. Our Lord therefore seeks to show the young man how much he falls short of such a keeping of the commandments. What follows shows that his obedience, however strict, did not recognize God as the supreme good."—Schaff. "There has not for these thousand years been started a more mischievous pestilential notion than that God does not demand a perfect fulfilling of all his laws. This is directly to contradict Jesus Christ. God never alters his perfect law, though he pardons us when we break it. Observe, however, he does not pardon those who are asleep, but those who labor, those who fear, and who say with Job, 'I know thou wilt hold me innocent.'"—Luther.

Jesus beholding him loved him.—"Jesus read his heart in a moment, and was won by the guilelessness of his answer and question, and by the evident worth of his character. As he looked at him, so earnest, so humble, so admirable in his life and spirit, he loved him. Could he only stand the testing demand that must now be made, he would pass into the citizenship of the kingdom of God."—Geikie.

Sell all that thou hast.—"But sell not all thou hast except 'thou come and follow me'—that is, except thou have a vocation wherein thou mayest do as much good with little means as with great ; for otherwise in feeding the streams thou driest the foun-poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven ; and come, take up the cross, and follow me.

Matt. 19 : 21-24 ; Mark 10 : 21-25 ; Luke 18 : 22-25.

But when the young man heard this he was very sorrowful, and went away grieved, for he had great possessions.

And when Jesus saw that he was very sorrowful, he looked round about and saith unto his disciples, How hardly shall they that have riches enter into the kingdom of God ! And the disciples were astonished at his words. But Jesus answereth again, Discourse upon Riches. and saith unto them, Children, how hard is it for them that trust in riches to enter into the kingdom of God ! And again I say unto you, It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle, than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God.

tain."—Lord Bacon. "Since much wealth too often proves a snare and an incumbrance in the Christian's race, let him lighten the weight by 'dispersing abroad and giving to the poor,' whereby he will both soften the pilgrimage of his fellow-travelers and speed his own way the faster."—Toplady.

Give to the poor.—"This demand was very different from that of the mediæval hierarchy, which said, 'Sell that thou hast and give to the Church.' Jesus simply demanded of this candidate that he share with his companions their privations, their poverty, and their faith in God. He laid on him no other cross than that which had been voluntarily assumed by all his disciples, who had left their all to follow Jesus."—Abbott.

Follow me.—"To follow Jesus then meant to be a personal attendant on his ministry ; now it means to obey his commandments, imitate his example, and live like him. "In that little church it was absolutely essential that no member should be bound by any ties to the earth ; for its internal harmony, quite essential that there should be no distinctions based on wealth or family."—Abbott.

How hardly shall they that have riches.—"With what difficulty shall they that 'trust in riches' (Mark 10 : 24). Yet such trust is the natural result of possession, or of even the strong desire to possess."—Schaff.

It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle.—

Matt. 19 : 25-27 ; Mark 10 : 26-28 ; Luke 18 : 26-28.

When his disciples heard it, they were exceedingly amazed—astonished out of measure—saying among themselves, Who then can be saved ? But Jesus beheld them, and said unto them, With men this is impossible, but with God all things are possible.

Then answered Peter, and said unto him, Behold, we

“ The Jewish rabbis would say of what appeared an impossibility, ‘ It will not happen before a camel or an elephant has crept through the eye of a needle.’ The camel being the largest animal they were acquainted with in Judea, its name was proverbial for denoting any thing remarkably large, and a camel passing through a needle’s eye became proverbial for expressing a difficulty. Some suppose that our Lord here refers to the small side-gate for foot-passengers, which it is said was in the East called a needle’s eye, and through which it was impossible for a camel to pass, especially if loaded, as this young man appears to have been both temporally and spiritually.—Bloomfield. “ The distinguished and worldly-honored company of Christian Mammonists appear to the eye of my imagination as a drove of ‘ camels ’ heavily laden, yet all at full speed, and each in the confident expectation of passing through ‘ the eye of the needle ’ without stop or halt, both beast and burden.”—Coleridge.

“ Humble we must be, if to heaven we go ;
High is the roof there, but the gate is low ; ”

Herrick.

“ As oft as God tells us of painful ‘ ways ’ and ‘ narrow gates,’ and of ‘ camels ’ and ‘ needles,’ all that is done to sharpen our industry in all, not to threaten an impossibility to any.”—Donne. “ We must remember that the object here was to set forth the greatest human impossibility, and to magnify divine grace, which could accomplish even that. Besides the usual reason given for this question, ‘ since all are striving to be rich,’ we must remember that the disciples yet looked for a temporal kingdom, and therefore would naturally be dismayed at hearing that it was so difficult for any man to enter it.”—Alford.

Who then can be saved ?—“ They still secretly cherished the hope of an earthly kingdom of the Messiah, in which riches would play a great part, and, even apart from all this, if it were hard to enter the kingdom of heaven, except by stooping to absolute poverty, it seemed as if very few could be saved at all.”—Geikie.

Then answered Peter.—“ In keeping with his natural frank impulsiveness. Peter could not restrain his thoughts, and asked have forsaken all, and followed thee ; what shall we have therefore ?

Matt. 19 : 27-29 ; Mark 10 : 28, 29 ; Luke 18 : 28, 29.

And Jesus said unto them, Verily I say unto you, That ye which have followed me in the regeneration, when the Son of man shall sit in the throne of his glory, ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel. And every one that hath forsaken houses, or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or lands, for my name's sake, and Jesus directly what he and his fellow-apostles would have for their loyalty to him."—Geikie.

We have forsaken all.—"It was their all, and therefore, though it might have been but a few poor boats and nets, it was much. And the forsaking consists not in the more or less that is forsaken, but in the spirit in which it is left. A man may be holden by love to a miserable hovel with as fast bands as to a sumptuous palace, for it is the worldly affection which holds him, and not the world ; just as we gather from the warnings scattered through the ascetic books of the middle ages how they who had renounced, it may be, great possessions in the world, would now, if they did not earnestly watch against it, come to cling to their hood, their breviary, the scanty furniture of their bare cell, with the same feelings of property as they once exercised in ampler matters, so witnessing that they had no more succeeded in curing themselves of worldly affections than a man would succeed in curing himself of covetousness by putting out the eye which in times past had been often the inlet of desire. These apostles might have left little when they left their possessions, but they left much when they left their desires."—Trench.

In the regeneration.—"Or, 'renovation' (only here and Tit. 3 : 5). Joined with what follows, which tells 'when' this will be, and shows that it means the accomplishment of the spiritual renovation of the world (comp. Rev. 21 : 5 ; Acts 3 : 21). As this will be the final stage of the continuous work, we find a secondary and partial fulfilment of the promise in the high position of the apostles in the Church."—Schaff.

Every one that hath forsaken houses, etc.—"Homes, household ties."

For my name's sake.—"Out of love to Christ and to advance his cause. The motive is every thing ; self-denial to buy God's favor is no self-denial."—Schaff.

Matt. 19 : 29, 30 ; Mark 10 : 29-31 ; Luke 18 : 30.

the gospel's, shall receive an hundred-fold now in this time—houses, and brethren, and sisters, and mothers, and children, and lands, with persecutions—and in the world to come, eternal life. But many that are first shall be last ; and the last first.

Shall receive an hundred-fold in this time.—"Not a hundredfold of those advantages which are supposed to be relinquished for the sake of Christ and his religion ; for a multiplication of several of these things, instead of a reward, would have been an incumbrance. The recompense here promised is that internal content and satisfaction of mind, that peace of God which passeth all understanding, those delights of a pure conscience and an upright heart, those consolations of the Holy Spirit, that trust and confidence in God, that consciousness of the divine favor and approbation, those hopes of everlasting glory, which it is the privilege of the Christian to experience in the discharge of his duty."—Bloomfield.

With persecutions.—"That is, not merely in the midst of persecutions, but in spite of them. The persecutions are rather part of our best possessions. (See Matt. 5 : 12 ; Rom. 5 : 3 ; James 1 : 2, 4 ; 1 Pet. 1 : 6 ; Heb. 12 : 6)."—Lange.

In the world to come, eternal life.—"Remember, my friend, what a sublime compensation he is able to make you for all these troubles, and often read and muse on those promises in which he has engaged to make you eternally happier for like present pains ; think how completely all the griefs of this mortal life will be compensated by one age, for instance, of the felicities beyond the grave, and then think that one age multiplied ten thousand times is not so much to eternity as one grain of sand is to the whole material universe."—John Foster. "The right man to follow any cause, let it be what it will, is he who loves it well enough to fling to it every thing he has in this world, and then think that not enough, and so fling himself after it. This last item often weighs down the scales held in heaven, and the man gets what he gave himself for."—Jean Ingelow. "There is in man a higher than love of happiness ; he can do without happiness, and instead thereof find blessedness ! . . . Love not pleasure ; love God. This is the Everlasting Yea, wherein all contradiction is solved ; wherein whoso walks and works, it is well with him."—Carlyle.

But many that are first shall be last.—"A sort of proverbial mode of expression, not unfrequently employed by our Lord to check the presumption of the apostles ; the sense of which is,

Chap. XXXV.

Matt. 20 : 1-3.

Feb. J.C. 34.

For the kingdom of heaven is like unto a man that is an householder, which went out early in the morning to hire laborers into his vineyard. And ^{The Laborers} when he had agreed with the laborers for ^{in the Vineyard.} a penny a day, he sent them into his vineyard. And he went out about the third hour, and saw others stand-

'that many who, in the order of time, were last (brought in last) in the kingdom shall be first in the rewards; and those who claim to be first shall be last'—that is, that many of the Jews, to whom the blessings of Christ's kingdom were first offered, would be the last to partake of them; and that many of the Gentiles, to whom they were to be offered after the Jews, would be the first to enjoy them. In order to illustrate and apply this declaration, our Lord subjoined the parable in which the application is not to be limited to the Jews, but left general, being meant for the instruction of all Christians of all ages (comp. Matt. 20 : 16 ; Luke 13 : 30)."—Bloomfield.

The kingdom of heaven is like.—That is, the manner of God's proceeding in his kingdom resembles that of a householder. This parable is found, though with a widely-extended application, in the Jerusalem Talmud, which was compiled about A.D. 500. (See note on page 307). It was probably copied there from Matthew's Gospel, or the early Christian traditions.

A man that is a householder.—"The 'householder' signifies God; the 'vineyard' the kingdom of heaven (comp. Isa. ver. 1-7 ; Cant. 8 : 12) ; the 'steward' (ver. 8) Christ ; the 'twelfth hour' of the day, or the evening, the coming of Christ ; the other 'hours,' the different periods of calling into service." Schaff.—

Early in the morning.—Corresponding to our six o'clock.

Laborers.—"Specially the apostles, yet including all Christians."—Schaff.

Vineyard.—See note on page 567.

A penny a day.—"A denarius. The denarius, which was equivalent to the Greek drachma, was then the usual wages of a laborer, and the pay of a soldier. It was equal to about fifteen cents of our money."—Greswell. "Polibius mentions that the charge for a day's entertainment in the inns in Cisalpine Gaul was half an as, one twentieth of the denarius. This we may therefore regard as liberal pay for the day's work."—Alford.

The third, sixth, and ninth hour.—Answering to our nine, twelve, and three o'clock.

Chap. XXXV.

Matt. 20 : 3-10.

Feb. J.C. 34.

ing idle in the market-place, and said unto them, Go ye also into the vineyard ; and whatsoever is right, I will give you. And they went their way. Again he went out about the sixth and ninth hour, and did likewise. And about the eleventh hour he went out, and found others standing idle, and saith unto them, Why stand ye here all the day idle ? They say unto him, Because no man hath hired us. He saith unto them, Go ye also into the vineyard ; and whatsoever is right, that shall ye receive. So when even was come, the lord of the vineyard saith unto his steward, Call the laborers, and give them their hire, beginning from the last unto the first. And when they came that were hired about the eleventh hour, they received every man a penny. But when the first came, they supposed that they should have received more ; and they likewise received every Market-place.—See note on page 218. “ Here (at Hamadan in Persia) we observed every morning, before the sun rose, that a numerous band of peasants were collected with spades in their hands, waiting to be hired for the day, to work in the surrounding fields. This custom struck me as a most happy illustration of our Lord’s parable, particularly when, passing by the same place late in the day, we found others standing idle, and remembered his words, ‘ Why stand ye here all the day idle ? ’ as most applicable to their situation, for, on putting the very same question to them, they answered us, ‘ Because no man hath hired us. ’ ”—Morier, “ Travels in Persia. ”

Why stand ye here all the day idle ?—“ Men must know that in this theater of man’s life it is reserved only for God and angels to be lookers-on.”—Lord Bacon.

His steward.—“ Christ, the overseer of the house of God, intrusted with the whole economy of salvation, including the distribution of the final reward (Heb. 3 : 6 ; John, ver. 27 ; Rev. 2 : 7, 10, 17, 28, etc.). It was the Jewish custom to pay laborers at the close of the day.”—Schaff.

They received every man a penny, or “ denarius.”—“ More than they expected. God does not measure his reward by the length of man’s life, but by the fidelity of his services, for the labor is not to earn the reward but to prepare for it.”—Schaff.

man a penny. And when they had received it, they murmured against the goodman of the house, saying, These last have wrought but one hour, and thou hast made them equal unto us, which have borne the burden and heat of the day. But he answered one of them, and said, Friend, I do thee no wrong : didst not thou agree with me for a penny ? Take that thine is, and go thy way : I will give unto this last, even as unto thee. Is it not lawful for me to do what I will with mine own ? Is thine eye evil, because I am good ?

Is thine eye evil ?—"The Hebrews applied the word 'evil' to the eye to denote one envious and malicious (Deut. 15 : 9 ; Prov. 23 : 6. The eye is called evil in such cases because envy and malice show themselves directly in the eye. No passions are so fully expressed by the eye as these. In worldly things 'envy' is as 'rotteness to the bones ;' and in spiritual things, even the children of God often think that they have too little, and others too much, of the tokens of God's favor ; and that they do too much, and others too little, in the work of the Almighty."—Greswell. "Self, remember, was the worst seed in Adam's apple. Toward God it is self-will, which is rebellion ; toward man it is self-love, which is hard-heartedness. It was to root out this evil self from us and to put love in its room that Christ died and the Holy Ghost comes. Let not that death and that coming be in vain for you. But covet, since you must covet, with a godly covetousness ; and cease not to complain, cease not to cry out, weary the ears of God with prayer, until he trees you from all selfishness and from that worst mark of it, a grudging and evil eye."—Augustus W. Hare. "All our discontents about what we want appear to me to spring from the want of thankfulness for what we have."—De Foe. "Hence I infer, not to speak of eternal life itself, that no act of man, however vast the charity which gave it birth, can deserve at the hands of God any reward in this life or in the next by virtue of its intrinsic worth ; for every such act is the gift of God."—Gregory Nazianzen. "Not, 'How much hast thou done ?' but, 'What art thou ?' will be the great question of the last day. Of course we must never forget that all which men have done will greatly affect what they are ; yet still the parable is a protest against the whole quantitative appreciation of men's works as distinct from the qualitative—against all which would make the works the end and man the means, instead of the man the end and the works the means—against that scheme which, however unconsciously, lies at the root of so many of the confusions in our theology at this day.”—Trench.

So the last shall be first, and the first last : for many be called, but few chosen.

For many be called.—The citizens of Rome were all liable in turns to serve as soldiers ; this was termed (delectum habere) “choosing” them, because they had always a great many more than they wanted. “The general sense, as Mr. Greswell observes, is that ‘in the dispensations of divine grace for the good of mankind the offer of such and such privileges, subject to such and such conditions, is indiscriminate, and made to all ; but the acceptance of the offer, subject to the conditions in question, is not indiscriminate, nor equally characteristic of all. Consequently neither is the actual enjoyment of the promised blessing or privilege alike characteristic of all, nor are the benefits of the offer as general as the intention thereof.’”—Bloomfield. “In interpreting this difficult parable we must first carefully observe its occasion and connection. It is bound by the for to the conclusion of [Matthew] chapter 19, and arose out of the question of Peter, in verse 27, ‘What shall we have?’ Its salient point is, that the kingdom of God is of grace, not of debt ; that they who were called first, and have labored longest, have no more claim upon God than those who were called last ; but that to all his covenant promise shall be fulfilled in its integrity.”—Alford. “The early days of Christ were full of trial. Those who in the early morning of Christianity went to work in God’s vineyard had indeed the heat and labor of the day to endure. But they who, in this eleventh hour of the world, accept the Master’s proffer, ‘Go ye also into the vineyard, and whatsoever is right I will give you,’ if they are as faithful in their day and generation, will receive an equal meed of praise. There are saints of the nineteenth century as well as of the first, and God will give unto these last even as unto them. But he who idles a lifetime in the market-place to accept the Gospel call at the sunset hour of his life can take no encouragement from this story, unless, to the question, which will surely be addressed to him in the judgment-day, ‘Why stood ye here all the day idle?’ he is able to reply, ‘Because no man hired me.’”—Abbott.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

PROPHECIES AND PARABLES.

AND they were in the way, going up to Jerusalem ; and Jesus went before them : and they were amazed ;

They were in the way, going up to Jerusalem.—“ Nature was putting on its spring beauty, and throngs of early pilgrims were passing to the holy city. All around was joy and gladness, but amidst all a deep gloom hung over the little company of Jesus. Every thing on the way—the constant disputes among the rabbis— . . . the very solemnity of the recent teachings, combined to fill their minds with an undefined terror. They had shrunk from visiting Bethany because it was near Jerusalem, for they knew that the authorities were on the watch to arrest their Master, and to put him to death. He had had to flee from that village, first to Ephraim, and then over the Jordan to Perea, and yet he was now deliberately walking into the very jaws of danger. They had marched steadily southward through the woody highlands of Gilead, had passed the rushing waters of the Jabbok and its tributaries, and had, for a moment, seen once more the spot where John had closed his mission. The distant mountains of Machaerus now threw their shadows over their route, and everywhere the recollections of the great herald of their Master met them. Mount Nebo, where Moses was buried, and the range of Attaroth, where John’s mutilated corpse had been laid to rest, were within sight. Everything in the associations of the journey was solemn, and they knew their national history too well not to fear that for Jesus to enter Jerusalem would be to share the sad fate of the prophets of old whom it had received only to murder. It was clear that there could be but one issue, and no less so that he was voluntarily going to his death. The calm resolution with which he thus carried out his purpose awed them ; for, so far from showing hesitation, he walked at their head, while they could only follow with excited alarm.”—Geikie.

And Jesus went before them —“ Leading the way. Probably implying some remarkable energy in his gait, some determination or eagerness in his manner.”—Schaff. “ As on the former occasion our Lord Jesus, for our instruction, showed forth his prudence in fleeing, teaching that, according to place and time, we ought also to avoid with caution the fury of our persecutors, so now he shows forth his fortitude, because, when the appointed time draws near, he returns of his own accord to and as they followed, they were afraid. And he took again the twelve disciples apart in the way, and began to tell them what things should happen unto him, saying, Behold, we go up to Jerusalem ; and all things that are written

Mark 10 : 32, 33 ; Matt. 20 : 17, 18 ; Luke 18 : 31.

Jesus the Third Time Foretells his Death and Resurrection.

offer himself to suffering, and to deliver himself up into the hands of those who seek for him."—Cardinal Bonaventura.

They were amazed.—"As this amazement and fear were previous to his informing them what was about to befall him, it indicates that there was something unusual in his manner—something that awed and appalled them."—Andrews. "Evidently he was wrapped in an electric cloud of emotion ; he was swept along by a mighty influence—tides of feeling deeper than they could comprehend were rolling in his soul, and there was that atmosphere of silence and mystery about him by which the inward power of great souls casts an outward sphere of awe about them."—H. B. Stowe, "Footsteps of the Master."

All things that are written by the prophets concerning the Son of man.—It seems appropriate here to introduce the following concise arrangement of the Prophetic History of Christ :

"Section I., containing the earliest intimations of the Messiah. (Gen. 3 : 15 ; 17 : 7, 19 ; 22 : 18 ; 26 : 3 ; 28 : 14. 1 Chron. 17 : 11. Isa. 42 : 6 ; 49 : 8. Jer. 33 : 20, 21. Isa. 11 : 1, 2. Jer. 23 : 5, 6 ; 33 : 15. Ezek. 17 : 22, 23. Zech. 3 : 8 ; 6 : 12, 13. Mic. 4 : 1, 7. Isa. 2 : 2 ; 25 : 7 ; 2 : 3, 4 ; 11 : 6-9. Gen. 49 : 10. Num. 24 : 17. Isa. 49 : 6. Dan. 7 : 13, 14. Isa. 41 : 27 ; 40 : 9 ; 49 : 13. Mal. 4 : 2.)

"Section II., containing those prophecies which relate to the birth of the Messiah. (Isa. 40 : 3-5. Mal. 4 : 5 ; 3 : 1. Ps. 2 : 6-8. Isa. 7 : 14. Mic. 5 : 2. Isa. 9 : 2, 6, 7.)

"Section III., containing those prophecies which relate to the life of the Messiah—his preaching and his miracles. (Deut. 18 : 18. Isa. 53 : 2, 3 ; 42 : 2, 3 ; 52 : 7. Zech. 2 : 10, 11. Isa. 42 : 1, 4. Isa. 11 : 3-5 ; 61 : 1, 2. Mic. 4 : 2. Isa. 8 : 14. Ps. 118 : 22, 23, 24. Isa. 28 : 16 ; 29 : 14. Zech. 9 : 9. Hag. 2 : 7, 9. Isa. 35 : 5, 6 ; 42 : 7 ; 49 : 9 ; 40 : 11 ; 49 : 10.)

"Section IV., containing such prophecies as relate to the death, resurrection, and exaltation of the Messiah. (Ps. 41 : 9. Zech. 11 : 12, 13 ; 13 : 7. Isa. 53 : 7, 8. Ps. 35 : 11 ; 38 : 13 ; 22 : 16. Isa. 50 : 6. Mic. 5 : 1. Ps. 69 : 21 ; 22 : 16, 18. Zech. 13 : 6. Ps. 22 : 1, 7, 8. Joel 2 : 30-32. Dan. 9 : 24-26. Isa. 53 : 4-6, 10, 12. Zech. 12 : 10. Ex. 12 : 46. Zech. 13 : 1.

Mark 10 : 33, 34 ; Matt. 20 : 18, 19 ; Luke 18 : 32-34.

by the prophets concerning the Son of man shall be accomplished. For he shall be betrayed unto the chief priests, and unto the scribes, and they shall condemn him to death, and shall deliver him to the Gentiles.

And they shall mock him, and spitefully entreat him, and shall scourge him, and shall spit upon him, and shall crucify him : and the third day he shall rise again.

And they understood none of these things : and this saying was hid from them, neither knew they the things which were spoken.

Isa. 53 : 9. Ps. 2 : 1, 2, 4. Ps. 16 : 10. Hos. 6 : 2. Job 19 : 25. Hos. 13 : 14. Ps. 110 : 1-4.)"—Gilpin.

They shall condemn him to death.—"A reference to the judicial condemnation on the part of the Sanhedrin (Matt. 27 : 1), which could condemn, but not execute ; hence he would be delivered to the Gentiles. He had before, once and again, predicted his sufferings in a general way ; now he speaks of scourgings, mockings, and the cross."—Bengel. All of these predictions were fulfilled. That this announcement was made early in the journey appears from the use of the present tense, "Behold we go up to Jerusalem."

Crucify him.—It was much more probable that he should be privately slain, or stoned to death in a tumult, than that he should suffer the punishment of crucifixion, which was customary among the Romans, but unusual among the Jews. And when he was delivered back by Pilate to the Jews, with permission to judge him according to their law, it is wonderful that he was not stoned, but, according to his prophecy, "lifted up" for the healing of the nations.

They understood none of these things.—"There is that in Christ's own teaching which strengthened their erroneous faith. In his conferences with them at Ephraim he had told them that they should sit on twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel. He had promised them that, if they left houses, lands, friends, they should have a hundredfold in this life, besides life eternal in the world to come. . . . These promises we interpret as parables. History gives the prophecies of his death a literal interpretation. Let us not wonder that, in the full tide of popular enthusiasm, they reversed the process, and interpreted his warnings as parables which they understood not, his promises as assurances to be immediately and literally fulfilled."—Abbott's "Jesus of Nazareth."

Ch. XXXVI. Matt. 20 : 20-22 ; Mark 10 : 35-38. Mar. J.C. 34.

Then came to him the mother of Zebedee's children with her sons, James and John, worshiping him, and saying, Master, we would that thou shouldest do for us whatsoever we shall desire.

And he said unto them, What would ye that I should do for you ?

They said unto him, Grant unto us that we may sit, Ambitious Request of James and John. one on thy right hand, and the other on thy left hand, in thy glory.

But Jesus answered and said, Ye know not what ye ask. Are ye able to drink of the cup that I shall drink

Then came to him the mother, etc.—What the expectations of most of those who accompanied him were, clearly appears from Luke's words (19 : 11), 'They thought that the kingdom of God should immediately appear.' Under these circumstances it was not strange that Salome and her sons should present their request."—Andrews. "James and John, with Peter, were the most honored of the apostles. They had been in a better social position than most of their brethren, and, with Salome, their mother, had given all they had freely to the cause of their Master. Ashamed themselves to tell him their thoughts, they availed themselves of Salome, whom perhaps he might the more readily hear, as older than they, as a woman, perhaps as his mother's sister, and as one who had shown herself, like her sons, his true friend."—Geikie.

Worshiping him.—That is, saluting him with reverence, as was usual in asking favor of a king.

Right hand, and . . . left.—"Said in allusion to the eastern custom, by which sitting next to the throne denotes the next degree of dignity ; and consequently the first situations on the right and left denote the highest dignities. There may perhaps be an allusion in these words to the Ab Bethdim, or Father of the Court, who sat on the right hand of the Nasi, or President of the Sanhedrin ; and to the Hacan, or Sage, who sat on the left."—Bloomfield.

Ye know not what ye ask.—"When John saw the crucified thieves on the right and left hand of his dying Lord, he knew what he had asked."—Schaff.

Drink of the cup.—"An image frequent among the Hebrews, who thus compared whatever is dealt out to men by of, and to be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized with ?

Ch. XXXVI. Matt. 20 : 22-24 ; Mark 10 : 38-41. Mar. J.C. 34.

They say unto him, We are able.

And he saith unto them, Ye shall drink indeed of my cup, and be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized with : but to sit on my right hand, and on my left, is not mine to give, but it shall be given to them for whom it is prepared of my Father.

And when the ten heard it, they were moved with indignation against the two brethren.

the Almighty (whether good or evil) to a cup of wine. It was customary among the ancients in general to assign to each guest at a feast a particular cup as well as dish ; and by the kind and quantity of the liquor contained in it the respect of the entertainer was expressed. Hence cup came in general to signify a portion assigned (Ps. 16 : 5 ; 23 : 5), whether of pleasure or sorrow. But the expression was more frequently used of evil than good. So Matt. 26 : 39, 42 ; Rev. 14 : 10, 16 ; 19 : 18, 6 ; Ps. 85 : 9 ; Jas. 51 : 17 ; Jer. 25 : 15." [Ps. 75 : 8].—Bloomfield.

To be baptized with the baptism.—This metaphorical use of the word baptism is from the figurative expressions of the Old Testament, in which afflictions are represented as floods of great waters ready to overwhelm the soul.

We are able.—They were not the least courageous of the twelve (comp. John 18 : 15), but they also forsook him and fled (Matt. 26 : 56) in the hour of trial.

Ye shall drink indeed of my cup.—"It is made a question how the sons of Zebedee, James, and John, did drink the cup of martyrdom, seeing Scripture relates that James only was beheaded by Herod, while John ended his life by a peaceful death. But when we read in ecclesiastical history that John himself was thrown into a caldron of boiling oil, with intent to martyr him, and underwent a long life of persecution, we see that he did indeed suffer spiritual martyrdom."—Jerome.

For whom it is prepared.—"Who by patient continuance in well-doing seek for glory and honor and immortality. For these only eternal life is prepared. To these only he will give it in that day ; and to every man his own reward, according to his own labor."—Greswell.

When the ten heard it, they were moved with indignation.

Matt. 20 : 25-28 ; Mark 10 : 42-45 ; Luke 19 : 1.

But Jesus called them unto him, and said, Ye know that the princes of the Gentiles exercise dominion over them, and they that are great exercise authority upon them. But it shall not be so among you : but whosoever will be great among you, let him be your minister. And whosoever will be chief among you, let him be your servant. Even as the Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many.

And Jesus entered and passed through Jericho.

—"John and James had striven to hide their selfish and ambitious request by coming to Jesus when he was alone ; but the ten, as was inevitable, soon heard of it, and were indignant in the extreme at such an unworthy attempt to forestall them in their Master's favor. Their own ambition, at best only suppressed, broke out afresh in a fierce storm of jealous passion. Such human weakness was sadly out of place at any time among the followers of the meek and lowly Son of man, but still more so now when he stood almost under the shadow of the cross ; and it must have caused him the keenest sorrow. Calling the whole twelve, offenders and offended, round him, therefore, he pointed out how utterly they had misapprehended the nature of his kingdom, notwithstanding all his teaching through the past years."—Geikie.

And Jesus entered and passed through Jericho.—"The upland pastures of Perea were now behind them, and the road led down to the sunken channel of the Jordan, and the 'divine district' of Jericho. This small but rich plain was the most luxuriant spot in Palestine. Sloping gently upward from the level of the Dead Sea, 1350 feet under the Mediterranean, to the stern background of the hills of Quarantana, it had the climate of Lower Egypt, and displayed the vegetation of the tropics. Its fig-trees were pre-eminently famous ; it was unique in its groves of palms of various kinds ; its crops of dates were a proverb ; the balsam plant, which grew principally here, furnished a costly perfume, and was in great repute for healing wounds ; maize yielded a double harvest ; wheat ripened a whole month earlier than in Galilee, and innumerable bees found a paradise in the many aromatic flowers and plants, not a few unknown elsewhere, which filled the air with odors, and the landscape with beauty. Rising like an amphitheater from amidst this

Chap. XXXVI

Luke 19 : 2.

Mar. J.C. 34.

And, behold, there was a man named Zaccheus, which was the chief among the publicans, and he was rich.

luxuriant scene lay Jericho, the chief place east of Jerusalem—at seven or eight miles distance from the Jordan—on swelling slopes, seven hundred feet above the bed of the river, from which its gardens and groves, thickly interspersed with mansions, and covering seventy furlongs from north to south, and twenty from east to west, were divided by a strip of wilderness.”—Geikie. “That city was indeed what its name indicates—a city of fragrance. The plain which constituted its environs was an oasis of green in the midst of high and barren limestone mountains. The spring which Elisha miraculously cured made the earth a marvel of fertility. It was literally embowered in fragrant vegetation. It was a favored and favorite city of antiquity. The income from its palm and balsam was thought by Antony to be a present worthy of being conferred upon his royal mistress Cleopatra. It was chosen as the site of a royal residence by Herod the Great, who built here a palace, and met here his death. The tax-gatherers of the Jordan valley, whose fertility the frosts of winter never checked, had here their headquarters. The priests of Jerusalem found, underneath its shade-trees, a quiet retreat when their priestly labors in the temple at Jerusalem were over. Thus commerce and religion met here without mingling. It was a city of priests and publicans.”—Abbott.

A man named Zaccheus.—The word means “pure;” its etymology indicates that he was of Jewish extraction; it appears among the lists of the families who came with Zerubbabel from Babylon at the time of the Restoration (Neh. 7 : 14). The incident is peculiar to Luke, and is a proof of his independence. “Matthew indeed being himself a publican, might hesitate through modesty to record prominently so many instances of favor shown to the publicans; and Mark, writing chiefly for Roman Christians, would probably prefer to omit a new remembrance of the embittered hatred which subsisted between the Jews and the Romans.”—Lange.

And he was rich.—“It almost necessarily follows that he must have been extortionate and a defrauder.”—Abbott. (For account of publicans, see note on page 70.) “The transit to and fro of so much wealth brought with it proportionate work and harvest for the farmers of the revenue. Hence a strong force of customs and excise collectors was stationed in [Jericho], and under a local head, named Zaccheus, whom, in our day, we might have called a commissioner of customs. In a system so

Chap. XXXVI.

Luke 19 : 3-5.

Mar. J.C. 34.

And he sought to see Jesus who he was ; and could not for the press, because he was little of stature. And he ran before, and climbed up into a sycamore tree to see him ; for he was to pass that way.

And when Jesus came to the place, he looked up, and saw him, and said unto him, Zaccheus, make haste, and come down ; for to day I must abide at thy house.

oppressive and arbitrary as the Roman taxation, the inhabitants must have suffered heavily at the hands of such a complete organization. To be friendly with any of their number was not the way to secure the favor of the people at large."—Geikie.

Who he was.—"That is, to see which one in the crowd was the teacher, of whom he had heard much, but whom he had never seen. The motive, as here given, was merely curiosity; yet the whole narrative points to some higher motive, of which Zaccheus himself may as yet have scarcely been conscious."—Riddle.

For the press.—Or, "multitude." Here, however, the idea of a dense "crowd" is prominent. "The great crowds following Jesus : many were on their way to the feast of the Passover."—Peloubet.

Ran before.—Or, "ran on before." Which shows great desire to see Jesus.

A sycamore-tree.—"Our sycamore-tree is not at all like the one here referred to. It was the Egyptian fig-tree, and is called sycamore, which means 'fig-mulberry,' because its leaf was like that of the mulberry. As this tree has low, horizontal branches, it would be easy to climb."—Riddle. "The fruit is, according to the accounts of travelers, pleasant and sweet-tasting. But here the sycamore bears a fruit of the noblest and rarest kind, which is to ripen for the refreshment of Jesus."—Van Oosterzee.

He looked up.—The best authorities omit the words, "and saw him ;" so that the clause reads, "And when Jesus came to the place, looking up he said to him." This brings into greater prominence our Lord's immediate recognition of the publican.

Zaccheus, etc.—"He had never seen Jesus, but he was not the less known to him, and must have been astounded when the Great Teacher, as he passed the spot, looked up, and addressing him by name, told him to make haste and come down, as he intended to be his guest that night."—Geikie.

Make haste, and come down ; for to-day I must abide at thy

Chap. XXXVI.

Luke 19 : 6, 7.

Mar. J.C. 34.

And he made haste, and came down, and received him joyfully. And when they saw it, they all murmured, saying that He was gone to be guest with a man that is a sinner.

house.—“The must indicates, not that this was especially ordained for him, but that it was his impelling and compelling desire to seek and to save that which is lost. He passes by the socially congenial to be the guest of the one whom he can redeem. To ‘abide’ indicates a purpose to make the house of Zaccheus his resting-place while in Jericho, and therefore probably for that night.”—Abbott. “This was an honor which Zaccheus did not expect. The utmost, it seems, which he aimed at, was to see Jesus ; but instead of that, Jesus proposed to remain with him. It is but one among a thousand instances where the Saviour goes, in bestowing mercies, far beyond the desert, the desire, or the expectation of men.”—Barnes. “What took place in the house of Zaccheus is not fully reported by the Evangelist ; but the result is given, and is such as to show that the publican profited well by the divine teachings he was now enabled to receive from the mouth of Jesus, who had clearly a more promising pupil than in the rich young man who had lately turned back from him.”—Kitto.

They all murmured.—“Here is the last mutter of the cavers at our Lord’s dealings of mercy to the outcast publicans. It was, however, no murmur of Pharisees alone, but of all the crowd, who, supposing that he is on his way to take possession of the Messianic kingdom at Jerusalem, deem it unbecoming for him to give countenance to an agent of Roman despotism.”—Whedon. “That Christ preached to publicans and sinners excited little comment. That on his way to assume his kingdom he should choose a publican for his companion and entertainer shocked the Pharisaic sensibilities. They murmured, saying that he was gone to be guest with a man that is a sinner. They were as little able to comprehend this act as were the aristocracy of Europe the spirit that led Peter the Great, Frederick of Prussia, and Napoleon the First, frequently to disregard the conventional distinctions of society. ‘A man’s a man for a’ that,’ the lesson that Jesus taught the Jews in Jericho, the world has not yet learned, despite the lapse of ages. To eat with social sinners is scarcely less pardonable in the ‘best society’ of Christendom in the nineteenth century than it was in that of Judaism in the first. Social democracy is the last, as it is the ripest, form of democracy.”—Abbott’s “Jesus of Nazareth.”

Chap. XXXVI.

Luke 19 : 8, 9.

Mar. J.C. 34.

And Zaccheus stood, and said unto the Lord, Behold, Lord, the half of my goods I give to the poor; and if I have taken any thing from any man by false accusation, I restore him fourfold.

Repentance of Zaccheus.

And Jesus said unto him, This day is salvation come to this house, forasmuch as he also is a son of Abra-

Goods.—This was a promise of what he would do, not a profession of what he had done. It was a practical and implied confession, accompanied by restitution. “Behold, the half of my goods, Lord, I hereby give to the poor; and whatever fraudulent gain I ever made from any one, I now restore fourfold.” This great sacrifice of that which had hitherto been dearest to him, this fullest possible restitution of every gain he had ever gotten dishonestly, this public confession and public restitution, should be a pledge to his Lord that his grace had not been in vain. Thus did love unseal by a single touch those swelling fountains of penitence which contempt would have kept closed forever.”—Farrar.

If I have.—That is, “so far as I have,” for evidently the “if” is so used (as Phil. 4 : 8).

Taken by false accusation.—“Defrauded,” “overcharged” (ch. 3 : 12, 13).

I restore fourfold.—“The Roman law required this; the Jewish law, but the principal and a fifth more (Num. 5 : 7). There was no demand made for either; but as if to revenge himself on his hitherto reigning sin (see John 20 : 28), and to testify the change he had experienced, besides surrendering the half of his fair gains to the poor, he voluntarily determines to give up all that was ill-gotten quadrupled. He gratefully addressed this to the ‘Lord,’ to whom he owed the wonderful change.”—Peloubet. “No repentance that does not lead to restitution where restitution is possible is worthy of the name. Zaccheus did not seem to have any long exercises on the subject of the right quality of feeling. But he made a magnificent repentance when he stood and said unto the Lord, ‘Behold, Lord, the half of my goods I give to the poor.’”—Eggles-ton. “What thou hast taken unlawfully restore speedily; for the sin in taking it is repeated every minute thou keepest it. If thou canst, restore it in kind; if not, in value. If it may be, restore it to the party; if not, to God: the poor is God’s receiver.”—Quarles.

A son of Abraham.—“Not because he is a Jew, for Christ

Chap. XXXVI.

Luke 19 : 10, 11.

Mar. J.C. 34.

ham. For the Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost.

And as they heard these things, he added and spake a parable, because he was nigh to Jerusalem, and beno less than John the Baptist emphatically repudiated the notion that salvation belonged to the Jewish race or descended by generation ; but because he was a Jew inwardly (Rom. 2 : 28, 29 ; Gal. 3 : 7).”—Abbott.

Come to seek and to save.—"To seek like the shepherd (Luke 15 : 4 ; comp. Matt. 9 : 13 ; 18 : 11), to save in the sense of to rescue."—Van Oostrzee. "To the complaint that Christ was gone to be the guest of a sinner Christ replies that his mission is to seek and to save the sinner ; how he does this the conversion of Zaccheus illustrates."—Abbott. "There are people who would do great acts ; but because they wait for great opportunities life passes, and the acts of love are not done at all. Observe, this considerateness of Christ was shown in little things. And such are the parts of human life. Opportunities for doing greatly seldom occur ; life is made up of infinitesimals. If you compute the sum of happiness in any given day, you will find that it was composed of small attentions, kind looks, which made the heart swell, and stirred into health that sour, rancid film of misanthropy which is apt to coagulate on the stream of our inward life as surely as we live in heart apart from our fellow-creatures."—F. W. Robertson.

He added and spake a parable.—"With that marvelous power of turning every incident to practical account which marked his teaching he proceeded to repeat a parable, borrowed, in many particulars, from facts in their recent or passing national history. Archelaus had set out for Rome, most likely from Jericho itself, not many years before, to obtain investiture in the kingdom left to him by the will of his father Herod, and the Jews had sent a fruitless embassy after him to prevent his obtaining it. All the princes of the house of Herod had indeed been only vassals of Rome, and had had to go to the imperial city in each case to seek their kingdom as a gift from the Roman Senate."—Geikie. "Analogous to this parable is that of the Ten Talents, in Matt. 25 : 14-30 ; Mark 13 : 34-36. The analogy is so marked that some scholars (Calvin, Olshausen, Meyer) have regarded them as identical. But the differences appear to me very marked. 1. The time and place of each parable are fixed by the narrative ; that of Matthew being in Jerusalem during the Passion week, that of Luke being as clearly in Jericho, at the

Chap. XXXVI.

Luke 19 : 11, 12.

Mar. J. C. 34.

cause they thought that the kingdom of God should immediately appear.

He said therefore, A certain nobleman went into a far house of Zaccheus. 2. The structure of the two parables though analogous, is different. In Matthew a rich man distributed to his servants all his goods, the sum total amounting, at the lowest estimate, to many thousand dollars ; in Luke a prince, going to secure the title to his throne from the central government, leaves in the hands of a few of his servants a small sum, at the largest estimate not exceeding three hundred dollars, simply as a means of testing their fidelity. In Matthew the talents are distributed to each man according to his several ability ; in Luke each servant receives the same, one pound. In Matthew only the servants are introduced ; in Luke public enemies also. 3. The object of the two parables, though analogous, is not identical. The primary object of the parable in Matthew, which is addressed solely to Christ's disciples, is to teach the necessity of fidelity in the Church ; incidentally it indicates that a long time must elapse before the reckoning. The primary object of the parable in Luke, which is addressed to all the people, is to teach that the kingdom of God will not immediately appear ; incidentally it teaches how by diligent fidelity the servants of God are to prepare for his appearing, and what is to be the nature of the reckoning, both with them and with those who reject his rule. Godet, Trench, Alford, Lange, Oosterzee agree in regarding the two parables as different."—Abbott.

Because they thought that the kingdom of God should immediately appear.—"There was a general expectancy, shared by the disciples, strengthened by such events as the cure of the blind man and the resurrection of Lazarus, that Christ was now on his way to Jerusalem to inaugurate the kingdom of God by making the Jewish nation the master of the world, and Jerusalem its capital. We must not forget that the career of Alexander and of Julius Cæsar gave a color of probability to this expectation of universal dominion. Despite this parable, the disciples continued to believe that the kingdom would immediately appear ; at least they had no conception of the length of the intervening delay. This anticipation was strikingly manifested in the triumphal entry into Jerusalem (Luke 19 : 35-38)."—Abbott.

A far country represents heaven, as in Matt. 21 : 33 ; 25 : 14 ; Mark 12 : 1 the figure indicates that Christ goes to await the consummation of that kingdom which he receives from his Father (Rev. 17 : 14 ; 19 : 16).

Chap. XXXVI.

Luke 19 : 12-20.

Mar. J.C. 34.

country to receive for himself a kingdom, and to return. And he called his ten servants, and delivered them ten pounds, and said unto them, Occupy till I come. But his citizens hated him, and sent a message after him, saying, We will not have this man to reign over us. And it came to pass, that when he was returned, having received the kingdom, then he commanded these servants to be called unto him, to whom he had given the money, that he might know how much every man had gained by trading. Then came the first, saying, Lord, thy pound hath gained ten pounds. And he said unto him, Well, thou good servant, because thou hast been faithful in a very little, have thou authority over ten cities. And the second came, saying, Lord, thy pound hath gained five pounds. And he said likewise to him, Be thou also over five cities. And another

Parable of the Ten Pounds.

New Trusts, the Reward for Fidelity.

His ten servants.—"Rather, 'ten of his servants.'"—Lonsdale and Hale.

Ten pounds, or "minæ."—"To each one; not to each 'according to his several ability' as in Matt. 25 : 5. The Attic mina, which is probably meant, was the sixtieth part of a talent, and equal to $15-$17. The Hebrew mina was even smaller."—Schaff.

Occupy.—"Use it;" "do business with it;" "trade with it."

His citizens.—Or countrymen; the Jewish people, who professed to be the subjects of the kingdom of God.

Over ten cities.—"This is to be understood of the kingdom the nobleman had just received. His former trustiest and most faithful servants he now represents as being made governors, under him, over a number of cities, according to the capacity he found in each, which capacity was known by the improvement of the minæ."—Adam Clarke. "Success is the world's criterion of merit; fidelity is God's. The reward of being 'faithful over a few things' is just the same as being 'faithful over many things,' for the emphasis falls upon the same word; it is the 'faithful' who will enter into 'the joy of their Lord.'"—C. S. Robinson.

Chap. XXXVI.

Luke 19 : 20-26.

Mar. J.C. 34.

came, saying, Lord, behold here is thy pound, which I have kept laid up in a napkin : for I feared thee, because thou art an austere man : thou takest up that thou layedst not down, and reapest that thou didst not sow. And he saith unto him, Out of thine own mouth will I judge thee, thou wicked servant. Thou knewest that I was an austere man, taking up that I laid not down, and reaping that I did not sow : wherefore then gavest not thou my money into the bank, that at my coming I might have required mine own with usury ? And he said unto them that stood by, Take from him the pound, and give it to him that hath ten pounds. (And they said unto him, Lord, he hath ten pounds.) For I say

In a napkin.—"It is characteristic that the sudarium (sweat-cloth) which, not exerting himself, this idle servant does not need for its proper use (Gen. 3 : 19), he uses for the wrapping up of his pound. That he had the napkin disengaged, and so free to be turned to this purpose, was itself a witness against him."
—Trench.

Thou knewest that I.—"This is an exquisite specimen of irony and refutation at the same time. It meets and exposes his plea on the proper principle of the argumentum ad absurdum, and the argumentum ad hominem, both ; admitting apparently the truth of his premises, yet showing that, even on his own assumptions, they led to a conclusion condemnatory of himself."—Greswell.

Into the bank.—The word denotes, first, a table ; second, a money-table, or counter, on which the money-changers did their business. But as those counters were no doubt provided with tills for the deposit of money, so the word came to mean, third, a place for the investment of money, just as our bank originally only denoted a counter.

With usury.—"Usance ;" "payment for its use ;" the interest that the loan of the money is fairly worth.

Them that stood by.—Perhaps, as Trench supposes, a type of the angels who are represented as taking a part in the final judgment. (Dan. 7 : 10 ; Matt. 13 : 41 ; 16 : 27 ; 24 : 31 ; 2 Thess. 1 : 7 ; Jude, v. 14.)

Luke 19 : 26-23 ; Matt. 20 : 29 ; Mark 10 : 46.

unto you, That unto every one which hath, shall be given ; and from him that hath not, even The End of the Rebellious. that he hath shall be taken away from him. But those mine enemies, which would not that I should reign over them, bring hither, and slay them before me.

And when he had thus spoken, he went before, ascending up to Jerusalem.

And as he went out of Jericho with his disciples, a great multitude followed him.

Unto every one which hath, shall be given.—“ The gift, whether of knowledge, money, or grace, which a man does not use, he does not really have. Unused possession is only a seeming possession. In Luke 25 : 30 the unprofitable servant is cast out into outer darkness ; here, in being deprived of all that he hath, which includes the light of divine grace, the same sentence is really implied.”—Abbott.

But those mine enemies . . . bring hither and slay them before me.—“ In this parable the trial of the Church precedes the trial of the world. (Comp. 1 Pet. 4 : 18.) There is in this perhaps a hint of the first and second resurrections (Rev. 20 : 5, 6). But in the marriage of the king's son (Matt. 22 : 7-13) the punishment of the open enemies precedes that of the guest without a wedding garment. The slaying of the enemies in the presence of the king is in accordance with the custom of the Eastern courts (1 Sam. 11 : 12 ; 15 : 32, 33 ; Jer. 52 : 10). Found in the teachings of Christ, it possesses a peculiarly solemn significance, and seems to import the terrible punishment and perhaps the literal destruction of the enemies of God (Matt. 13 : 49, 50 ; 21 : 44 ; 25 : 30, 46 ; 2 Thess. 1 : 8-10).”—Abbott.

And as he went out of Jericho.—“ The account of this miracle is given by the three Evangelists—Matthew, Mark, and Luke—but with some notable variations. Matthew and Mark represent it as performed on Christ's departure from, Luke on Christ's approach to, Jericho. Matthew says that there were two blind men ; Mark and Luke represent but one. Various attempts have been made to reconcile these differences, as by supposing that Christ healed two blind men, one on his approach, the other on his departure, and that Matthew has combined the two acts in one account. The variation, however, presents no difficulty

Matt. 20 : 30, 31 ; Mark 10 : 46-48 ; Luke 18 : 36-39.

And behold, two blind men sat by the wayside begging. [One of them was] blind Bartimeus, the son of Jesus Heals two Blind Men near Jericho. Timeus, and he hearing the multitude pass by asked what it meant. And when they told him that it was Jesus of Nazareth passing by, he began to cry out, and say, Jesus, thou son of David, have mercy on me. And they which went before rebuked him, that he should hold his peace : but he cried except to those who maintain a doctrine of verbal inspiration, for which the Scripture itself gives no warrant. They are just such as are of the most common occurrence in history, and confirm, instead of throwing doubt over the substantial truth of the narrative. As Matthew was probably an eye-witness, since the apostles apparently accompanied their Lord on this journey, and Mark and Luke derived their information from others, it is probable that there were two blind men, and that the cure was performed on the exit from, not on the entrance into, Jericho."—Abbott.

Two blind men sat by the wayside.—"Blindness is specially frequent in the East, while in northern Europe there is only one blind in a thousand ; in Egypt there is one in every hundred ; indeed, very few persons there have their eyes quite healthy. The great changes of temperature at different times of the day, especially between day and night, cause inflammation of the eyes, as well as of other parts, both in Palestine and on the Lower Nile, while neglect and stupid prejudice, refusing or slighting remedies in the earlier stages, lead to blindness in many cases that otherwise might have been easily cured."—Giekie.

Begging.—Owing to unjust taxation, uneven distribution of wealth, and the total absence of public and systematized charities, begging is much more common in the East than with us. The duty of charity to the blind was especially enjoined by the Mosaic law (Lev. 19 : 14 ; Deut. 27 : 18). There is nothing in either Evangelist to indicate the nature of the blindness in this case.

Rebuked him.—"Not because he called Jesus the Son of David, but because he presumed to intrude a private grief upon the King of Israel when, as they supposed, he was going in triumph to Jerusalem to assume his throne and deliver the nation (ch. 19 : 11). The spirit of this rebuke was precisely the same as that of Matt. 19 : 13."—Abbott.

Matt. 20 : 31-34 ; Mark 10 : 48-52 ; Luke 18 : 39-43.

so much the more, Thou son of David, have mercy on me.

And Jesus stood still, and commanded them to be called : and they call the blind men, saying unto them, Be of good comfort, rise ; he calleth you. And they, casting away their garments, rose, and came to Jesus.

And Jesus answered and said unto them, What will you that I should do unto you ? The blind men said unto him, Lord, that we might receive our sight. So Jesus had compassion on them, and touched their eyes : and said unto them, Go your way ; receive your sight : your faith hath saved you.

And immediately they received their sight, and followed him, glorifying God : and all the people, when they saw it, gave praise unto God.

Casting away their garments.—That is, their outer garments. They threw them off full of joy and expectation, and in order to reach Jesus the sooner. "A detail indicating that the narrative comes from an eye-witness. Bartimeus did not stop to care for the cloak that might be lost if it impeded his progress."—Schaff.

Lord.—The word is "Rabboni" (as in John 20 : 10), the most respectful of the three titles, Rab, Rabbi, Rabboni. (Comp. Matt. 23 : 7).

Your faith hath saved you—"In the way in which faith always saves, by making him that exercises it a willing recipient of salvation from the Saviour."—Abbott. "As the sun can be seen only by its own light, so Christ can be known only by his own spirit. The sun can make dark things clear, but it can not make a blind man to see them. But herein is the excellency of this Divine Sun, that he illuminates not only the object, but the faculty ; doth not only open the mysteries of his kingdom, but opens blind eyes to behold them."—Archbishop Leighton. "Faith forces its way to Christ through every obstacle."—Bengel. "Any faith in him, however small, is better than any belief about him, however great."—George Macdonald. "Faith persuades the Christian of these two things, which the philosopher gives as the causes of all love, beauty, and propriety—the loveliness of Christ in himself, and our interest in him."—Leighton. "For faith, being, as the Apostle termed it, 'the substance of things hoped for, and evidence [or conviction] of things not seen,' wafts our joys to this side of the grave, bows heaven down to us till our freed spirits can soar up to heaven, and does us such a service as the Jewish spies did to their countrymen by bringing them over to this side Jordan into the wilderness some of the pleasant and delicious fruits of the blessed land of promise."—Hon. Robert Boyle. "Why hath God appointed the eye to see, and not the ear? Why the hand to take our food, rather than the foot? It is easily answered: because these members have a particular fitness for these functions, and not the other. Thus faith hath a fitness for the work of justification peculiar to itself. We are justified, not by giving anything to God—what we do—but by receiving from God what Christ hath done for us. Now faith is the only receiving grace, and therefore only fit for this office."—Gurnall. "Men of science tell us on every side that science teaches them nothing of God. That is the very thing we are told in the words of the Scripture, 'Thou canst not by searching find out God.' Mysteries are brought before us which no effort on our part enables us to resolve. So far from inducing doubt they should encourage our faith. As we are in the presence of infinite space and infinite time, so also are we in the presence of infinite wisdom and power."—Richard A. Proctor.

PART VI.

FROM THE ARRIVAL AT BETHANY

TO THE RESURRECTION ;

OR FROM

MARCH 31 TO APRIL 9, J.C. 34.

Chap. XXXVII.

John 12 : 1, 9. Mar. 31-Apr. 2, J.C. 34.

CHAPTER XXXVII.

CHRIST'S TRIUMPHAL ENTRY.

Then Jesus six days before the passover came to Bethany, where Lazarus was which had been dead, whom he raised from the dead. Much ^{Saturday,} ^{March 31st.} people of the Jews therefore knew that he was there : and they came not for Jesus' sake only,

There is some uncertainty as to the date of our Lord's arrival at Bethany. It was six days before the passover (John 12 : 1), but the question is how these six days are to be reckoned. About this commentators differ ; Andrews than whom there is no better authority on chronological questions, adopts Friday afternoon as the date of arrival, and supposes that "Jesus, leaving Jericho on the morning of Friday, reaches Bethany in the afternoon, perhaps about sunset. He leaves the pilgrims with whom he has journeyed, and who go on to Jerusalem, and with his apostles stops till the Sabbath should be past, they being probably received by some of his friends, and he himself doubtless finding a home in the dwelling of Lazarus and his sisters. The next day, being the Sabbath, is spent at Bethany, and in the afternoon Simon the leper makes him a supper, at which his disciples, and Lazarus and his sisters, were present. During the afternoon the Jews of Jerusalem, who had heard through the pilgrims of his arrival, go out to see him and Lazarus, and some of them believe on him. This, coming to the ears of the chief priests, leads to a consultation how Lazarus may be put to death with Jesus." With this order Smith (New Testament History) agrees, and the subsequent events of our Lord's life he tabulates as follows :

(The Jewish days are to be reckoned from the preceding sunset.)

Sat.	Nisan	9.	March	31.	SABBATH at Bethany. Evening	Simon's supper.
Sun.	"	10.	April	1.	Palm Sunday.	Entry into Jerusalem.
Mon.	"	11.	"	2.	Jesus again cleanses the temple.
Tues.	"	12.	"	3.	Last visit to the temple. Prophecy of his second coming.
Wed.	"	13.	"	4.	Conspiracy of the rulers.
Thurs.	"	14.	"	5.	Evening. The PASSOVER, and Lord's Supper.
Fri.	"	15.	"	6.	Good Friday. The CRUCIFIXION and entombment.
Sat.	"	16.	"	7.	SABBATH. Easter Eve.
Sun.	"	17.	"	8.	EASTER DAY. The RESURRECTION.
Thurs.	Sivan	3.	May	17.	Holy Thursday.	The ASCENSION.

Bethany.—See note on page 583.

John 12 : 9-11 ; 2, 3 ; Matt. 26 : 6, 7 ; Mark 14 : 3.

but that they might see Lazarus also, whom he had raised from the dead. But the chief priests consulted that they might put Lazarus also to death ; because that by reason of him many of the Jews went away and believed on Jesus.

Now when Jesus was in Bethany, in the house of Simon the leper, they made him a supper ; and Martha served : but Lazarus was one of them that sat at the table with him. Then as he sat at meat, Mary came, having an alabaster-box of a pound of ointment of spikenard, very costly ; and she brake

Mary's Anointment
of Jesus.

The chief priests consulted.—"The proximity of Bethany to Jerusalem, and the existing impatience of the people to see our Lord and Lazarus, and the prodigious numbers that were present in Jerusalem waiting for the passover, going to and fro, produced in part by the desire of seeing Lazarus, the living witness of his own resurrection, would speedily induce the Sanhedrin, whose eyes all along had been fixed upon Jesus, to deliberate on the best mode of removing him also."—Greswell.

In the house of Simon the leper.—He must not be confounded with the Pharisee called Simon, at whose house in Galilee a similar anointing had taken place long before (Luke 7 : 36-70). The two occurrences are clearly distinguished in many ways. One tradition makes this Simon the father of Lazarus ; another the husband of Martha, who served on this occasion."—Schaff.

A supper.—This was the chief meal of the Jews, and also of the Greeks and Romans, taken at evening after the labors of the day were over and sometimes prolonged into the night.—(See note, p. 475.) The same original word denotes "banquet," or "feast," and these were often given on the Sabbath.

Alabaster-box.—Cruse. See note on page 224.

Spikenard.—A peculiar kind of the nard plant was so called from its spikes, or ears. The fragrant ointment made from it was celebrated even in the time of Solomon (Songs 1 : 12). It was a thin liquid, highly aromatic, and so valuable (as appears from a passage in Horace) that as much of it as could be contained in a small box was considered as an equivalent for a cask of wine, and a handsome quota for a guest to contribute to an entertainment, according to the custom of antiquity. "It is allied to valerian, and is highly esteemed throughout the East as a perfume and stimulant medicine. The permanent hair-like the box, and poured it on his head, and anointed the feet of Jesus, and wiped his feet with her hair : and the house was filled with the odor of the ointment.

John 12 : 3-6 ; Matt. 26 : 7-9 ; Mark 14 : 4, 5.

But when his disciples saw it, they had indignation, saying, To what purpose is this waste. Then saith one of them, Judas Iscariot, Simon's son, which should betray him, Why was not this ointment sold for three hundred pence, and given to the poor ? This he said, not that he cared for the poor ; but because he was a thief, and had the bag, and bare what was put therein. And they murmured against her.

fibers of the leaf and root-stalk give it some resemblance to the tail of an ermine, to which the Arabs have likened it."—Smith & Barnum's Dictionary.

Poured it on his head.—"By breaking the neck of the flask, probably by compressing it in her hands. The quantity of ointment permitted her to anoint his feet also (John 12 : 3). The Oriental custom of reclining at table made the latter easier than the former. The expression used by Mark (14 : 3) hints that from the head it flowed over the whole body. It was also usual to wash the feet of honored guests with water, but the anointing of the feet would indicate the highest honor."—Schaff.

"Her eyes are homes of silent prayer,
Nor other thought her mind admits
But he was dead, and there he sits,
And He that brought him back is there.

"Then one deep love doth supersede
All others, when her ardent gaze
Roves from the living brother's face,
And rests upon the Life indeed.

"All subtle thought, all curious fears,
Borne down by gladness so complete,
She bows, she bathes the Saviour's feet
With costly spikenard and with tears."—Tennyson.

They had indignation.—It is probable that the feeling of Judas, who made the objection, was shared by the rest of the disciples. In them it was regard for the poor, in Judas it was avarice.

Three hundred pence.—Three hundred denarii, about $50—a large amount for those days—equal to about $300. Pliny says that a pound of this ointment cost more than four hundred denarii. Judas therefore set a "safe" estimate on its value.

Bare.—"Bare" might be rendered "purloined."

John 12 : 7, 8 ; Matt. 26 : 10-13 ; Mark 14 : 6-9.

When Jesus understood it, he said unto them, Let her alone ; why trouble ye the woman ? she hath wrought a good work upon me. She hath done what she could : against the day of my burying hath she kept this. For in that she hath poured this ointment on my body, she is come aforehand to anoint me for my burial. Ye have the poor with you always, and whensoever ye will ye may do them good : but me ye have not always. Verily I say unto you, Wheresoever this gospel shall be preached throughout the whole world, there shall also this, that this woman hath done, be told for a memorial of her.

She hath wrought a good work upon me.—"It was a good work, inasmuch as it showed her love and self-denial. Jesus, at the very time that his disciples expected him to assume his regal power, plainly again pointed to his death as first to take place. That which was designed as the anointing of him for the kingdom he declared was anointing him for his burial. It was the only anointing or embalming his body should have. It was common among the ancients to expend large sums upon anointing and embalming the bodies of their friends. It is said that at the funeral of Herod five hundred slaves, or freed men, were employed to carry the spices merely."—Bloomfield.

But me ye have not always.—"His speedy death is foretold ; but the main point is, that this opportunity could never return, while the care of the poor would be a daily 'duty to humanity down to the end of time.' The act was justified by the special occasion. It ought not to be cited to defend expensive modes of worship at the cost of neglecting the poor. Such special occasions may, however, recur in our lives. This verse suggests that no reorganization of society will ever banish poverty from the earth. There is but one way of doing this—namely, by Christ's people recognizing the poor as 'with them,' and, under the impulse of love like that of Mary, making the care of them the usual expression of that love."—Schaff. "The desire of an overburdened heart to express itself, the spontaneous ebullition of the best feelings, is praiseworthy ; and there is nothing too costly for the expression of the most valuable of all things in this world—disinterested love."—Beecher.

Be told for a memorial of her.—Alford suggests that this

Luke 21 : 3-6 ; Matt. 26 : 14-16 ; Mark 14 : 10, 11.

Then entered Satan into Judas surnamed Iscariot, being of the number of the twelve. And he went his way, and communed with the chief priests and captains, how he might betray him unto them ; and said unto them, What will ye give me, and I will deliver him unto you ? And when they heard it, they were glad, and they covenanted to give him thirty pieces of silver. And he promised, and from that time he sought opportunity how he might conveniently betray him unto them in the absence of the multitude.

prophecy points to a written record in which the deed should be related ; for in no other conceivable way could the universality of mention be brought about ; that it also shows the Gospels can not have been made up from some original document now lost, since Luke omits this incident, and such a document would have contained it ; Luke could not have seen the Gospels of Matthew and Mark, or he would have inserted this to aid in fulfilling the prophecy.

Then entered Satan into Judas.—"The betrayal of his Lord was not a hasty, passionate act. It was done coolly, deliberately ; and this is what gave it its atrocious character." —Andrews. Greswell remarks (3 : 129) that "this history is divisible into three stages, each of which has been accurately defined ; the first cause and conception of his purpose ; the overt step toward its execution ; and, lastly, its consummation. The consummation took place in the garden of Gethsemane ; the overt step was the compact with the Sanhedrin ; the first cause and conception of the purpose, if they are to be traced up to any thing on record, must be referred to what happened at Bethany."

Captains.—These were the guardians of the temple and its treasures.

Thirty pieces of silver.—Thirty shekels, each of the value of about sixty cents. This was the price for the life of a slave (Exod. 21 : 2 ; see Zech. 11 : 12).

To betray him.—Or, "deliver him up." Judas was not only to disclose where Jesus might be apprehended, but to be an active agent in delivering him to the authorities.

In the absence of the multitude.—"The feast lasted seven days. A vast multitude attended from all parts of Judea. Jeru-

Matt. 21 : 1 ; Mark 11 : 1 ; Luke 19 : 29 ; John 12 : 12.

And it came to pass, on the next day, when they came nigh to Jerusalem, unto Bethphage and Bethany, at the mount of Olives,

Sunday,
April 1st.

salem is said to have contained at such times three millions of people. Amidst such a multitude there were frequent tumults and seditions ; and the Sanhedrin were justly apprehensive there would now be a disturbance if in open day, in the temple, they took away a teacher so popular as Jesus and put him to death." —Bloomfield.

It came to pass, on the next day.—"The account of this public and triumphal entry into Jerusalem is given by all four Evangelists. . . . The cleansing of the temple mentioned here and in Matthew as though it occurred on the first day of Christ's entrance into Jerusalem, is distinctly stated by Mark to have occurred on the following day. I believe the order in Mark, who is more explicit than either of the other Evangelists, to be the correct one. (See Mark 11 : 11.) The significance of this entry into Jerusalem has been too little considered. It was Christ's nature to shun crowds ; his custom to avoid them. He forbade his disciples from disclosing to others that he was the Messiah, and this prohibition was repeatedly given (Matt. 16 : 20 ; 17 : 9 ; Mark 3 : 12 ; 5 : 43 ; 6 : 36, etc.). This exceptional assumption of dignity and acceptance of homage is for this reason the more remarkable and significant. I believe it to be an emphasis of the truth that he was a King, and came as King ; that it throws forth into prominence a truth respecting him often forgotten—namely, that he is Lord and Master as well as Saviour, crowned with authority as well as with humility and love. This triumphal entry took place at this time in Jerusalem, not in Galilee, because he would have a public testimony to the fact that it was their King the Jews crucified. It is not merely the Messiah that saves, nor the crucified One that saves, but the Messiah crucified (1 Cor. 1 : 23). The fact that this incident is attested by all of the Evangelists is important. For those who give any historical credence to these narratives can not, in the light of this event, believe that the Messianic character was invented and imputed to Jesus by a later reverential imagination. It was claimed by himself."—Abbott.

Unto Bethphage.—The site of this village is uncertain. There is no other mention of it in the Scriptures, and ancient tradition is silent as to its location. Some have supposed that Bethphage and Bethany are only designations for different parts of the same village.

Mount of Olives.—From Jerusalem a Sabbath day's jour-

Matt. 21 : 1, 2 ; Mark 11 : 1, 2 ; Luke 19 : 29, 30.

Jesus sent forth two of his disciples, saying unto them, Go ye into the village over against you, and as soon as ney—that is, about a mile. Josephus, speaking of that part of it which was nearest to the city, states the distance to be five furlongs. Here Titus encamped when he was about to begin the siege of the city which fulfilled the prophecy in Matt. 24. The mountain was called the Mount of Olives, from the olives which it produced ; yet it abounded with figs, dates, and palms ; and these, growing in different localities, gave names to various parts of the mountain, Bethany, house or region of dates, and Bethphage, house or region of figs.

Jesus sent two disciples.—Their names are not given. “The sending of the two disciples proves the deliberate intention of Jesus to give a certain solemnity to this scene. Till then he had withdrawn from popular expressions of homage ; but once at least he wished to show himself as King Messiah to his people. It was a last call addressed by him to the population of Jerusalem. This course, besides, could no longer compromise his work. He knew that in any case death awaited him in the capital.”—Godet.

Go ye into the village over against you.—“Between Bethphage and Jerusalem, to which the two disciples were dispatched from Bethphage for the ass and the colt, upon which Jesus designed to enter Jerusalem. Soon after leaving Bethany the road (to Jerusalem) meets a ravine which furrows deeply the side of Olivet. From this point the top of Zion is seen, but the rest of the city is hid by an intervening ridge ; and just opposite this point, on the other side of the ravine, I saw the site and remains of an ancient village. The road turns sharply to the right, descends obliquely to the bottom of the ravine, and then turning to the left, ascends and reaches the top of the opposite ridge a short distance above the site of the village. Is not this the place where Jesus said to the two disciples, ‘Go ye into the village over against you?’ These active footmen could cross the ravine direct in a minute or two, while the great procession would take some time in slowly winding round the road. The people of the village saw the procession ; they knew its cause, for the fame of Jesus’ miracles had reached them. They were thus prepared to give the ass to the disciples the moment they heard ‘the Lord had need of him.’ And the disciples taking the ass, led it up to the road, and met Jesus. A temporary saddle was soon made of the loose outer robes of the people, as I have myself seen done a hundred times in Palestine. Some of the people now broke down branches from the palm trees, and waving them in ye be entered into it, ye shall find an ass tied, and with her a colt whereon never man sat ; loose them and bring them unto me. And if any man say aught unto you, ye shall say, The Lord hath need of them ; and straightway he will send them hither.

Matt. 21 : 2, 3, 6 ; Mark 11 : 2, 3, 4 ; Luke 19 : 30, 31, 32.

And the disciples went, and found even as he had said triumph, threw them in the path. Others, still more enthusiastic, spread their garments in the way, as I have seen Mohammedan devotees do before a distinguished saint. Zechariah's prophecy (9 : 9) was now fulfilled to the letter : ' Rejoice greatly, O daughter of Zion ; shout, O daughter of Jerusalem ; behold, thy King cometh unto thee : he is just, and having salvation ; lowly, and riding upon an ass.' — Porter's "Syria's Holy Places."

An ass tied, and a colt.—" In Judea there were few horses, and those were chiefly used in war. The ass, the mule, and the camel are still most used in Eastern countries by princes and chief persons. To ride on a horse was sometimes an emblem of war ; a mule or an ass the emblem of peace." — Bloomfield. " The Prince of Peace did not take a horse—a warlike animal ; but he will ride on that by and by (Rev. 19 : 11). In the patriarchal ages illustrious persons thought it no disgrace to make use of the ass ; but it by no means appears that this opinion prevailed, or this custom continued till the reign of Tiberias. Was it a mean attitude wherein our Lord then appeared ? Mean even to contempt ? I grant it ; I glory in it ; it is for the comfort of my soul, for the honor of his humility, and for the utter confusion of all worldly pomp and grandeur." — Wesley.

Whereon never man sat.—Only beasts that had not been worked were used for sacred purposes, among both the Jews (Numb. 19 : 2 ; Deut. 21 : 3 ; 1 Sam. 6 : 7) and the surrounding nations. The unbroken animal could not be managed without its mother being with it, and thus the prophecy was fulfilled literally.

The Lord hath need of them.—" The tone is still royal, whether ' the Lord ' here means ' Jehovah,' or simply ' the Master.' " In the former case the animals would be claimed for religious purposes by divine authority ; in the latter for the well-known prophet. The two meanings coincide in our Lord's intention, whatever the owner would understand." — Schaff.

And found even as he had said unto them.—He had told them the most minute particulars. That, 1st. in the village over against them (Mark 11 : 2), 2d. as soon as they were entered unto them, the colt tied by the door without, in a place where two ways met ; and as they were loosing the colt, the owners thereof said unto them, Why loose ye the colt ? And they said unto them as Jesus had commanded : The Lord hath need of him, and they let them go.

Matt. 21 : 4, 5, 8 ; Mark 11 : 4-8 ; Luke 19 : 32-36 ; John 12 : 12.

And they brought the ass and the colt to Jesus : and they cast their garments upon the colt, and set Jesus thereon. All this was done, that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the prophet, saying,

Tell ye the daughter of Sion,
Behold, Thy King cometh unto thee,
Meek, and sitting upon an ass,
And a colt the foal of an ass.

And a very great multitude that were come to the (Mark 11 : 2), 3d. they should find an ass (Matt. 21 : 2), 4th. and a colt whereon never man sat (Mark 11 : 2), 5th. both of them tied (Matt. 21 : 2) ; 6th. what they should be asked when loosing them (Luke 19 : 31) ; and 7th. what should be done upon their reply (Matt. 21 : 3).

All this was done that it might be fulfilled.—Of this divine purpose the disciples had no idea at the time (John 12 : 16). "The occasion and need of the moment was the obvious motive. But to the Spirit of God these historical occasions were arranged coincidences with the prophetic word. Christ was in need of the foal of the ass, inasmuch as he could not make his entrance on foot in the midst of a festal procession. He must not be lost in the crowd ; it was necessary that he should take a prominent position, and appear pre-eminent. But if he became conspicuous, it must be in the most humble and peaceable fashion : hence the choice of the ass. The dignity of the procession required the ass's colt, and this made the history all the more symbolical. But it could not be concealed from the Spirit of Christ that here again the plain historical necessity coincided with the symbolically significant fulfillment of a prophetic word."—Lange. Matthew was present, but he did not till afterward, when divinely illuminated, know what it meant.

Tell ye the daughter of Sion.—See Isa. 62 : 11 ; Zech. 9 : 9.

And a very great multitude . . . when they heard that Jesus was coming.—"The news of our Lord's intention to visit

Matt. 21 : 8, 9 ; Mark 11 : 8, 9 ; Luke 19 : 36-38 ; John 12 : 13.

feast, when they heard that Jesus was coming to Jerusalem, took branches of palm-trees, and went forth to meet him, and many spread their garments in the way and others cut down branches from the trees, and strewed them in the way. And when he was come nigh, even now at the descent of the mount of Olives, the whole multitude of the disciples began to rejoice and praise God with a loud voice, for all the mighty works that they had seen ; and the multitudes that went before, and that followed, cried, saying,

The Royal Journey.

Jerusalem on this day was probably carried thither by some of the many visitors to Bethany the same morning. The consequent procession of the Jews from the country (John 12 : 12), which set out from the city to meet him, must have set out of their own accord, and perhaps first joined him when he was still at Bethphage. The hosannas, then, which John (12 : 13) ascribes to the attendants of Jesus, are manifestly the hosannas of the whole of his attendants, and not, like those in the other Evangelists, the hosannas of a part. The branches of palm, a species of tree which is among the first in the East to put forth its verdure, were carried for a purpose, left unexplained by St. John, but ascertained by the rest—viz., to strew in the road before Jesus, a mark of respect which would be paid to none but persons of acknowledged rank and dignity—in unison, consequently, with the strong expectation now entertained that the kingdom of the Messiah was at hand, and with the personal hosannas addressed to our Lord as King. . . . Similar to these acts in design, but a still more striking declaration of the personal feelings of the agents (not, however, until our Lord had mounted upon the ass's colt, and resumed his procession with something of the state of a king, as well as with the humility of a prophet), was the act, ascribed by the rest of the Evangelists to the greater part of the multitude present, the act of spreading their garments on the ground beneath his feet ; for this was directly to acknowledge him as king (Josephus, Ant. Jud. 9, 6 : 2 ; 2 Kings 9 : 13)."—Greswell. The custom of spreading garments and flowers in the way of the great has always existed in the East. Thus Agrippa was received when he came to Jerusalem. Stanley (" Sinai and Palestine," 187) thus describes the procession : " Two vast streams of people met on that day. The one

Matt. 21 : 9 ; Mark 11 : 9, 10 ; Luke 19 : 38 ; John 12 : 13.

Hosanna to the Son of David :

Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord :

Blessed be the kingdom of our father David, that cometh in the name of the Lord :

Blessed is the King of Israel that cometh in the name of the Lord.

Peace in heaven, and glory in the highest.

poured out from the city, and, as they came through the gardens whose clusters of palm rose on the south-eastern corner of Olivet, they cut down the long branches, as was their wont at the Feast of Tabernacles, and moved upward toward Bethany with loud shouts of welcome. From Bethany streamed forth the crowds who had assembled there the previous night. The road soon loses sight of Bethany. . . . The two streams met midway. Half of the vast mass, turning round, preceded ; the other half followed. Gradually the long procession swept up over the ridge where first begins 'the descent of the Mount of Olives' toward Jerusalem. At this point the first view is caught of the south-eastern corner of the city. The temple and the more northern portions are hid by the slope of Olivet on the right ; what is seen is only Mount Zion. . . . It was at this precise point, 'as he drew near, at the descent of the Mount of Olives' (may it not have been from the sight thus opening upon them ?) that the shout of triumph burst forth from the multitude, 'Hosanna to the Son of David ! Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord !' Again the procession advanced. The road descends a slight declivity ; and the glimpse of the city is again withdrawn behind the intervening ridge of Olivet. A few moments, and the path mounts again ; it climbs a rugged ascent ; it reaches a ledge of smooth rock, and in an instant the whole city bursts into view. It is hardly possible to doubt that this rise and turn of the road, this rocky ledge, was the exact point where the multitude paused again ; and 'he, when he beheld the city,' wept over it."

Hosanna to the Son of David.—The words are taken from Psalm 118 : 25, 26 a part of the great Hallel which was chanted at the paschal feast. Hosanna is a Syriac word, meaning "save, we beseech thee." It here seems equivalent to "Redress our grievances, and save us from our oppressors ;" and its use by the multitude shows they believed that Jesus had then come to take possession of the (temporal) Messianic kingdom.

That cometh in the name of the Lord.—That is, as the representative of Jehovah.

Peace in heaven.—"The Divine King comes to proclaim

Ch. XXXVII. John 12 : 16-19 ; Luke 19 : 39-41.

J.C. 34.

These things understood not his disciples at the first : but when Jesus was glorified, then remembered they that these things were written of him, and that they had done these things unto him. The people therefore that was with him when he called Lazarus out of his grave, and raised him from the dead, bare record. For this cause the people also met him, for that they heard that he had done this miracle. The Pharisees therefore said among themselves, Perceive ye how ye prevail nothing? behold, the world is gone after him.

And some of the Pharisees from among the multitude said unto him, Master, rebuke thy disciples. And he answered and said unto them, I tell you, that if these should hold their peace, the stones would immediately cry out.

And when he was come near, he beheld the city, and peace in heaven toward those that are on earth, reconciling all things unto God by himself (2 Cor. 5 : 20 ; Col. 1 : 20).”—Abbott.

Master, rebuke thy disciples—“No devil is so dangerous as the religious devil.”—Bishop Hall. “The natural representatives of these Pharisees in the present day are to be found among those who rebuke all religious enthusiasm. Observe, too, that the contrast is here clearly drawn between those who render homage to Christ as the representative of God on earth and those who condemn it as unseemly, and that Christ not only receives the homage but rebukes the refusal to give it.”—Abbott.

The stones would immediately cry out.—“The prophet Habakkuk (2 : 11) had six hundred and fifty years before foretold the day when the stones should cry out of the wall, and the beam out of the timber should answer it. Possibly Jesus referred to this prophecy, and to the hour of its fulfillment, when, because Jerusalem had no songs of welcome for its Lord, the stones of its falling towers, and walls, and temple courts cried out in wrathful tones the judgments of God against her.”—Abbott's “Jesus of Nazareth.”

He beheld the city, and wept over it.—“The original implies not merely the shedding of tears, but other external expressions of grief ; a deep sorrow, expressed by sobbings rather

Chap. XXXVII.

Luke 19 : 42, 43. Mar. 31-Apr. 2, J.C. 34.

wept over it, saying, If thou hadst known, even thou, at least in this thy day, the things which be-Jesus Laments over Jerusalem. long unto thy peace ! but now they are hid from thine eyes. For the days shall come upon thee, that thine enemies shall cast a trench about thee, than silent tears, is indicated. Twice Jesus is said to have wept—once at the grave of Lazarus (John 11 : 35), once at the thought of Jerusalem's tragic end ; both times they were tears of sympathy for others' woes. Unselfish tears are not unmanly." Abbott. "Jesus wept over Jerusalem because he saw in the Jerusalem of Herod and Tiberius the desecrated Jerusalem of the coming days of Titus. He saw those lordly towers shattered, those umbrageous trees hewn down, that golden sanctuary polluted, Judea Capta weeping under her palm-tree amid her tangled hair. He foresaw the horrors of the coming retribution, the six hundred thousand corpses carried out of those city gates, the wretched fugitives crucified by myriads, the starving priests leaping madly into the devouring flames, until those flames had done their avenging work, and what had been the noble Jerusalem was but a heap of ghastly ruins, where the smouldering embers were half slaked in the rivers of a guilty nation's blood."—Farrar.

Even thou, yea even in this thy day.—"Thy day of mercy. It was not yet too late for Jerusalem to repent and to seek in righteousness what would make for peace. The lament is like that of Christ over every soul which is willfully indifferent to the cravings of divine love, and will not know the things that make for its peace."—Abbott.

The things which tend unto thy peace.—That is, the course of conduct which would secure peace. There may be a reference here to the name of the city, Jerusalem, which signifies Foundation of peace.

For the days shall come.—"The difference between our Lord's style of prophecy and that of all other prophets is this. He seems to speak with a clear, steady perception of futurity, as if his eye was just as calmly fixed upon future events as if the whole were a present occurrence. The prophets appear only to have a picture, or a strong delineation of their prominent features, and their imaginations become turbid and heated, agitated and confused."—Charles Wolfe. This prophecy of the destruction of Jerusalem is so minutely exact that some skeptical writers have insisted that the language must have been written subsequent to the event.

That thine enemies shall cast a trench about thee.—

Luke 19 : 43, 44 ; Mark 11 : 11 ; Matt. 21 : 11.

and compass thee round, and keep thee in on every side, and shall lay thee even with the ground, and thy children within thee : and they shall not leave in thee one stone upon another : because thou knowest not the time of thy visitation.

And Jesus entered into Jerusalem, and into the temple : and all the city was moved, saying, Who is this ?

Rather, a mound. The original signifies a military rampart around a camp or a besieged city, formed of the earth thrown out of a trench, and stuck with sharp stakes or palisades. Titus, in the siege of Jerusalem, proceeded by regular approaches, throwing up earthworks. A rampart such as is here described was constructed, destroyed in a sally, and replaced by a wall.

And compass thee round.—Titus entirely encircled the city, making escape, after his lines were once complete, impossible. The phrase “denotes the effectual blockade of the city by the building of a wall, which could not be burned as the mound had been. Josephus informs us that Titus, in order that he might compel the city to surrender by famine, built a wall around the whole of the city. This wall, nearly five miles in circumference, and furnished with thirteen castles or towers, was completed with incredible labor in ten days. The professed design of this wall was to keep the city in on every side. By this means the people were reduced to such awful extremities that the revolting excesses of parents toward their children, and the sufferings that existed, are too awful to relate.”—Bloomfield.

They shall not leave . . . one stone upon another.—Only three towers were left standing for a time, to show the former strength and magnificence of the place. But these also were afterward leveled with the ground. See also note on page 91.

Because thou knewest not the time of thy visitation.—“The city was destroyed because it rejected Christ, who would have redeemed it from destruction (Matt. 21 : 38-43 ; 22 : 7). The student will lose the true meaning and value of this lament for himself if he does not recognize in the destruction of Jerusalem a type of the end of the world and of the judgment that awaits each individual soul, that knows not the time of its merciful visitation, and rejects the Lord, who would bring to it peace.”—Abbott.

All the city was moved.—“Was in commotion ;” agitated with hope, fear, wonder, or disapprobation, according as each person stood affected.

Ch. XXXVII. Matt. 21 : 11, 18, 19 ; Mark 11 : 11-13.

J.C. 34.

And the multitude said, This is Jesus the prophet of Nazareth of Galilee. And when he had ^{Jesus Publicly Entered Jerusalem.} looked round about upon all things, and now the eventide was come, he went out unto Bethany with the twelve.

And on the morrow, in the morning, as he returned into the city, from Bethany, he was hungry. And seeing a fig-tree afar off, having leaves, he ^{Monday, April 2d.} came, if haply he might find any thing thereon: and when he came to it, he found nothing thereon but leaves only: for the time of figs was not yet. And

This is Jesus the prophet.—That prophet of whom Moses had spoken (Deut. 18 : 18). Every expression of the multitude plainly intimated that they fully received Jesus as the promised Messiah.

He was hungry.—"An actual physical want. It may have been occasioned by his leaving Bethany very early in his zeal to purify the temple where he had seen the abuses as he looked about on the previous evening. Human want and divine power are exhibited simultaneously. On Sunday he entered Jerusalem amid hosannas, on Monday in hunger."—Schaff.

A fig-tree.—Fig-trees were common in the neighborhood of Bethany, Bethphage, and the Mount of Olives, and around Jerusalem. This may have been more flourishing, and have given greater promise of fruit, than the rest. The fig-tree seldom rises above twelve feet; has many spreading branches, large dark-green leaves, and the fruit, which is of a purplish color, contains a soft, sweet, and fragrant pulp, mixed with small seeds. In Judea it produces two crops of fruit, and sometimes fruit is found on it all the year round.

But leaves only.—"Mark adds, 'For the time of figs was not yet.' The usual explanation is that the fruit of the fig-tree precedes the leaf, hence it promised fruit. A recent traveler in Palestine (T. W. Chambers) says this is not the case, and gives the following explanation: 'The tree bears two crops—an early ripe fig, which is crude and without flavor and valueless, and a later fig, which is full of sweetness and flavor, and highly esteemed. All trees bear the first; only good ones have the second. Now the tree our Lord saw had not the second, for the time of that had not yet come; but it had not even the first, for it had nothing but leaves, and the lack of the first was sure evidence that the second would also be wanting.' The solitary tree was a figure of Chap. XXXVII. Matt. 21 : 19 ; Mark 11 : 14.

J.C. 34.

Jesus said unto it, No man eat fruit of thee hereafter for ever. And his disciples heard it. And presently the fig-tree withered away.

Israel set by itself ; the leaves represented the hypocritical pretensions to sanctity, the barrenness the lack of real holiness. Applicable to false professors in every age.”—Schaff. “The other trees had nothing, but they did not pretend to have any thing ; this tree had nothing, but it gave out that it had much. So was it severally with the Gentile and with the Jew. The Gentiles were bare of all fruits of righteousness, but they owned it ; the Jews were bare, but they counted that they were full. The Gentiles were sinners ; but the Jews were hypocrites and pretend-ers to boot, and by so much farther from the kingdom of God, and more nigh unto a curse. Their guilt was not that they had not the perfect fruits of faith, for it was not the season for such : the time of these was not yet ; but that, not having, they so boastfully gave out that they had—not that they were not healed, but that, being unhealed, they counted themselves whole. The law would have done its work, the very work for which God ordained it, if it had stripped them of these boastful leaves, or rather had prevented them from ever putting them forth.”—Trench.

“ Nothing but leaves ; the spirit grieves
Over a wasted life ;
Sin committed while conscience slept,
Promises made but never kept,
Hatred, battle, and strife ;
Nothing but leaves !

“ Nothing but leaves ; no garnered sheaves
Of life’s fair, ripened grain ;
Words ; idle words, for earnest deeds ;
We sow our seeds—lo ! tares and weeds ;
We reap, with toil and pain,
Nothing but leaves !

“ Nothing but leaves ; memory weaves
No veil to screen the past ;
As we retrace our weary way,
Counting each lost and misspent day,
We find, sadly, at last,
Nothing but leaves !

“ And shall we meet the Master so,
Bearing our withered leaves ?
The Saviour looks for perfect fruit ;
We stand before him, humbled, mute ;
Waiting the words he breathes—‘ Nothing but leaves ? ’”—Lucy E. Akerman.

No man eat fruit of thee hereafter forever.—“ This action was emblematical ; according to the usual custom of the East to

Mark 11 : 15-17 ; Matt. 21 : 12, 13 ; Luke 19 : 45, 46.

And they come to Jerusalem : and went into the temple of God, and Jesus began to cast out them that sold ^{Jesus expels the Traders from the Temple.} and bought therein, and overthrew the tables of the money-changers, and the seats of them that sold doves ; and would not suffer that any man should carry any vessel through the temple, saying unto them, Is it not written, express things by symbolical actions. It was also prophetic. Our Lord intended to prove that his power to punish the disobedient was as great as that to confer benefits. It was, moreover, to prefigure the destruction of the perverse Jews, because in the time of fruits they had borne none, and likewise to read a very important lesson to all his disciples of every age—that if the opportunities God gives for approving themselves virtuous be neglected, nought will remain but to be withered by the fiat which shall consign them to destruction.”—Bloomfield.

And presently the fig-tree withered away.—On the next morning it was found to be “dried up from the roots” (Mark 11 : 20). The application to the Jewish people is unmistakable.

And went into the temple of God.—“On the day of his entry [Sunday] Jesus had entered it and ‘looked round’ (Mark 11 : 11), as if to take formal possession of it. This entrance was on Monday to purify it ; on Tuesday he took final leave of it (Matt. 24 : 1). This was a fulfillment of the prophecy of Haggai (2 : 9).”—Schaff. The outer court of the temple, or the court of the Gentiles, is here referred to. It was sufficiently spacious to admit not only of shops, but also of oxen, sheep, etc., which were regularly brought there and sold for sacrifices.

The money-changers.—See note on page 93.

Should carry a vessel.—Including utensils, tools, etc.

Through the temple.—That is, through the court of the Gentiles, which seems to have been used as a thoroughfare. “The very passing through it without a burden would make it a thoroughfare, but doing it with a burden was much worse, because carrying a burden had something slavish in it. The irregularities which our Lord rebukes had, it is supposed, originated in, or been increased by, the proximity of the Castle of Antonia, to which there would be a constant resort of various persons (see Josephus, B. J. 1 : 3, 5), and we may imagine that the priests, having an interest therein, connived at them.”—Bloomfield. “Our Saviour overthrew the tables of the money-changers, and would not suffer them to carry burdens

Matt. 21 : 13, 14-16 ; Mark 11 : 17 ; Luke 19 : 46.

My house shall be called, of all nations, the house of prayer ?

But ye have made it a den of thieves. And the blind and the lame came to him in the temple ; and he healed them. And when the chief priests and scribes saw the wonderful things that he did, and the children crying in the temple, and saying, Hosanna to the Son of David, they were sore displeased, and said through the temple, though for the use of those that sacrificed, a thing which had some show of religion in it. He whipped both out ; not only those that had residence there, but those that passed through. He would suffer none but those who could justify what they did by the law. Now as God would not have sin lodge and make its abode in the soul, so he would not have it made a thoroughfare for sin. He would not have vain thoughts come up and down in the heart."—Archbishop Usher. "This casting of the traders out of the temple—narrated also in Mark 11 : 15-19, and Luke 19 : 45-48, is not to be confounded with that recorded in John 2 : 13-17, at the commencement of Christ's ministry. It is not at all strange that, scourged from the temple, they should, in less than three years, have returned again to corrupt it. History is full of parallels. The temple was cleansed, but not filled by the indwelling of the Spirit of God."—Abbott. (See note p. 94).

And the children crying in the temple.—"After cleansing the temple, or that part of the court of the Gentiles called 'the shops,' where every day was sold wine, salt, oil, as also oxen and sheep, he permits the blind and lame, probably those who asked alms at the gates, to come to him ; and he healed them. These healings, and the expressions of wonder and gratitude which they called forth, joined to the remembrance of the acclamations that had greeted him the day before, led the children in the temple, who may have been members of the choir of singers employed in the temple service, to cry, 'Hosanna to the Son of David,' greatly to the displeasure of the priests and scribes. It is remarkable that children only are mentioned, and may indicate that already the multitude, overawed by the firm and hostile bearing of his enemies, had begun to waver, and dared no more openly express their good-will. (See, however, Mark 11 : 18). Some, from the fact that the children are here mentioned as crying Hosanna, and that in the temple, make it to have been on the day of the Lord's entry. But there is no difficulty in believing that the children might now re-echo what they had heard a few hours before."—Andrewes.

Matt. 21 : 16, 17 ; Mark 11 : 18, 19 ; Luke 19 : 47, 48 ; 21 : 37.

unto him, Hearest thou what these say ? And Jesus saith unto them, Yea : have ye never read,

Out of the mouth of babes and sucklings
Thou hast perfected praise ?

And the scribes and chief priests and the chief of the people sought how they might destroy him, and could not find what they might do : for they feared him, because all the people were very attentive to hear him, and were astonished at his doctrine. And in the day-time he was teaching in the temple ; and at night he went out of the city into Beth-

Have ye never read ?—A pointed rebuke, for he quotes from the book it was their business to read.

Out of the mouth of babes, etc.—Ps. 8 : 2. “ 1. The praise of the Messiah is the praise of God. 2. The praise of children is a praise which God himself has prepared for himself, the miraculous energy of his Spirit. 3. The scribes might fill up the rest : thou hast prepared praise—‘ on account of thine adversaries to bring to silence the enemy and the accuser.’ ”—Lange.

Thou hast perfected praise.—“ More literally, ‘ Thou restorest praise.’ True praise of God had perished from the temple ; in the mouths of these children it was being restored. So every babe is, in his innocence, a restorer of the praise of God to the earth.”—Abbott.

The chief of the people.—Chiefs of the synagogues, who combined with the chief priests—the heads of the priestly courses and the scribes—that is, the theological teachers.

All the people were very attentive.—The expression is very strong in the original, “ They hung upon his words.” “ The people hung upon the lips of their all-wise Teacher. This implies two very strong ideas—an attention that nothing could interrupt, and an eagerness scarce ever to be satisfied.”—Harvey. “ The common people heard him gladly.”

And at night he went out of the city.—“ There can be little doubt that he spent the nights during passion week in this village (Bethany), and probably in the house of Lazarus. Matthew says (21 : 17) : ‘ He went out of the city, into Bethany, and he lodged there.’ Luke, speaking in general terms, says (21 : 37) : ‘ And in the daytime he was teaching in the temple, and at night he went out and abode (lodged) in the mount that is any, and abode in the mount that is called the mount of Olives. And all the people came early in the morning to him in the temple, for to hear him.

Chap. XXXVII. Matt. 21 : 17 ; Luke 21 : 38.J.C. 34.

called of Olives.' Probably Bethany is here meant as a district embracing a part of the mount, for he could not well, at this season of the year, without a tent, lodge in the open air. Alexander supposes that Luke would suggest that 'a part of these nights was employed in prayer amidst the solitudes of Olivet.' Some would put the request of the Greeks to see Jesus, and his answer to them (John 12 : 20-36), upon this day ; but it may better be referred to Tuesday."—Andrews.

XXXVIII.

Matt. 21 : 20 ; Mark 11 : 20-22.

Apr. J.C. 34.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

THE DAY OF CONFLICT.

AND in the morning, as they passed by, they saw the fig-tree dried up from the roots, and the disciples marveled, saying, How soon is the fig-tree withered away !

The Withered
Fig-tree.

And Peter calling to remembrance, saith unto him, Master, behold, the fig-tree which thou cursedst is withered away.

They saw the fig-tree dried up from the roots.—“The withering of the fig-tree seems to have begun as soon as the Lord had spoken the curse against it. Matthew says, ‘presently the fig-tree withered away.’ Mark says, ‘it was dried up from the roots.’ In twenty-four hours it was completely dead.”—Andrews. “It would appear from St. Matthew that some beginnings of the threatened withering began to show themselves almost as soon as the word of the Lord was spoken ; a shuddering fear may have run through all the leaves of the tree, which was thus stricken at its heart. . . . On the morning of Monday, as he was returning from Bethany to his ministry in the city very early, indeed before sunrise, the word against the fig-tree was spoken. That same evening he, with his disciples, went back to Bethany, to lodge there, but probably at so late an hour that the darkness prevented them from marking the effects which had followed upon that word. It was not till the morning of Tuesday that ‘they saw the fig-tree dried up from the roots.’”—Trench.

Which thou cursedst.—“The language of Peter ; yet our Lord’s act was a curse—that is, a judicial word and act of condemnation. That it was judicial and just, not passionate and wanton, is evident not only from the character of our Lord, but from the lessons he connects with it. Mark, who inserts Peter’s language, which might be misunderstood, alone tells us about forgiving.”—Schaff. “In one of his parables our Lord had spoken of the Jewish nation under the figure of a tree, which, though carefully tended year by year, bore no fruit. At last the word goes forth, ‘Cut it down.’ [The cursing of this fig-tree] was an outward symbol of that doomed city whose day of mercy was past. The awfulness of these last words (‘no fruit grow on thee henceforth and forever’), and of this last significant sign, is increased by the tenderness of Him who gave them forth. It is the Fountain of Pity, the All-Loving-One, that uttered the doom—a XXXVIII. Matt. 21 : 21, 22 ; Mark 11 : 22-25. Apr. J.C. 34.

And Jesus answering, saith unto them, Have faith in God. For verily I say unto you, If ye have faith, and doubt not, but believe that those things that ye say shall come to pass, ye shall not only do this which is done to the fig-tree, but also shall say unto this mountain, Be thou removed, and be thou cast into the sea ; and it shall be done. Therefore I say unto you, What things soever ye desire when ye pray, believe that ye receive them, and ye shall have them. And when ye stand praying, forgive, if ye have aught against any : that doom made certain and inevitable not by God's will, but by man's perversity."—H. B. Stowe.

Have faith in God.—"The words have in themselves the widest application, but the next two verses show that the apostles were directed to God, as the source of power for themselves, spiritual power in the case of all believers, miraculous power in their case, in view of their special mission."—Schaff.

Shall say unto this mountain.—The Mount of Olives, which, probably, they were then descending.

"A trusting heart, a yearning eye,
Can win their way above ;
If mountains can be moved by faith,
Is there less power in love?"—Faber.

Forgive if ye have aught against any one.—"See Matt. 5 : 23, where the converse is presented : 'thy brother hath aught against thee,' and Matt. 6 : 14, etc. That such sayings should be repeated almost word for word, is not at all strange. A forgiving temper is necessary for them in working miracles, as well as faith and believing prayer : their faith and the power it wields should never be used in the service of hate."—Schaff. "Since in this one instance his power had been put forth to destroy, he added a very important warning. They were not to suppose that this emblematic act gave them any license to wield the sacred powers which faith and prayer would bestow on them, for purposes of anger and vengeance ; nay, no power was possible to the heart that knew not how to forgive, and the unforgiving heart could never be forgiven. The sword, and the famine, and the pestilence were to be no instruments for them to wield, nor were they even to dream of evoking against their enemies the fire of heaven, or 'the icy wind of death.' The secret of successful prayer was faith ; the road to faith in God lay through pardon of transgression ; pardon was possible to them only who were ready to pardon others."—Farrar.

Mark 11 : 26-29 ; Matt. 21 : 23, 24 ; Luke 20 : 1-3.

your Father also which is in heaven may forgive you your respases. But if ye do not forgive, neither will your Father which is in heaven forgive your trespasses.

And they come again to Jerusalem. And it came to pass, as he was walking in the temple, and taught the ^{Christ's Authority questioned.} people, and preached the gospel, the chief priests and the scribes came upon him, with the elders of the people and spake unto him, saying, Tell us, by what authority doest thou these things ? and who gave thee this authority ?

And Jesus answered and said unto them, I also will ask you one thing, which if ye tell me, I in like wise

In the Temple.—"The outer court of the Temple, the court of the Gentiles, was a convenient gathering-place of the people, and during the Passover week would be thronged. Here Christ and his apostles often preached (John 7 : 14 ; 8 : 2 ; Acts 2 : 46 ; 3 : 1, 11, etc.)."—Abbott.

The elders of the people.—These "representatives of all the constituent classes of the Sanhedrin were there to overawe him—whom they despised as the poor ignorant prophet of despisable Nazareth—with all that was venerable in age, eminent in wisdom, or imposing in authority in the great council of the nation. The people whom he was engaged in teaching made reverent way for them, lest they should pollute those floating robes and ample fringes with a touch ; and when they had arranged themselves around Jesus, they sternly and abruptly asked him."—Farrar.

By what authority doest thou these things ?—"He had neither the authority of a rabbi to teach, nor of a priest to cleanse the Temple. There is a significance in the vagueness of the language—these things. They were unwilling to specify the cleansing of the Temple, and so to seem publicly to justify its pollution."—Abbott.

And who gave thee this authority ?—"Even if you assume to be a prophet, who sent you ?" A hint at the old charge of Satanic power."—Schaff. "This question interprets the other, and indicates their object : viz., authority on which they could found a charge of blasphemy. They thus sought by indirection what on his trial the high-priest sought by a direct question. See Matt. 26 : 63, 64.—Abbott.

Matt. 21 : 24-27 ; Mark 11 : 29-33 ; Luke 20 : 4-7.

will tell you by what authority I do these things. The baptism of John, was it from heaven, or of men? Answer me.

And they reasoned with themselves, saying, If we shall say, From heaven ; he will say unto us, Why, then, did ye not believe him? But if we say, Of men ; we fear the people, for all of them will stone us : for they be persuaded that John was a prophet indeed. And they answered and said unto Jesus, We cannot tell.

The Baptism of John.—"With that infinite presence of mind, of which the world's history furnishes no parallel, and which remained calm under the worst assaults, he told them that the answer to their question depended on the answer which they were prepared to give to his question."—Farrar.

And they reasoned, consulted, so as to agree upon the answer.

We fear the people.—"Seest thou a perverse heart. In every case they despise God, and do all things for the sake of men."—Chrysostom.

The people will stone us.—"The priests had themselves accustomed the people to that violence. When they could not legally convict their enemies, they invited the populace to stone them. (See Jno. 10 : 31 ; Ac. 14 : 19.) Stoning was indeed enjoined in the law of Moses as the punishment of idolatry, blasphemy, and other heinous offences ; and its execution was committed to the people at large. Yet it appears from Exodus, that such irregular and tumultuary vengeance was in use before the law—8 : 26, And Moses said, It is not meet so to do ; for we shall sacrifice the abomination of the Egyptians to the Lord our God ; lo, shall we sacrifice the abomination of the Egyptians before their eyes, and will they not stone us?"—Bloomfield.

We cannot tell.—Literally, we do not know. "They were caught in a rough alternative, and could extricate themselves only by a step of desperation—a confession of ignorance, and that of hypocritical (pretended) ignorance."—Lange. "They assumed to judge of Christ's authority ; he compelled them to confess publicly their inability to judge of the authority of John the Baptist. Their utter want of moral principle, their supreme and even unconcealed indifference to the truth, stands out nowhere more clearly than in these last days of Christ's ministry. Compare Matt. 22 : 15 ; Luke 20 : 20 ; John 11 : 47-50."—Abbott. "If they had recognized the divine mission of John, they must

Matt. 21 : 27-30 ; Mark 11 : 33 ; Luke 20 : 8.

And Jesus answering saith unto them, Neither do I tell you by what authority I do these things.

But what think ye ? A certain man had two sons ; and he came to the first, and said, Son, go work to-day in my vineyard. He answered and said, Parable of the Two Sons. I will not ; but afterward he repented, and went. And he came to the second, and said likewise. And he answered and said, I go, sir : and went also have acknowledged the authority by which Jesus did these things, for John expressly declared that he was sent to testify of him, and bore witness to having seen the Holy Spirit descend and rest upon him. These blind leaders of the blind had so far made an insincere concession to the people's persuasion as to allow John to pass for a prophet ; but they shrank from the reproof which was sure to follow their acknowledging it now. This consultation among themselves is related almost verbatim by the three evangelists. The intelligence of it may have been originally derived from Nicodemus or Joseph of Arimathea."—Alford.

Neither do I tell you.—“ Christ answers their thought : we will not tell. This refusal is similar to that made when a sign from heaven was demanded (Matt. 12 : 38 ff.). The answer assumes their proven and confessed incompetency to decide on the authority of a prophet, and consequently his superiority to their questioning. Such a defeat increased their opposition.”—Schaff. “ There are two reasons why the knowledge of truth should be kept back from those who ask—either when he who asks is unfit to receive ; or, from his hatred and contempt of the truth, is unworthy to have that which he asks opened to him.”—Rabanus. “ One may admire in this incident the skill with which Christ confounds the enemies of truth. It illustrates (a) Christ's refusal to submit his claims to the decision of inimical skeptics ; (b) the unity of divine truth : one cannot accept a part and reject a part, e.g. accept John the Baptist and reject Christ ; (c) the hypocrisy of much that appears to be religious investigation ; (d) the right of a religious teacher to ‘ answer a fool according to his folly,’ if he has the ability to do so.”—Abbott.

Son.—Literally, “ Child”—an affectionate address.

I go, sir.—“ I, in contrast with this one who refuses ; an expression of pride. The answer was hypocritical, since it is not added that he changed his mind, but simply went not.”—Schaff. “ There is an air of alacrity and of quasi self-assurance in the

Chap. XXXVIII.

Matt. 21 : 30-32.

Apr. J.C. 34.

not. Whether of them twain did the will of his father ? They say unto him, The first.

Jesus saith unto them, Verily I say unto you that the publicans and the harlots go into the kingdom of God before you. For John came unto you in the way of righteousness, and ye believed him not : but the publicans and the harlots believed him : and ye, when ye had seen it, repented not afterward, that ye might believe him.

original which our version hardly retains. Morison paraphrases it, 'You may depend upon me, sir.' The character and experience described are depicted in such passages as Isaiah 29 : 13 ; Ezek. 33 : 31 ; Matt. 15 : 8 ; Rom. 2 : 17-23 ; Titus 1 : 16."—Abbott.

Go into the kingdom . . . before you.—"A life of repentance of past sins, inflamed with love toward God, is more pleasing to him than a state of innocence, benumbed under the feeling of self security."—Gregory.

In the way of righteousness.—"Preaching obedience as the way of life, which was the radical doctrine of Pharisaism, but preaching a very different kind of obedience, viz., compliance with the moral, not with the mere ceremonial law (see Luke 3 : 10-14). John the Baptist came upon their own ground, yet they believed not."—Abbott.

That ye might believe.—Intimating that there was a close connection between repentance and faith, and that their unrepentant state of mind prevented the reception of the great truth to which John bare witness, that Jesus is the Messiah. "The two sons represent, not the Gentiles and the Jews as interpreted by some of the earlier commentators, nor the publicans and Pharisees as usually interpreted by the later commentators, but those publicans who regretted their open and flagrant sinfulness and commenced a life of obedience, and those Pharisees who endeavored to cover a life of real disobedience by a pretence of compliance with the law. . . . In its modern application, the parable teaches, not that there is more hope for a flagrant sinner than for a virtuous man, but that the flagrant sinner who forsakes his sins enters the kingdom of heaven before the orthodox and moral man who clings to his sins. The first son is commended not because of the daring wickedness of his reply, but because he regretted it, and showed his regret by his action. . . .

Matt. 21 : 33, 34 ; Mark 12 : 1, 2 ; Luke 20 : 9, 10.

Hear another parable : There was a certain householder, which planted a vineyard, and hedged it round about, and digged a wine-press in it, and built a tower, and let it out to husbandmen, and went for a long time into a far country : and when the time of the fruit drew near, he sent his ser-

On the other hand, the second son is not condemned for his answer, but in spite of it, and because, having promised obedience, he refused to render it. The lesson of the parable is then exactly the lesson of Matt. 7 : 21-27. Incidentally it opens the door of hope to all, even the least and the lowest."—Abbott. "Who was more wretched than Matthew? But he became an evangelist. Who worse than Paul? But he became an apostle. . . . Rahab was a harlot, yet she was saved ; and the thief was a murderer, yet he became a citizen of Paradise ; and while Judas, being with his Master, perished, the thief, being on a cross, became a disciple."—Chrysostom. The whole parable illustrates Matt. 19 : 30. "There is a divine delicacy in the ways of God. He does not clog his Gospel with conditions, nor is the joy of forgiveness dashed by formal stipulations as to future conduct. He would have you be, not a servant, but a son—a son whose interest and honor are bound up with his own ; and if you cannot hear the voice of the neglected vineyard crying to every idler, 'Come, work !' he will not vex you by repeating too often, 'Son, go !' Nevertheless, knowing as you do the will of your Father, and merely saying, 'I go, sir,' without ever stirring a step, can you wonder that he is grieved at his heart? Can you wonder that your consolations are small? Can you wonder if you feel a dullness and depression which you once thought it impossible that you could ever experience at home?"—James Hamilton.

There was a certain householder which planted a vineyard. "Observe his great care and the excessive idleness of these men. For what pertained to the husbandmen he himself did, the hedging round about, the planting the vineyard, and all the rest."—Chrysostom.

And when the time of the fruit drew near.—"By the Mosaic law the fruit of the trees was not to be eaten for five years after planting. This reasonable provision, though based on religious grounds, gave the tree opportunity for maturing before use (Lev. 19 : 23, 25). But the analogy is not to be pressed. All time is the time of fruit with the individual and with the nation. God continually seeks for fruit (Luke 13 : 7 ; John 15 : 2, 5, 8)."—Abbott.

Matt. 21 : 34-38 ; Mark 12, 2-7 ; Luke 20 : 10-14.

vants to the husbandmen, that they might receive the fruits of the vineyard. And the husbandmen took his servants, and beat one, and stoned another, and sent them away empty and shamefully handled. And again he sent another ; and him they killed, and many others, beating some, and killing some. Then said the lord of the vineyard, What shall I do ? I will send my only and well beloved son : it may be they will reverence my son. But when the husbandmen saw the son, they said

He sent his servants ; " the prophets of the Old Testament, calling for the fruits of righteousness from the Jewish people. The maltreatment of the servants appears in the history of the prophets (Elijah, Jeremiah, Isaiah) ; comp. Neh. 9 : 26 ; Matt. 23 : 29-31, 34, 37 ; Rev. 16 : 6."—Schaff. " For an abundant historical justification of this description, and as showing that the past ingratitude of the people is not painted here in colors a whit too dark, see 1 Kings 18 : 13 ; 19 : 14 ; 22 : 24-27 ; 2 Kings 6 : 31 ; 21 : 16 ; 2 Chron. 24 : 19-22 ; 36 : 15, 16 ; Jer. 20 : 1, 2 ; 37 : 15 ; and also Acts 7 : 51-55 ; 1 Thess. 2 : 15 ; Heb. 11 : 36, 37."—Trench. " I am convinced that in this world the true heavenly doctrine will ever have to maintain a conflict with errors and corruptions, and that those who uphold the cause of divine truth will ever be under the cross and suffer for their principles. From the beginning of the world it has been so ; and holy and enlightened men know that these things must be borne."—Melancthon.

What shall I do?—" A graphic representation of the Heavenly Father's grief over the rebellion of his children."—Abbott.

They will reverence my son.—" God often seems to speak in doubt, that a place may be left to man's free will."—Bede. " I remember one of the poets hath an ingenious fancy to express the passion wherewith he found himself overcome after a long resistance ; that ' the god of love had shot all his golden arrows at him, but could never pierce his heart ; till at length he put himself into the bow, and darted himself straight into his breast.' Methinks, this doth some way adumbrate God's method of dealing with men. He had long contended with a stubborn world, and thrown down many a blessing upon them ; and when all his other gifts could not prevail, he at last made a gift of himself to testify his affections and to engage theirs."—Scougal. " The Lord Christ is heir of all things, not as God, among themselves, 'This is the heir ; come, let us kill him, and let us seize on his inheritance. And they caught him, and cast him out of the vineyard, and slew him. When the lord therefore of the vineyard cometh, what will he do unto those husbandmen ?

Matt. 21 : 38-41 ; Mark 12 : 7-9 ; Luke 20 : 14-17.

They say unto him, He will miserably destroy those wicked men, and will let out his vineyard unto other husbandmen, which shall render him the fruits in their seasons. And when they heard it, they said, God forbid.

but as man ; for as God, he is maker of all."—Theodoret. "I could easily believe that the fathers of the Sanhedrin had either a knowledge, or at least some suspicion, that Jesus was the true Messiah. . . . The vine-dressers in the parable knew well enough that 'he was the heir ;' and it was come to this, in the struggle betwixt them : Either he will 'inherit' with his doctrine, or we will with ours. 'Come, therefore, let us kill him ;' and the inheritance shall be ours."—Lightfoot.

And they caught him, and cast him out of the vineyard, and slew him.—"All three narrators describe him as thus 'cast out of the vineyard,' by which we are reminded of Him who 'suffered without the gate.'"—Trench.

He will miserably destroy those wicked men. Abbott renders this clause as an exclamation : "Miserable fellows ! Miserably will he destroy them !" and he remarks : "The language of indignation is far stronger in the original, of which I give, as nearly as possible, a literal translation, than in our English version. The Pharisees did not perceive the drift of his parable, or perhaps this was the answer of the people, and "God forbid" (Luke 20 : 16) was their involuntary response to the popular expression. To this response, reported only by Luke, Christ replies with the quotation from the O. T. of the next verse, thus confirming the lesson of his parable." On this passage Schaff remarks : "The order and repetition of the original might be thus reproduced : 'these wretches will he wretchedly destroy.' The rulers, whether wittingly or unwittingly, condemn themselves." "How solemnly is the extinction of the national existence and the removal of the religious privileges of the Jews foretold ! The sentence which is here passed upon them is rendered more terrible from their being condemned out of their own mouth !"—Bloomfield.

Matt. 21 : 42 ; Mark 12 : 10, 11 ; Luke 20 : 17.

And he beheld them, and said, What is this then that is written in the scriptures,

The stone which the builders rejected,
The same is become the head of the corner :
This is the Lord's doing,
And it is marvelous in our eyes ?

The stone which the builders rejected.—Ps. 118 : 22. "The 'hosannas' of the populace when he entered Jerusalem in triumph were taken from the same psalm. The original reference of the passage is doubtful, whether to David or to Zerubbabel (Zech. 3 : 8, 9 ; 4 : 7) ; but it is properly applied to the Messiah. Comp. Isa. 28 : 16, which Peter cites in connection with it (1 Pet. 2 : 6, 7 ; comp. Rom. 9 : 33)."—Schaff.

The builders rejected.—The rulers of the Jews ("the husbandmen"), whose duty it was to build up the spiritual temple, now addressed in rebuke and warning.

The head of the corner.—The ordinary interpretation of this figure refers it to the corner-stone, that on which the whole superstructure rests. In support of this view are cited the passages elsewhere in the Bible referring to Christ as the chief corner-stone of his church (Acts 4 : 11 ; 1 Cor. 3 : 11 ; 1 Pet. 2 : 6, 7 ; Isa. 28 : 16 ; Zech. 4 : 7 ; Ephes. 2 : 20–22). Another view has however been suggested, which, if not substantiated, is at least new, interesting, and apt : namely, that the reference is to the cap-stone of a pyramid. The writers who, of late, have been zealously measuring, theorizing, compiling data and interpreting Scripture to show that what is known as "The Great Pyramid," at Ghizeh on the Nile, was a building inspired of God in prehistoric times, to furnish mankind with certain elemental units of weight and standards of measurement, as well as to contain prophetic records of sacred history, find many curious allusions and figures in the Bible which they refer to this structure. The passage under consideration is one. References by the Hebrew writers to the architecture, customs, and influence of so singular a people as the Egyptians might have been expected. Yet they are very rarely found ; and this Great Pyramid—which its enthusiasts claim to have been built by one of the Shepherd Kings of Canaan (perhaps Melchisedek, who was recognized by Abraham as his superior), who went to Egypt by God's command to build this "miracle in stone"—this, they claim, is over and again used by the sacred writers as a figure and a symbol, while the purely Egyptian elements are utterly ignored. The cap-stone of a pyramid, triangular, and useless during the process of building, is "rejected by the

XXXVIII.

Matt. 21 : 43, 44 ; Luke 20 : 18.

Apr. J.C. 34.

Therefore say I unto you, The kingdom of God shall be taken from you, and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof. And whosoever Christ the Corner-stone. shall fall on this stone, shall be broken : but on whomsoever it shall fall, it will grind him to powder.

builders," but at the last is chiefly honored and becomes the "head of the corner." Whoever falls on this "stumbling-block," or "rock of offence," as it lies about the building-ground, is "pierced or broken;" should it fall from its lofty station it would "grind to powder" him on whom it should fall. Smith's Bib. Dict. says that "by some, the expression in Ps. 118 : 22, which is here quoted, is understood to mean the coping or ridge of a building;" but takes no note of the aptness of a pyramidal cap-stone to fill the conditions of the figure. Eph. 2 : 20, 21 is a passage particularly favorable to this suggestion, mentioning Jesus Christ as "the chief corner-stone, in whom all the building, fitly framed together, groweth an holy temple to the Lord." However, this may all be but fanciful, and, at best, no figure should be strained too far, or stretched and twisted in the attempt to make it fit too many ideas, or mean too much. This is the constant temptation of commentators. If the pyramidal figure gives any one a clear illustration of Christ's words, it serves purpose enough.

Shall be broken.—"Probably a reference to Isa. 8 : 14, 15. He who runs against or falls over the corner-stone, making Christ a spiritual offence or stumbling-block (comp. 1 Pet. 2 : 8), will be bruised. This is the punishment of the active enemy of the passive Christ."—Schaff. "They fall on the stone who are offended at Christ in his low estate (Isa. 8 : 14 ; 53 : 2 ; Luke 2 : 34 ; 4 : 29 ; John 4 : 44) ; of this sin his hearers were already guilty."

On whomsoever it shall fall.—"They on whom the stone falls are those who set themselves in self-conscious opposition against the Lord ; who, knowing what he is, do yet to the end oppose themselves to him and to his kingdom. These shall not merely fall and be broken ; for one might recover himself, though with some present harm, from such a fall as this ; but on them the stone shall fall as from heaven, and shall grind them to powder."—Trench. "Comp. Matt. 12 : 32. The verb here rendered grind to powder, is literally winnow, and here implies both making chaff of them and scattering them as chaff to the XXXVIII. Matt. 21 : 45, 46 ; 22 : 1-3 ; Mark 12 : 12. J.C. 34.

And when the chief priest and Pharisees had heard his parables, they perceived that he spake against them. But when they sought the same hour to lay hands on him, they feared the multitude, because they took him for a prophet, and they left him, and went their way.

And Jesus answered and spake unto them again by parables, and said, The kingdom of heaven is like unto a certain king, which made a marriage for his son, and sent forth his servants to call them that were bidden to winds of heaven."—Abbott. "When Christ is the active judge, this utter destruction will be the full punishment of his enemies. Repentance may intervene and avert this final result. There is a reference here to Dan. 2 : 34, 35, 44, the stone in that prophecy being identified with that mentioned in Ps. 118, Isa. 8, and with Christ himself. In addition to the striking fulfillment in the case of the Jewish rulers, there is an obvious application to all who oppose Christ, who take offence at him as the corner-stone."—Schaff.

They perceived that he spake against them.—"A second time they had been compelled to an admission, which fatally, out of their own mouths, condemned themselves : they had confessed with their own lips that it would be in accordance with God's justice to deprive them of their exclusive rights, and to give them to the Gentiles."—Farrar. "They now perceived, if not before, that the parable referred to them ; their determination to kill him became fixed (see Mark 12 : 12 ; Luke 20 : 19). Avoiding open violence, because the multitude held him for a prophet, they welcomed treachery, and at last carried the multitude with them."—Schaff.

The kingdom of heaven is like unto a certain king.—"Mark states (12 : 12) that, after the parable of the wicked husbandmen, the rulers 'left him and went their way ;' hence this parable (peculiar to Matthew) was not spoken directly to the rulers. Ver. 1, however, indicates that it was aimed at their thoughts and designs. The parable in Luke 14 : 15-24 ('the great supper') resembles this one which is properly called, 'the marriage of the king's son,' but with essential differences. The former was delivered in Perea, at the house of a Pharisee, and was occasioned by an exclamation of one who sat at meat with him. The one was a supper given by a man of wealth ; this a marriage feast given by a king. In the former case the infinite goodness and grace of the Lord is brought out ; here judgment is

Chap. XXXVIII.

Matt. 22 : 3-5.

Apr. J.C. 34.

the wedding : and they would not come. Again, he sent forth other servants, saying, Tell them which are bidden, Behold, I have prepared my dinner : my oxen and my fatlings are killed, and all things are ready : come unto the marriage.

But they made light of it, and went their ways, one made prominent. The twofold invitation : 1. Preparatory (through the centuries of Jewish history). 2. Peremptory, at the time of the wedding (when the New Dispensation was ushered in). The twofold rejection : 1. by indifference (ver. 5); 2. by persecution (ver. 6). The twofold punishment : 1. on the persons ; 2. on the place of the persecutors. The invitation to the Gentiles : 1. without any preliminary (ver. 9) ; 2. universal (ver. 10). The twofold sifting : 1. through the invitation ; 2. at the feast itself (vers. 11-14). The excuses of indifference (ver. 5), the speechlessness of self-righteous profession. The wedding feast implies the offer of the wedding garment."—Schaff.

A marriage.—"A marriage feast ;" so the Greek and the sequel imply. Such feasts lasted several days, Judg. 14 : 10, 12. Some suppose that 'an inaugural feast' is meant. On that day the oriental kings were considered as solemnly united to their country, which is compared to an espoused woman.

Sent forth his servants.—"It was the custom among the ancients for the guests to be twice invited ; or rather first invited, that they might prepare themselves, and then summoned a short time previous to the banquet, that they might be there at the proper time. The first invitation to the Jews was given by the prophets, down to John the Baptist ; the second afterward by the apostles and other disciples in succession. To this custom Solomon alludes, in a beautiful parable of the accessibility of wisdom to those who are disposed to seek it, Prov. 9 : 1-5."—Bloomfield. "I should rather see in [these invitations] only a testimony to the long-suffering and patience of God, in repeating and re-repeating the Gospel message, as I should see in the end of the parable a justification for refusing to cast pearls before the swine that trample them under foot and turn again to rend the giver."—Abbott.

Fatlings.—"It was agreeable to the simplicity of the ancient ages to mention these as the chief parts of a royal entertainment. Thus in Homer and other ancient writers we see princes of the first rank and dignity feasting each other with nothing but the flesh of oxen, sheep, and swine. Compare Isa. 25 : 6."—Doddridge.

Chap. XXXVIII.

Matt. 22 : 6-11.

Apr. J.C. 34.

to his farm, another to his merchandise. And the remnant took his servants, and entreated them spitefully, and slew them.

But when the king heard thereof, he was wroth : and he sent forth his armies, and destroyed those murderers, and burned up their city. Then saith he to his servants, The wedding is ready, but they which were bidden were not worthy. Go ye therefore into the highways, and as many as ye shall find, bid to the marriage. So those servants went out into the highways and gathered together all as many as they found, both bad and good : and the wedding was furnished with guests. And when the king came in to see the guests, he saw

One to his farm, another to his merchandise.—"The first would enjoy what he already possesses ; the second would acquire what is as yet only in anticipation. The first represents the rich ; the second those that would be rich (1 Tim. 6 : 9 with 17)."—Trench.

But the rest.—Representing the fanatical rulers of the Jews, the Pharisees.

Treated them shamefully, and slew them.—"Literally fulfilled in case of the apostles and evangelists. Indifference often passes into hostility, as the more consistent attitude."—Schaff. "Some sinners are satisfied with merely neglecting religion ; others proceed against it with open violence and bitter malice."—Bloomfield.

He sent forth his armies.—"This points out in the plainest terms the Roman armies under Vespasian and Titus, which, not many years after this was spoken, besieged Jerusalem, and destroyed the city with an immense number of its inhabitants. This terrible devastation our Lord here predicts in general terms (as afterwards more particularly at Matt. 24), and represents, as the judgment of God on this perverse and obstinate people, for their rejection of the Christian religion, their savage treatment of the apostles and their associates, and their many other atrocious crimes."—Grcewell.

The highways.—"More literally, the confluence of the ways, that is, the open squares and market places where the people would naturally assemble."—Abbott.

Chap. XXXVIII.

Matt. 22 : 11-14.

Apr. J.C. 34.

there a man which had not on a wedding garment : and he saith unto him, Friend, how camest thou in hither, not having a wedding-garment ? And he was speechless. Then said the king to the servants, Bind him hand and foot, and take him away, and cast him into outer darkness : there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth. For many are called, but few are chosen.

Had not on a wedding-garment.—"It is a custom at the present day in the East for the host to present his guests with robes of honor. A story is told in Trench of a vizier slain for failing to wear such a robe, his failure being accounted a mark of disrespect. It is certain that robes were an important part of oriental wealth (Josh. 7 : 21 ; Judg. 14 : 12 ; James 5 : 2), and were often given as marks of peculiar favor (Gen. 41 : 42 ; 45 : 22 ; 1 Sam. 18 : 4 ; 2 King 5 : 5 ; Dan. 5 : 7 ; Esther 6 : 8), and probably were given on state occasions to guests."—Abbott.

And the wedding was furnished with guests.—"The Jews, by their rejection of the Gospel, did not frustrate the grace of God. Besides the remarkable fulfillment in the early Christian centuries, there is a reference to the church as gathered ever since from all parts of the world, of 'bad and good,' and containing some without 'a wedding garment.'"—Schaff.

The king came in to see the guests.—By this circumstance ancient manners are accurately depicted. Grotius says that when great persons gave magnificent banquets, they used, when their guests were seated, to enter the hall of entertainment.

Friend.—The original does not imply special friendship : it was a common form of address. Matt. 20 : 3 ; 26 : 50.

The servants.—"A different word from that used before, referring not to the 'servants' who invited, nor to the guests, but probably to angels, as ministers of judgment."—Schaff.

Outer darkness.—"The Jews generally had their great feasts in the evening : those cast out are therefore in darkness."—Burder. "The lesson is that no one can enter heaven except through humility and a change of nature ; that he must not only accept Jesus Christ openly, but put on the Lord Jesus Christ ; and that there is discrimination in God's kingdom, but to be exercised by the king, not by his servants (Matt. 13 : 29, 30), and at the door of the feast, not in the invitation."—Abbott.

For many are called, but few are chosen.—This is the text of the parable. It was a proverbial expression (see Matt. 20 : 16). Here the application is more general.

Matt. 22 : 15, 16 ; Mark 12 : 13 ; Luke 20 : 20.

Then went the Pharisees, and took counsel how they might entangle him in his talk. And they watched him. And they sent out unto him their disciples, with the Herodians, as spies, which should feign themselves

Then went the Pharisees.—"To bad men nothing is so maddening as the exhibition of their own self-deception. So great was the hardly-concealed fury of the Jewish hierarchy, that they would gladly have seized him that very hour. Fear restrained them. . . . But his enemies held another council—at this time they seem to have held them almost daily—to see if they could not make one more combined, systematic, overwhelming effort 'to entangle him in his talk,' to convict him of ignorance or of error, to shake his credit with the multitude, or embroil him in dangerous relations toward the civil authority."
—Farrar.

"Never were their craft and inveterate hostility more strikingly shown than in these attempts to draw something from his own mouth which might serve as the basis of accusation against him. The first question would have been full of peril to one less wise than himself, for it appealed to the most lively political susceptibilities of the people. No zealous Jew could admit that tribute was rightly due to Cæsar, and much less could one who claimed to be the Messiah admit this ; for it was to confess that he was the vassal of the Romans, a confession utterly incompatible with Messianic claims. Yet if he denied this, the Herodians were at hand to accuse him of treason, an accusation which the Romans were always quick to hear. But he avoided the artfully contrived snare by referring the question to their own discernment. God had chosen them for his people, and he alone should be their king, and therefore it was not right for them to be under heathen domination. Yet, because of their sins, God had given them into the hands of their enemies, and they were now under Roman rule. This fact they must recognize, and in view of this they must fulfill all duties, those to Cæsar as well as those to God."—Andrews.

Their disciples.—"Some of their younger scholars, who, (already adepts in hypocrisy) were to approach him as though in all the guileless simplicity of an inquiring spirit. They evidently designed to raise the impression that a dispute had occurred between them and the Herodians, and that they desired to settle it by referring the decision of the question at issue to the final and higher authority of the Great Prophet."—Farrar.

With the Herodians.—"They are mentioned only here and

Matt. 22 : 16, 17 ; Mark 12 : 14, 15 ; Luke 20 : 20-22.

just men, that they might take hold of his words, that so they might deliver him unto the power and authority of the governor. And when they were Concerning Tribute to Cæsar. come, they say unto him, Master, we know that thou art true, and teachest the way of God in truth,—and carest for no man : for thou regardest not the person of men ; tell us therefore, What thinkest thou ? Is it lawful for us to give tribute unto Cæsar, or no ? Shall we give, or shall we not give ?

in Mark 12 : 13, etc., and Mark 3 : 6. The reference to the leaven of Herod in Mark 8 : 15 contains perhaps an indirect allusion to them. They are not described by Josephus or any contemporary writers. Their character can only be conjectured from their name. They were probably a political rather than an ecclesiastical party, the adherents of the Herodian family, who were the creatures of Cæsar. The Herodians, therefore, would have been ready to prefer an accusation against any one who counseled refusal to pay the Roman tax.”—Abbott.

Master, we know, etc.—“ They purported to be true inquirers, to desire counsel, and by flattery sought to draw him on to a repudiation of the Roman tax. To them is applicable the proverb which Alford quotes : ‘ The devil never lies so foully as when he tells the truth. ’ ”—Abbott. “ Next to hypocrisy in religion, there is nothing worse than hypocrisy in friendship.”—Bishop Hall.

And carest for no man.—“ His independence and sincerity had just been demonstrated, but their acknowledgment of these peculiarities was to tempt him : as if one party would say, You do not care for the Roman authorities ; the other, You do not care for the authority of the Pharisees and Jewish rulers.”—Schaff.

Thou regardest not the person of men.—Comp. Lev. 19 : 15 ; Jude 16 ; Deut. 16 : 19 ; 2 Sam. 14 : 14 ; Acts 10 : 34 ; James 2 : 1, 3, 9 ; 1 Pet. 1 : 17.

Is it lawful to give tribute.—“ In order to understand the insidious nature of the question here proposed to Jesus, it must be observed, that the Jews at this time being under the dominion of the Romans, paid them an annual tribute in money as an acknowledgment of their subjection. The annual capitation tax, or tribute money, imposed by the Romans on the Jews was a denarius, which tax they bore with great impatience. Judas

Matt. 22 : 18-21 ; Mark 12 : 15-17 ; Luke 20 : 23-25.

But Jesus perceived their hypocrisy and craftiness, and said, Why tempt ye me, ye hypocrites? Show me the tribute-money, that I may see it.

And they brought unto him a penny.

And he saith unto them, Whose is this image, and superscription?

They say unto him, Cæsar's.

Then saith he unto them, Render therefore unto Cæsar, the things which are Cæsar's; and unto God, the things that are God's.

of Galilee, about ten years after the birth of Christ, first stirred up the people to resist this tax, saying it was contrary to their religion to acknowledge any other sovereign than God.—See Acts 5 : 37. He is supposed to have been of the Pharisees."—Bloomfield.

Bring me the tribute money.—"They would not be likely to carry with them the hated Roman coinage with its heathen symbols, though they might have been at once able to produce from their girdles the Temple shekel. But they would only have to step outside the Court of the Gentiles, and borrow from the money-changers' tables a current Roman coin. While the people stood round in wondering silence they brought him a denarius, and put it in his hand. On one side were stamped the haughty, beautiful features of the Emperor Tiberius, with all the wicked scorn upon the lip; on the obverse his title of Pontifex Maximus."—Farrar. "It was a determination of their own schools that wherever any king's coin was current, it was a proof of that country's subjection to his government."—Hales.

Render unto Cæsar.—"Rather here, 'Give back to Cæsar.' Compare for similar use of the same verb, Luke 4 : 20 ; 9 : 42. They ask, 'Is it lawful to give?' he replies, 'Give back.' Since they accepted in the coinage of Cæsar the benefits of his government, they were bound to give back a recompense in tribute."—Abbott.

The things that are God's.—"Not the temple tribute merely, but all things. As the acceptance of Cæsar's government involves the duty of tax-paying to him, so the acceptance of every good and perfect gift from above involves the duty of supreme allegiance to God."—Abbott. Alford suggests: "It can hardly have been recognized by the auditors, but it is perhaps none the less involved, though indirectly, in the

Matt. 22 : 22, 23 ; Mark 12 : 17, 18 ; Luke 20 : 26, 27.

And they could not take hold of his words before the people : and they marveled at his answer, held their peace, left him, and went their way.

The same day came to him certain of the Sadducees second clause of Christ's reply : ' Man is the coinage and bears the image of God (Gen. 1 : 27) ; and this image is not lost by the fall (Gen. 9 : 6 ; Acts 17 : 29 ; James 3 : 9). We owe then ourselves to God ; and this solemn duty is implied, of giving ourselves to him, with all that we have and are.' " " In like manner as Cæsar demands of us the stamp of his likeness, so does God also [demand the stamp of his likeness]. And as we render money to the one, so we give our souls to the other—our souls enlightened and sealed with the light of his countenance." —Bede.

" This answer settles in principle, though not in detail, the relations of Church and State. Both are of divine origin and authority : the one for the temporal, the other for the eternal welfare of men. They ought to be kept distinct and independent in their respective spheres, without mixture and confusion, and yet without antagonism, but rather in friendly relation in view of their common origin in God, and their common end and completion in ' the kingdom of glory ' where God shall be all in all." —Schaff. " Nothing can more fully reveal the depth of hypocrisy in these Pharisaic questioners than the fact that, in spite of the divine answer, and in spite of their own secret and cherished convictions, they yet made it a ground of clamorous accusation against Jesus, that he had ' forbidden to give tribute unto Cæsar ' ! " —Farrar.

The same day came to him certain of the Sadducees. " Undeterred by this striking failure [of the Pharisees], the Sadducees thought that they might have better success. There was something more supercilious and offhand in the question which they proposed, and they came in a spirit of less burning hatred, but of more sneering scorn." —Farrar. " The Sadducees were the materialists and infidels of the first century. They denied not merely the resurrection of the body, but also the immateriality and immortality of the soul (Acts 23 : 8)." —Abbott. Their opinions were peculiar. " They believed that besides God there was no other spiritual being, whether good or bad. They rejected the doctrine of fate, or of an overruling Providence, and maintained that the events which happened depended on the free and unconstrained actions of men. They held that the traditions were not binding, but did not, as some suppose, receive merely

Matt. 22 : 23-28 ; Mark 12 : 18-23 ; Luke 20 : 27-33.

(which deny that there is any resurrection) and they asked him, saying, Master, Moses wrote unto us, If a man die, having a wife, and without chil- Of Marriage in the Resurrection.
dren, his brother shall marry his wife, and raise up seed unto his brother. Now there were with us seven brethren : and the first took a wife, and died without children, and left his wife unto his brother. And the second took her to wife, and he died childless. And the third took her ; and in like manner the seven also : and they left no children, and died. Last of all the woman died also. In the resurrection therefore, when they shall rise, whose wife shall she be of the seven ? for the seven had her to wife.

the Pentateuch, and reject all the other books of the Old Testament. In the progress of time they appear to have admitted the existence of angels, and also to have embraced the belief of the immortality of the soul ; and in the eighth century they were distinguished as a sect, merely by rejecting the authority of traditions. Whence they were at length called Caraites, a sect of comparatively recent origin, as they are not mentioned by Josephus."—Jahn. See note on page 69.

Moses wrote unto us.—Deut. 25 : 5, "freely quoted ; comp. the regulations added in that chapter. Such a marriage was called a Levirate marriage. The object was to preserve families—a matter of great importance in the Jewish economy. The first-born son would be registered as the son of the dead brother."—Schaff.

Whose wife shall she be of the seven ?—"The point of the entangling question is now evident. They had quoted the law of Moses and then given an example of obedience to it, to prove the absurdity of the doctrine of the resurrection. Our Lord at once rebukes and denies their false assumption in regard to human relations in the future state."—Schaff. "The question of the Sadducees was in keeping with the sceptical, scoffing character of that sect. Apparently, it was not so much designed to awake popular hatred against him as to cast ridicule upon him, and also upon their rivals, the Pharisees, by showing the absurd consequences of one of their most cherished dogmas—the resurrection of the dead. Perhaps, also, they were curious to see how he would meet an argument to which their rivals

Matt. 22 : 29, 30 ; Mark 12 : 24, 25 ; Luke 20 : 35, 36.

And Jesus answering, said unto them, Ye do err, not knowing the scriptures, nor the power of God. For when they shall rise from the dead, they neither marry, nor are given in marriage ; but are as the angels which are in heaven. The children of this world marry, and are given in marriage : but they which shall be accounted worthy to obtain that world, and the resurrection from the dead, neither marry, nor are given in marriage : neither can they die any more : for they are had been able to give no satisfactory answer."—Andrews. "If you compare the Sadducee and the Pharisee, and observe how one did pare from, and the other patch to, God's Word, how the one bent to atheism, the other to superstition, you will see how hardly men keep a mean either in knowledge or conversation ; some overreach, some reach not home."—Bishop Lake. "I lay it down for a rule, that, when much ingenuity is required to gain an argument credit, that argument is unsound at bottom."—Cowper.

Ye do err, not knowing the Scriptures—that is, not understanding. "Two frequent causes of religious error are here hinted at : first, a failure to understand the Scripture, which we often read, as they did, either superficially and carelessly, or blinded by our theological prejudices ; second, a failure to realize the power of God, it being a common error of theological and philosophical reasoning to limit the divine power to those forms of its exercise with which we are acquainted."—Abbott. "Our Saviour saith, You err, not knowing the Scriptures nor the power of God ; laying before us two books, or volumes, to study, if we will be secured from error : first, the volume of Scriptures, which reveals the will of God, and then the volume of creatures, which expresses his power ; whereof the latter is a key unto the former, not only opening our understanding to conceive the true sense of the Scriptures by the general notions of reason and rules of speech ; but besides, chiefly opening our belief, in drawing us into a due meditation of the omnipotency of God, the characters whereof are chiefly signed and engraved upon his works."—Lord Bacon. "Enthusiasm is wont to expatiate on the condition of the departed, above all other subjects, and with a wild particularity. The Koran is half made up of such descriptions. How different is the solemn reserve here maintained by our Saviour !"—Paley.

Matt. 22 : 30-33 ; Mark 12 : 25-27 ; Luke 20 : 36-40.

equal unto the angels, and are the children of God, being the children of the resurrection. But as touching the resurrection of the dead, that the dead are raised, even Moses showed. Have ye not read that which was spoken unto you by God, in the book of Moses, how in the bush God spake unto him, saying, I am the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob ? God is not the God of the dead, but of the living : for all live unto him. Ye therefore do greatly err.

And when the multitude heard this, they were astonished at his doctrine.

Then certain of the Scribes answering, said, Master, thou hast well said. And after that, they durst not ask him any question at all.

In the bush.—"That is, in the story of the burning bush. The Jewish doctors in that age were accustomed to quote any portion of Scripture, in this brief way, by mentioning some most remarkable subject there treated on."—Jablonsky. So Rom. 11 : 3. In a similar manner the ancient Greek critics used to cite from Homer, and some other authors of celebrity."—Bloomfield.

The God of Abraham.—"The argument derived from this designation of God in favor of the immortality of the soul, against the Sadducees who denied it, reveals the marvelous insight of our Lord into the deepest meaning of the Scriptures. The personal ever-living God calls himself the God—not of the dead, which would be dishonoring—but of those who live in perpetual communion with him, to whom he has communicated his own immortality."—Schaff.

For all live unto him.—"Peculiar to Luke. The emphasis rests upon 'all,' which may be taken in its widest sense ; all creatures, whether living or dead, angels or men, live in the sight of God."—Schaff. "The meaning appears to be that only to men do the departed seem dead ; in the sight of God all are living."—Abbott.

They were astonished at his doctrine.—"Jesus Christ speaks of the sublimest subjects in a manner as simple as if he had never considered them ; but nevertheless his expressions are so exact as to show that he had thoroughly weighed them. Such accuracy, with such simplicity, is admirable."—Pascal.

XXXVIII. Matt. 22. 34-37 ; Mark 12: 28, 29.

J.C. 34.

But when the Pharisees had heard that he had put the Sadducees to silence, they were gathered together.

The Great Commandment. Then one of the Scribes, a lawyer, came, and having heard them reasoning together, and perceiving that he had answered them well, asked, tempting him, Master, which is the first commandment of all, the great commandment in the law?

Jesus answered him, The first of all the commandments is, Hear, O Israel ; The Lord our God is one

" But death itself more readily yielded to the power of Christ than did man's infidelity."—Bengel.

A lawyer.—That is, one versed in the rabbinical laws ; a Jewish theologian. In Mark he is called a Scribe. The latter phrase appears to have been an official designation of a recognized teacher ; the former an unofficial designation of one learned in Jewish laws, both scriptural and traditional.—Abbott.

Tempting him.—The statements of Mark (12 : 28) and Luke (20 : 39) do not indicate any specially hostile purpose on the part of this "lawyer." Such a purpose seems to be out of keeping with the hearty response of the "scribe" and our Lord's commendatory words to him (Mark 12 : 32-44.)

Which is the great commandment?—"The question involved a matter of no little controversy among the Jewish doctors, as involving the comparative importance of different precepts ; some maintaining the pre-eminence of one, some of another. Some said, 'sacrifices ;' some, 'circumcision ;' some, 'the law of the Sabbath ;' some, 'the law of meats, washings, phylacteries,' etc. Only, while they distinguished the divine precepts into great and small, they constantly gave the preference to the ceremonial ones. Christ, however, decided in favor of the moral law, yet not to the neglect of the ceremonial."—Bloomfield. The fearfully belittling tendencies of Pharisaical legalism may be inferred from the following statement : "The Jews enumerated six hundred and thirteen ordinances ; three hundred and sixty-five prohibitions, according to the days of the year ; two hundred and twenty-eight commandments, according to the parts of the body."—Braune.

Hear, O Israel, the Lord our God is one Lord, and Thou shalt love the Lord thy God, etc. "The language of this is not that of mere emphatic iteration. Each word has its own peculiar significance. The heart is the seat of the affections and emo-

XXXVIII. Matt. 22 : 37-39 ; Mark 12 : 30, 31.

J.C. 34.

Lord : and thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and with all thy strength : this is the first and great commandment. And the second is like unto it, 'Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. There is none other tions. God calls not merely for obedience, but for love. Comp. Prov. 23 : 26 ; Jer. 3 : 14. The word soul should rather be rendered life. This is unquestionably the primary significance of the Greek, which is derived from a verb meaning to breathe. It signifies the vital principle, and in the N. T. generally, either physical life, as in Matt. 2 : 20 ; Acts 20 : 24 ; 27 : 10 ; or all that is embodied in our word life in its deeper significance. It would generally be better translated by the word life. . . . Here the command is, Love with thy whole life—that is, love must not only manifest itself in feeling ; it must rule the whole life, by ruling its source and springs. John 14 : 15, 23 ; 2 Cor. 5 : 14 ; 1 John 2 : 5 ; 4 : 16 illustrate this command. The mind embraces the intellectual powers and activities, whether employed in study, in business, or in social activity. A supreme love toward God must be the inspiration of the whole mental life, and furnish its purpose. Parallel to this is Prov. 12 : 5 ; Ps. 119 : 15, 97 ; 2 Cor. 10 : 5 ; Phil. 1 : 9. Mark adds with all thy strength. That is, the love must be one of enthusiasm and power—not a sentiment, but a working force. Parallel to this is Eccles. 9 : 10 ; Rom. 12 : 11 ; Eph. 6 : 6, 7 ; Col. 3 : 23. The commandment is quoted by Christ from Deut. 6 : 4, 5."—Abbott. "The reason must be a reason acting in the spirit of love ; the conscience must be a conscience acting in the atmosphere of love ; the taste must be a taste acting in the spirit and atmosphere of love—love to God and love to man. The appetites and passions, and every other faculty, in all their power and variety and versatility, may act, but they will act as steeds that feel the one rein, which goes back to the hands of one driver whose name is Love."—Beecher. "We learn to love God by giving ourselves to him, by serving him, by doing his will. Love to God is thus born of self-dedication. Having learned how to love man without selfishness, we can love God in the same way."—James Freeman Clarke.

Thy neighbor as thyself.—On, Who is my neighbor ? see Luke 10 : 25, and James 1 : 27. "Man ought to love his neighbor, 1. not as he does love himself, but as he ought to love himself ; 2. not in the same degree, but after the same manner, i.e., freely and readily, sincerely and unfeign-

XXXVIII.

Mark 12 : 32-34 ; Matt. 22 : 40.

J.C. 34.

commandment greater than these. On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets.

And the Scribe said unto him, Well, Master, thou hast said the truth : for there is one God ; and there is none other but he. And to love him with all the heart, and with all the understanding, and with all the soul, and with all the strength, and to love his neighbor as himself, is more than all whole burnt-offerings and sacrifices.

And when Jesus saw that he answered discreetly, he said unto him, Thou art not far from the kingdom of God. And no man after that durst ask him any question.

edly, tenderly and compassionately, constantly and perseveringly."—W. Burkitt. "Cases arise where man ought to love his neighbor more than his life, physical life, and has done so, sacrificing it for his fellows, his country, and the church, in imitation of the example of Christ and the martyrs."—Riddle. "To such a father, who overwhelms me with his inestimable loving-kindness, must I not liberally, cheerfully, and with my whole heart do every thing which I shall know to be pleasing in his sight? I, therefore, after the example of Christ, and as far as I am capable of imitating him, would give up myself to my neighbor, as Christ has given up himself for me. I am determined to do nothing in this life, except what I shall see to be conducive to his good, since by faith I myself abound in all blessings through Christ."—Luther.

Not far from the kingdom of God.—"A Scribe who could so far overcome his prejudices as to see the supremacy of the moral law as resulting from the love of God and man, had already gone beyond the greatest obstacle to his reception of Christ's doctrine, and was intellectually prepared for the kingdom of God."—Eggleston. "Intellectually on the right road, nearer to the kingdom than a mere formalist could be, recognizing the spirituality of the law, perhaps conscious of the folly of self-righteousness ; but, though standing as it were at the door, still outside."—Alexander. "While the worst of his opponents were unable to convict him of an error, or betray him into a mistake, the best of them, when brought into direct communication with him on the most important subjects, found themselves almost in the position of his own disciples?"—Riddle.

XXXVIII.

Mark 12 : 41-44 ; Luke 21 : 1-4.

J.C. 34.

And Jesus sat over against the treasury, and he looked up and saw how the people cast money into the treasury : and many that were rich cast in much. And there came a certain poor widow, and she threw in two mites, which make a farthing. And he called unto him his disciples, and saith unto them, Verily The Widow's Mites. I say unto you that this poor widow hath cast more in than all they which have cast into the treasury : For all they did cast in of their abundance ; but she of her want did cast in all that she had, even all her living.

The treasury.—The treasury was a part of the temple, in the court of the women. In it were chests, with a large open mouth, in the shape of a trumpet, for receiving the contributions of the people for the service of the temple, called, Luke 21 : 4, "the offerings of God." In John 8 : 20, Jesus is mentioned as teaching in this part of the temple.

Two mites.—"The 'mite' (lepton) was the smallest Jewish copper coin. The Greek name means 'fish-scale,' suggesting its diminutive size. Its value was about one tenth of an English penny, one fifth of a cent.—Schaff.

"Two mites, two drops, yet all her house and land
Fall from a steady heart, though trembling hand ;
The others' wanton wealth foams high and brave ;
The others cast away—she only gave."—Richard Crashaw.

"This incident, witnessed by Jesus at such a time, resembles a flower which he comes upon all at once in the desert of official devotion, the sight and perfume of which make him leap with joy."—Godet.

"Piteous indeed would be the condition of the poor if their poverty shut them out from the noblest privilege which God has bestowed upon mankind—the privilege of helping each other, the privilege of showing Christian charity in the various exercises of brotherly love. But it does not. The poorest of you may do as much (what in the eyes of God will be accounted as much) as the richest can do. You, of your poverty, may give your all ; and they at the utmost can do no more."—A. W. Hare.

She of her want did cast in all that she had.—All her present subsistence. She did not look for human applause, but yet her deed will carry her memory down to the remotest ages. She did not, like the Pharisees, seek for the praise of men, but

Chap. XXXVIII.

John 12 : 20, 21.

Apr. J.C. 34.

And there were certain Greeks among them that came up to worship at the feast : the same came therefore to Philip, which was of Bethsaida of Galilee, and desired him, saying, Sir, we would see Jesus.

Certain Greeks

she received the praise of Him who "spake as never man spake." By this we are taught that he estimates gifts not by what they are, but by what they cost—the self-denial which is involved in the giving. "One coin out of a little," says St. Ambrose, "is better than a treasure out of much ; for it is not considered how much is given, but how much remains behind." "The tender father values his child's kiss, because it is a gush of love from the child's heart. Thus God approves even of the simple wish when nothing is done, because he sees the heart that desires to do it."—Norman Macleod. "The divine eye looks upon high and low differently from that of man. He looks upon those as highest who nearest approach his divinity, and upon those as lowest who are farthest from it."—Sir Thomas Browne. "What more tender, more solemnly affecting, more profoundly pathetic than this charity, this offering to God of a farthing ! We know nothing of her name, her family, or her tribe. We only know that she was a poor woman and a widow, of whom there is nothing left upon record but this sublimely simple story, that when the rich men came to cast their proud offerings into the treasury, this poor woman came also, and cast in her two mites, which made a farthing ! And that example, thus made the subject of divine commendation, has been read and told, and has gone abroad everywhere, and sunk deep into a hundred million of hearts, since the commencement of the Christian era, and has done more good than could be accomplished by a thousand marble palaces, because it was charity mingled with true benevolence, given in the fear, the love, and the service of God ; because it was charity that had its origin in religious feeling ; because it was a gift to the honor of God."—Webster.

Certain Greeks.—"The visit of the Greeks to him is mentioned only by John (12 : 20-36). Some place it upon the evening of the triumphal entry. (Meyer, Alford, Lange, and others.) But the Lord's language fits better to the final departure from the temple than to the time of the entry. Besides, if he was now in the court of the women, it explains the request of the Greeks to see him ; for if he had been in the outer court, all could have seen him ; but into the inner court they could not come."—Andrews. They probably "belonged to the Greek nationality, and had adopted the Hebrew religion—that is, were Greek proselytes."—Abbott.

Chap. XXXVIII.

John 12 : 21-25.

Apr. J.C. 34.

would see Jesus. Philip cometh and telleth Andrew : and again Andrew and Philip tell Jesus.

And Jesus answered them, saying, The hour is come, that the Son of man should be glorified. Verily, verily, I say unto you, Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone : but if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit. He that loveth his life shall lose Andrew and Philip tell Jesus.—"The two were of the same city (John 1 : 44). The fact that Philip takes Andrew with him is one of the not-unfrequent indications of the awe with which, despite the fullness and even familiarity of his love, Christ inspired his most intimate disciples (Luke 9 : 45 ; Mark 9 : 32, etc.). So Bengel : "Philip feared to introduce the Greeks alone ; with a friend he ventured to do so."—Abbott.

The hour is come.—"In this application of these Greek proselytes, Christ sees a prophetic indication of the time when, with a profounder meaning, the Gentile world will everywhere put forth a request to see Jesus, when, being lifted up, he will draw all men unto him, when they will come from the north and the south, the east and the west, to sit down with him in his kingdom (Matt. 8 : 11), when he will break down the partition wall between Jew and Gentile (Ephes. 2 : 14), and gather into one nation the dispersed children of God (John 11 : 52 ; Col. 3 : 11 ; Rev. 7 : 9). The term Son of man is here, as always when used by Christ in reference to himself, equivalent to the Messiah."—Abbott.

Verily, verily, I say unto you.—A customary formula of introduction to an important saying, here used by Christ to emphasize the truth that the Messiah's death must precede this ingathering of the Gentiles and prepare the way for it.

Except a kernel of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone.—"In the granary it is safe, but useless. Its death is the precursor of its usefulness. Paul employs the same figure in a different connection in 1 Cor. 15 : 36. Christ embodies it in the Lord's Supper, which reminds us of this law of self-sacrifice. It is the wheat ground to powder that makes the bread, and the body bruised that makes the bread of life ; it is the grape crushed that makes the wine, and the blood poured out as a libation that makes the wine of life. This truth of self-sacrifice symbolized by nature is one of the universal laws of spiritual life."—Abbott.

He that loveth his life shall lose it.—The life or soul is

Chap. XXXVIII.

John 12 : 25-28.

Apr. J.C. 34.

it ; and he that hateth his life in this world shall keep it unto life eternal. If any man serve me, let him follow me ; and where I am, there shall also my servant be : if any man serve me, him will my Father honor. Now is my soul troubled ; and what shall I say ? Father, save me from this hour : but for this cause came I unto this hour. Father, glorify thy name.

indiscriminately rendered by both English words in our English version as the esthetic and intellectual part of man in contrast with the spiritual nature. See note above, page 632. "Lauge points out that this saying involved a condemnation of Hellenism. For what was Greek civilization but human life cultivated from the view-point of enjoyment, and withdrawn from the law of sacrifice."—Godet. The same judgment Paul reaffirms in 1 Cor. 1 : 18-21 ; and it is equally applicable as a judgment of modern irreligious culture. Culture without religion destroys what it would preserve.

If any man would serve me, let him follow me.—"This is Christ's answer to the request of the Greeks. Service of Christ is to be sought, not by secret interviews, not by sacred and saintly communings, which he gives to whom he will, but by practical following of him in a life of daily self-sacrifice for others."—Abbott.

Now is my soul troubled.—Literally, stirred up, in conflict. In 11 : 33 it is said that Jesus was indignant in spirit ; here, that his soul is in conflict. At the grave of Lazarus the higher spiritual nature was indignant at the exhibition of formalism and false pretence ; here the lower and earthly nature was in conflict between the instincts of self preservation and the impulse of love and duty. "A horror of death and an ardor of obedience concurred."—Bengel.

And what shall I say ? Father, save me from this hour.—"If the common punctuation and interpretation be here adopted, we must suppose that, in the struggle of contending emotions, our Lord first utters and then retracts a prayer. Yet this view, as it is not a little objectionable, so neither is it necessary ; for we may, with many of the best commentators, ancient and modern, place a mark of interrogation after 'this hour,' thus supposing two questions, as follows : 'What shall I say ? [Shall I say] Father, deliver me from this hour ? But for this cause came I unto this hour,' i.e., to meet this hour, or time of suffering. Comp. Mark 14 : 35. Thus, it seems, when about involuntarily to utter a petition, he is checked by a reflection on the end for which he came into the world ; and the natural emotions of fear soon subside into a prayer for the furtherance of his Father's glory, in any way that may seem good to him. — Bloomfield. "The contrast between the two petitions is explained by the precedent declaration, 'Now is my soul in conflict' the nature of that conflict is hinted at in the twofold prayer, the first hypothetical, the second final. Shall I ask my Father to save me from this hour? (That is the suggestion of the natural instincts.) No! for this cause came I unto this hour. Rather, Father, glorify thy name. (That is the victory of the spiritual nature.)"—Abbott. "The struggle is like one of those fissures in its crust, which enables science to fathom the bowels of the earth. It lets us read the very inmost depths of the Lord's being."—Geddes.

Then came there a voice from heaven, saying, I have both glorified it, and will glorify it again.

Father, glorify thy name.—Comp. Matt. 26 : 39.

"With all his sufferings full in view,
And woes to us unknown,
Forth to the task his spirit flew ;
'Twas love that urged him on.

"Lord, we return thee what we can :
Our hearts shall sound abroad
Salvation to the dying man,
And to the rising God !

"And, while thy bleeding glories here
Engage our wondering eyes,
We learn our lighter cross to bear,
And hasten to the skies."—William Couper.

Then came there a voice from heaven.—"The critics since, as the people then, have discussed whether this was really an articulate voice, speaking words, or only a sound of thunder which Christ interpreted as a divine response to his prayer. The word voice is not conclusive, because it signifies sometimes an inarticulate sound, as of a trumpet, chariots, waters, thunder, and the like (Matt. 24 : 31 ; 1 Cor. 14 : 7, 8 ; John 3 : 8 ; Rev. 9 : 9 ; 6 : 1 ; 14 : 2 ; 18 : 22, etc.). . . . But the plain implication of the narrative is that this was an articulate voice, the words of which were understood by others than Jesus, though not by all. So at Paul's conversion his companions heard the sound, but understood not the words of the voice that spake to him" (Acts 9 : 7 with 22 : 9)."—Abbott. "Probably, the capacity to understand the voice was dependent upon each man's spiritual condition and receptivity. To Jesus, and, perhaps, to the apostles and disciples, it was an articulate voice ; to

Chap. XXXVIII.

John 12 : 29-34.

Apr. J.C. 34.

The people therefore that stood by, and heard it, said that it thundered : others said, An angel spake to him.

Jesus answered and said, This voice came not because of me, but for your sakes. Now is the judgment of this world : now shall the prince of this world be cast out. And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me. This he said, signifying what death he should die.

The people answered him, We have heard out of the others it was indistinct, yet they recognized it as a voice, perhaps of an angel ; to others still, it was mere sound, as if it thundered. Townsend would make it an answer to the Greeks who desired to see Jesus, or, at least, spoken in their hearing. We find, however, its true significance if we compare it with those other testimonies of the Father to him at his baptism and at his transfiguration (Matt. 3 : 17 ; 17 : 5).”—Andrews.

I have both glorified it and will glorify it again.—"The Father had glorified his name by giving Jesus daily and hourly the power to do and to bear all that had been laid on him up to that moment ; and he would glorify it again by continuing to give him the power to do and to bear all that should be laid on him to the end."—Abbott.

Others said an angel spake to him.—The Jews knew from their scriptures that in former times God had spoken audibly from the mercy-seat.

The Prince of this world shall be cast out.—"The Prince of this world was a phrase much used by Jewish writers to designate the spiritual monarch of the Gentiles in opposition to the one true God, whom they regarded as in a peculiar sense the God of Israel. Christ employs their language ; he sees in the application of the Greeks for an interview with him a prophecy of the time when Satan will be cast out, and all the kingdoms of this world will become the kingdoms of our Lord and of his Christ."—Abbott. "It does not mean that then his reign over all men should entirely cease, but that then would be the crisis, the grand conflict, in which he should be vanquished, and from that time his kingdom begin to decline, until it should finally cease, and men be free altogether from his dominion." See Luke 10 : 18 ; Col. 1 : 18-20 ; Acts 26 : 18 ; 1 Cor. 15 : 25, 26 ; Rev. 20 : 14.—Greswell.

Chap. XXXVIII.

John 12 : 34, 35.

Apr. J. C. 34.

law that Christ abideth for ever : and how sayest thou, The Son of man must be lifted up ? who is this Son of man ?

Then Jesus said unto them, Yet a little while is the light with you. Walk while ye have the light, lest dark-

Yet a little while is the light with you.—"The commentators generally regard the phrase the light as Christ's designation of himself. So Alford, Godet, Meyer, among the moderns, and Chrysostom and Calvin among the older commentators. But this interpretation entangles the whole sentence. Christ then bids his auditors to walk—that is, 'be not slothful, but spiritually active' (Meyer)—for the two or three days that intervene before his death ; for his death will bring darkness on them, and make it impossible for them to walk intelligently thereafter. The direction is thus deprived of all significance to us, and is contradicted by history ; for the death of Christ brought light, not darkness, and was itself the necessary precursor of highest spiritual activity in all that believe on him. The light here, as in Matt. 6 : 23, is the moral and spiritual nature of man, that which links him to the divine and makes it possible for him to become a child of God. God is the Light of the world (1 John 1 : 5), because he is the fountain, the central sun, which supplies and keeps alive this moral and spiritual nature in man. Christ is the Light of the world (John 9 : 5), because in him this spiritual nature shone out without any dimness from sin or moral infirmity. Christians are lights in the world (Matt. 5 : 14), because this spiritual nature in them is their guide, illuminating them and through them others. If one follows this inner light, it grows brighter and brighter unto perfect day (Prov. 4 : 18) ; if he disobeys it, he quenches it and goes into moral darkness, losing the very power of moral and spiritual discrimination (1 John 2 : 8-11)."—Abbott.

Walk while ye have the light.—"A great deal of time is contracted in opportunity : which is the flower, the cream of time."—Whichcote. "Think not that you shall turn to God when you will, if you will not when you may."—Babington. "Habits of thought are not less tyrannical than other habits, and a time comes when return is impossible, even to the strongest will."—I'net. "One of the strongest natural arguments for Christianity is that in proportion as we rise in spiritual excellence and live in a higher sphere, a stronger sense of certainty in regard to its foundation takes possession of the heart."—T. Starr King.

John 12 : 35, 36; Matt. 22 : 41-44; Mark 12 : 35, 36; Luke 20 : 41-43.

ness come upon you ; for he that walketh in darkness knoweth not whither he goeth. While ye have light, believe in the light, that ye may be the children of light.

While he taught in the temple, and the Pharisees

Christ the Son of David.

were gathered together, Jesus asked them, saying, What think ye of Christ ? whose son is he ?

They say unto him, The son of David.

He saith unto them, How then doth David himself, in the book of Psalms, by the Holy Ghost, call him Lord, saying,

The LORD said unto my Lord,
Sit thou on my right hand,
Till I make thine enemies thy footstool !

What think ye of Christ ?—"The Sanhedrin had now experienced, by the defeat of their cunning stratagems and the humiliation of their vaunted wisdom, that one ray of light from the sunlit hills on which his spirit sat was enough to dissipate, and to pierce through and through, the fogs of wordy contention and empty repetition in which they lived and moved and had their being. But it was well for them to be convinced how easily, had he desired it, he could have employed against them with overwhelming force the very engines which, with results so futile and so disastrous, they had put in play against him. He therefore put to them one simple question, based on their own principles of interpretation, and drawn from a Psalm (the 110th) which they regarded as distinctly Messianic."—Farrar.

The son of David.—"This was the common opinion, and it was true (Luke 1 : 32 ; Rom. 1 : 3), but not the whole truth. It was not generally believed by the Jews that the Messiah should be divine. Jesus was condemned for blasphemy in calling himself the Son of God (Matt. 26 : 63-65). In this colloquy he proves out of the Scripture that the Messiah of prophecy was to be the Son of God."—Abbott.

By the Holy Ghost : "a weighty declaration by our Lord of the inspiration of the prophetic scriptures."—Alford.

The Lord said unto my Lord, etc.—The quotation is from Psalm 110. It is one frequently referred to in the New Testament as prophetic of the Messiah (Acts 2 : 34, etc. ; 1 Cor. 15 : 25 ; Heb. 1 : 13 ; 5 : 6 ; 7 : 17, 21 ; 10 : 13). It is evident, from its

Matt. 22 : 45, 46 ; 23 : 1 ; Mark 12 : 37, 38 ; Luke 20 : 44, 45.

David therefore himself calleth him Lord, and how is he then his son ?

And no man was able to answer him a word, neither durst any man, from that day forth, ask him any more questions. And the common people heard him gladly.

Then in the audience of all the people, Jesus said use here and in these passages, that it was generally so regarded by the Jews. The language of the verse cited (ver. 1) is unambiguous. "There was not any one on earth in the time of David to whom it could be applicable ; any one whom he would call his 'Lord' or superior. If, therefore, the Psalm was written by David, it must have referred to the Messiah, to one whom he owned as his Superior, his Lord, his Sovereign."—Barnes.

Till I make thine enemies thy footstool.—"Alford and Tischendorf, instead of footstool, read under thy feet. Putting the feet on captives taken in war was a common oriental method of symbolizing complete triumph over them (Joshua 10 : 24 ; 2 Sam. 22 : 41). Parallel to this promise is 1 Cor. 15 : 25 and Heb. 10 : 13."—Abbott.

How is he then his son?—"There could be but one answer—because that Son would be divine, not human—David's son by human birth, but David's Lord by divine subsistence."—Farrar. At once "the root and the offspring of David." Rev. 22 : 16. See also John 1 : 1-14 ; 16 : 28 ; Phil. 2 : 6-8 ; Heb. 2 : 14 ; 1 John 1 : 1, 2 ; Rev. 5 : 5-10.

The common people heard him gladly.—Literally, "the great multitude." These were chiefly "the common people ;" but the prominent idea is simply that a great multitude still eagerly listened to him.

Heard him gladly.—"Lit., sweetly, with relish, with pleasure. This was after he had virtually claimed to be the Messiah : David's Lord, as well as David's Son."—Schaff. "In good truth, the more we know of Christianity and of the poor, the more deeply shall we be impressed with the exact adaptation of the one to the other, both in the substance of what it teaches and in the manner of teaching. And the poor, it is carefully to be remembered, must ever constitute the great majority of those to whom Christianity is addressed."—Keble.

Then in the audience of all the people, Jesus said unto his disciples.—"This discourse (peculiar to Matthew) was delivered on Tuesday preceding the crucifixion, although similar sayings (found in Luke 11, 13) were uttered on a previous occa-

Matt. 23 : 1-4 ; Mark 12 : 38 ; Luke 20 : 45.

unto the multitude, and to his disciples, The Scribes Warnings against the Scribes and Pharisees. and the Pharisees sit in Moses' seat :
 all therefore whatsoever they bid you observe, that observe and do : but do not ye after their works : for they say, and do not. For they bind heavy sion. The intercourse with the Pharisees had been used by our Lord as a means of warning them. The warning had been unheeded ; the intercourse had ceased ; the crisis of their meditated crime was approaching. Our Lord therefore turns ' to the multitudes and to his disciples ' (ver. 1), and without passion or personal bitterness denounces these his enemies. Those who find this discourse too severe forget that God has revealed himself in Christ as holy love. This awful severity proves Christ's divine mission and character no less than his tender invitations to the sinner to come to him. Indeed, it is a part of his mercy, since it warns his sheep against the coming of the wolf, guards us against the Pharisaism of our own hearts, which is so quick to rise against Him who redeemed us. Only One who knew himself to be free from sin and clothed with divine authority and power should or could utter such a discourse. The Sadducees are not mentioned ; they were not earnest enough to oppose him with bitterness. Moreover, the Pharisees were still the leaders of the people, and, while Christ lived, his greatest foes."—Schaff. "The discourse is by its construction naturally divided into three parts : (1) warnings against the spirit of ostentation which characterized the Scribes and Pharisees (vers. 1-12), solemn denunciation of their hypocrisy (vers. 13-33), conclusion and farewell to the temple and the Jews (vers. 34-39)."—Abbott.

Sit in Moses' seat, " as judges and expounders of the law. As a law-giver, Moses spoke in the name of God ; as judge and administrator he had successors, with authority to explain what he meant, but not to legislate. Under Roman rule, the function of the Sanhedrin, composed mainly of Pharisees, was limited to this."—Schaff.

Whatsoever they bid you observe, that observe and do.— "The meaning is not, 'Do all things which they, as successors of Moses, out of his law, command you to observe : ' it is not an indorsement of them as teachers, but a direction to obey their commands as Jewish magistrates."—Abbott.

They say and do not.—St. Basil compares those who preach only by their words to painters who, though ugly themselves, yet do not fail to paint very beautiful pictures. "Thus it was when the wise men asked the doctors where Christ should be burdens, and grievous to be borne, and lay them on men's shoulders ; but they themselves will not move them with one of their fingers. All their works they do for to be seen of men.

Matt. 23 : 4, 5 ; Mark 12 : 38 ; Luke 20 : 46.

Beware of the Scribes, which make broad their phylacteries, and enlarge the borders of their garments, born. They told them right, and the wise men went and found him ; but the doctors sat still and went not."—Jeremy Taylor.

For they bind, etc.—"They so presented the correct law as to make its precepts heavy burdens, like loads, packs on beasts of burden (comp. Acts 15 : 16). The reference is not simply to the traditions they added, but also to the mode of presenting the law itself, as demanding a servile obedience in minute details, irrespective of the spirit of the commandment. Imposing such burdens, they did not in the least lighten them by spiritual precept or example."—Lange. Some of their rules in regard to the Sabbath will illustrate the minute scrupulosity of their precepts generally. On that day "one might not walk upon the grass because it would be bruised, which would be a kind of threshing ; nor catch a flea, which would be a kind of hunting ; nor wear nailed shoes, which would be a sort of burden ; nor, if he fed his chickens, suffer any corn to lie upon the ground, lest a kernel should germinate, which would be a kind of sowing."—Abbott's Jesus of Nazareth.

But they will not move them.—"Not, it seems to me, They are indifferent and neglectful of their own laws ; this does not seem to have been the case ; but, Though rigorous in making laws, they proffer no sympathy or help to those that struggle to fulfill them. There is this characteristic difference between the religion of Jesus Christ and all false religions and all corruptions of Christianity. The latter only enact laws ; the former comes to impart power. See John 1 : 12 ; Rom. 8 : 3, 4 ; 2 Tim. 1 : 7."—Abbott.

They make broad their phylacteries.—"Small slips of parchment, on which passages from the law were written, usually worn at time of prayer on the left arm and the forehead. (The custom was derived from a literal understanding of Exod. 13 : 16, and the passages inscribed were four in number : Exod. 12 : 2-10 ; 13 : 11-21 ; Deut. 6 : 4-9 ; 11 : 18-21.) The name, from the Greek word meaning to 'guard,' was probably suggested by the command of Exod. 13 : 10, where this word occurs. Afterward the idea of a charm or amulet guarding from danger naturally came in. Making them broad probably refers to the case in

Chap. XXXVIII. Mark 12 : 38 ; Luke 20 : 46.

Apr. J.C. 34.

and desire to walk in long robes, and love the upper-which the parchment was kept. The latter was of a prescribed size, as indeed nearly every thing connected with their use had been made a matter of Rabbinical rule. It is said that the Pharisees wore them constantly, but the common people only at prayers. When used on the left arm, the leather thong was made into a little knot of peculiar shape (like the Hebrew letter Yoa) near the bend of the arm, and then wound in a spiral line round the arm and to the end of the middle finger. The minute regulations in regard to phylacteries form a curious confirmation of the belittling tendency of formalism. Similar external badges of professed religious feeling have been used in all ages, from the same motives and with the same tendency."—Schaff. Chrysostom speaks of a similar custom as prevalent in his day. "So many of our women now wear the Gospels hung from their necks." Phylacteries are employed even now in Mohammedan countries, the inscriptions being taken from the Koran. They are worn by modern Jews only on special occasions.

Enlarge the borders of their garments.—"Of their garments' is not found in the correct text, but is necessarily understood. In Num. 15 : 38 the Israelites were bidden to wear fringes about their outer garment, fastened to it with a blue ribbon, to distinguish them from other nations, and to remind them of their duty to obey the law. The usage may have existed before that passage attached a symbolical meaning to it. The fringe may have been the ordinary mode of preventing the edge of the robe from unravelling, and the blue ribbon was useful in strengthening the border. The Pharisees, as sticklers for the rigid observance of the law, made these fringes larger than others. All these external badges had proper symbolical meanings."—Schaff. "Blue was the symbolical color of heaven, the color of God, of his covenant, and of faithfulness to that covenant. The tassels themselves signified flowers, or birds ; probably pomegranates, and these crimson, and not blue, as the ribbons were. Thus they were remembrancers that fidelity to the covenant should flourish ; or they were tokens that the flower of life was love, and that love must spring from faithfulness to the covenant."—Lange. But the Pharisees, however significant their ritualism, murdered Him to whom it pointed. It is a short step from religious pageantry to religious pride. "Must the garb of religion be extended so wide, to the danger of its rending? Yes, truly, or it will not hide the secret. And what is that? That the saint has no religion at all."—Laurence Sterne.

Long robes.—The garments of the doctors were to be long enough to cover the whole body, even down to their feet, but most rooms at feasts, and the chief seats in the synagogues, and greetings in the market-places, and to be called of men, Rabbi, Rabbi.

Matt. 23 : 6-9 ; Mark 12 : 38, 39 ; Luke 20 : 46.

But be not ye called Rabbi : for one is your Master, even Christ ; and all ye are brethren. And call no man your father upon the earth : for one is your Father, which is in heaven. Neither be ye called masters : for were not to be any longer ; but they did not always go by this rule ; some had even a train after them—significant of their consequence, leisure, and learning.

Uppermost rooms.—"The first seat at banquets," which was among the Jews, Greeks, and Romans the middle place at the triclinium.

Chief seats in the synagogues.—"The places nearest the reading desk, where the elders sat. Being in such places (at feasts, in synagogues or elsewhere) is not rebuked, but loving to be there. Pharisaism may now show itself in taking the lowest place, if this is done in a slavish obedience to the letter of the gospel, or from a desire to be invited to go up higher."—Riddle.

Greetings in the market-places.—"The places of public resort, where their importance would be recognized. Salutations of courtesy and kindness in public places are certainly not forbidden. In these days Pharisaical pride may desire some other form of public recognition."—Riddle.

But be not ye called Rabbi.—See note on page 82.

For one is your master.—Literally, teacher. The best MSS. omit "even Christ." "That by 'teacher' is intended the Holy Spirit, is indicated by Prov. 1 : 23 ; Jer. 31 : 33, 34 ; John 14 : 26 ; 13 : 14 ; 1 Cor. 2 : 13 ; 1 John 2 : 20."—Abbott.

Call no man your father upon earth.—"The title of 'Father' appears to have been given in early times to priests and prophets, and in later times, even by Paul, to the members of the Sanhedrin. In its ordinary use it carried with it a recognition of paternal authority in spiritual things, the Jewish Rabbi, as is the Roman Catholic priest of to-day, being regarded as an authority in matters of faith and conscience."—Abbott. "Who is it that calls 'no man father upon earth' ? He who in every action as done before God says, 'Our Father which art in heaven.'"
—Origen. "The great trouble of our modern Bible-reading is a tendency to treat the Book as though it were a copy of the Revised Statutes—with dead literalness. What Christ means

Chap. XXXVIII.

Matt. 23 : 11-14.

Apr. J.C. 34.

one is your Master, even Christ. But he that is greatest among you shall be your servant. And whosoever shall exalt himself shall be abased : and he that shall humble himself shall be exalted.

But wo unto you, Scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites ! for ye shut up the kingdom of heaven against men :

Woes against the Scribes and Pharisees. for ye neither go in yourselves, neither suffer ye them that are entering to go in.

Wo unto you, Scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites ! for was not to forbid our calling a man ' father '—his speech was always deeper than the surface. Christ would have us have no popes, either living or dead. We have no right to surrender our own private judgment to Pius IX., to Calvin, to Wesley, to any general assembly of fathers, to conventions, or conferences. The godly judgment of good men should have weight with us, but let us not call them ' father ' in a sense that implies the surrender of our own liberty of thought."—Eggleston.

Neither be ye called masters (leaders), for one is your master (leader), even Christ.—"The Pharisees all claimed to accept the Old Testament as a divine authority ; but they were divided into schools or sects, under human leaders, as the school of Hillel and the school of Shammai, and the zealous among them were more anxious for the triumph of their school than for the elucidation of the truth."—Abbott.

And whosoever shall exalt himself, etc.—"A universal rule of God's dealings, including both worlds in its scope. Here it points to the speedy humiliation of the Pharisees. The possession of humility is the first requisite in entering the kingdom of heaven (Matt. 18 : 3, 4), and the absence of it made the Pharisees the murderers of the king."—Schaff.

Wo unto you, Scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites.—"Some have ventured to accuse these words of injustice, of bitterness—to attribute them to a burst of undignified disappointment and unreasonable wrath. Yet, is sin never to be rebuked ? is hypocrisy never to be unmasked ? is moral indignation no necessary part of the noble soul ? And does not Jewish literature itself most amply support the charge brought against the Pharisees by Jesus ?"—Farrar.

Because ye shut up the kingdom of heaven.—"Here represented as a wedding hall, or palace, with open doors. This ye devour widows' houses, and for a show and pretence make long prayer : therefore ye shall receive the greater damnation.

Matt. 23 : 14, 15 ; Mark 12 : 49 ; Luke 20 : 47.

Wo unto you, Scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites ! for ye compass sea and land to make one proselyte ; and when he is made, ye make him two-fold-more the child of hell than yourselves.

was especially done by so perverting the Scriptures as to prevent others from recognizing Christ, the ' Way,' the ' Door.'"—Schaff.

Devour widows' houses.—"This 'eating up' was effected by various subtle artifices. By pretensions to extraordinary philanthropy and piety, they induced persons to commit to them the disposal of their property, as executors and guardians ; or, 'creeping into widows' houses,' devised various means of enriching themselves, either by making devotees of the widows, and laying them under contribution, or caballing with the children to deprive the widow of part of her dowry, for some return either in hand, or in expectation. Josephus expressly notices the ascendancy which the Pharisees had gained over the female sex by their pretences to the possession of God's favor."—Bloomfield. "The Pharisees are not all dead yet, and are not all Jews."—McClintock. "Ecclesiastical officials may repeat this crime, by attaching to themselves the defenceless classes here represented by 'widows,' with the design of obtaining control of their property. Pharisaism, in all ages and organizations, has encouraged this."—Schaff. "When theft or oppression or perjury or sacrilege have laid the foundation and reared the house, then the curse of God creepeth in between the walls and ceilings, and lurketh close between the stones and timber ; and, as a fretting moth or canker, insensibly gnaweth asunder the pins and joints of the building, till it have unframed it and resolved it into a ruinous heap ; from which mischief there is no remedy, no preservation, but one, and that is—free and speedy restitution."—Bishop Sanderson.

Ye compass sea and land.—A proverbial expression. The excessive zeal of the Jews in making proselytes is alluded to by Horace, lib. I, sat. iv. ; v. 142, 143.

Twofold more the child of hell than yourselves.—"The Pharisees taught that no heathen could become a member of the Jewish nation except he were 'born again.' Jesus here asserts that the proselyte of the Pharisees is born from below,

Wo unto you, ye blind guides ! which say, Whosoever shall swear by the temple, it is nothing ; but whosoever shall swear by the gold of the temple, he is a debtor. Ye fools, and blind ! for whether is greater, the gold, or the temple that sanctifieth the gold ? And whosoever shall swear by the altar, it is nothing ; but whosoever sweareth by the gift that is upon it, he is guilty. Ye fools, and blind ! for whether is greater, the gift, or the altar that sanctifieth the gift ? Whoso therefore shall swear by the altar, sweareth by it, and by all things thereon. And whoso shall swear by the temple, sweareth by it, and by Him that dwelleth therein. And not from above. ' Out of bad heathen they were made worse Jews ' (Erasmus). And the reason was, not merely because those who were the most zealous proselytizers were most indifferent to moral and spiritual life, but, as Meyer remarks, because ' Experience proves that proselytes become worse and more extreme than their teachers.' The warning applies to all attempts to add numbers without spiritual life to the church, school, or sect."—Abbott.

Swear by the temple, it is nothing.—That is, the oath may be violated with impunity.

The gold of the temple.—There were in the temple many vessels made of gold besides the golden candlestick ; the doors and other parts of the temple were covered with gold, and there was gold in the treasury.

Fools and blind.—"The power of imposing on one's self is an essential preliminary to imposing on others. Long habits of this kind of self-delusion in time produce a paralysis in the vital nerves of truth, so that one becomes habitually unable to see things in their verity, and realizes the awful word of Scripture : ' He feedeth on ashes ; a deceived heart hath turned him aside that he cannot deliver his soul, nor say, Is there not a lie in my right hand ? ' "—H. B. Stowe. " I am quite sure it is a most solemn duty to cultivate our understandings to the uttermost, for I have seen the evil moral consequences of fanaticism to a greater degree than I ever expected to see them realized ; and I am satisfied that a neglected intellect is far oftener the cause of mischief than a perverted or overvalued one."—Thomas Arnold.

Chap. XXXVIII.

Matt. 23 : 22, 23.

Apr. J.C. 34.

he that shall swear by heaven, sweareth by the throne of God, and by Him that sitteth thereon.

Wo unto you, Scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites ! for ye pay tithe of mint, and anise, and cummin, and have omitted the weightier matters of the law, judgment, mercy, and faith : these ought ye to have done, and not

Ye pay tithe of mint and anise and cummin.—"In Lev. 27 : 30 the Israelites were bidden to pay a tithe (tenth part) of the fruits of the field and of the trees, as an offering to the Lord. Other demands were made (Num. 18 : 21 ; Deut. 12 : 6 ; 14 : 22-28), exacting in all nearly one third of the income of each Jew. It was doubtful whether the tithe of produce applied to the smallest garden herbs, yet the Pharisees, in their over-scrupulousness, paid tithe of 'these herbs of small value.'"—Riddle. "Our Lord does not condemn, but impliedly approves, the Pharisees' scrupulousness in paying the tithe of these herbs. What he condemns is the conscience that pretends to be scrupulous in matters of insignificant detail, and is indifferent to matters of real importance. The modern application is to the spirit which is scrupulous in ritualistic observance and indifferent to the weightier matters of the law."—Abbott. "The habit of attending to trifles and occupying and distracting the mind about them is even far more pernicious and dangerous than that of attaching one's self to some matter of consequence : first, because it renders the soul, if we may say so, more contracted and little, and less capable of raising itself to God ; secondly, because trifles are so numerous on every side, and hence the soul has no sooner got free from one than it is again entangled with another."—Overberg.

Judgment, mercy, and faith.—By judgment is meant, not justice—that is, "giving to all their just dues" (Barnes), for the original word never bears this significance in the New Testament—but spiritual discrimination. Our English version exactly represents the spirit of the original. The Pharisees by their casuistry showed an utter lack of capacity to judge of moral and spiritual things. Comp. Luke 12 : 57 ; John 7 : 24. Mercy is the exercise and manifestation of sympathy and good-will to all mankind, especially the suffering and the sinful, precisely the opposite of the proud and uncharitable disposition of Pharisaism. . . . For illustrations of their lack of mercy see Luke 7 : 39 ; John 8 : 3-5. Faith is not equivalent here to fidelity, as some of the commentators interpret it. So to render it is to miss entirely the spiritual meaning of Christ's words. Our Eng-

Chap. XXXVIII.

Matt. 23 : 24-30.

Apr. J.C. 34.

to leave the other undone. Ye blind guides, which strain at a gnat, and swallow a camel.

Wo unto you, Scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites ! for ye make clean the outside of the cup and of the platter, but within they are full of extortion and excess. Thou blind Pharisee, cleanse first that which is within the cup and platter, that the outside of them may be clean also.

Wo unto you, Scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites ! for ye are like unto whited sepulchres, which indeed appear beautiful outward, but are within full of dead men's bones, and of all uncleanness. Even so ye also outwardly appear righteous unto men, but within ye are full of hypocrisy and iniquity.

Wo unto you, Scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites ! because ye build the tombs of the prophets, and garnish lish version renders the original correctly. The whole passage is interpreted by Micah 6 : 8 and Hosea 12 : 6. Clear spiritual discernment, love to one's neighbor, humble trust in God—these are the important matters of the laws. Comp. 1 Tim. 1 : 5."—Abbott.

Strain at a gnat, is an old misprint for "strain out a gnat," which "is to pass the water or wine through a strainer before drinking, to purify it of insects. This is a common practice in the East, and it was done by the Pharisees to avoid partaking of any thing ceremonially unclean (Lev. 11 : 23, 41, 42). The Hindoos have a similar proverb : swallowing an elephant and being choked with a flea."—Abbott.

That the outside may be clean also.—Outward morality is very important, but it naturally follows purity of heart. The former without the latter is not real morality.

Whited sepulchres.—On the 15th of Adar, before the Pass-over, the Jews whitewashed all spots where graves were situated. This was done to prevent the passage over them, which occasioned Levitical defilement (Num. 19 : 16 ; comp. Ezek. 39 : 15, from which passage the custom is derived).—Schaff.

Indeed appear beautiful outward.—Besides the "whitening," much care was bestowed on sepulchres by wealthy Jews.

But within ye are full of hypocrisy and iniquity.—"Your the sepulchres of the righteous, and say, If we had been in the days of our fathers, we would not have been partakers with them in the blood of the prophets. Wherefore ye be witnesses unto yourselves, that ye are the children of them which killed the prophets. Fill ye up then the measure of your fathers. Ye serpents, ye generation of vipers, how can ye escape the damnation of hell?

Wherefore, behold, I send unto you prophets, and wise men, and scribes ; and some of them ye shall kill heart is not a temple of the living God, but a grave of pestilent corruption : not a heaven, but a hell. And your religion is but the whitewash—hardly skin-deep.”—Alford.

And garnish the sepulchres of the righteous, those considered especially saintly.

Ye are the children (morally as well as spiritually) of them that killed the prophets.—“Some find here an allusion to a Jewish proverb : ‘One kills him, and another digs his grave’ (comp. Luke 11 : 47), asserting complicity in guilt ; but our Lord assumes that evil moral characteristics are hereditary ; therefore those whose conduct did not oppose the false principles and crimes of their forefathers were partakers in their guilt.”—Schaff.

Fill ye up then.—Not irony, but a terrible prediction, and a judicial consignment of them to their own ways. Every merciful means of influence had been used before this was spoken. To leave them now to show their true spirit was mercy to others.—Riddle.

The measure of your fathers.—The measure of their guilt
How can ye escape the damnation of hell.—“Hear this, ye that wear out the floor of God’s house with your frequent attendance ; ye that have your ears open to God’s messengers, and yet shut to the cries of the poor, of the orphan, of the laborer, of the distressed debtor ; ye that can lift up those hands to heaven in your fashionable prayers, which ye have not reached out to the relief of the needy members of your Saviour ; ye that have a fluent tongue to talk unto God, and have no tongue to speak for God, or to speak in the cause of the dumb ; ye have ‘a form of godliness, but deny the power thereof.’ . . . This your very privative denial shall, without your repentance, damn your souls.”—Bishop Hall.

and crucify, and some of them shall ye scourge in your synagogues, and persecute them from city to city : that upon you may come all the righteous blood shed upon the earth, from the blood of righteous Abel, unto the blood of Zacharias, son of Barachias, whom ye slew

Wherefore behold I send unto you.—Comp. Luke 11 : 49. “Therefore also said the wisdom of God, I will send them.’ Here Christ, having already spoken as Judge, says, ‘I send.’ He is ‘the wisdom of God.’ ‘Therefore;’ because they were determined to go on in the way of their fathers, and were to be left to do so. The sending of messengers of salvation, the multiplication of privileges, hastens the doom of the hardened. A fact in history as well as a declaration of God’s Word.”—Schaff.

Prophets, and wise men, and Scribes.—“Names applied to the Old Testament messengers and teachers ; here applied to New Testament messengers, whom Christ as Head of the Church would send. From Luke 11 : 49 we infer that there is also a reference to 2 Chron. 24 : 19. The Old Testament teachers had been treated in the same way, and the prediction indicates that they too had been sent by Christ. ‘Prophets’ probably refers to apostles ; ‘wise men’ to those specially endowed by the Holy Ghost, like Stephen ; and ‘scribes’ to those mighty in the Scriptures, such as Apollos. But there is no necessary distinction, for Paul belonged to all three classes. See Acts 5 : 40 ; 23 : 19 ; 26 : 11.”—Schaff.

That upon you may come all the righteous blood which is being poured out upon the earth. “The verb is in the present, and represents this bloody stream as still flowing. It should come on them, because by slaying the Son they became participators in the crimes of those who had slain the heralds ; because the guilt of murder lies not in the amount of blood shed, but in the spirit which sheds it ; because the nation is treated here, as in the parable of the wicked husbandmen (Matt. 21 : 33-46), as a unit. The language is figurative, and represents the stream of innocent blood, flowing from the days of Abel, as coming upon and whelming the Jews in condemnation. Comp. Matt. 27 : 25 ; Acts 5 : 28.”—Abbott.

“Though the mills of God grind slowly, yet they grind exceeding small ;
Though with patience He stands waiting, with exactness grinds He all.”

—Logan, trans. by Longfellow.

Unto the blood of Zacharias, son of Barachias.—For different explanations of this verse, see Range on this passage. It probably refers to the Zacharias mentioned in 2 Chron. 24 : 20-22,

Chap. XXXVIII.

Matt. 23 : 36-39.

Apr. J.C. 34.

between the temple and the altar. Verily I say unto you, All these things shall come upon this generation.

O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets, and stonest them which are sent unto thee, how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not ! Behold, your house is left unto you desolate. For I say unto you, Ye shall not see me henceforth, till ye shall say, Blessed is he that cometh in the who was slain "in the court of the house of the Lord" by the people, and dying cried, "The Lord look upon it and require it."

All these things shall come upon this generation.—"And did not all the righteous blood shed upon the earth since the days of Abel come upon that generation? Did not many of that generation survive to witness and feel the unutterable horrors which Josephus tells?—to see their fellows crucified in jest, 'some one way, and some another,' till 'room was wanting for the crosses, and crosses for the carcases'?—to experience the 'deep silence' and the kind of deadly night which seized upon the city in the intervals of rage?—to see six hundred thousand dead bodies carried out of the gates?—to see friends fighting madly for grass and nettles, and the refuse of the drains?—to see the bloody zealots 'gaping for want, and stumbling and staggering along like mad dogs'?—to hear the horrid tale of the miserable mother who, in the pangs of famine, had devoured her child?—to be sold for slaves in such multitudes that at last none would buy them?—to see the streets running with blood, and the 'fire of burning houses quenched in the blood of their defenders'?—to have their young sons sold in hundreds, or exposed in the amphitheatres to the sword of the gladiator or the fury of the lion, until at last, 'since the people were now slain, the Holy House burned down, and the city in flames, there was nothing further left for the enemy to do'? In that awful siege it is believed that there perished 1,100,000 men, besides the 97,000 who were carried captive, and most of whom perished subsequently in the arena or the mine; and it was an awful thing to feel, as some of the survivors and eye-witnesses—and they not Christians—did feel, that 'the city had deserved its overthrow by producing a generation of men who were the causes of its misfortunes.'"—Farrar.

Ye shall not see me henceforth.—See note on page 284.

XXXVIII.

Matt. 23 : 39 ; John 12 : 36-41.

J.C. 34.

name of the Lord. These things spake Jesus, and departed, and did hide himself from them.

But though he had done so many miracles before them, yet they believed not on him : That the saying of Esaias the prophet might be fulfilled, which he spake,

Lord, who hath believed our report ?

And to whom hath the arm of the Lord been revealed ?

Therefore they could not believe, because that Esaias said again,

He hath blinded their eyes, and hardened their heart ;

That they should not see with their eyes,

Nor understand with their heart,

And be converted, and I should heal them.

These things said Esaias, when he saw his glory, and spake of him.

These things spake Jesus, and departed.—"This was the farewell of Jesus to Israel. He then retired, and did not reappear on the morrow. This time it was no mere cloud which obscured the sun ; the sun itself had set."—Godet.

"Therefore they could not believe refers not backward to the precedent prophecy of Isaiah, so that the meaning is that they could not believe 'because it was otherwise ordained in the divine counsels ;' but forward to the subsequent prophecy of Isaiah, so that the meaning is that they could not believe because their eyes were blinded and their hearts hardened. Either interpretation is grammatically possible : this one makes John's comments germane to Christ's discourse respecting the light, and the effect of refusing obedience to it ; the other does not. An interpretation which represents God as blinding the eyes and hardening the heart, so as to prevent the exercise of faith, and this in order that a prophecy may be fulfilled, cannot be reconciled with the divine righteousness, much less with the divine infinite mercy."—Abbott.

That they should not see with their eyes.—"For when the malefactor comes to have his eyes covered, it shows that he is not far from his execution."—South.

Saw his glory (Isa. 6 : 1).—"We have here a very remarkable proof of our Lord's divinity. For in the passage of Isaiah here referred to, ch. 6 : 1-10, the prophet says that he saw 'the

Chap. XXXVIII.

John 12 : 42-46.

Apr. J.C. 34.

Nevertheless among the chief rulers also many believed on him ; but because of the Pharisees they did not confess him, lest they should be put out of the synagogue : for they loved the praise of men more than the praise of God.

Jesus cried and said, He that believeth on me, believeth not on me, but on him that sent me. And he that seeth me seeth him that sent me. I am come a Lord sitting upon a throne,' with 'the seraphims' about him ; 'and one cried unto another, and said, Holy, holy, holy, is the Lord of hosts ; the whole earth is full of his glory.' But the evangelist here plainly declares that it was Christ whose glory Isaiah then saw, and of whom he spake when he said, ' Mine eyes have seen the King, the Lord of hosts.' Christ therefore in his divine nature was worshiped by the angels as 'the Lord of hosts,' before he 'was made flesh, and dwelt among us.'—Lonsdale and Hale.

Put out of the synagogue.—"This most eloquent, most appalling and terrible of all discourses ever delivered to mortals, was pronounced in the Temple, in the presence of multitudes. Never was there more faithful dealing, more terrible reproof, more profound knowledge of the workings of hypocrisy, or more skill in detecting the concealments of sin. This was the last of Christ's public discourses ; and it is a most solemn summary of all that he ever had said, or had to say, of a wicked and hypocritical generation."—Greswell.

They loved the praise of men.—"Superfluously we seek a precarious applause abroad. Every good man hath his plaudite within himself ; and, though his tongue be silent, is not without loud cymbals in his breast. Conscience will become his panegyrist, and never forget to crown and extol him unto himself."—Sir Thomas Browne. "No Christian will ever be good for any thing without Christian courage, or what is the same, Christian faith. Take it upon you readily ; have it always as a law to be always doing great works—that is, works that are great to you ; and this is the faith that God so clearly justifies, that your ability will be as your works. Make large ventures. Trust God for great things. With your five loaves and two fishes he will show you a way to feed thousands."—Bushnell. "To see what is right and not to do it is want of courage."—Confucius.

Jesus cried and said.—"What follows, to the end of the chapter, is not to be regarded as a report of a further discourse light into the world, that whosoever believeth on me should not abide in darkness. And if any man hear my words, and believe not, I judge him not : for I came not to judge the world, but to save the world. He that rejecteth me, and receiveth not my words, hath one that judgeth him : the word that I have spoken, the same shall judge him in the last day. For I have not spoken of myself ; but the Father which sent me, by Jesus, but as a summary furnished by John of his Lord's previous discourses. This view is required by the context, what follows being closely connected with John's previous comments, by the structure of the discourse, which is substantially a repetition of previously reported discourses, and by the consideration that not only no time or place is indicated, but that none is allowed, since it is expressly asserted, immediately before, that Christ departed and hid himself from the people (ver. 36). This view is taken by all the moderns (Alford, Meyer, Godet, Luthardt).—Abbott.

I am come a light into the world.—"When I think of the vast capacities of the human mind, of God's nearness to it, and unbounded love toward it, I am disposed to wonder, not that revelations have been made, but that they have not been more variously vouchsafed to the wants of mankind."—Fénélon.

Believeth not on me.—Not only on me, but on my Father also "that sent me : " because the words which he believes when spoken by me, are not only mine, but my Father's also.—Comp. Matt. 10 : 20 ; Mark 9 : 37. Jesus uniformly represents the union between himself and God as so intimate, that there could not be faith in him unless there was also faith in God.—See John 5 : 17, 20, 36 ; 8 : 38 ; 10 : 25, 37, 38. He who believes on the Son believes on the Father ; he who hath seen the Son hath seen the Father ; he who honors the Son honors the Father.

He that seeth me, seeth him that sent me.—Spiritual, not natural, vision is referred to. He who has a clear perception of Christ's life and character sees "God manifest in the flesh."

I judge him not. . . . The word that I have spoken the same shall judge him.—"This declaration is not inconsistent with other passages of the New Testament which declare that Jesus Christ shall judge the world (Jno. 5 : 25-27), but it interprets them. That judgment shall not be an arbitrary one ; nor one pronounced by a judge after trial, like a human judg-

Chap. XXXVIII.

John 12 : 49, 50.

Apr. J.C. 34.

he gave me a commandment, what I should say, and what I should speak. And I know that his commandment is life everlasting : whatsoever I speak therefore, even as the Father said unto me, so I speak.

ment, in which questions of law and fact are involved. The book of each man's life shall be opened, and compared with the life of Christ which is the pattern ; and the life and teaching of Christ will itself be the judgment ; the comparison will be conclusive ; there will be no need of investigation or of sentence. Hence every man is judging and condemning himself, and if unrepentant and unpardoned is condemned already."—Abbott.

Life everlasting.—"The bird within the shell could not comprehend why wings were given for that cramped existence, but the almost unconscious flutter of the prisoned pinions was God's promise of another and a better life."—Duff Porter.

Matt. 24 : 1, 2 ; Mark 13 : 1, 2 ; Luke 21 : 5, 6.

CHAPTER XXXIX.

PROPHECIES AND PARABLES.

AND Jesus departed from the temple. And as he went out, one of his disciples spake of the temple, how it was adorned with goodly stones and gifts, saying, Master, see what manner of stones, and what buildings are here !

And Jesus answering, said unto him, As for these great buildings which ye behold, verily I say unto you,

And Jesus departed from the temple.—“After Jesus had finished his words in the temple, he ‘departed and did hide himself from them’ (John 12 : 36). His departing and hiding are not to be understood of a night’s sojourn in Bethany, but of his final departure from the temple, and his sojourn in retirement till his arrest. His public work was over. He appears no more in his Father’s house as a preacher of righteousness. Henceforth all his words of wisdom are addressed to his own disciples.”—Andrews.

See what manner of stones and what buildings are here ! The temple was built of white marble, exquisitely carved, and with stones of large dimensions, some of them fifty feet long, sixteen high, and twenty-four thick. “Its appearance,” says Josephus, “was such as to strike the mind and astonish the sight. For it was on every side covered with solid plates of gold, which reflected, when the sun rose upon it, such a strong and dazzling effulgence, that the eye could not sustain its radiance. At a distance, it appeared a huge mountain covered with snow. For where the plates of gold were not, it was extremely white and glistening.” Tacitus describes it as “of immense opulence.” For a full description of these magnificent buildings, see Josephus, B. 1., v. 5. See also note on page 92. “The allusion of the disciples to the size and splendor of the temple buildings, seems to have been occasioned by His words to the Pharisees foretelling its desolation (Matt. 23 : 38). That so substantial and massive a structure could become desolate, was incredible to them, for they had as yet no distinct conception that God was about to cast off his own covenant people, and bring the worship he had appointed to an end. This manifestation of incredulity led him to say, with great emphasis, that the buildings should be utterly destroyed.”—Andrews.

Matt. 24 : 2, 3 ; Mark 13 : 2, 3 ; Luke 21 : 6.

the days will come, in the which there shall not be left one stone upon another, that shall not be thrown down.

And as he sat upon the mount of Olives, over against

There shall not be left one stone upon another.—"This prophecy was uttered in a time of profound peace, when the possibility of the destruction of such a magnificent work of art and sanctuary of religion seemed very unlikely ; but was literally fulfilled forty years afterwards ; and that, too, in express violation of the orders of Titus, who wished to save it."—Schaff. But the obstinate resistance of the infatuated Jews, and the fierce passions of his own soldiers, defeated his purpose. The temple was repeatedly set fire to, contrary to his strict orders ; and at last the fire could not be extinguished ; and when it had consumed everything that would burn, the rest of the structure was demolished, and the materials removed, in order to search for the treasure which was buried under its ruins ; so that, in the end, the very foundations were overturned, and the ground on which the temple stood was ploughed up. Josephus says it "was laid so completely even with the ground, by those who dug it up from the foundation, that there was nothing left to make those who came hither believe it had ever been inhabited." "We shall perceive the force of the expression, 'not one stone shall be left upon another,' if we bear in mind that these huge stones were bound together with lead, and fastened with strong iron clamps."—Bloomfield. "God commanded the Jews at that time, and now us who are placed in the Church, that we have no trust in the goodliness of buildings, and of gilt roofs, and in walls covered with panels of marble, and say, 'The temple of the Lord, the temple of the Lord are we !' For that is the temple of the Lord wherein dwelleth true faith, godly conversation, and the company of all the virtues."—Jerome.

He sat upon the Mount of Olives, over against the temple. "At the summit of the hill Jesus sat down to rest—perhaps under the green boughs of those two stately cedar trees which then adorned the summit of the hill. Deep on the one side beneath him lay the Holy City, at his feet were the slopes of Olivet, and the Garden of Gethsemane. On the opposite slope rose the city walls, and the broad plateau crowned with the marble colonnades and gilded roofs of the temple, and before him was the glorious guilty city which had shed the blood of all the prophets, and was doomed to sink through yet deadlier wickedness to yet more awful retribution. And the setting sun of his earthly life hung deeper and more sombre coloring across the whole scene of his earthly pilgrimage."—Farrar, condensed.

Matt. 24 : 3, 4 ; Mark 13 : 3-5 ; Luke 21 : 7.

the temple, the disciples Peter, and James, and John, and Andrew, asked him privately, saying. Master, tell us, when shall these things be ? and what shall be the sign of thy coming, and of the end of the world ? when all these things shall be fulfilled ? And Jesus an-

The disciples asked him privately.—Mark specifies who they were, and the word “privately” implies that only the four were present. The others may have preceded him to Bethany, but Alexander supposes that all were with him, and that “the four only are mentioned as particularly earnest in making the inquiry, although speaking with and for the rest.”

What shall be the sign of thy coming?—“Not of his second coming, for though Christ had foretold his crucifixion, the disciples did not understand his saying (Mark 9 : 32 ; Luke 9 : 45) ; but the sign of his public manifestation as the Messiah. This they were momentarily expecting (Luke 19 : 11 ; Acts 1 : 6.)” —Abbott.

And of the end of the world.—“Not merely of the Jewish dispensation, though the Greek is perhaps capable of being so rendered. Christ had in public discourse alluded to the end of the world in connection with his own appearance as the Messiah (Matt. 13 : 39, 40, 49). The disciples, supposing that the destruction of Jerusalem, the overthrow of Judaism, the manifestation of Jesus as the Messiah-King, and the end of the world, would be contemporaneous, asked when they would occur, and what would be the sign of their approach. One principal object of Christ’s discourse is to correct their misapprehension. Calvin interprets well their probable state of mind : ‘Having been convinced, that, as soon as the reign of Christ should commence, they would be in every respect happy, they leave warfare out of the account, and fly all at once to a triumph.’”—Abbott. “They thought the temple should stand as long as the world stood ; therefore as soon as Christ said the temple should be destroyed, they presently thought with themselves of the end of the world.” —Edward Leigh. “It is, I think, a mark of right understanding in the language of prophecy, and in the design of prophecy too, to keep to what appears the design and the meaning of the prophecy in general, and to what the whole of it, when laid together, points out to us ; and not to suffer a warm imagination to mislead us from the real intention of the spirit of prophecy, by following uncertain applications of the part of it.”—Lowman.

Take heed that no man deceive you.—“This is the text of this discourse, and to it Christ constantly recurs. (See Matt.

Matt. 24 : 4 ; Mark 13 : 5 ; Luke 21 : 8.

swered and said unto them, Take heed that no man de-

24 : 13, 23-25, 42-44.) We ought not to inquire into future and final events, through curiosity, but from a desire to fortify ourselves."—Bengel. Just that curiosity halts ever unsatisfied at this chapter ; but the spiritual desire for practical warning and admonition is abundantly satisfied. The question to be determined respecting this chapter, and it is one on which the ablest scholars are not agreed, is this : "How far are its prophecies to be regarded as fulfilled in and by this siege and destruction of Jerusalem and the consequent dispersion of the Jews?" In response to this question there may be said to be three general answers : (1) The first regards the destruction of Jerusalem as a substantial fulfillment of the prophecy, the second coming of Christ already taken place, and the "last days" already come ; these regard Christ's second coming as wholly inferential ; (2) The second regards the chapter as almost wholly prophetic, and the main events therein yet to be fulfilled, or the destruction of Jerusalem itself as only a prophetic event, typical of the wider judgment to come upon all nations ; (3) The third regards the two events as intermingled in the prophecy, which takes no note of the intervening centuries of time, as a traveler does not discern the valleys between distant mountain peaks, rising one above the other. Where, on this interpretation, the line between the immediate and the distant events is to be placed, scholars are not agreed. In studying this discourse, the student must remember that Christ's object is practical, not theoretical ; he speaks not to inflame the imagination, nor to gratify curiosity, but to enforce the duty of patience, fidelity, and watchfulness. And whatever difficulty there may be in understanding the prophetic meaning of the discourse, there can be none in understanding and applying its practical and spiritual instructions. Mr. Abbott, who adopts the third of the methods of interpretation given above, affords of the chapter the following :

Analysis.—"The question (verse 3) : When will occur the destruction of the Temple, thine own glorious manifestation as the Messiah, and the end of the world? Christ's response.—Do not imagine that the kingdom will immediately appear. Be not deceived by the claims of false Messiahs. There must first be a period of tribulation, the travail out of which the kingdom shall be born (4-8), a period of persecution from without, and schism, apostasy, and false doctrine from within (9-12), to be accompanied by the preaching of the Gospel throughout the habitable globe (13, 14). The length of this period no one

 Matt. 24 : 5 ; Mark 13 : 6 ; Luke 21 : 8.

 Jesus predicts False Christs.

 ceive you : for many shall come in my name, saying, I am Christ ; and the time knows save the Father, not even the Son (Mark 13 : 32). When, therefore, you see the fulfillment of Daniel's prophecy (Dan. 9 : 27 ; 12 : 11) do not imagine that the end has come, and abide in Jerusalem. Flee, for terrible will be the suffering of that time (15-22). Do not, then, allow false reports of the coming of the Messiah to mislead you. For his coming will be in such a manner that it cannot be questioned (23-27). Nor shall judgment stop at Jerusalem. Wherever there is corruption, thither the executioners of God's judgment will hasten (28). Immediately after this period of travail and world-judgment—that is, without any intervening sign or note of preparation, will come the Son of Man to judge the world (29-31), even as summer follows spring (32, 33). But though Jerusalem is destroyed the Jewish race shall abide, a living testimony to the truth of my words (34, 35). But the day and the hour of their fulfillment no man knoweth (36). It will be sudden (37-41). Wherefore, watch, be faithful, be always ready, looking for the appearance of your Lord (43-51), who will come to judge not only the world, but the church, condemning those who have lived in it without divine grace (25 : 1-19), without spiritual thrift and industry (25 : 14-30), and without practical benevolence and beneficence to their fellow-men (25 : 31-46).”—Abbott on Matthew.

In my name.—Assuming my dignity.

Saying, I am Christ.—"Pretending to be the Messiah. Many, accordingly, did pretend to be the Messiah, between the death of Jesus and the destruction of Jerusalem."—Ripley. "The first instance of the appearance of any person among the Jews, who would answer to the description of a false Christ, occurs U.C. 797 or 798, A.D. 44-5, fourteen or fifteen years after the ascension."—Greswell. "In the reign of Nero, when Felix was procurator of Judea, such a number of these impostors made their appearance, that many of them were seized and put to death every year."—Bp. Porteus. "These deceivers, promising the Jews deliverance from the Roman yoke, and temporal dominion, drew after them many followers, and excited great insurrections. This exasperated the Romans ; numbers perished miserably, and the siege and destruction of Jerusalem were accelerated by these commotions."—Scott. Josephus mentions one of these pretenders, who declared to the inhabitants of Jerusalem that God commanded them to go up into some particular part of the temple, to there receive the signs of deliverance. A multitude of men, women, and children went draweth near ; and shall deceive many. Go ye not therefore after them. And when ye shall hear of commotions, and wars, and rumors of wars : see that ye be up accordingly ; but instead of deliverance the place was set on fire by the Romans, and six thousand perished in the flames, or by endeavoring to escape them. Buck, in his 'Theological Dictionary,' gives a list of twenty-nine false Christs, the last of them as late as the seventeenth century.

Matt. 24 : 5, 6 ; Mark 13 : 6, 7 ; Luke 21 : 8, 9.

The time draweth near.—"The time of the kingdom."—Alford. Not the words of our Lord, but of the many who should come in his name.

Commotions.—"There were serious disturbances (1) at Alexandria, which gave rise to the complaint against and deposition of Flaccus, and Philo's work against him (A.D. 38), in which the Jews as a nation were the especial objects of persecution ; (2) at Seleucia about the same time, in which more than fifty thousand Jews were killed ; (3) at Jamnia, a city on the coast of Judea, near Joppa. Many other such national tumults are recorded by Josephus."—Alford.

Wars and rumors of wars.—"It is a singular coincidence that, as there were three Roman emperors, and no more, between the time of Tiberius, in the sixteenth of whose reign the prophecy was delivered, and the time of the destruction of Jerusalem—Caius, Claudius and Nero—the two first of these, almost at equal distances of time asunder, menaced the Jews with a war, which to the eye of human observation seemed all but inevitable, and the last actually carried it into effect. On the first occasion, nothing but the opportune assassination of Caius, and on the second, nothing but the most active exertions on the part of the principal men among the Jews, and the timeliest submission on the part of the nation at large, saved them from the impending danger, Caius having already commanded the president of Syria, Petronius, to carry his orders for the erection of his statue in the temple into execution at the point of the sword ; Claudius having in some measure declared war against the Jews as it was, by ordering all the Jews to quit Rome and Italy within a given time. The time of the first of these events was U.C. 793, 4, A.D. 40, 1 ; that of the second, U.C. 802, A.D. 49.—Greswell.

Be not terrified.—Do not be troubled, and think that the end of the world is at hand. "The strength of hope and the mighty power of faith prevail among us ; and even while the world is tumbling to pieces, our minds are fixed above, and our courage is immovable, and our souls repose full confidence in God."—Cyprian, Martyr of Third Century.

Matt. 24 : 6, 7 ; Mark 13 : 7, 8 ; Luke 21 : 9, 10.

not terrified ; for all these things must come to pass, but the end is not by and by.

Then said he unto them, nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom : and there shall be

The end is not by and by.—"The Greek word here translated evanthy signifies immediately, or presently ; and this was precisely the meaning at the time of our translation."—Sewinton. "The meaning is, that the end of the world will not immediately follow the troublous times predicted in the preceding part of this sentence."—Abbott.

Then said he.—"This clause is peculiar to Luke. It indicates either a break in the discourse, or, more probably, the introduction of more particular details."—Riddle.

Nation shall rise against nation.—Alford makes this refer to the same events as "wars and commotions." Lange says, "Here the subject is great political revolutions in the world, migrations of nations, risings, judgments, blendings, and new formations of peoples." "Bear in mind the massacres at Cesarea, between Syrians and Jews, in which twenty thousand of the latter fell, while in Syria almost every city was divided into two armies, which stood opposed to one another as deadly enemies : the quick succession of the five emperors in Rome within a few years, Nero, Galba, Otho, Vitellius, Vespasian, and the tumults connected therewith in wider and narrower circles."—Van Oosterzee. Even if there is a wider reference, the primary application to such events is undeniable.

Famines and pestilences.—"A great famine, prophesied in Acts 11 : 28, occurred A.D. 49, and another in the reign of Claudius, mentioned by Josephus (Antiq. 3 : 15, 3). A pestilence, A.D. 65, in a single autumn carried off thirty thousand persons at Rome."—Alford. Others are mentioned by Latin historians.

Great earthquakes.—The principal earthquakes occurring between this prophecy and the destruction of Jerusalem were : (1) a great earthquake in Crete, A.D. 46 or 47 ; (2) one at Rome on the day when Nero assumed the manly toga, mentioned by Tacitus, A.D. 53 ; (3) one at Laodicea in Phrygia, A.D. 60 ; (4) one in Campania. Five occurred in thirteen years. As regards the wider fulfillment : The passage combines in one view the whole of the various social, physical, and climatic crises of development in the whole New Testament dispensation."—Lange.

In divers places.—"Place for place, i.e., here and there, each in its particular locality ; as we say, 'up and down,' does not

Matt. 24 : 7 ; Mark 13 : 8 ; Luke 21 : 11.

famines, and pestilences, and great earthquakes in divers places ; and troubles, and fearful sights, and great seem to imply that the earthquakes should be in Judea or Jerusalem."—Peloubet.

Fearful sights and great signs.—"Terrific portents, frightful phenomena, are here reckoned as a hint beforehand of what is more fully stated in verse 25."—Jacobus. "Josephus has given a very particular account of the prodigies of this kind which preceded the destruction of Jerusalem. He speaks of a flaming sword seen over the city, and of a comet which appeared there for a twelvemonth. He mentions a light which for the space of half an hour shone so bright in the night between the temple and the altar, that it seemed as if it were noonday. He takes notice also of what eye-witnesses had related to him, that chariots and armed troops were seen fighting in the sky upon a certain day. He adds, that on the day of Pentecost, when the priests entered into the inner temple, they heard a great noise and voice as of a multitude crying out, 'Let us depart hence.'"—Peloubet. Tacitus also says: "There were many prodigies, presignifying their ruin, which was not averted by all the sacrifices and vows of that people. Armies were seen fighting in the air with brandished weapons. A fire fell upon the temple from the clouds. The doors of the temple were suddenly opened. At the same time there was a loud voice declaring that the gods were removing, which was accompanied with a sound as of a multitude going out. All which things were supposed by some to portend great calamities." "It is, however, evident that the prophecies of these verses (5-8) are not peculiarly applicable to the period immediately preceding the destruction of Jerusalem. The prophecy of Wars and rumors of wars applies with still greater force to the campaigns of Charlemagne, the wars between the popes and the German emperors, the conflicts between Napoleon I. and the allied armies, the more recent wars between France, Italy, Austria and Germany, the various civil wars which have devastated England, particularly the wars of the Roses and the Revolution under Cromwell, and in our own country, the American Revolution and the Civil War. To many of these is equally applicable the declaration that 'nation shall rise against nation.' Of famines, pestilences, and earthquakes there have been more remarkable instances since than before the destruction of Jerusalem, and instances in which the Christian Church has suffered far more severely. I understand Christ's language here to be an admonition to expect a long period of conflict and trial be-signs shall there be from heaven. All these are the beginning of sorrows.

Matt. 24 : 8 ; Mark 13 : 9, 10 ; Luke 21 : 11, 12.

But take heed to yourselves : for before all these they shall lay their hands on you, and persecute you, delivering you up to councils ; and in the ^{Jesus foretells the Persecution of his Disciples.} synagogues and prisons ye shall be beaten : and ye shall be brought before rulers and kings for the end will appear, a prophecy which history has both interpreted and fulfilled."—Abbott.

All these are the beginning of sorrows.—Of "travail." "Not merely of sorrows, but of that labor-pain of the world, out of which the kingdom of God is to be born. The world's anguish is itself a prophecy of the future birth of the kingdom of righteousness."—Abbott. "The death-throes of the Jewish state precede the 'regeneration' of the universal Christian Church, as the death-throes of this world the new heavens and new earth." Alford.

But before all these.—"Better, these things During this period, not after these things have happened."—Alford. Matthew, in the parallel passage (24 : 9) has it "then." "The language here confirms the view that Christ's prophecy in this chapter was not fulfilled by the destruction of Jerusalem and the dispersion of the Jewish nation. It still awaits its perfect fulfillment."—Abbott.

Lay their hands on you.—This is to be understood literally, and was soon fulfilled. See the Acts throughout.

The synagogues.—These were the places of ecclesiastical punishment among the Jews ; so that this refers especially to Jewish persecution, which first befell the disciples, even in foreign countries. See Acts 13 : 50. "There never was found any pretended religious zeal but it was always most certainly attended with a fierce spirit of implacable cruelty."—Erasmus.

Prisons.—This was fulfilled both by Jews and Gentiles. See Acts 5 : 18, and 16 : 24.

Kings.—Compare the conduct of Herod (Acts 12 : 1-3), Paul before Agrippa (Acts 25 : 26), before Cæsar (2 Tim. 4 : 16).

Rulers, or "governors ;" compare Paul before Felix and Festus (Acts 24 : 25).

For my sake.—"It is not persecution, but persecution for Christ's sake, that is predicted ; a distinction with a difference which fanatics fail to perceive. Compare the similar prediction made to the apostles just before they were sent out (Matt 10 :

Chap. XXXIX. Mark 13 : 11 ; Luke 21 : 13-15.

J.C. 34.

for my sake, and it shall turn to you for a testimony against them. But when they shall lead you, and deliver you up, settle it in your hearts to take no thought beforehand what ye shall answer, neither do ye premeditate : but whatsoever shall be given you in that hour, that speak ye ; for it is not ye that speak, but the Holy Ghost. For I will give you a 17, 18).”—Riddle. The early persecutions were, as Tertullian says, a war against the very name of Christ ; for he who was called Christian had, in bearing the name, committed crime enough to be put to death. And the spirit of these early martyrs has been emulated by the disciples of Christ, who have undergone persecution in all later ages. This is the “testimony” borne by the good Ridley in the near prospect of a martyr’s death : “Our weapons are faith, hope, charity, righteousness, truth, patience, prayer unto God ; and our sword, wherewith we smite our enemies, beat, and batter, and bear down all falsehood, is the Word of God. With these weapons, under the banner of the cross of Christ, we do fight, ever having our eye upon our Grand Master, Duke, and Captain, Christ. And then we reckon ourselves to triumph, and to win the crown of everlasting bliss, when, enduring in this battle, without any shrinking or yielding to the enemies, after the example of our great Captain, Christ, our Master, after the example of his holy prophets, apostles, and martyrs—when, I say, we are slain in our mortal bodies of our enemies, and are cruelly and without all mercy murdered.”—Bishop Ridley.

It shall turn to you for a testimony.—“That is, the malice of Christ’s foes shall be made by God a means of testifying to the faithfulness of Christ’s disciples to him, and his faithfulness to his disciples. Thus the blood of the martyrs becomes the seed of the church.”—Abbott.

Settle it in your hearts.—“Make up your minds.”

Take no thought.—That is, do not be anxiously thoughtful. “As long as the contest is among friends, he commands us to take thought (1 Pet. 3 : 15) ; but when there is a terrible tribunal, and frantic assemblies, and terrors on all sides, he bestows the influence from himself, that they may take courage and speak out, and not be discouraged, nor betray the righteous cause.”—Chrysostom.

Neither do ye premeditate.—The exact rendering of the original is, “Neither prepare yourselves by practice,” that is,

Ch. XXXIX.

Luke 21 : 15 ; Matt. 24 : 9.

Apr. 3, J.C. 34.

mouth and wisdom, which all your adversaries shall not be able to gainsay nor resist. Then shall they deliver you up to be afflicted, and shall kill you : and ye shall for making your defence. "They were not to be concerned as to 'how or what' they should speak (Matthew). No studied eloquence would be needed in their defense."—Riddle. "For such dangers the Christian's preparation is that of the heart, rather than that of the head ; trust in God, rather than shrewdness and self-trust."—Abbott. "The same spirit which wrought by their hands would speak by their mouths ; and the same supernatural agency would be as visible in their discourses as in their miracles. . . . The admirable specimens of Christian eloquence which occur in the history of the Acts of the Apostles, so pregnant and sublime in matter, so just and cogent in argument, so animated, rapturous and elevated in expression, are not the words of the mouth which pronounces them, but of the Holy Ghost."—Greswell.

For I will give you.—"The promise is from our Lord himself ; but notice that in the parallel passage in Mark 13 : 11 the power is attributed to the 'Holy Ghost,' and in Matt. 10 : 20 to 'the Spirit of your Father.'"—Riddle. "In this promise we have a remarkable proof of the divinity of our blessed Lord. For he here assures his disciples that when they shall be called upon to defend themselves and their faith 'before kings and rulers,' he, though no longer on earth, will supply them with such powers of speech, and such wisdom, as shall put down all contradiction and resistance."—Lonsdale and Hale.

To gainsay nor resist.—"The better order is 'withstand or gainsay.' The former corresponds to 'wisdom,' the latter to 'mouth.' For a specimen see Acts 6 : 10. The early Christians were often condemned to death the more speedily, because their words could not be answered. Often since, hate is the only response to Christian wisdom (see verse 17). The promise of this verse is for the special emergencies referred to ; the inspiration here promised, 'for a testimony,' is an indirect proof of the inspiration of the apostolic writings which contain this testimony. There is no encouragement here to indolence in preparation for teaching and preaching."—Riddle.

And shall kill you.—Among the four auditors of our Lord were James, who was to be the first martyr among the Apostles, and Peter, upon whom the subsequent prediction in John 21 : 18 was fulfilled. But they were only the first fruits of a great harvest of martyrs.

Matt. 24 : 10 ; Mark 13 : 13 ; Luke 21 : 16.

be hated of all nations for my name's sake. And then shall many be offended, and shall betray one another,

Hated of all nations.—Mark and Luke : “of all men ;” comp. Matt. 10 : 22. “It is difficult for us in these days to understand how literally this was fulfilled. The most shameful practices were attributed to Christians ; and partly in consequence of these falsehoods, partly from hatred of good, they were treated as the offscouring of the earth. Perhaps something like this may occur again. But this need not discourage. While thus hated, Christians won their greatest victories.”—Riddle. “Compare with this warning the blessing which accompanies it (Matt. 5 : 11, 12). Both warning and promise are applicable to all Christ's disciples to the end of time. Compare John 15 : 18–21 ; 16 : 1–4. That the disciples were hated is abundantly illustrated by Gibbon. Tacitus calls the Christians ‘a race of men hated for their crimes.’ Christian character commends itself to the consciences of men, but is hated because it crosses their self-interest, and rebukes, by its very purity, their sin. Chrysostom remarks on the combination of dangers of which Christ warned his disciples—‘the courts of justice, kings, governors, synagogues of Jews, nation of Gentiles, rulers, ruled, their own kinsfolk, and finally the whole combined enmity of mankind.’ The spiritual power of Christ is exemplified in the fact that he could describe such dangers, and yet inspire the twelve with courage to go forth undaunted to meet them.”—Abbott. See also Gibbon's “Rome,” vol. 2., ch. 16.

For my name's sake.—“On account of attachment to me ; or because you bear my name as Christians.”—Barnes. “Even the heathen early caught up the name of Christ, and deemed it odious ; probably the name ‘Christian’ was given in jest (Acts 11 : 26). Bad men, however, have been universally abhorred ; but it was the Christianity of the early disciples, not their errors or personal faults, which called forth this hatred. Now, as then, the world often hates most what it is forced to respect and even to admire.”—Riddle.

Then shall many be offended, or fall away.—“The Apostles understood this of the first century ; see the repeated warnings against apostasy in the Epistles.”—Schaff.

Shall betray one another.—“The parable of the sower prepared us beforehand to expect instances of apostasy everywhere as one of the first and most natural effects of the subjection of Christian principle, and fervor of Christian love, to so severe a trial as persecution.”—Greswell. To illustrate this point, one sentence out of Tacitus (Annal. 50 ; 15), will be sufficient. He, and shall hate one another. The brother shall betray the brother to death, and the father the son ; and children shall rise up against their parents, and shall cause some of you to be put to death. But there shall not a hair of your head perish. In your patience possess ye speaking of the persecution under Nero, U.C. 817, A.D. 64, says : "At first several were seized, who confessed, and then by their discovery a great multitude of others were convicted and persecuted." "From the beginning of fears Christ dates the beginning of apostasy. When troubles and dangers come to a height, then fears begin to work at a height too ; and then is the critical hour. Fears are high, and faith is low ; temptations strong, and resistance weak. Satan knocks at the door ; then fear opens it and yields up the soul to him."—Flavel.

Matt. 24 : 11 ; Mark 13 : 12 ; Luke 21 : 16-19.

Shall not a hair of your head perish.—"Although their lives should be taken (verse 16), yet not a drop of their blood should be shed in vain ; not a hair should fail of its effect, or go for naught."—Whedon. "Some would explain it by adding, 'as long as you are needed for the service of Christ ;' but it is better to understand it as 'not literally, but really true ; not corporeally, but in that real and only life which the disciple of Christ possesses.'"—Alford. "But we may say more than this. It is literally, though not corporeally true, that not a hair of their heads should perish, since not a single suffering of any description, borne for Christ's sake, has perished ; the disciple, as the Master, shall see of the travail of his soul and be satisfied" (Isa. 53 : 11)—Abbott. This view is confirmed by the correct interpretation of the next verse.

In your patience possess ye your souls.—"This verse must be translated : 'in your endurance ye shall win your lives.' The word rendered 'patience' always implies holding out under difficulties ; a change of reading makes it a promise, not a command, the word 'possess' meaning 'gain as a possession.' As regards the last word, it means either 'soul' or 'life ;' in this case it probably refers to the true 'life' of the Christian rather than to his soul, although both may be included."—Riddle. "It is not a mere direction, as our English version renders it, to keep the soul patient in trouble, but a declaration that the Christian obtains his true life by patient endurance of tribulation. The original Greek word rendered patience is literally remaining under ; hence the significance of the promise, applicable to all ages of the church, is that true life is obtained, not by ingenious contrivances to escape from life's ills, but by patiently remaining under whatever burden Christ bids us carry your souls. And many false prophets shall rise, and shall deceive many. And because iniquity shall abound, the love of many shall wax cold. But he that for his sake. It therefore interprets such declarations as Isaiah 53: 4, and is interpreted by such passages as Matt. 10: 39."—Abbott.

Luke 21: 19; Matt. 24: 11-13; Mark 13: 13.

False prophets.—"False teachers. It appears probable that these were Jews, but Rosenmuller interprets this of Christians, to whom it may extend also, for even in that early age they had begun grievously to corrupt the orthodox doctrines. Grotius instances Hymenæus and Philetus, Simon Magus, Carpocrates, Cerinthus, Ebion, and others."—Bloomfield. "A false prophet is not merely an erroneous teacher, but a lying teacher; strictly speaking, one pretending to an inspiration which he does not possess; secondarily, any teacher deliberately deceiving others; it does not properly signify one deceiving himself, and so unconsciously deceiving others (see Matt. 24: 24; 2 Tim. 2: 17, 18; 2 Peter 2: 1; 1 John 4: 1-3). The caution applies directly to such in our time as claim to possess communication with the spirit world, or to be invested with direct and infallible authority to speak for God; indirectly, to all who put on a semblance of piety for selfish purposes, and so get positions of honor as teachers in the church; or who, without that pretence, maintain the position for worldly purposes."—Abbott.

And because iniquity shall abound.—"And because of the prevalence of lawlessness and iniquity of every kind in the world without."

Shall wax cold.—"It is the nature of love to burn."—Ben-gel. "These verses (9-12) indicate four dangers which will assail the church: persecution from without (verse 9); apostasy, schism, and controversy within (verse 10); false doctrine (verse 11); and worldliness and consequent backsliding (verse 12). Each of these dangers came in a small measure upon the Apostolic Church before the destruction of Jerusalem. But these were only the beginning of travail in the church. And in her history, subsequent to the destruction of Jerusalem, the reader must look for a larger fulfilment. Though every age has in some degree all of these tribulations, yet, historically, each age is characterized by its own peculiar form of tribulation, and they follow each other in consecutive order, as indicated in Christ's language here. First comes the period of peril from without—that of imperial persecution; next that of schism and conflict within—that of the Roman Catholic perse-shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved. And this gospel of the kingdom shall be first preached in all the world, for a witness unto all nations ; and then shall the end come.

Ch. XXXIX. Matt. 24 : 13, 14 ; Mark 13 : 10. Apr. 3, J.C. 34.

cutions and of the ecclesiastical conflicts between Roman Catholic, Greek and Protestant communions, and the sectarian strife between the Protestant churches. This has well-nigh passed ; and we are now in the age of 'false prophets,' an age which, with liberty of speech, brings within the church itself much false doctrine."—Abbott on Matthew, condensed.

The same shall be saved.—Many commentators refer this to the destruction of Jerusalem, and affirm from Eusebius (Hist. Eccles. lib. 3 : 5), that the Christians who took refuge at Pella, in the mountainous region of Decapolis, were preserved in the national ruin. "But the principle is a general one. For the individual, 'the end' is the day of his death ; for the church, it is the Advent of Christ, the end of all things. The last sense is the more important one, giving character to the others. Over against the apostasy of 'the many' (verse 12) we have the faithfulness of the few, in spite of false teaching (verse 11), in spite of prevailing wickedness (verse 12), an endurance in love."—Schaff.

This gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world.—"Notwithstanding all these commotions, the Gospel would soon be preached through the various nations of the Roman empire, and in the different parts of the then known world ; for a witness to them, that the Messiah was come, to be 'a Light to lighten the Gentiles,' and 'to be for salvation to the ends of the earth : ' and when this should be accomplished, the end of the Jewish church and state would come. It appears from the most credible records, that the Gospel was preached in Idumea, Syria, and Mesopotamia, by Jude ; in Egypt, Marmorica, Mauritania, and other parts of Africa, by Mark, Simon and Jude ; in Ethiopia, by Candace's eunuch and Matthias ; in Pontus, Galatia, and the neighboring parts of Asia, by Peter ; in the territories of the seven Asiatic churches, by John ; in Parthia, by Matthew ; in Scythia, by Philip and Andrew ; in the northern and western parts of Asia, by Bartholomew ; in Persia, by Simon and Jude ; in Media, Carmania, and several eastern parts, by Thomas ; through the vast tract from Jerusalem round about unto Illyricum, by Paul, as also in Italy, and probably in Spain, Gaul and Britain ; in most of which places Christian churches were planted, in less than thirty years after the death of Christ, which was before the destruction of Jerusalem."—Doddridge.

Matt. 24 : 15 ; Mark 13 : 14 ; Luke 21 : 20.

When ye, therefore, shall see Jerusalem compassed with armies, and the abomination of desolation, spoken of by Daniel the prophet, standing in the holy place, let him that readeth understand, then know that the desolation thereof is Jesus prophesies the Destruction of Jerusalem.

When ye shall see Jerusalem compassed with armies (Luke) and the abomination of desolation spoken of by Daniel the prophet standing in the holy place (Matt.). Some scholars regard these as different expressions to signify the same event ; others suppose that Matthew refers to some inner or domestic sign of the approaching calamity to be seen in Jerusalem and possibly in the temple itself, designated by the phrase Holy Place, while Luke gives the outward and contemporaneous state of things."—Abbott.

The abomination of desolation.—Literally, the abomination which makes desolate. "The commentators generally suppose it to refer to the standards of the Roman army, which contained heathen emblems. . . . But the Roman eagles had been seen in and about Jerusalem for many years. Others refer the words to the internal desecration of the temple by the Zealots. In either case there can be no doubt that Alford is correct in saying : 'Whatever it was, it was a definite, well-marked event, for the flight was to be immediate, on one day (not on the Sabbath), and universal, from all parts of Judea.' When this sign appeared, whatever it was, the disciples were not to think the Messiah was at hand ; they were to flee."—Abbott.

Let him that readeth understand.—"A remark of the Evangelist, probably with a reference to the words of the angel to Daniel (9 : 25) : 'know therefore and understand.' Such an insertion is very unusual, but seems to have been occasioned by the near approach of the events at the date of the writing of this gospel. In the correct reading of Mark 13 : 14, there is no direct reference to Daniel, and hence the reader of the Gospel, not of the prophecy, is meant. Such an understanding was very important for the early Christians."—Schaff. "The object of this addition is to enforce Christ's caution to the disciples, to make good their escape from the doomed city."—Abbott.

The desolation thereof.—"The Romans, under Vespasian, invaded the country, and took the cities of Galilee, Chorazin, Bethsaida, Capernaum, etc., where Christ had been especially rejected, and murdered numbers of the inhabitants. At Jerusalem the scene was most wretched of all. At the passover, when there might have been two or three millions of people in the city, the Romans surrounded it with troops, trenches, and nigh. Then let them that be in Judea flee to the mountains ; and let them which are in the midst of it depart out ; and let not them that are in the countries enter thereinto. And let him that is on the house-top walls, that none might escape. At Jerusalem alone, it is said, 1,100,000 perished by sword, famine, and pestilence. In other places we hear of 250,000 that were cut off, besides vast numbers that were sent into Egypt to labor as slaves."—Whedon. See note on page 661.

Matt. 24 : 16, 17 ; Mark 13 : 14, 15 ; Luke 21 : 21.

Then let them which be in Judea flee into the mountains.—"By Judea must be understood all the southern parts of Palestine, both the plain and the hill countries, which at this time went by the name of Judea. By 'the mountains,' must be understood the countries on the east side of Jordan, especially those which in the time of war were under the government of the younger Agrippa. These countries remaining in their obedience to the Romans, the people who fled into them were safe. It is remarkable, that, by the special providence of God, after the Romans under Cestius Gallus made their first advance towards Jerusalem, they suddenly withdrew again, in a most unexpected and impolitic manner ; at which Josephus testifies his surprise, since the city might then have been easily taken. By this means they gave, as it were, a signal to the Christians to retire ; which, in regard to our Lord's admonition, they did, some to Pella, and others to Mount Libanus, and thereby preserved their lives. 'And if their flight ensued immediately on the defeat of Cestius Gallus, then it was not winter, for the eighth of Dios, on which that defeat happened, corresponded in U.C. 819, A.D. 66, to October 15th, and October, in the Jewish year, was one of the mildest months in their calendar.' Vespasian was deputed in the room of Cestius Gallus, who, having subdued all the country, prepared to besiege Jerusalem, and invested it on every side. But the news of Nero's death, and soon after that of Galba, and the disturbances that followed, and the civil wars between Otho and Vitellius, held Vespasian and his son Titus in suspense. Thus the city was not actually besieged in form till after Vespasian was confirmed in the empire, and Titus was appointed to command the forces in Judea. It was in those incidental delays that the Christians provided for their safety by flight."—Greswell.

Let not them that are in the countries (country districts) enter thereinto, i.e., into Jerusalem.—"Those that dwelt in the country might naturally, on the approach of the Roman legions, enter Jerusalem, either as a protection or to re-enforce it."—Abbott.

Matt. 24 : 17-20 ; Mark 13 : 15-19 ; Luke 21 : 22, 23.

not go down into the house, neither enter therein, to take anything out of his house : and let him that is in the field not turn back again for to take up his garment. And wo unto them that are with child, and to them that give suck in those days ! And pray ye that your flight be not in the winter, neither on the sabbath-day. For these be the days of vengeance, that all

Not go down.—"In the eastern walled cities, the flat-roofed houses had stairs on the outside, and usually formed continued terraces from one end of the city to the other ; which terraces terminated at the gates. So that it was not necessary to come down into the street or the house."—Adam Clarke.

To take up his garment.—The upper garment (the cloak and coat), which husbandmen of the southern countries have ever, when at work, laid aside, or left at home ; they are then said to be naked. (See Mark 14 : 51.) They were to flee without delay, and to let nothing obstruct their flight.

In the winter, neither on the Sabbath day.—"The fifth part of the year, extending from the middle of December to the middle of February, constitutes the winter. The snows, which are then not unfrequent, scarcely continue through the day, except on the mountains ; the ice is thin, and melts as soon as the sun ascends to any considerable height. The north winds are chill, and the cold, particularly on the mountains, which are covered with snow, is intense. The roads are slippery, and traveling is both tedious and dangerous, particularly through the declivities of the mountains (Jer. 13 : 16 ; 23 : 12 ; Sirach 43 : 22.)"—Jahn. "That so neither religious obligation, nor, in winter, the badness of the roads and the shortness of the days, may stay and impede your flight."—Calvin. A Sabbath-day's journey was two thousand cubits, or about five furlongs—five-eighths of a mile ; supposed to be the space between the camp and the tabernacle (Lev. 23 : 3). "On that day the gates of the cities were usually closed (Neh. xiii. 19-22) ; besides, traveling on that day would expose them still more to Jewish fanaticism. The Jewish Christians, up to the time of the destruction of Jerusalem, observed the Jewish Sabbath."—Schaff.

These be the days of vengeance, i.e., of divine vengeance.—"To resist the Roman army would therefore be fighting a vain battle against God himself. We may call to mind the ex-things which are written may be fulfilled. For there shall be great distress in the land, and wrath upon this people—affliction, and great tribulation, such as was not since the beginning of the creation which God created unto this time, no, nor ever shall be. They shall fall by the edge of the sword, and shall be led away captive into all nations : and Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled.

Luke 21 : 22-24 ; Matt. 24 : 21 ; Mark 13 : 19.

pression even of a Titus : 'That God was so angry with his people, that even he feared his wrath, if he should suffer grace to be shown to the Jews,' and how he refused every mark of honor on account of the victory obtained, with the attestation that he had been only an instrument in God's hands to punish this stiff-necked nation."—Lange.

All things that are written.—"The reference cannot be to Christ's previous intimations of the destruction of Jerusalem (John 2 : 19 ; Matt. 21 : 41 ; 23 : 38), for these were not as yet written. The language refers to O. T. prophecies, such as Lev. 26 : 14-23 ; Deut. 28 : 15, etc. ; 29 : 19-28 ; Dan. 9 : 26, 27 ; Zech. 11 ; 14 : 42. —Abbott.

Distress in the land, i.e., of Palestine ; and wrath (of God) upon his people, "the Jews. Let them who wish to eliminate the conception of divine wrath from theology, consider whether they can eliminate such scenes as the destruction of Jerusalem from history."—Abbott.

Great tribulation.—Josephus uses almost the very words of our Saviour : "All the calamities," says he, "which had befallen any nation from the beginning of the world, were but small in comparison with those of the Jews."

Such as was not.—Such were the atrocities and horrors of the siege of Jerusalem, that these words may admit of the most literal acceptance. "As I think no city ever suffered such things, so no nation from the beginning of the world did ever so abound in all manner of wickedness and impiety. O miserable city, what didst thou suffer from the Romans, though at last they set thee on fire to purge thee from thy sins, that can be compared with those miseries which thou hast brought on thyself !" —Josephus.

Shall be trodden down of the Gentiles (comp. Rev. 11 : 2). "The language describes aptly the present and past condition of Jerusalem, which since the dispersion of the Jews has been under the feet of successive Gentile nations, is so now, and is

Matt. 24 : 22, 23 ; Mark 13 : 20, 21.

And except that the Lord had shortened those days, no flesh should be saved : but for the elect's sake, whom he hath chosen, those days shall be shortened.

Then, if any man shall say to you, Lo, here is Christ ; to remain so until the time of the Gentiles shall be fulfilled, i.e., not till they have fulfilled their mission as executors of divine punishment (so Oosterzee and Bengel), but till their time of trial and redemption is past, as the time of trial and redemption of the Jewish nation, as a nation, was ended with the destruction of the Holy City. So, substantially, Alford. The times of the Gentiles are the Gentile dispensation, just as the time of Jerusalem is the Jewish dispensation ; the great rejection of the Lord by the Gentile world, answers to its type, his rejection by the Jews. This being finished, the end of all things shall come, the time of which the destruction of Jerusalem was a type. So we have in Rev. 11 : 18, 'The time of the dead,' which is interpreted there as the time 'that they should be judged.'"—Abbott.

But . . . those days shall be shortened.—" History, both Jewish and heathen, bears testimony to the truth of this part of the prophecy. For we learn from both Josephus and Tacitus, that the Roman commander, Titus, from a desire of glory, and of returning to the pleasures of Rome, determined to bring the siege of Jerusalem to an end as speedily as possible, notwithstanding the opinion of some of his officers, who advised him to reduce the city by blockade, and not by assault. We also learn from Josephus, that the war was brought to a much earlier close than might have been expected, by the conduct of the Jews themselves, who, acting, as it were, under a frenzy sent upon them by God, wasted their strength in their furious contests with each other, burnt their stores of corn, which might have lasted many years (B. Jud. 5 : 50), and of their own accord abandoned to the enemy points of defence, from which nothing but famine could have driven them. Titus himself, when viewing the fortifications of the city, after its fall, declared that it could never have been taken by human means ; and that God himself had interposed on the side of the Romans (B. Jud. 6 : 9)."—Lonsdale and Hale.

Lo! here is Christ.—" We say, Lo, here is Christ! and Lo, there is Christ! in these and these opinions, when, as in truth, Christ is neither here nor there nor anywhere, but where the spirit of Christ, where the life of Christ, is. . . . Do we not make this and that opinion, this and that outward form, or lo, he is there ; believe him not. For there shall arise ^{Jesus describes} false Christs, and false prophets, and shall ^{the} Second Coming. show great signs and wonders ; insomuch that, if it were possible, they shall seduce even the very elect. But take ye heed : behold, I have foretold you all things. Wherefore, if they shall say unto you, Behold, he is in the desert ; go not forth : behold, he is in the secret chambers ; believe it not. For as the light-to be the wedding garment, and boldly sentence those to outer darkness that are not invested therewith? Whereas every true Christian finds the least dram of hearty affection towards God to be more cordial and sovereign to his soul than all the speculative notions and opinions in the world."—Cudworth. "Never will there be peace until Christians agree to differ, and agree to look for the evidences of Christian character in the temper and the life."—Channing.

Matt. 24 : 24-27 ; Mark 13 : 22, 23.

Shall show great signs and wonders.—"The mere presence of prodigies is, of itself, no evidence of revelation or inspiration ; they must accompany truth, which, by its inherent character and blessed fruit, gives divine sanction to the miracle. And the lack of this truth-teaching distinguishes the pseudo miracles of the false prophets of Judaism, of the priests in the middle ages, and of modern spiritualism, from those of the Bible."—Abbott. (Deut. 13 : 1-3.) "The opposite [diabolical] miracles at most can only prove that some invisible beings of great power, who are the abettors of falsehood, are strongly engaged to support the contrary doctrine ; the consideration of which must excite all wise and good men to receive a truth so opposed with greater readiness, and to endeavor to promote it with great zeal ; as they may be sure the excellence and importance of it is proportionable to the solicitude of these malignant spirits to prevent its progress."—Bloomfield.

In the desert—in the secret chambers.—Impostors fulfilled both these predictions ; some drew the people off into the desert, others concealed themselves in secret hiding-places in the city.

As the lightning . . . so shall also the coming of the Son of Man be.—"This cannot refer to the preaching of the Gospel of Christ by the Apostles, as Calvin interprets it, for Christ distinctly declares elsewhere that the Kingdom of God shall come in the Gospel without observation (Luke 17 : 20, 21), nor to the destruction of Jerusalem, as some of the ning cometh out of the east, and shineth even unto the west ; so shall also the coming of the Son of Man be. For wheresoever the carcass is, there will the eagles be gathered together.

Matt. 24 : 28, 29 ; Mark 13 : 24 ; Luke 21 : 25.

But in those days, after that tribulation, the sun shall be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars shall fall from heaven, and there shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars : and modern commentators interpret it, for the Son of Man was not recognized in that event by the Jews, and the very point of this declaration is that Christ's coming shall be recognized universally. It can only refer to his final coming in judgment ; and the connection is this : Be not deceived by false Messiahs, for when I come it will be in such a form that no one can doubt or question ; it will be sudden, public, manifest to all ; observe, not merely as the lightning, but as the lightning when it shines from the East even unto the West ; that is, when the whole heavens are aglow with its light."—Abbott.

Wheresoever the carcass is, there will the eagles be gathered together.—"Modern commentators generally understand 'Where the Jewish nation is, there will the Roman armies, whose national standard was the eagle, be gathered.' But this interpretation does not harmonize with the context. The metaphor is one employed in the Old Testament, where the eagle, or, in more general terms, the bird of prey, represents foreign armies called by God to execute his judgment on a corrupt nation (Deut. 28 : 49 ; Lam. 4 : 19 ; Hosea 8 : 1 ; Heb. 1 : 8). Christ's language here, then, is equivalent to, Judgment will not be inflicted on Jerusalem alone ; that will not be the end ; wherever there is corruption, there will be inflicted the judgments of God. This truth is illustrated in the destruction of Jerusalem, but not less surely and strikingly in the overthrow of Greece and Rome, in the decay of Spain, in the desolations visited on France, and in our own civil war."—Abbott.

After that tribulation.—Immediately after the period of travail and judgment described in Matt. 24 : 4-14 ; 23-28.

The sun shall be darkened.—"Of the language here employed there are two interpretations. One refers it to signs which are to take place at a second and visible coming of upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity ; the sea and the waves roaring ; men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth : for the powers of heaven shall be shaken. Then shall appear the sign of the Son of man in heaven : and then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory.

Matt. 24 : 29, 30 ; Mark 13 : 24-26 ; Luke 21 : 25-28.

Christ—visible phenomena in the heavens at the visible appearance of Christ ; in which sense the rest of the verse needs little explanation except to determine the difference between 'the stars' and 'the powers of the heavens.' The former may mean meteors and the latter the host of stars, or better, the former the stars in general, the latter the greater heavenly bodies that affect the earth (the solar system). This view suggests also the possibility of actual changes in the physical universe to prepare for 'the new heavens and the new earth.' The other view gives it a purely metaphorical meaning, supposing that it was fulfilled at the time of the destruction of Jerusalem. The signification of the language according to this view is as follows: The sun shall be darkened, i.e., the knowledge of Christ, the Sun of the Church and the world, shall be obscured ; the moon shall not give her light ; the reflected light of science, which derives its excellence only from Christ, the true Sun, shall cease to guide (or it may refer to heresy and unbelief in the Church, for that leaves her merely a scientific or temporal organization) ; the stars shall fall from heaven ; the leaders and teachers of the Church shall become apostates ; the powers of the heavens shall be shaken ; the influences which rule human society shall be disturbed.—Abbott.

And upon the earth distress of nations.—“ Literally, a shutting up, as of men in a besieged city. The world will be beleaguered, and from it there will be no escape. Observe that in the original, the word here rendered nations, is that in verse 41 rendered Gentiles. In the destruction of Jerusalem the distress fell upon the Jews, and was inflicted by the Gentiles ; in the time now spoken of (the time of the Gentile nations) the distress will fall upon them ; they will be the beleaguered and the anxious.”—Abbott.

Men's hearts failing them (as in a swoon) for fear (of what they already see) and for expectation of those things coming upon the earth.—On the habitable globe ; not merely upon

Matt. 24 : 31-34 ; Mark 13 : 27-30 ; Luke 21 : 28-32.

And he shall send his angels with a great sound of a trumpet, and they shall gather together his elect from the four winds, from the uttermost part of the earth to the uttermost part of heaven. And when these things begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift up your heads : for your redemption draweth nigh.

And he spake to them a parable : Behold the fig-tree, and all the trees. When his branch is yet tender, and putteth forth leaves, ye see and know Watchful preparation enforced. of your own selves that summer is near.

So likewise ye, when ye see these things come to pass, know ye that the kingdom of God is nigh at hand, even at the door. Verily I say unto you, This generation shall not pass away, till all these things be done.

Judea or Palestine ; this original Greek word is never used with that limited sense in the New Testament. Something more than any of the events which accompanied the destruction of Jerusalem seems to be here intended.

Behold the fig-tree.—

“ Not surer does each tender gem,
Set in the fig-tree’s polished stem,
Foreshow the summer season bland,
Than these dread signs thy mighty hand :

“ But, oh, frail hearts and spirits dark !
The season’s flight unwarned we mark,
But miss the Judge behind the door,
For all the light of sacred lore :

“ Yet is he there ; beneath our eaves
Each sound his wakeful ear receives ;
Hush, idle words, and thoughts of ill,
Your Lord is listening : peace, be still !”

John Keble.

This generation shall not pass away, till all these things be done.—“ As this [word “generation”] is one of the points on which the rationalizing interpreters lay most stress, to show that the prophecy has failed, it may be well to show that the original has, in Hellenistic Greek, the meaning of a race or family of people. For this purpose, see Jer. 8 : 3 (Septuagint) ; compare Matt. 23 : 36 with verse 35, and observe that the then living generation did not slay Zacharias, so that the whole people are addressed. See also Matt. 12 : 45, where the sense

Matt. 24 : 35, 36 ; Mark 13 : 31, 32 ; Luke 21 : 33.

Heaven and earth shall pass away : but my words shall not pass away.

But of that day and that hour knoweth no man, no, not the angels which are in heaven, neither the Son, but absolutely requires that the meaning of "nation" should be attached to the word. See also Matt. 17 : 17 ; Luke 17 : 25 ; 16 : 18. In the latter passage, "The children of this world are in their generation wiser than the children of light," the word generation is predicated both of the children of this world and of the children of light, and evidently not used literally of an age of men. Compare also Acts 2 : 40 ; Phil. 2 : 15. In all these passages generation is equivalent to nation, or nearly ; having, it is true, a more pregnant meaning, implying that the character of one generation stamps itself upon the race, as here in this verse also."—Alford. So that, if this prophecy means not merely that the Jewish nation, as a nation, should not pass away, but, also, that it should not lose its national characteristics amid all the changes of time, then it has been fulfilled in the history of the Jews.

My words shall not pass away.—"Nothing apparently is so fugitive as words, and the words of Christ were spoken, not reduced to writing by him, or in his lifetime ; yet history has demonstrated the truth of this declaration, and his words have proved more enduring than monuments, temples, cities, or even civilizations, and shall in their influence outlast the world itself. Observe in the structure of this promise an additional indication, that the prophecy here relates to the end of the world, not merely to the end of the Jewish dispensation."—Abbott.

Neither the Son.—"Here distinguished from 'angels,' as above them, since there is a climax, 'angels,' 'the Son,' 'the Father.' The verse is to be taken in its plain sense as part of the mystery of Christ's humiliation, a self-limitation, a self-emptying of the God-man."—Schaff. "It is not more extraordinary that there should have been a time when our Saviour, though always God as well as man, was not yet omniscient in the latter capacity, though always so in the former, than that there should have been a time when he was not yet omnipotent in the one capacity, though always so in the other. And if all power, both in heaven and earth, was not communicated to him in his human capacity before his resurrection and ascension, why should all knowledge? . . . The same act of the Father, which committed all power to him in his mediatorial capacity, when he sat down at his right hand, doubtless committed all

Chap. XXXIX.

Matt. 24 : 36-45.

Apr. 3, J.C. 34.

the Father. But as the days of Noë were, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be. For as in the days that were before the flood, they were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage, until the day that Noë entered into the ark, and knew not until the flood came, and took them all away : so shall also the coming of the Son of man be. Then shall two be in the field ; the one shall be taken, and the other left. Two women shall be grinding at the mill ; the one shall be taken, and the other left.

Watch therefore ; for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come. But know this, that if the good man of the house had known in what watch the thief would come, he would have watched, and would not have suffered his house to be broken up. Therefore be ye also ready : for in such an hour as ye think not, the Son of man cometh. Who then is a faithful and wise servant, whom his lord hath made ruler over his household, to knowledge also; for the possession of omnipotence implies the possession of omniscience also."—Greswell.

But as the days of Noë were.—"The second coming of Christ will be sudden and unexpected. Our Lord assumes that there was a flood sent in judgment in the days of Noah. He endorses the history contained in the book of Genesis."—Schaff.

Two women shall be grinding at the mill.—The employment of female slaves. Exod. 11 : 5 ; Is. 47 : 2, etc. Women in the East, one or two together, turn the handmills, having the upper millstone in their hands, and turning it round on the nether one, which is fixed.

Good man of the house.—The same word in the original (Matt. 20 : 50) is translated "householder." In the northern parts of Great Britain, the master of the house is still called "the good man," and the mistress "the good woman."

His house to be broken up.—Literally, "dug through."—"The houses of the East were often built of sun-burnt brick, clay, earth, or even loose stones, through which it was easy to make an opening."—Abbott.

Chap. XXXIX.

Matt. 24 : 46-51.

Apr. 3, J.C. 34.

give them meat in due season ? Blessed is that servant, whom his lord, when he cometh, shall find so doing. Verily I say unto you, that he shall make him ruler over all his goods. But and if that evil servant shall say in his heart, My lord delayeth his coming ; and shall begin to smite his fellow-servants, and to eat and drink with the drunken ; the lord of that servant shall come in a day when he looketh not for him, and in an hour that he is not aware of, and shall cut him asun-

He shall make him ruler over all his goods.—Compare Rev. 2 : 26 ; 3 : 21. But how can each servant be placed over all God's possessions ? Alford answers the question well : "That promotion shall not be like earthly promotion, wherein the eminence of one excludes that of another—but rather like the diffusion of love, in which the more each has the more there is for all." So each saint owns all God's possessions even now (1 Cor. 3 : 21, 22).

Smite his fellow-servants.—"A good man should not be very willing, when his Lord comes, to be found 'beating his fellow-servants.' And all controversy, as it is usually managed, is little better. A good man would be loath to be taken out of the world, reeking hot from a sharp contention with a perverse adversary, and not a little out of countenance to find himself, in this temper, translated into the calm and peaceable regions of the blessed, where nothing but perfect charity and good-will reign forever."—Tillotson. "The arms with which the ill dispositions of the world are to be combated are moderation, gentleness, a little indulgence of others, and a great distrust of ourselves. These are not qualities of a mean spirit, as some may possibly think them, but virtues of a great and noble kind, such as dignify our nature as much as they contribute to our repose and fortune. For nothing can be so unworthy of a well-composed soul as to pass away life in bickerings and litigations, in snarling and scuffling with every one around us."—Edmund Burke.

Drink with the drunken.—"What shall hinder man or woman, under the influence of so powerful an opiate to their understanding as strong drink, from proceeding to any crime ? Nothing on their own part ; for they have drunk themselves into the condition to be their own tempters ; shame, fear, pru-der, and appoint him his portion with the hypocrites : there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth.

Ch. XXXIX. Matt. 24 : 51 ; Luke 21 : 34-36 Apr. 3, J.C. 34.

And take heed to yourselves, lest at any time your hearts be overcharged with surfeiting and drunkenness, and cares of this life, and so that day come upon you unawares. For as a snare shall it come on all them that dwell on the face of the whole earth. Watch ye therefore, and pray always, that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to dence, and reason being all laid asleep."—Bishop Chandler.

 "Drunkenness is a flattering devil, a sweet poison, a pleasant sin ; whosoever hath it, hath not himself. Whosoever commits it, commits not sin ; but he is altogether sin himself."—Augustine.

And shall cut him asunder.—An ancient mode of punishment among the Israelites (1 Sam. 15 : 33 ; 2 Sam. 12 : 31).

His portion with hypocrites.—"Hypocrites are as the freeholders of hell. Other sinners are but as inmates, and have but a portion of their misery."—Caryl.

"Men walk in a vain show ;
 They know, yet will not know,
 Sit still when they should go,—
 But run for shadows,
 While they might taste and know
 The living streams that flow,
 And crop the flowers that grow
 In Christ's sweet meadows.
 Life's better slept away
 Than as they use it ;
 In sin and drunken play
 Vain men abuse it."—Richard Baxter.

As a snare.—The figure is that of the throwing of a net or noose over wild animals. There is a thought of ruinous consequences as well as of suddenness.

On all them that dwell on the face of the whole earth.—"Clearly here our Lord is speaking, not of the destruction of Jerusalem, but of the last great day. And this is usually the meaning in the New Testament of the phrase that day, when used absolutely, as here" (Matt. 22 : 42)—Abbott.

Watch ye, therefore, and pray always.—In prosperity, against the enticements of self-indulgence ; in adversity, against the encroachments of earthly cares.

Pray that ye may be accounted worthy.—"Observe, not pass, and to stand before the Son of man. Take ye heed, watch and pray : for ye know not when the time is. For the Son of man is as a man taking a far journey, who left his house, and gave authority to his servants, and to every man his work ; and commanded the porter to watch. Watch ye therefore : for ye know not when the master of the house cometh, at even, or at midnight, or at the cock-crowing, or in the morning : lest coming suddenly, he find you sleeping. And what I say unto you, I say unto all, Watch.

Luke 21 : 36 ; Mark 13 : 33-37 ; Matt. 25 : 1.

Then shall the kingdom of heaven be likened unto ten virgins, which took their lamps, and went forth to be worthy, but reckoned worthy. Here is the germ of that doctrine of justification by grace through faith, of which we find the elaboration in Paul's epistles" (Rom. 4 : 2-6).—Abbott.

Ye know not when the time is.—"There is nothing more certain than death ; nothing more uncertain than the time of dying. I will, therefore, be prepared for that at all times which may come at any time, must come at one time or another. I shall not hasten my death by being still ready, but sweeten it. It makes me not die the sooner, but the better."—A. Warwick.

The kingdom of heaven likened unto ten virgins.—"The Jewish marriages were generally celebrated in the evening, at the house of the bride's parents, and without any religious ceremonies. After the connubial union was ratified, it was customary for the bridegroom (as among the Greeks and Romans), in the evening, to conduct his spouse from her friends' house to his own home, with all the pomp, brilliancy, and joy that could be crowded into the procession. It was usual for female friends and relations to be invited to grace the procession, and to add numbers and lustre to the retinue ; these, adorned with suitable apparel, took lamps, and waited in a company near the house, till the bride and bridegroom, with their friends, issued forth, whom they welcomed with the customary congratulations ; and with songs and acclamations, and every demonstration of joy, advanced to the bridegroom's house, where an entertainment was provided for the party, according to the circumstances of the united pair. The doors were then shut to prevent strangers from intruding. The like custom still exists among the Hindoos. The festivities lasted seven days."—Greswell.

Took their lamps.—"Each had a lamp for herself, probably

Chap. XXXIX.

Matt. 25 : 1-6.

Apr. 3, J.C. 34.

meet the bridegroom. And five of them were wise, and five were foolish. They that were foolish took their lamps, and took no oil with them : but the wise took oil in their vessels with their lamps. While the bridegroom tarried, they all slumbered and slept. And at midnight there a torch made by winding rags about a piece of iron, and fastening it to a thick wooden staff. The oil was poured on the wick, the vessel containing the oil not forming a part of the torch or lamp."—Schaff.

Took oil in their vessels.—They not only had a sufficiency of oil in their lamps, but they carried a vessel with oil to recruit their lamps, when it should be found expedient. In many parts of the East, instead of torches, they carry a pot of oil in one hand, and a lamp, which is supplied from it, in the other.

The bridegroom tarried.—"Never be discouraged because good things get on so slowly here, and never fail to do daily that good which lies next to your hand. Do not be in a hurry, but be diligent. Enter into the sublime patience of the Lord. Be charitable in view of it. God can afford to wait ; why cannot we, since we have him to fall back upon ? Let patience have her perfect work, and bring forth her celestial fruits. Trust God to weave in your little thread into the great web, though the pattern shows it not yet. When God's people are able and willing thus to labor and wait, remember that one day is with the Lord as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day ; the grand harvest of the ages shall come to its reaping, and the day shall broaden itself to a thousand years, and the thousand years shall show themselves as a perfect and finished day !"—George Macdonald.

"Though the Bridegroom be delaying,
Vet his hand is on the door ;
When he comes, his second staying
Will be with us everinore.

"O my Blessed Saviour, yearning
As my spirit doth for thee,
May my lamp be bright and burning
When thou comest unto me."—Anonymous.

They all slumbered and slept.—"Disciples in the body cannot be occupied always and only with the expectation of their Lord's appearing. Sleep and food, family and business, make demands on them as well as on others, demands which they

Chap. XXXIX.

Matt. 25 : 7-10.

Apr. 3, J.C. 34.

was a cry made, Behold, the bridegroom cometh ; go ye out to meet him. Then all those virgins arose, and trimmed their lamps. And the foolish said unto the wise, Give us of your oil ; for our lamps are gone out. But the wise answered, saying, Not so ; lest there be not enough for us and you : but go ye rather to them that sell, and buy for yourselves. And while they went to buy, the bridegroom came ; and they that were ready went in with him to the marriage : and cannot and should not resist. If the coming of the bridegroom be delayed till midnight the virgins must (naturally will) slumber ; this is not a special weakness of individuals, it is the common necessity of nature."—Arnot. " And observe the implication, if the Christian has grace in his heart, he is always ready, though asleep ; if not, he is unready, though he were wakeful and seemingly watching. Not what death finds us doing, but how death finds us furnished, is the important question."—Abbott.

Arose, and trimmed their lamps, i. e., trimmed the wick and put on fresh oil, so as to make a brilliant flame.—" All " did this ; the foolish virgins were not lacking in the superficial effort of trimming the wick. But mere trimming does little good, if there is no oil.

For our lamps have gone out.—Rather, " are going out." " The trimming of the wick made this apparent. Merely outward Christian appearance will show its insufficiency in the midnight when the bridegroom comes, yet even then be only " going out." This natural request represents what will occur in various forms in the hour here prefigured."—Schaff.

The marriage.—The Greek word rather means, " the apartment in which the marriage feast was kept," or the house where the marriage was celebrated. The marriage ceremony took place before the bride left her father's house, but a feast was given at the house of her husband, and which was also called the marriage, or a part of the marriage solemnities. " The chief lesson of the parable, I take to be this : It is not enough to experience religion once for all, and to join, even with a real experience, the professed band of Christ's followers. Our prayer must be for daily grace, as for daily bread. And those who have been content merely to light their lamps, without providing a supply of oil, that is, to begin a Christian life without the door was shut. Afterward came also the other virgins, saying, Lord, Lord, open to us. But he answered and said, Verily I say unto you, I know you not. Watch therefore, for ye know neither the day nor the hour wherein the Son of man cometh.

For the kingdom of heaven is as a man traveling into recognizing their continual dependence upon God for continual supplies of grace, will at the last find the door of his kingdom shut against them. Thus, the distinction is not between those who merely profess and those who really possess religion, but between those who are content with one experience and those who recognize their need of continuous supply of divine grace.—Abbott.

And the door was shut.—"At a marriage procession I saw the bridegroom came from a distance, and the bride lived at Serampore, to which place the bridegroom was to come by water. After waiting two or three hours, at length, near midnight, it was announced, as if in the very words of Scripture, 'Behold, the bridegroom cometh, go ye out to meet him.' All the persons employed now lighted their lamps, and ran with them in their hands to fill up their stations in the procession; some of them had lost their lights, and were unprepared; but it was then too late to seek them, and the cavalcade moved forward to the house of the bride. Then the company entered a large and splendidly illuminated area, before the house, covered with an awning, where a great multitude of friends, dressed in their best apparel, were seated upon mats. The bridegroom was carried in the arms of a friend, and placed on a superb seat in the midst of the company, where he sat a short time, and then went into the house, the door of which was immediately shut and guarded by sepoys. I and others expostulated with the door-keepers, but in vain."—Ward's "View of the Hindoos," "All things in the world do take their time—the bird to build his nest, and the husbandman to sow his seed, the mariner to go to sea, the gardener to set his trees, the sick patient to take physic, the cook to season meats, and the dresser of the vineyard to gather his fruit. It will be too late to build in summer, to sow in harvest, to go to sea when the ship is launched, to transplant trees when they are old, to take physic when we are dying, to season meats when they are unsavory, and, when winter is come, to gather fruit."—Robert Hill.

The kingdom of heaven is as a man traveling into a far

Chap. XXXIX.

Matt. 25 : 14-18.

Apr. 3, J.C. 34.

a far country, who called his own servants, and delivered unto them his goods. And Parable of the Talents. unto one he gave five talents, to another two, and to another one; to every man according to his several ability; and straightway took his journey. Then he that had received the five talents went and traded with the same, and made them other five talents. And likewise he that had received two, he also gained other two. But he that had received one went and digged in the earth, country.—“The warning here is for those who hide their talent, who, being equipped of God, for a sphere of activity, do yet choose, in Lord Bacon's words, ‘a goodness, solitary and particular, rather than generative and seminal.’”—Trench. “This parable is peculiar to Matthew. Mark 13 : 34-36 contains an abbreviated form of it. Luke 19 : 11-27 contains an analogous parable—that of the ten pounds—which has sometimes been confounded with this, but is different in structure, and was uttered on a different occasion. The same lesson is enforced by the parable of the barren fig-tree” (Luke 13 : 6-9).—Abbott.

His own servants.—Rather, slaves; which class, among the Romans, were employed not only as domestics and farm laborers, but in offices of great trust and responsibility, large sums being often entrusted to their management.

Talents.—The word “talent” in its various forms was in use by all the ancient nations, meaning anything weighed—a definite weight; and in each nation it signified a certain weight or value of precious metal. Our English use of it as faculty, capacity, is metaphorical, and, Webster says, “probably originated in the Scripture parable of the talents.” “The talents here are each person’s ability, whether in money, or in teaching, or in what thing soever.”—Chrysostom.

According to his several ability.—“God always grades his gifts, so that ability and opportunity go together.”—Abbott. “No one is burdened beyond his ability (Exod. 4 : 10-12); therefore, he is justly compelled to render an account.”—Bengel.

Traded with them.—Literally, “labored with them.”—He increased his talents by use and industry. “God never gives graces without an intent of their exercise.”—Bishop Hall.

Digged in the earth.—A common method of hiding treas-

Chap. XXXIX.

Matt. 25 : 18-25.

Apr. 3, J.C. 34.

and hid his lord's money. After a long time the lord of those servants cometh, and reckoneth with them. And so he that had received five talents, came and brought other five talents, saying, Lord, thou deliveredst unto me five talents : behold, I have gained besides them five talents more. His lord said unto him, Well done, thou good and faithful servant ; thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things : enter thou into the joy of thy lord. He also that had received two talents came, and said, Lord, thou deliveredst unto me two talents : behold, I have gained two other talents besides them. His lord said unto him, Well done, good and faithful servant ; thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things : enter thou into the joy of thy lord. Then he which had received the one talent came, and said, Lord, I knew thee that thou art an hard man, reaping where thou hast not sown, and gathering where thou hast not strewed : and I was afraid, nre in the East. This man was not an active evil-doer (Matt. 24 : 48), but simply neglected his talents and opportunities.

I will make thee ruler over many things.—The reward conferred is a larger field of labor. "This principle of reward is constantly illustrated in this life, where fidelity in the smaller sphere leads to the larger one. But it receives its fulfillment in the other life, where reward is not mere kingly honors, but kingly responsibility and labor" (2 Tim. 4 : 8 ; Rev. 2 : 10 ; Heb. 1 : 14).—Abbott.

The joy of thy lord.—The joy is in the work, and the enlarged field of labor. This indicates that the happiness of the future life is not in rest, but in action.

I have gained two other talents.—"He who saves his neighbor's soul as well as his own is the one who doubles his talent."—Quarles. Men with two talents often do more in the world than men with five talents. It is rather the warm heart than the strong head which does good.

I was afraid.—"One of the most common causes of spir-

Chap. XXXIX.

Matt. 25 : 25-30.

Apr. 3, J.C. 34.

and went and hid thy talent in the earth : lo, there thou hast that is thine. His lord answered and said unto him, Thou wicked and slothful servant, thou knewest that I reap where I sowed not, and gather where I have not strewed : thou oughtest therefore to have put my money to the exchangers, and then at my coming I should have received mine own with usury. Take therefore the talent from him, and give it unto him which hath ten talents. For unto every one that hath shall be given, and he shall have abundance : but from him that hath not, shall be taken away even that which he hath. And cast ye the unprofitable servant

itual inactivity and indolence is a morbid fear of making mistakes, of losing the one talent in trading instead of increasing it, of doing harm rather than good by work."—Abbott. "By doing nothing we learn to do what is bad."—Cato.

Reap where I sowed not.—This language is not to be taken as an admission by the master of the injustice charged upon him. It is ironical : You pretend to believe I am such a bad master ? You ought then to have given my money to the exchangers, etc.

Exchangers.—These discharged not only the offices of our bankers, in receiving and giving out money, and giving interest upon it, but also in exchanging coins, and distinguishing genuine from counterfeit money.

With usury.—With interest. — "Anciently usury was the profit, whether great or small, allowed to the lender for the use of borrowed money. As this practice often gave rise to great extortion, the very name at length became odious. The consideration that the Jews were prohibited by their law from taking any profit from one another for money (though they were allowed to take it from strangers), contributed to increase the odium. When Christian commonwealths judged it necessary to regulate this matter by law, they gave to such profit as does not exceed the legal, the softer name of interest ; since which time usury has come to signify solely extravagant profit disallowed by law ; and which, therefore, it is criminal in the borrower to give, and in the lender to take."—Bloomfield. It is not this kind of profit that is here meant, but simply, interest, usance. See note on page 423.

Ch. XXXIX.

Matt. 25 : 30-37.

Apr. 3, J.C. 34.

into outer darkness : there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth.

When the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory : and before him shall be gathered all nations : and he shall sepa-^{The final Judgment.}rate them one from another, as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats : and he shall set the sheep on his right hand, but the goats on the left.

Then shall the King say unto them on his right hand, Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world : for I was an hungered, and ye gave me meat : I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink : I was a stranger, and ye took me in : naked, and ye clothed me : I was sick, and ye visited me : I was in prison, and ye came unto me. Then shall the righteous answer him, saying,

Then shall the King say unto them on his right hand.—“It is the answer made by an ancient father, why Christ should speak at the latter day to those upon his right hand before those upon his left hand ; even because his sweet disposition is more prone to mercy and favor than to wrath and anger, more to the sentence that giveth joy than to that which worketh so bitter woe ; a comfortable consideration for our fearing souls, if we often think of it.”—Babington.

Come, ye blessed of my Father.—“Sweeter than the song of the morning stars over the birth of the world, and sweeter than the song of the seraphim and cherubim over the birth of the Saviour of the world ; and sweeter than all the bugles of salvation, summoning his elect to take their stations in shining garments, and in the sight of the assembled universe, on the right of his throne ; and sweeter even than his own sweet voice, then touched with sorrow, when he said to his disciples, in the night of his agony, ‘In the world ye shall have tribulation, but be of good cheer, I have overcome the world ;’ ay, sweeter than the sweetest of all previous salutations, will be that long-looked-for welcome from the lips of the King, ‘Come ! ye blessed of my Father ! inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world !’”—Thomas H. Stockton.

Chap. XXXIX.

Matt. 25 : 37-45.

Apr. 3, J.C. 34.

Lord, when saw we thee an hungered, and fed thee ? or thirsty, and gave thee drink ? When saw we thee a stranger, and took thee in ? or naked, and clothed thee ? Or when saw we thee sick, or in prison, and came unto thee ? And the King shall answer and say unto them, Verily I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me. Then shall he say also unto them on the left hand, Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels : for I was an hungered, and ye gave me no meat : I was thirsty, and ye gave me no drink : I was a stranger, and ye took me not in : naked, and ye clothed me not : sick, and in prison, and ye visited me not. Then shall they also answer him, saying, Lord, when saw we thee an hungered, or athirst, or a stranger, or naked, or sick, or in prison, and did not minister unto thee ? Then

When saw we thee an hungered, or athirst, or a stranger ? —“They did not think that Christ had been shut in prison with John the Baptist, or that he had begged in Lazarus.”—Farindon. “Men are divided and doomed according to a single law, as they were merciful or unmerciful ; according as their faith wrought in active deeds of love to their brethren, or testified that it was no faith in that it was barren and unfruitful of these.”—Trench. “If he is cast into the flames who refused to give bread to the hungry man, where will his portion be who took it and appropriated it to himself?”—Augustine. “You remember how, in the old legend, St. Brandan in his northward voyage saw a man sitting on an iceberg, and with horror recognized him to be the traitor Judas ; and the traitor told him how at Christmas time, amid the drench of the burning lake, an angel had touched his arm and bidden him one hour to cool his agony on an iceberg in the Arctic sea ; and when he asked the cause of this mercy bade him recognize in him the leper to whom he gave a cloak for shelter from the wind in Joppa, and how for that kind deed this respite was allotted him. Let us reject the ghastly side of the legend and accept its truth, that charity is better than all burnt-offering and sacrifice.”—Farrar.

Matt. 25 : 45, 46 ; 26 : 1-5 ; Mark 14 : 10, 11.

shall he answer them, saying, Verily I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye did it not to one of the least of these, ye did it not to me. And these shall go away into everlasting punishment : but the righteous into life eternal.

And it came to pass, when Jesus had finished all these sayings, he said unto his disciples, Ye know that after two days is the feast of the passover, and the Son of man is betrayed to be crucified. Then ^{Jesus Prophesies his Betrayal.} assembled together the chief priests, and the scribes, and the elders of the people, unto the palace of the high priest, who was called Caiaphas, And consulted that they might take Jesus by subtilty, and kill him. But they said, Not on the feast day, lest there be an uproar among the people ; for they feared the people. Then Judas Iscariot, one of the twelve, went unto the chief priests, to betray him unto them. And when they heard it, they were glad, and promised to give him money. And he sought how he might conveniently betray him unto them in the absence of the multitude.

And these shall go away into everlasting punishment, but the righteous into life eternal.—The same Greek word (aionios) is used in both clauses of this verse, and rendered in one everlasting, in the other eternal. Scholars are not agreed as to its interpretation. A few regard it as a word indicating quality rather than quantity of being, i.e., as indicating the kind rather than the duration of life ; others as indicating an indefinite period, an age or epoch the end of which is not seen or considered, and respecting which we are left in doubt whether it has an end or no ; others regard it as a specific indication of an endless period of time. Of these three interpretations the second seems more in accordance with the original and with the usage of Scripture. It is certainly sometimes used in the Bible, of limited time. (Gen. 17 : 8 ; 48 : 4 ; Lev. 16 : 34 ; Num. 25 : 13 ; Hab. 3 : 6 ; Rom. 16 : 25 ; 2 Tim. 1 : 9 ; Titus 1 : 2.)

Matt. 26 : 17, 18 ; Mark 14 : 12-14 ; Luke 22 : 7-11.

CHAPTER XL.

THE LAST SUPPER.

THEN came the first day of unleavened bread, when the passover must be killed. And he sent Peter and John, saying, Go and prepare us the passover, that we may eat. And they said unto him, Where wilt thou that we prepare? And he said unto them, Behold, Making ready for the Passover. when ye are entered into the city, there shall a man meet you, bearing a pitcher of water ; follow him into the house where he entereth in. And ye shall say unto the good man of the house,

The first day of unleavened bread.—"Thursday, the fourteenth day of Nisan. The feast properly began on the fifteenth, and lasted seven days. But the preceding day was the one appointed for the slaying of the lamb, and on the evening of that day the paschal supper was eaten."—Abbott.

A man meet you.—"This person carrying water would probably be a slave, and the time toward evening, the usual hour of fetching water."—Alford.

Pitcher of Water.—"With peculiar beauty does a man bearing a pitcher of water meet the disciples on their going to prepare the passover, that hence the design of this passover might be illustrated in its effect of entirely washing away the sins of the whole world. For the water is the laver of grace ; and the pitcher denotes the frailty of those human instruments by whom this grace was to be administered to the world."—Bede.

Ye shall say unto the good man of the house.—"The master or owner of the house. During the passover week hospitality was recognized as a universal duty in Jerusalem ; pilgrims and strangers were received, and rooms were allotted to them for the celebration of the feast. But it is not probable that a room would have been given to entire strangers without previous arrangement, and the language which the disciples are instructed to use, 'The Master saith unto thee,' seems to me clearly to indicate that the good man of the house recognized Jesus as Master ; in other words, was in some sense at least a disciple. Whether Christ had previously arranged with him for the use of a room, or whether the instruction to Peter and John was founded wholly on supernatural knowledge of the welcome

Matt. 26 : 18-20 ; Mark 14 : 14-17 ; Luke 22 : 11-14.

The Master saith unto thee, My time is at hand. I will keep the passover at thy house. Where is the guest-chamber, where I shall eat the passover with my disciples ? And he shall shew you a large upper room furnished and prepared : there make ready for us. And they went and found as he had said unto them : and they made ready the passover.

When the even was come, he sat down, and the twelve which would be accorded to him, we have no means of knowing. Jesus knew the projected treachery of Judas ; by confiding in this manner to Peter and John the preparation of the room, he prevented the possible interruption of the feast, since not even one of the disciples knew the place selected for their meeting."—Abbott. "Each householder provided a lamb on the tenth day of Nisan, and on the fourteenth, between three and six o'clock in the afternoon, presented it in the temple, slaying it himself, while the priests received the blood in silver basins to be emptied at the foot of the altar. This took the place of the sprinkling of blood on the door-posts. The fat of the lamb was burned on the altar by the priest ; but the animal itself, with its skin bound about it, was carried home to be used at the feast. The man to whom they applied would be expected to make such preparations in any case, and to have a room where those who celebrated with him should gather to eat the passover."—Riddle.

A large upper room.—"Perhaps the very room where three days afterwards the apostles first saw their risen Saviour ; perhaps the very room where, amid the sound of a rushing mighty wind, each meek brow was first mitred with Pentecost flame."—Farrar.

Furnished.—"The word rendered furnished means literally spread ; that is, spread with carpets, and with couches on which to recline at the table, after the manner of the East."—Barnes.

When the even was come.—"It was towards the evening, probably, when the gathering dusk would prevent all needless observation, that Jesus and his disciples walked from Bethany, by that old familiar road over the Mount of Olives, which his sacred feet were never again destined to traverse until after death."—Farrar.

He sat down—"reclined."—"When they arrived the meal was ready, the table spread, the triclinia laid with cushions for the guests. Imagination loves to reproduce all the probable details of that deeply moving and eternally sacred scene ; and, if

Chap. XL.

Luke 22 : 14-16.

Apr. 6, J.C. 34.

apostles with him. And he said unto them, With desire I have desired to eat this passover with you before I suffer. For I say unto

Beginning of the Passover Meal.

we compare the notices of ancient Jewish custom with the immemorial fashions still existing in the changeless East, we can feel but little doubt as to the general nature of the arrangements. They were totally unlike those with which the genius of Leonardo da Vinci and other great painters has made us so familiar. The room probably had white walls, and was bare of all except the most necessary furniture and adornment. The couches or cushions, each large enough to hold three persons, were placed around three sides of one or more low tables of gayly painted wood, each scarcely higher than stools."—Farrar.

With desire I have desired.—A Hebrew form of expression denoting great desire. This seems to be the first of the special occurrences in the various accounts. The probable order was : (1) this expression of desire ; (2) the strife as to who should be greatest (Luke 22 : 24-30) ; (3) the washing of the disciples' feet (John only) ; (4) the announcement of the betrayal (Luke 22 : 21-23).

To eat this passover.—Not the Lord's Supper, but the passover itself. The order observed in the celebration of this festival was as follows : "First step : After prayer, the father of the house sent round a cup full of wine (according to others, each one had his cup), with this invocation : 'Blessed be thou, O Lord our God, King of the world, who hast created the fruit of the vine !' Next there were passed from one to another the bitter herbs (a sort of salad), which recalled to mind the sufferings of the Egyptian bondage. These were eaten after being dipped in a reddish sweet sauce (charoseth), made of almonds, nuts, figs, and other fruits, commemorating, it is said, by its color, the hard labor of brick-making imposed on the Israelites, and, by its taste, the divine alleviations which Jehovah mingles with the miseries of his people. Second step : The father circulates a second cup, and then explains, probably in a more or less fixed liturgical form, the meaning of the feast, and of the rites by which it is distinguished. Third step : The father takes two unleavened loaves (cakes), breaks one of them, and places the pieces of it on the other. Then uttering a thanksgiving, he takes one of the pieces, dips it in the sauce, and eats it, taking with it a piece of the paschal lamb, along with bitter herbs. Each one follows his example. This is the feast, properly so called. The lamb forms the principal dish. The conversation is free. It closes with the distribution of a third cup, called the

Chap. XL.

Luke 22 : 16-18, 24.

Apr. 6, J.C. 34.

you, I will not any more eat thereof, until it be fulfilled in the kingdom of God. And he took the cup, and gave thanks, and said, Take this, and divide it among yourselves. For I say unto you, I will not drink of the fruit of the vine, until the kingdom of God shall come.

And there was a strife among them, which of them cup of blessing, because it was accompanied with the giving of thanks by the father of the house. Fourth step : the father distributes a fourth cup ; then the Hallel (Ps. 113-118) is sung. Sometimes the father added a fifth cup, which was accompanied with the singing of the great Hallel (Ps. 120-127 ; according to others, 135-137).—Godet.

Until it be fulfilled.—"Until the emblem is fulfilled in the glorious reality."—Whedon. "This refers to the New Testament ordinance—the Lord's Supper—as the fulfillment of the passover ; and to the fact that his death as the Lamb of God would soon give fulfillment to all the ceremonials of the paschal lamb, and that he would then enter into the holiest for them, to present his blood on high for their redemption."—Jacobus.

In the kingdom of God.—"That glorious kingdom of divine rule in the hearts of men, which he was just instituting on earth."—Peloubet.

Took the cup.—The first of the four cups used in the passover. This was the passover-cup, not that of the Lord's Supper.

Gave thanks.—"It appears from the writings of Philo and the rabbins, that the Jews were never accustomed to eat without giving thanks to God, and seeking his blessing. This was especially the case in both the bread and the wine used at the passover."—Barnes.

And there was a strife among them.—"The reader must remember that Luke was not one of the twelve. He was not, therefore, present, and he gives no distinct note of time ; he merely indicates that a strife occurred at about this time, whether before or after the supper he did not perhaps know. The seats at the oriental table were arranged in regular order, the seat nearest the master of the feast being the seat of honor. Contentions for the highest place were common.—Abbott. "Surely there would have been no room for this strife if they had understood the Lord to have invested any one of their number, as Peter, with a supreme authority and distinct jurisdiction above the rest."—Ford. "One very common error misleads the opinion of mankind universally ; that authority is pleasant, submis-

Chap. XL.

Luke 22 : 24-29.

Apr. 6, J.C. 34.

should be accounted the greatest. And he said unto them, The kings of the Gentiles exercise lordship over them ; and they that exercise authority upon them are called benefactors. But ye shall not be so : but he that is greatest among you, let him be as the younger ; and he that is chief, as he that doth serve. For whether is greater, he that sitteth at meat, or he that serveth ? is not he that sitteth at meat ? but I am among you as he that serveth. Ye are they which have continued with me in my tempta-

The Greatest to serve the Least.

sion painful. In the general course of human affairs the very reverse of this is nearer the truth. Command is anxiety ; obedience, ease."—Pascal. " Let all the strife of men be, who shall do best, who shall be least."—Whitcote.

Benefactors.—" The Greek word here used was the actual title of many emperors and princes. It expresses the same idea conveyed by the phrase 'deserved well of the Republic,' so common in republican France, and is analogous to the title Excellency."—Schaff. Examples of this title, assumed by monarchs, are given in Ptolemy, Josephus, and other ancient writers. The very Greek word used by the evangelist was the surname of one of the Ptolemies of Egypt: Ptolemy Euergetes, i.e., the Benefactor. It was a custom among the ancient Romans to distribute part of the lands which they had conquered on the frontiers of the empire to their soldiers ; those who enjoyed such lands were called beneficiarii, benefited persons ; and the lands themselves were termed beneficia, benefices, as being held on the beneficence of the sovereign ; and it is no wonder that such sovereigns, however tyrannical or oppressive they might have been in other respects, were termed benefactors by those who were thus dependent on their bounty.

I am among you as he that serveth.—Point is given to this remark by the supposition that directly afterwards Jesus washed his disciples' feet, the work of the lowest servants. "God, who vouchsafed to be made man for man, for man also vouchsafed to do all the offices of man towards man."—Dr. Donne.

Continued with me in my temptations, or "trials."—" Our Lord does not reproach them, but praises their steadfastness. He speaks of his whole life as one of 'temptations,' in accordance with the scriptural portrayal of his work on earth."—Schaff.

Chap. XL.

Luke 22 : 29-30 ; John 13 : 1-4.

J.C. 34.

tions. And I appoint unto you a kingdom, as my Father hath appointed unto me ; that ye may eat and drink at my table in my kingdom, and sit on thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel.

Now before the feast of the passover, when Jesus knew that his hour was come that he should depart out of this world unto the Father, having loved his own which were in the world, he loved them unto the end. And supper being ended (the devil having now put into the heart of Judas Iscariot, Simon's son, to betray him), Jesus knowing that the Father had given all things into his hands, and that he was come from God, and went to God ; he riseth from supper, and laid aside

And I appoint unto you a kingdom, as my Father hath appointed me.—"That is, the same kind of kingdom ; one to be conquered and governed by love and truth, not by ambition and guile ; a kingdom not of this world, yet over this world (John 18 : 36, 37). Every follower of Christ is, or should be, a prince, as their Leader is King."—Abbott. "The truth and life which Jesus possessed shall come to dwell in them, and thereby they shall reign over all, as he himself has reigned over them. Are not Peter, John, and Paul at the present day the rulers of the world ?"—Godet.

Now before the feast of the passover.—"That is, immediately before ; just as he was about to sit down with his disciples to the paschal feast."—Abbott.

When Jesus knew that his hour was come.—In full consciousness of his approaching end, when he felt the most need of human sympathy, his heart went out most strongly in love to his disciples.

Supper being ended.—Having begun. Ended is a mis-translation. See Godet, Alford, Meyer. "Christ waited till all contention was over ; all had taken their seats and were ready to begin the meal, before he rose to wash their feet."—Abbott.

Jesus knowing that the Father had given all things into his hands.—See Col. 1 : 16. "He acted in the full consciousness of his divine power and majesty. Humility consists not in a low estimate of one's powers, but in a willingness to use them in a lowly service."—Abbott. "Now at length let man blush to be proud, for whom God is become humble."—St. Augustine.

Chap. XL.

John 13 : 5-10.

Apr. 6, J.C. 34.

his garments ; and took a towel, and girded himself.

Jesus Washes the Disciples' Feet.

After that he poureth water into a basin, and began to wash the disciples' feet, and to wipe them with the towel wherewith he was girded.

Then cometh he to Simon Peter : and Peter saith unto him, Lord, dost thou wash my feet ? Jesus answered and said unto him, What I do thou knowest not now ; but thou shalt know hereafter. Peter saith unto him, Thou shalt never wash my feet. Jesus answered him, If I wash thee not, thou hast no part with me. Simon Peter saith unto him, Lord, not my feet only, but also my hands and my head. Jesus saith to him, He that is Girded himself.—Servants, when waiting at table, laid aside their outer garments, and were girded with a towel. "To be thus girded was considered by the ancients in the same light as, with us, a person's wearing an apron—namely, as indicating the exercise of some servile or handicraft occupation."—Bloomfield. "In this feet-washing the feet were not put into the basin ; the water was poured over the feet, and then they were wiped by the servant."—Abbott.

Poureth water into a basin.—This was the office of the meanest slaves. When David informed Abigail that he had chosen her for wife, she said, "Behold, let thine handmaid be a servant to wash the feet of the servants of my lord" (1 Sam. 25 : 41).

Dost thou wash my feet ?—An emphasis needs to be placed upon the words thou and my. "What, Thou ! our Lord and Master, the Son of God, Saviour and Ruler of the world, for me, a worm of the earth, a sinful man, O Lord ? Shall those hands wash my feet, which with a touch have cleansed lepers, given sight to the blind, and raised the dead ?"—Henry.

What I do.—A popular mode of expression for 'The meaning of what I am doing.'

If I wash thee not, thou hast no part with me.—"The phrase 'to have part with another,' signifies to share in his riches and glory (Josh. 22 : 25 ; 2 Sam. 20 : 1). Washing was, it must be remembered, a symbolical act, recognized so among the Jews, and signifying purification from uncleanness. Christ's act in rising from the table and washing the feet of the disciples was the severest rebuke to their pride. Peter's refusal to be-

Chap. XL.

John 13 : 10-15.

Apr. 6, J.C. 34.

washed needeth not save to wash his feet, but is clean every whit : and ye are clean, but not all. For he knew who should betray him : therefore said he, Ye are not all clean. So after he had washed their feet, and had taken his garments, and was set down again, he said unto them, Know ye what I have done to you ? Ye call me Master and Lord : and ye say well ; for so I am. If I then, your Lord and Master, have washed your feet ; ye also ought to wash one another's feet. For I have given you an example, that ye should do as I have done washed was a resistance to this rebuke. That Christ's language was understood by Peter to signify a spiritual cleansing is indicated by his reply."—Abbott.

Needeth not save to wash his feet.—As the Jews wore sandals, the feet required frequent washing ; and if one had bathed wholly during the day, he was, with the washing of his feet, "altogether clean." "This bathing, the bath of the new birth, but only yet in its foreshadowing, in the purifying effect of faith, working by love, the Apostles, with one exception, had ; and this feet-washing represented to them, besides its lessons of humility and brotherly love, their daily need of cleansing from daily pollution, even after spiritual regeneration at the hands of their divine Master."—Alford.

Ye are clean, but not all.—Eleven of you are upright and sincere ; the twelfth is a traitor. So it appears he had washed the feet of all the twelve ; but as no external ablutions can purify a hypocrite or a traitor, therefore Judas still remained unclean.

Know ye what I have done unto you ?—"That is, do you comprehend the reason why it is done, and the meaning of the action ? The disciples are silent. In the following verses Christ goes on to explain its significance."—Abbott.

Ye call me Master and Lord.—Literally, "the Teacher and the Lord."

Ye say well, for so I am.—"The humble office of feet-washing had been done by one who was not only fully conscious of his supremacy, but who in the very act claimed that supremacy. This divine authority Christ never abdicated ; his divine consciousness he never lost."—Abbott.

I have given you an example.—"The master doth not only rule the scholar's book for him, but writes him a copy with

Chap. XL.

John 13 : 15-20.

Apr. 6; J.C. 34.

to you. Verily, verily, I say unto you, The servant is not greater than his lord ; neither he that is sent greater than he that sent him. If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them.

I speak not of you all ; I know whom I have chosen ; but that the scripture may be fulfilled,

He that eateth bread with me,
Hath lifted up his heel against me.

Now I tell you before it come, that, when it is come to pass, ye may believe that I am he. Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that receiveth whomsoever I send, receiveth me ; and he that receiveth me, receiveth him that sent me.

his own hand. Christ's command is our rule ; his life our copy. If thou wilt walk holily, thou must not only endeavor to do what Christ commands, but as Christ himself did it ; thou must labor to shape every letter in thy copy, action in thy life, in a holy imitation of Jesus."—Gurnall. "Are all the treasures, then, of wisdom and knowledge, which are hid in thee, reduced to this, that we should learn this of thee for some great thing, that thou art 'meek and lowly of heart?' Is it so great a thing to be little, that, unless it were done by thee, who art so great, it could not possibly be learnt?"—St. Augustine.

The servant is not greater than his master.—See John 15 : 20 ; Luke 6 : 40 ; Matt. 10 : 24. "The repetition of this seemingly self-evident truth indicates that Christ apprehended for his followers that spiritual pride which has been in the history of the church almost their greatest danger."—Abbott.

"There appears to me to exist an affinity between the history of Christ's placing a little child in the midst of his disciples, as related by the three Evangelists (Matt. 17 : 2 ; Mark 9 : 36 ; Luke 9 : 47) and the history of Christ's washing his disciples' feet, as given by John. In the stories themselves there is no resemblance ; but the affinity which I would point out consists in these two articles : first, that both stories denote the emulation which prevailed amongst Christ's disciples, and his own care and desire to correct them. The moral of both is the same. Secondly, that both stories are specimens of the same mode of teaching, that is, by action ; a mode of emblematic instruction, extremely peculiar, and in these passages ascribed, we see, to

Matt. 26 : 21-24 ; Mark 14 : 18-21 ; Luke 22 : 21-23 ; John 13 : 21, 22.

When Jesus had thus said, he was troubled in spirit, and as they sat, and did eat, he testified and said, Verily I say unto you, One of you which eateth with Jesus Foretells his Betrayal. me shall betray me. Then the disciples looked one on another, doubting of whom he spake. And they began to inquire among themselves, which of them it was that should do this thing. And they were exceeding sorrowful, and began every one of them to say unto him, one by one, Lord, is it I? Is it I? And he answered and said unto them, It is one of the twelve that dippeth his hand with me in the dish—the same shall betray me. The Son of man indeed goeth, as it is written of him ; but wo unto our Saviour, by the three first Evangelists and by St. John, in instances totally unlike, and without the smallest suspicion of their borrowing from each other.”—Paley.

He was troubled in spirit.—“The presence of an uncongenial soul often suffices to destroy the sympathy of a sacred circle ; the presence of a known traitor might well have prevented Jesus from an outpouring of his soul in the confidential converse which renders the 14th, 15th, 16th, and 17th chapters of John the most sacred in the Bible to the disciples of Christ.”—Abbott. “Jesus was man as well as God; and he felt like other men ; and his tender sensibilities were affected not less deeply by baseness and treason.”—Greswell.

One of you which eateth with me.—He had before predicted his betrayal, but now, for the first time, declares that his betrayer shall be one of his familiar friends. It was this which so startled the disciples.

Is it I?—Though all but Judas are unconscious of evil intention, none question the truth of the prophecy. They doubt their own self-knowledge, but not his word.

That dippeth his hand with me in the dish.—It is probable that at this very moment our Lord and Judas, with some other of the disciples, were dipping the bitter herbs that were to be eaten with the paschal lamb in a vessel of vinegar or other sauce then in use, which stood on the table for that purpose. This language did not therefore designate the individual who would betray him, only that his betrayer was one of the twelve, and one who, by eating with him, was under the most sacred pledge to befriend and defend him.

Matt. 26 : 24, 25 ; John 13 : 23, 26.

that man by whom the Son of man is betrayed ! it had been good for that man if he had never been born.

Now there was leaning on Jesus' bosom, one of his disciples, whom Jesus loved. Simon Peter therefore Points out the Traitor. beckoned to him, that he should ask who it should be of whom he spake. He then, lying on Jesus' breast, saith unto him, Lord, who is it ? Jesus answered, He it is to whom I shall give a sop, when I have dipped it. And when he had dipped the sop, he gave it to Judas Iscariot, the son of Simon.

Then Judas, which betrayed him, answered and said, Master, is it I ? He said unto him, Thou hast said.

Leaning on Jesus' bosom.—That is, reclining at table in the place which was next to, and immediately in front of, our Lord. This situation, Kypke observes, was one chiefly assigned to near and dear connections, as wives and children, of which he adduces several examples.

Beckoned.—With a motion of the head, that is, “nodded.” Made signs to John, who was so placed as to inquire without being heard by the rest.

He then lying on Jesus' breast.—“Throwing himself back on Jesus' breast. The original implies an action on John's part, by which he turned and rested more closely than before on Christ's bosom. The graphic details of this entire narrative are unmistakably those of an eye-witness.”—Abbott.

Jesus answered.—That the question was put in a low voice, and answered in the same tone, is evident from John 13 : 28, 29.

When he had dipped the sop.—The Arabian fashion is, for all present to help themselves with their hands out of the same dish. In the East they use neither knife, fork, nor spoon ; nor is delicacy so much violated, if we consider the frequent ablutions, never omitted before and after a meal. The Moors and Arabians wash their hands before every meal, which they eat with their fingers. The food is thrown by a jerk into the mouth, so that the fingers are kept clean. This giving the sop was one of the closest testimonies of friendly affection.

Judas . . . said, Master, is it I ?—“What excessive impudence ! He knew, in his conscience, that he had already betrayed his Master, and was waiting now for the servants of the chief priests, that he might deliver him into their hands ; and

Chap. XL.

John 13 : 27-31.

Apr. 6, J.C. 34.

And after the sop Satan entered into him. Then said Jesus unto him, That thou doest, do quickly.

Judas Withdraws. Now no man at the table knew for what intent he spake this unto him. For some of them thought, because Judas had the bag, that Jesus had said unto him, Buy those things that we have need of against the feast ; or, that he should give something to the poor. He then, having received the sop, went immediately out : and it was night.

Therefore, when he was gone out, Jesus said, Now is the Son of man glorified, and God is glorified in him.

yet he says (hoping that he had transacted his business so privately that it had not yet transpired), Master, is it I? Each of the other disciples said, Lord, is it I? But Judas dares not, or will not, use this august title, but simply says, Teacher, is it I?—Greswell.

No man knew for what intent he spake this unto him.—“Comparing the four accounts, it would appear that Christ’s declaration, ‘One of you shall betray me,’ produced the utmost consternation and excitement ; that all the disciples eagerly asked, ‘Is it I?’ ‘Is it I?’ that Peter asked John to tell him who it was, assuming that John knew, or could ascertain ; that at the same time, Judas, thunderstruck at the disclosure of his treachery, which had been already planned (Matt. 26 : 14-16), asked, perhaps somewhat tardily, the question ‘Is it I?’ to hide his confusion ; that Jesus replied in an aside to him, ‘Thou hast said’ (Matt. 26 : 25)—a reply that in the confusion was not heard or was not heeded ; that John, turning toward Jesus so as to rest upon his bosom, asked who the betrayer should be ; that Jesus seemed to give the information, but really refused to do so in his reply, ‘He it is to whom I shall give a sop,’ since he gave a sop in turn to all ; so that when, a moment or two later, Judas went out angered by what he erroneously believed to be a public disclosure of his treachery before all the disciples, no one, not even John, knew why he had gone.”—Abbott.

And it was night.—A graphic addition to the picture, indicating unmistakably the narrative of an eye-witness. “The night which this miserable wretch has in his heart is, without comparison, blacker and darker than that which he chooses for his work of darkness.”—Qucsnel.

Now is the Son of man glorified.—“The glory of the Chap. XL.

John 13 : 32-35.

Apr. 6, J.C. 34.

If God be glorified in him, God shall also glorify him in himself, and shall straightway glorify him. Little children, yet a little while I am with you. Ye shall seek me ; and, as I said unto the Jews, Whither I go, ye can not come, so now I say to you. A new commandment I give unto you, That ye love one another ; as I have loved you, that ye also love one another. By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another.

Messiah is an already accomplished fact. He has been glorified by his incarnation, his life of loving self-sacrifice, his patience, courage, fidelity, love ; and in his life and character, God has been glorified."—Abbott.

God shall also glorify him, etc.—Ph. ii. 9-11. "Wherefore God also hath highly exalted him, and given him a name which is above every name : . . . and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father."

Little children.—This is the only place where Christ applies this phrase to his disciples. There is inexpressible tenderness in it, and in what immediately follows.

A new commandment.—Not new because now first enjoined, but because love in the life and death of Christ has assumed a new and deeper meaning. "To forgive is now to bless those that curse us, and do good to those that spitefully use us. . . It is notable how this one law of love runs through and colors all this last sacred discourse of Jesus."—Abbott.

As I have loved you.—"Love is its own perennial fount of strength. The strength of affection is a proof not of the worthiness of the object, but of the largeness of the soul which loves. Love descends, not ascends. The might of a river depends not on the quality of the soil-through which it passes, but on the inexhaustibleness and depth of the spring from which it proceeds. The greater mind cleaves to the smaller with more force than the other to it. A parent loves the child more than the child the parent ; and partly because the parent's heart is larger, not because the child is worthier. The Saviour loved his disciples infinitely more than his disciples loved him, because his heart was infinitely larger."—Rowland Hill.

By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples.—The disciples of different teachers were known by some particular rite

Chap. XL.

Luke 22 : 31 ; John 13 : 36, 37.

J.C. 34.

Simon Peter said unto him, Lord, whither goest thou ? Jesus answered him, Whither I go, thou canst not follow me now ; but thou shalt follow me afterward. Peter said unto him, Lord, why can not I follow thee now ? And the Lord said, Simon, Simon, behold, Satan hath desired to have you, that he may sift you as or creed which they adopted. The Pharisees were distinguished by their traditions and ritual observances ; the disciples of John the Baptist by the austerity of their lives, and their frequent fastings ; but Jesus wished the characteristic of his followers to be mutual love. The primitive Christians were particularly known by this among the Gentiles. Tertullian says that the early professors of Christianity were called not Christiana, but Chrestiana, from a word signifying benignity and sweetness of disposition.

And the Lord said.—"Christ appears to have twice warned Peter of his danger, once before the Lord's Supper (Luke ; John 13 : 36-38), once after the supper, and perhaps on the way to the Mount of Olives (Matt. 26 : 31-35 ; Mark 14 : 27-31). At least, this is the more probable hypothesis, though Dr. Robinson regards the four accounts as different versions of the same warning, and some harmonists suppose that the warning was thrice repeated. The immediate occasion of the one here reported is indicated by John. It was Peter's question, 'Why cannot I follow thee now ?' and perhaps also his participation in the strife for the first places at the table, recorded only by Luke."
—Abbott.

Simon.—This was Peter's original name ; Peter was a new name given him by the Lord (John 1 : 42 ; Matt. 16 : 18). It is Simon, not Peter ; the old man, not the new man in Christ, whom Satan hopes to obtain.

Satan hath desired you.—As he demanded Job (Job 1 : 9-12 : 2 : 4-6).

That he may sift you as wheat.—"In the agricultural and domestic life of Palestine, the wheat and the flour from the wheat were shaken in a sieve, to separate the good from the refuse and dirt. This sieve was made of parchment perforated with holes, or of horse-hair, thread, papyrus, or rushes interwoven. The Egyptian, and probably the Jewish, sieves were made of papyrus and rushes. Christ's figure illustrates both the process and the results of temptation. By it, both in the individual and the church, temporary confusion and disorder is produced, but the good and the evil are separated. Thus, in Peter's case, both Chap. XL. Luke 22 : 31-34 ; John 13 : 37, 38.

J.C. 34.

wheat : but I have prayed for thee, that thy faith fail not : and when thou art converted, strengthen thy brethren. And he said unto him, Lord, I am ready to go with thee, both into prison, and to death. I will lay down my life for thy sake. Jesus answered him, Wilt thou lay down thy life for my sake ? Verily, verily, I tell thee, Peter, the cock shall not crow this day, before that thou shalt thrice deny that thou knowest me.

the weakness (of self-confidence), and the strength (of penitence, faith, and love), are clearly disclosed, to himself as well as to others, only by his temptation and temporary fall."—Abbott. "I have often observed that while chaff is being winnowed from the wheat, there is never more than a very irregular movement in the descent of the grain. Sometimes a child of God may be shaken by a strong temptation, but he soon returns to his steady course, and will keep up an undeviating consistency of character, that he may not appear to go among the chaff."—Rowland Hill.

But I have prayed for thee.—Against the demand of Satan is the prayer of Christ.

That thy faith fail not.—The object of Christ's intercessory prayer, the armament that gives the Christian his victory, is faith (1 John 5 : 4, 5).

When thou art converted.—The original means simply, "when thou art turned ;" so translated (Luke 17 : 4), that is, "when thou hast turned to me, after having forsaken me." "When departed from God you are lifted off from the center of your being. And this restlessness of nature, this wretchedness to which you become a prey, this constant and vain effort to forget yourself in the pursuit of vanities, is only an indication of your fallen grandeur, a memento of your proper portion."—Robert Hall.

Strengthen thy brethren.—"His great fault was self-confidence and impetuous haste of feeling and acting ; qualities capable of discipline such as Christ intended for him, of being softened down into manly self-reliance, and earnest, toilsome affection, and yet likely, before they assumed such shape, to lead him into most serious errors. It is interesting to notice how he tried the forbearance of the Master beyond all the other disciples, and how Christ, with a full discernment of his faults, was educating him for a noble work in the world."—Woolsey.

The cock shall not crow.—It is very common in the East to

Ch. XL.

Luke 22 : 35-38.

Apr. 6, J.C. 34.

And he said unto them, When I sent you without purse, and scrip, and shoes, lacked ye any thing? And they said, Nothing. Then said he unto them, But now, he that hath a purse, let him take it, and likewise his scrip : and he that hath no sword, let him sell his garment, and buy one. For I say unto you, that this that is written must yet be accomplished in me,

And he was reckoned among the transgressors :

For the things concerning me have an end. And they said, Lord, behold, here are two swords. And he said unto them, It is enough regulate the time in the night by the crowing of the cock ; as, the midnight cock and the morning cock. The people attach a high value to those birds which crow with the greatest regularity ; and some of them keep the time with astonishing precision.

And he that hath none, let him sell his garment and buy a sword.—"The language of this passage is highly figurative. Jesus reminds his disciples that formerly they might rely on the hospitality of their countrymen ; but now he had been rejected by the nation, and was about to be crucified with robbers ; and they, his followers, must look for no favor. When the disciples produced the two swords, it is not to be supposed that they understood their Master literally. It was natural to do so, without any definite purpose. It is probable that they did not fully comprehend his meaning, and supposed that by showing the swords they might induce him to make a further explanation ; but he was not disposed to do so."—Norton.

This must yet be accomplished in me.—The prophecy referred to is in Isaiah 53 : 12, and plainly relates to the promised Messiah.

Here are two swords.—Probably provided as a protection from the dangers of the way. The road from Jericho to Jerusalem was much infested with robbers ; and it was the custom of the priests, and even of the quiet and ascetic Essenes, to carry weapons when traveling.

It is enough.—"These are enough. It is simply a dismissal of the subject. To interpret Christ's language here, as some Roman Catholic commentators have done, as a warrant for the use of the sword in defending and extending the kingdom of God, is to repudiate Christ's direct and explicit instructions. (See

Matt. 26 : 26, 27 ; Mark 14 : 22, 23 ; Luke 22 : 19, 20.

And as they were eating, the Lord Jesus took bread, and blessed it, and brake it, and gave it to the disciples, and said, Take, eat ; this is my body which is broken for you : this do in remembrance of me. Likewise also after supper, he Matt. 26 : 52-54 ; John 18 : 36). The language here, however, taken with that of Matt. 10 : 9-15, shows clearly that the instructions there given were local and temporary, and they give abundant warrant for foresight and provision in carrying on the work of the kingdom, as, for example, by a regularly paid ministry."—Abbott.

Jesus took bread.—"A loaf, one of the unleavened cakes used at the passover. This answers to the 'third step,' as given above. A comparison of the accounts indicates that about this time Judas went out ; although verses 21-23 seem to oppose this view. But Luke often proceeds with one line of thought, going back to take up another. Matthew and Mark distinctly place the announcement of the betrayal before the institution of the supper, and this position suits the account of John also."—Riddle.

And brake it.—"This breaking of the bread represented the sufferings of Jesus about to take place—his body broken or wounded for sin. Hence Paul (1 Cor. 11 : 24) adds, "This is my body which is broken for you."—Barnes.

This is my body.—I look at a map, and say, 'This is England ; that is France.' I point to a picture, and say, 'That is Luther.' I show you a bust, and say, 'This is Julius Cæsar.' These things, you know, are nothing more than representations. What does Paul say of Ishmael's mother ? 'For this Agar is Mount Sinai in Arabia' (Gal. 4 : 25). He says, too, of the rock that Israel drank from in the wilderness, 'And that Rock was Christ' (1 Cor. 10 : 4). It represented Christ, who was smitten for us. In like manner, how beautifully do the bread and the wine represent his blessed body and blood !—J. Cowper Grey.

This do in remembrance of me.—"This points to a permanent institution. The connection shows that the bread is to be received in memory of Christ's death. But as bread is for nourishment, we are here reminded that Christ nourishes our spiritual life (compare John 1). So in the passover, the lamb, though a sin offering, was not consumed on the altar, but eaten by the household of the offerer. The significance of the common partaking is brought out by Paul (1 Cor. 10 : 17). We are members of the one body of Christ."—Riddle.

Matt. 26 : 27-29 ; Mark 14 : 23-25 ; Luke 22 : 20.

took the cup, and gave thanks, and gave it to them, saying, Drink ye all of it ; for this is my blood of the new testament, which is shed for you and for many for the remission of sins. And they all drank of it. And he said unto them, This do ye, as oft as ye drink it, in remembrance of me. But I say unto you, I will not drink henceforth of this fruit of the vine, until that day when I drink it new with you in my Father's kingdom.

After supper he took the cup.—Evidently the third cup, "the cup of blessing" (1 Cor. 10 : 16). Some time may have elapsed, and the feast was about to close. With this cup our Lord gave thanks (Matthew, Mark) ; that, too, when it signified his death.

The New Testament.—The Greek word for "testament" should be rendered covenant. And the fruit of the vine is the symbol of the new covenant ; that is, the covenant of the new dispensation in the place of the covenant of Moses. A covenant is a compact by which two parties stipulate mutual things. Covenants were anciently made and ratified by or in the blood of a victim sacrificed by the parties.

Shed for you (Matthew 26 : 28), "for the remission of sins."—"Shed" means "poured out." "The figure is taken from the pouring out of the juice from the grape, and this represents the shedding of Christ's blood, when "bruised for our iniquities" (Isa. 53 : 5). These words told the disciples the purpose of his death. They needed such instruction just then. But it tells all, that Christ's death is the ground of our pardon. When we partake of the cup, we show forth his death, confessing that it was the ransom for us. While the "bread" points more to Christ's life in us, and the "wine" to Christ's death for us, the two are inseparable ; for the bread was broken to signify his death also, and the wine is drunk to signify our partaking of his life also.—Riddle.

CHAPTER XLI.

FAREWELL WORDS.

LET not your heart be troubled : ye believe in God, believe also in me. In my Father's house are many

This discourse is sympathetic, not philosophical, or critical ; it is addressed to sympathetic friends, not to a cold or critical audience ; and it is to be interpreted rather by the sympathies and the spiritual experiences than by a philosophical analysis. It sets forth the source of all comfort, strength, guidance, and spiritual well-being in the truth of the direct personal presence of a seemingly absent but really present, a seemingly slain but really living, a seemingly defeated but really victorious Lord and Master. . . . Thus these chapters of John contain a disclosure of the very heart of Christianity, the personal knowledge of a living God by direct communion with him as a teacher, a comforter, an inspirer, the one and only true source of faith, hope, and love. The commentator must point out the connection of the verses and the meaning of the words ; his work must be in a measure critical and cold ; but only the devout heart, which knows by experience that love of Christ which passes the knowledge of the intellect, can interpret the spiritual meaning of the truth, since the condition of understanding it is not a critical knowledge of words or an intellectual apprehension of theology, but a love for Christ, that keeps Christ's words, that recognizes Christ's mission to be also the mission of the Christian, and that abides in Christ in the spirit that it may follow Christ in the life. Without this spirit the student in vain addresses himself to the study of this 'Wisdom of God in a mystery,' hidden except to the soul to whom God hath revealed it by his Spirit (1 Cor. 2 : 7-10).—Abbott.

In my Father's house are many mansions.—“I would regard the universe as God's house, according to the spirit of Isaiah 66 : 1, 'Heaven is my throne, and earth is my footstool,' and the declaration that in it are many dwelling-places, as a new light upon the abode of the dead who die in Christ Jesus. Out of this declaration grows, as a fruitful tree out of a seed, the whole of the discourse contained in this and the two following chapters.”—Abbott. “The more we think of the state after death, the deeper is the awe with which we must contemplate it ; and sometimes in weakness we long for the happy, bright imaginations of childhood, when we saw the other world vivid-

Chap. XLI.

John 14 : 1-5.

Apr. 6, J.C. 34.

mansions : if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go Jesus Comforts his Disciples. and prepare a place for you, I will come again and receive you unto myself ; that where I am, there ye may be also. And whither I go ye know, and the way ye know.

Thomas saith unto him, Lord, we know not whither ly pictured, a bright and perfect copy of the world in which we now live, with sunshine and flowers and all that constituted our earthly enjoyment. In after years we strive to translate these images into something higher. We say, all this we shall have, but in some higher form. . . . All this beauty around us is perishable ; its outward form and substance is corruption ; but there is a soul in it, and this shall rise again."—Sara Coleridge.

If it were not so, I would have told you.— . . . "If our separation was to be an eternal one, I would have forewarned you ; I would not have waited for this last moment to declare it unto you."—Abbott. "Here we have, from the mouth of Christ himself, an express disavowal of religious fraud or imposture ; and that in a point where wise men have sometimes thought themselves at liberty, nay, under an obligation, to lie for the public service ; and in a conjuncture, too, when, if ever, it might seem allowable for a good man to deceive his friends on a mere principle of compassion."—Bishop Hurd.

I go to prepare a place for you.—The figure here is taken from one who, on a journey, goes before his companions to provide a place to lodge in, and to make preparations for their entertainment.

That where I am ye may be also.—

"Forever with the Lord !
Amen : so let it be !
Life from the dead is in that word,
And immortality.

"Here in the body pent,
Absent from him, I roam ;
Yet nightly pitch my moving tent
A day's march nearer home.

"My Father's house on high,
Home of my soul, how near
At times to Faith's far-seeing eye Thy golden gates appear !"
James Montgomery.

Chap. XLI.

John 14 : 5-7.

Apr. 6, J.C. 34.

thou goest ; and how can we know the way ? Jesus saith unto him, I am the way, and the truth, and the life : no man cometh unto the Father, but by me. If ye had known me, ye should have known my Father

I am the way, the truth, and the life.—Christ is the way unto the Father, because he is the truth concerning the Father, and possesses in himself the divine life, and has power to impart it to us. He does not merely reveal the truth ; he is the truth—the truth incarnated in a living form. To come to the Father by Christ as the way is not, then, merely to accept him as an inspired teacher respecting the Father, nor merely as an atoning sacrifice, whose blood clears away the sins which intervene between the soul and the Father (Heb. 10 : 20) ; it is to be conformed to him as to the truth, and to be made partaker of his life (Phil. 3 : 8-14).”—Abbott. “Whatever may be the fate of the question as to the divinity of Christ—textually, and upon the lower grounds of philosophy—it seems impossible to me to accept Jesus as a mere man, without throwing out the most striking elements of his character. All those things which lift themselves above the ordinary horizon of an instructor, and leave us almost groping by their boldness, must be left out, if we so regard him. Christ must have been either insane or divine. If he was a man, for him to have made such claims for himself as he did indicated insanity. On the supposition that he was divine, these claims are rational, and indicate a Being transcending the measure of a man. He was our exemplar of the Father. He was the manifestation of God to men. He epitomized in himself the universal. The obscure in his teaching is that in which he glides from the local and temporary to higher things, that in their nature are universal, and are, therefore, difficult of comprehension by us. “I am the way,”—I am a practical development. “I am the truth,”—I represent the reality. “I am the life,”—not an abstraction, not a system, do I bring. I bring the life itself. I represent to the world, by a practical life, the great elements which concern the world to come. He stands for system, for practice, and for being, all at once.”—Beecher.

No man cometh to the Father but by me.—He now says, “To the Father,” not to the Father’s house ; because, as Godet well says, “It is not in heaven that we are to find God, but in God that we are to find heaven.”

If ye had known me ye should have known my Father also.—A correct knowledge of the character and work of Christ is a correct knowledge of the character and plans of God.

Chap. XLI.

John 14 : 7-9.

Apr. 6, J.C. 34.

also : and from henceforth ye know him, and have seen him.

Philip saith unto him, Lord, shew us the Father, and it sufficeth us. Jesus saith unto him, Have I been so long time with you, and yet hast thou not known me, Philip ? he that hath seen me, hath seen the Father ;

“ The practical lesson for us clearly is, that the way to come to a true spiritual knowledge of the Father is by a study of the life and character of Christ, and, above all, by a sympathetic and personal spiritual acquaintance with him. His disciples had not known Christ. They had up to this time believed in him as a temporal Messiah. Of a Messiah crucified, the power of God and the wisdom of God unto salvation to Gentile, as well as to Jew (1 Cor. 1 : 24), they had known nothing ; and hence, of God, as their Father and their Friend, they knew nothing.”—Abbott.

Philip saith unto him, Shew us the Father and it sufficeth us.—“ He wants to walk by sight and not by faith. He expresses the universal longing of humanity for a vision of the unknown. This request furnishes the text on which the following discourse is founded. Christ replies that the unknown Father is manifested to the world in his Son (Jno. 14 : 9-11) and in the spiritual life, the inward experience, of those that love him and keep his commandments (verses 15-21) ; he points out the way to secure this inward experience, namely, by loving the Son and keeping his commandments (verses 22-26) ; he declares that this indwelling of the Father in the soul of the believer brings abundant peace (verses 27-31) ; it is more than a vision, it is an abiding, by which the life of God flows into the soul of man, making it partaker of the divine nature, and fruitful in works of divine love (John 15 : 1-8) ; this love, patterned after and imbibed from Christ, extends to the world that hates both the Lord and his disciples (verses 9-27) ; this love, born and kept alive by the indwelling of the unseen Father, is the illuminator, the instructor, and the inspirer of him who possesses it, and gives him assurance of the divine love and intimacy of spiritual communion with the divine Being (John 16).”—Abbott.

He that hath seen me, hath seen the Father.—“ As the soul, itself invisible, is seen by what it does through the body.”—Bengel. “ No Christian, even if perfected, could say, ‘ He that has seen me, has seen Christ.’ How much less, then, could a Jew, though perfect, have said, ‘ He that hath seen me, hath seen the Father.’”—Godet. “ Thus, the oneness assumed

Chap. XLI.

John 14: 10-12.

Apr. 6, J.C. 34.

and how sayest thou then, Shew us the Father? Believest thou not that I am in the Father, and the Father in me? the words that I speak unto you, I speak not of myself: but the Father, that dwelleth in me, he doeth the works. Believe me that I am in the Father, and the Father in me: or else believe me for the very works' sake. Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that believeth is shown to be both that of moral excellences and that of efficient operation. In each respect whosoever had seen or known the Son, had so seen or known the Father. The doctrines taught, the miracles performed, the spiritual excellences and glory displayed by the Son, are identically those of the Father. In short, the perfections were the perfections of the Son."—John Pye Smith.

Believe (have faith in) me, that I am in the Father.—"Beware of understanding this as equivalent to Believe me, on my mere personal assurance; this is apparently the interpretation of our English version, and is sustained by even so eminent an authority as Meyer. It is grammatically possible; but it neither accords with Jesus' use of the word 'believe'—which he habitually uses to signify a spiritual apprehension, not merely an intellectual opinion—nor with the spirit of this discourse, which is throughout addressed, not to the formation of correct opinions, but to the building up of a right spiritual apprehension of Christ, and through him of the eternal Father. The meaning is, Have faith in me that I am in the Father, and the Father in me; that is, Look beneath the surface, the flesh; behold in the inward grace, manifesting itself in the outward speech and action, the lineaments of the divine character; so have faith in me as one in whom the Father dwells, and through whom the Father is made manifest. But if this spiritual sense is lacking, then Through, by reason of the works themselves, believe. Christ places his own character in the front rank, as the principal evidence of the divine origin and authority of Christianity. He is his own best witness. But for those who cannot discern the divinity of his life and character, he appeals to the works wrought by him, and by the religion of which he is the founder, and which was more powerful after his death than during his life. The evidence from the miracles, and from the whole miraculous history of Christianity, is secondary to the evidence from the character and person of Christ himself."—Abbott.

Verily, verily, I say unto you. . . . greater works

Chap. XLI.

John 14 : 12-16.

Apr. 6, J.C. 34.

on me, the works that I do shall he do also ; and greater works than these shall he do ; because I go unto my Father. And whatsoever ye shall ask in my name, that will I do, that the Father may be glorified in the Son. If ye shall ask any thing in my name, I will do it.

If ye love me, keep my commandments : and I will than these shall he do ; because I go to my Father.—At Christ's death the whole number of Christian converts does not seem to have exceeded five hundred, and Christianity was utterly unknown outside of Palestine. At John Wesley's death, Methodism had spread over Great Britain, the Continent of Europe, the United States, and the West Indies, and its communion embraced over eighty thousand members."—Abbott. "Pentecost alone was the conversion of three thousand souls. This expression does not seem surprising."—Tholuck.

And whatsoever ye shall ask in my name, that will I do.—For analogous promises to prayer, see Exod. 22 : 27 ; Deut. 4 : 29 ; Ps. 34 : 15 ; 37 : 4, 5 ; Jer. 29 : 12, 13 ; Joel 2 : 32 ; Matt. 7 : 7, 8 ; Mark 11 : 24 ; John 15 : 16 ; 16 : 23 ; James 1 : 5 ; 1 John 2 : 5 : 14, 15. A comparison of these passages shows clearly that God does not give an unconditional promise of affirmative answer to every prayer. This would be to place omnipotence at the command of ignorance and selfishness ; it would be a curse and not a blessing. The condition here is embodied in the words, "In my name."

I will do it.—What inspired prophet or angelic messenger could make such a promise ? "This I, already indicates the glory" (Benger), i.e., the glory of him who is one with the Father.

If ye love me, keep my commandments.—"Love puts a man upon the use of all means to enjoy the thing loved. He that loves the world, how active is he ! He will break his peace and sleep for it. He that loves honor, what hazards will he run ! He will swim to the throne in blood. Jacob loved Rachel, and what would not he do, though it were serving a long apprenticeship, for obtaining her ? Love is like wings to the bird, like sails to the ship ; it carries a Christian full sail to heaven. Heaven is a place of rest and joy : it is a paradise, and will you not love it ? Love heaven, and you cannot miss it. Love breaks through all opposition,—it takes heaven by storm."—Watson. "Morality without religion is only a kind of dead reckoning ; an endeavor to navigate a cloudy sea by measuring the distance we have to run, but without observation of the heavenly bodies."—Longfellow.

Chap. XLI.

John 14 : 16-26.

Apr. 6, J.C. 34.

pray the Father, and he shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you for ever ; even the Spirit of truth ; whom the world cannot receive, because it seeth him not, neither knoweth him : but ye know him ; for he dwelleth with you, and shall be in you. I will not leave you comfortless : I will come to you. Yet a little while, and the world seeth me no more ; but ye see me : because I live, ye shall live also. At that day ye shall know that I am in my Father, and ye in me, and I in you. He that hath my commandments, and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me : and he that loveth me, shall be loved of my Father, and I will love him, and will manifest myself to him.

Judas saith unto him (not Iscariot), Lord, how is it that thou wilt manifest thyself unto us, and not unto the world ?

Jesus answered and said unto him, If a man love me, he will keep my words : and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him. He that loveth me not, keepeth not my sayings : and the word which ye hear is not mine, but the Father's which sent me.

These things have I spoken unto you, being yet present with you. But the Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost,

I will not leave you comfortless.—Literally, orphans. The original word is by some derived from ορφνός, obscure, dark ; because an orphan (one deprived of father and mother) is neglected, and obliged to wander about in obscurity and darkness.

Because I live, ye shall live also.—"I am sure that there is a common spirit that plays within us, and that is the Spirit of God. Whoever feels not the warm gale and gentle ventilation of this Spirit, I dare not say he lives ; for truly, without this, to me there is no heat underneath the tropic, nor any light, though I dwell in the body of the sun."—Sir Thomas Browne.

Chap. XLI.

John 14 : 26-30 ; 15 : 1-4.

Apr. 6, J.C. 34.

whom the Father will send in my name, he shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you. Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you : not as the world giveth, give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid. Ye have heard how I said unto you, I go away, and come again unto you. If ye loved me, ye would rejoice, because I said, I go unto the Father : for my Father is greater than I. And now I have told you before it come to pass, that when it is come to pass, ye might believe. Hereafter I will not talk much with you : for the prince of this world cometh, and hath nothing in me. But that the world may know that I love the Father ; and as the Father gave me commandment, even so I do. Arise, let us go hence.

I am the true vine, and my Father is the husbandman. Every branch in me that beareth not fruit, he taketh away : and every branch that beareth fruit, he purgeth it, that it may bring forth more fruit. Now ye are clean through the word which I have spoken unto you. Abide in me, and I in you. As the branch cannot bear fruit of itself, except it abide in the vine ; no more can ye, except ye

Christ the True
Vine.

I am the true vine.—"The parabolic discourse or allegory of the vine and the branches. . . . illustrates, under the figure of the noblest of fruit-bearing plants, the precious truth of the organic life-union of Christ with believers ; he is the only source of their spiritual life and fruitfulness ; they live in him and of him, and apart from him they must inevitably wither and die, like the branches cut off from the parent stem, although they may retain for a little while a deceitful greenness and appearance of life. The same truth is set forth by Paul under the similitude of the head and the members."—Lange.

Every branch that beareth fruit, he purgeth it.—"Creature comforts are often to the soul what suckers are to a tree, and God takes off those that this may thrive."—Ryland.

Chap. XLI.

John 15 : 4-19.

Apr. 6, J.C. 34.

abide in me. I am the vine, ye are the branches : He that abideth in me, and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit : for without me ye can do nothing. If a man abide not in me, he is cast forth as a branch, and is withered ; and men gather them, and cast them into the fire, and they are burned. If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you. Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit ; so shall ye be my disciples. As the Father hath loved me, so have I loved you : continue ye in my love. If ye keep my commandments, ye shall abide in my love ; even as I have kept my Father's commandments, and abide in his love. These things have I spoken unto you, that my joy might remain in you, and that your joy might be full.

This is my commandment, That ye love one another, as I have loved you. Greater love hath no man than of Love. this, that a man lay down his life for his friends. Ye are my friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you. Henceforth I call you not servants : for the servant knoweth not what his lord doeth : but I have called you friends ; for all things that I have heard of my Father, I have made known unto you. Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you, and ordained you, that ye should go and bring forth fruit, and that your fruit should remain : that whatsoever ye shall ask of the Father in my name, he may give it you. These things I command you, that ye love one another. If the world hate you, ye know that it hated me before it hated you. If ye were of the world, the world would love his own ; but because ye are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you.

Commandment

Chap. XLI.

John 15 : 19-27 ; 16 : 1-6.

Apr. 6, J.C. 34.

Remember the word that I said unto you, The servant is not greater than his lord. If they have persecuted me, they will also persecute you : ^{Jesus Warns his Disciples of Persecution.} if they have kept my saying, they will keep yours also. But all these things will they do unto you for my name's sake, because they know not him that sent me. If I had not come and spoken unto them, they had not had sin : but now they have no cloak for their sin. He that hateth me, hateth my Father also. If I had not done among them the works which none other man did, they had not had sin : but now have they both seen and hated both me and my Father. But this cometh to pass, that the word might be fulfilled that is written in their law, They hated me without a cause. But when the Comforter is come, whom I will send unto you from the Father, even the Spirit of truth, which proceedeth from the Father, he shall testify of me. And ye also shall bear witness, because ye have been with me from the beginning.

These things have I spoken unto you, that ye should not be offended. They shall put you out of the synagogues : yea, the time cometh, that whosoever killeth you, will think that he doeth God service. And these things will they do unto you, because they have not known the Father, nor me. But these things have I told you, that when the time shall come, ye may remember that I told you of them. And these things I said not unto you at the beginning, because I was with you. But now I go my way to him that sent me, and none of you asketh me, Whither goest thou ? But because I have said these things unto you, sorrow hath filled your heart.

Chap. XLI.

John 16 : 6-16.

Apr. 6, J.C. 34.

Nevertheless, I tell you the truth : It is expedient for you that I go away : for if I go not away, the Comforter will not come unto you ; but if I depart, I will send him unto you. And when he is come, he will reprove the world of sin, and of righteousness, and of judgment : of sin, because they believe not on me ; of righteousness, because I go to my Father, and ye see me no more ; of judgment, because the prince of this world is judged. I have yet many things to say unto you, but ye cannot bear them now. Howbeit, when he, the Spirit of truth, is come, he will guide you into all truth : for he shall not speak of himself ; but whatsoever he shall hear, that shall he speak : and he will shew you things to come. He shall glorify me : for he shall receive of mine, and shall shew it unto you. All things that the Father hath are mine : therefore said I, that he shall take of mine, and shall shew it unto you.

A little while, and ye shall not see me : and again, a little while, and ye shall see me, because I go to the Father.

He will reprove the world.—"Even when the Spirit is promised as a Comforter, he comes as a Convincer. The farther a soul stands from the light of truth, the farther he must needs be from the heat of comfort. . . . This conviction is nothing but a reflection of the light that is in the understanding upon the conscience ; whereby the creature feels the weight and force of those truths he knows, so as to be brought under a deep sense of them."—Gurnall. "What a little mind is that of man when compared with infinite intelligence ! yet there is something striking in the thought that this little mind is capable of enjoying the holiness of God, and dealing spiritually with him."—Kowland Hill.

A little while and ye shall not see me.—From now until his death was less than twenty-four hours.

Chap. XLI.

John 16 : 16-24.

Apr. 6, J.C. 34.

Then said some of his disciples among themselves, What is this that he saith unto us, A little while, and ye shall not see me : and again, a little while, and ye shall see me : and, Because I go to the Father ? They said therefore, What is this that he saith, A little while ? we cannot tell what he saith.

Now Jesus knew that they were desirous to ask him, and said unto them, Do ye inquire among yourselves of that I said, A little while, and ye shall not see me : and again, a little while, and ye shall see me ? Verily, verily, I say unto you, that ye shall weep and lament, but the world shall rejoice : and ye shall be sorrowful, but your sorrow shall be turned into joy. A woman when she is in travail hath sorrow, because her hour is come : but as soon as she is delivered of the child, she remembereth no more the anguish, for joy that a man is born into the world. And ye now therefore have sorrow : but I will see you again, and your heart shall rejoice, and your joy no man taketh from you.

And in that day ye shall ask me nothing. Verily, verily, I say unto you, Whatsoever ye shall ask the Father in my name, he will give it you. Hitherto have ye asked nothing in my name : ask, and ye shall re-

Hitherto ye have asked nothing in my name.—“Why is there so little of the life of God in our souls, or the love of God in our hearts, or the peace of God in our bosoms, or the image of God in our lives ? Chiefly, because we are so little in prayer—cordial, fervent, humble, persevering prayer ; because we talk so much about God in public, but so little with God in private ; because we are so much more everywhere than in our closets, and in every exercise than in devotion, and in every attitude than on our knees : and thus, the blessing of the Holy Spirit not being abundantly vouchsafed, because not fervently implored, a withering blight comes over all our doing ; and we read and hear and talk and labor almost, if not altogether, in vain.—Henry Kirke White,

Chap. XLI.

John 16 : 24-33 ; 17 : 1.

Apr. 6, J.C. 34.

ceive, that your joy may be full. These things have I spoken unto you in proverbs : but the time cometh when I shall no more speak unto you in proverbs, but I shall shew you plainly of the Father. At that day ye shall ask in my name : and I say not unto you, that I will pray the Father for you : for the Father himself loveth you, because ye have loved me, and have believed that I came out from God. I came forth from the Father, and am come into the world : again, I leave the world, and go to the Father.

His disciples said unto him, Lo, now speakest thou plainly, and speakest no proverb. Now are we sure that thou knowest all things, and needest not that any man should ask thee : by this we believe that thou camest forth from God.

Jesus answered them, Do ye now believe ? Behold, the hour cometh, yea, is now come, that ye shall be scattered every man to his own, and shall leave me alone : and yet I am not alone, because the Father is with me. These things I have spoken unto you, that in me ye might have peace. In the world ye shall have tribulation : but be of good cheer, I have overcome the world.

These words spake Jesus, and lifted up his eyes to Be of good cheer, I have overcome the world.—

“ A mighty fortress is our God,
A bulwark never failing ;
Our helper he amid the flood
Of mortal ills prevailing.
For still our ancient foe
Doth seek to work us woe ;
His craft and power are great,
And, armed with equal hate,
On earth is not his equal.

“ Did we in our own strength confide,
Our striving would be losing ;
Were not the right man on our side—
The man of God’s own choosing.
Dost ask who that may be ?
Christ Jesus, it is he,
Lord Sabaoth his name,
From age to age the same,
And he must win the battle.”

—Martin Luther.

These words spoke Jesus.—“ It was not till he was on the point of leaving the world that, when he uttered his last earthly

Chap. XLI.

John 17 : 1-6.

Apr. 6, J.C. 34.

heaven, and said, Father, the hour is come ; glorify thy Son, that thy Son also may glorify thee : as thou hast given him power over all flesh, that he should give eternal life to as many as thou hast given him. And this is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent. I have glorified thee on the earth : I have finished the work which thou gavest me to do. And now, O Father, glorify thou me with thine own self, with the glory which I had with thee before the world was.

I have manifested thy name unto the men which thou prayer, Christ no longer retired by himself to hold solitary intercourse with the Father. For the first time he then raised his voice to heaven in the presence of his followers, and permitted them to hear him openly making intercession for them. Jesus knew that, as his hour was at hand, it was time that they should partake more largely of the Spirit of grace. They were gradually ripening into meet witnesses of his resurrection and preachers of his kingdom."—Bishop Sumner.

I have finished the work.—"The leading feature in the character of Jesus Christ unquestionably was, devotedness to the service of God. He lived only to 'do his will.' It was his 'meat and drink,' his daily, hourly, momentary occupation. From this, pleasure had no charms to seduce, pain no power to terrify him. He did 'the will of the Father who sent him.' Fancy can imagine nothing more sublime than the unity of that great purpose."—Bowdler. "Lead such a life as Christ led. No life unlike his can be a Christian life ; and every life, in proportion as it comes near to his, will in that same degree be Christian. Our Saviour did not undergo all those grievous pains for us merely that we should cease to commit sin. It is not for that negative, that slumbering, for that sluggish and inglorious virtue, that he has prepared the glories of his kingdom. He did not come to reign over the dead ; nor was it any part of his purpose to people heaven with drones and sleepers. As his life on earth was active, as he spent his days in working the work of him that sent him, so must all Christians do Christ's work ; and they must strive to do it as cheerfully, as faithfully, and as constantly as Christ did the work of his Father."—Augustus W. Hare.

Chap. XLI.

John 17 : 6-16.

Apr. 6, J.C. 34.

gavest me out of the world : thine they were, and thou gavest them me ; and they have kept thy word. Now they have known that all things whatsoever thou hast given me are of thee : for I have given unto them the words which thou gavest me ; and they have received them, and have known surely that I came out from thee, and they have believed that thou didst send me. I pray for them : I pray not for the world, but for them which thou hast given me ; for they are thine. And all mine are thine, and thine are mine ; and I am glorified in them. And now I am no more in the world, but these are in the world, and I come to thee. Holy Father, keep through thine own name those whom thou hast given me, that they may be one, as we are. While I was with them in the world, I kept them in thy name : those that thou gavest me I have kept, and none of them is lost, but the son of perdition ; that the scripture might be fulfilled. And now come I to thee, and these things I speak in the world, that they might have my joy fulfilled in themselves. I have given them thy word ; and the world hath hated them, because they are not of the world, even as I am not of the world. I pray not that thou shouldest take them out of the world, but that thou shouldest keep them from the evil. They

That they may be one, as we are.—"A high comparison, such as man durst not name but after him who so warrants us."—Leighton. "Nothing has driven people more into infidelity and indifference than the mutual hatred of Christian congregations."—Edmund Burke. "O, be assured, then, that the top and flower of the soul's happiness consist in union with God and Christ Jesus!"—Alexander Grosse. "I have no anxiety or matter of care but one: that the churches may be at peace in Christ."—Melancthon.

That thou shouldest keep them.—"It is not so much general notions of Providence which are our best support, but a

John 17 : 16-26 ; 18 : 1 ; Matt. 26 : 30 ; Mark 14 : 26 ; Luke 22 : 39.

are not of the world, even as I am not of the world. Sanctify them through thy truth : thy word is truth. As thou hast sent me into the world, even so have I also sent them into the world. And for their sakes I sanctify myself, that they also might be sanctified through the truth.

Neither pray I for these alone ; but for them also which shall believe on me through their word ; that they all may be one ; as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us ; that the world may believe that thou hast sent me. And the glory which thou gavest me, I have given them ; that they may be one, even as we are one ; I in them, and thou in me, that they may be made perfect in one ; and that the world may know that thou hast sent me, and hast loved them as thou hast loved me.

Father, I will that they also whom thou hast given me be with me where I am ; that they may behold my glory which thou hast given me : for thou lovedst me before the foundation of the world. O righteous Father, the world hath not known thee : but I have known thee, and these have known that thou hast sent me. And I have declared unto them thy name, and will declare it : that the love wherewith thou hast loved me, may be in them, and I in them.

When Jesus had spoken these words, and they had sung a hymn, they went out into the Mount of Olives.

sense of the personal interest, if I may so speak, taken in our welfare by him who 'died for us, and rose again.'"—Dr. Arnold.

Matt. 26 : 30-36 ; Mark 14 : 26-30 ; Luke 22 : 34-39 ;
John 18 : 1 : 13 : 38.

CHAPTER XLII.

TRIAL AND CRUCIFIXION OF JESUS.

AND Jesus went as he was wont, over the brook Cedron, to the Mount of Olives ; and his disciples also followed him. Then saith Jesus unto them, All ye shall be offended because of me this night : for it is written,

I will smite the shepherd,

And the sheep of the flock shall be scattered abroad.

But after I am risen again, I will go before you into Galilee.

Peter answered and said unto him, Though all men shall be offended because of thee, yet will I never be offended.

And Jesus saith unto him, Verily I say unto thee, That this day, even in this night, before the cock crow twice, thou shalt deny me thrice.

But Peter said unto him, the more vehemently, Though I should die with thee, yet will I not deny thee in any wise. Likewise also said all the disciples.

And they came to a place which was named Gethsem-

Gethsemane.—"At the base of the Mount of Olives, just over the brook Kidron, where the road to Jericho joins that to Bethany, on your right hand, lies a bare and sterile plat of ground surrounded by a wall of unhewn stone. It is shaded by eight aged and gnarled olive trees, upon which the suns of many centuries have risen and set. It is a place of loneliness and seclusion, overhung by the Mount of Olives on the one side, and the western heights of the valley of Jehoshaphat and the embattled walls of Jerusalem on the other. It is just such a spot as a soul desiring to be alone with God would choose, when the shades of evening were gathered over it. Such is Gethsemane."—"A Pastor's Memorial." "It is a plat of ground nearly square, enclosed by an ordinary stone wall. The north-west corner is 145 feet distant from the bridge. The west side measures 150 feet. The spot was not improbably fixed upon during the visit of Helena to Jerusalem, A.D. 326, when the ane, where was a garden, into the which Jesus entered, and his disciples. And when he was at the place he saith to his disciples, Pray that ye enter not into temptation. Sit ye here, while I go and pray yonder.

Matt. 26 . 36-38 ; Mark 14 : 32-34 ; Luke 22 : 40 ; John 18 : 1.

Christ's Agony
in Gethsemane.

And he took with him Peter, and the two sons of Zebedee, James and John, and began to be sore amazed, and very heavy. Then saith he unto them, My soul is exceed-places of the crucifixion, &c., were supposed to be identified. Before that time no such tradition is alluded to. Eusebius, writing apparently a few years afterwards, says Gethsemane was at the Mount of Olives, and was then a place of prayer for the faithful. Sixty years or more afterwards, Ferome places it at the foot of the mountain, and says a church had been built over it, which is also mentioned by Theophanes, as existing near the end of the seventeenth century. The garden was likewise spoken of by Antoninus Martyr, at the end of the sixth century, by Adamnanus, and by writers of the time of the crusades. There would seem, therefore, little reason to doubt that the present site is the same to which Eusebius alludes ; whether it is the true site is perhaps a matter of more question."—Robinson's "Biblical Researches," Vol. I., p. 346.

Began to be sore amazed.—"All his former sufferings were nothing in comparison of his last. 'Tis, therefore, said that at the bare apprehension of them he 'began to be sorrowful,' as if he had never felt any grief till then."—Bates.

My soul is exceeding sorrowful.—"The right understanding of the whole important narration must be acquired by bearing in mind the reality of the manhood of our Lord, in all its abasement and weakness, by following out in him the analogy which pervades the characteristics of human sufferings ; the strength of the resolved spirit and calm of the resigned will continually broken in upon by the inward giving way of human feebleness and limited power of endurance. But as in us, so in the Lord, these seasons of dread and conflict stir not the ruling will, alter not the firm resolve. This is most manifest in his first prayer—'if consistent with that work which I have covenanted to do.' Here is the resolve of the will to suffer—it is never stirred."—Alford. "Afflicted Christians, when you pass through your Gethsemane, do not think solely of its desolation, but also of all its divine beauty since the Redeemer traversed it, and be sure it is this gloomy garden of olives which is nearest ing sorrowful, even unto death: tarry ye here, and watch with me. And he went forward a little, about a stone's cast, and kneeled down, and fell on his face, on the ground, and prayed, saying, O my Father, if it be possible—all things are possible unto thee—let this cup pass from me: nevertheless, not my will, but thine, be done. And there appeared an angel unto him from heaven, strengthening him. And being in an agony, he prayed more earnestly: and his sweat was as it were great drops of blood falling down to the ground.

Matt. 26 : 38, 39 · Mark 14 : 34-36 ; Luke 20 : 41-44.

to the goal. It is there that the narrow gate is opened through which the self-despoiled and the self-crucified pass, kings and priests unto the Lord, and have found in the tears of affliction borne with patience an anointing more holy than Aaron's."—Pressensé.

And there appeared an angel unto him.—"There is some uncertainty respecting the genuineness of this verse. Alford and Tischendorf both retain it, and the explanation of its omission given by Epiphanius is generally accepted, viz., that it was expunged by the orthodox, who imagined it inconsistent with the divine nature of our Lord. Alford asserts that both the appearance and the strengthening were physical; Olshausen that they were inward and spiritual; but neither assigns any reason for his view. The fact that Christ was divinely strengthened to drink the cup, which it was not possible should pass from him, is clear. How that strength was imparted we are not told, and conjectures are worthless. Spiritually, the experience is paralleled by the two experiences of Paul recorded in Acts 27 : 23, 24, and 2 Cor. 12 : 8, 9. In one case there was evidently a visible appearance of the angelic messenger; in the other not. Divine aid was similarly afforded to Christ in the temptation (Mark 1 : 13)."—Abbott.

And being in an agony.—Literally, a conflict.—A mental conflict between the wish to avoid the suffering of the Passion and the supreme purpose to fulfill, at whatever personal cost, the will of the Father.

Great drops of blood.—Doddridge, on this passage, remarks that: "Aristotle and Diodorus Siculus both mention bloody sweats as attending some extraordinary agony of mind; and I find Loti, in his Life of Pope Sextus V., and Sir John Chardin, in his "History of Persia," mention a like phenomenon, to which

Matt. 26 : 40-43 : Mark 14 : 37-40 ; Luke 22 : 45, 46.

And when he rose up from prayer, and was come to his disciples, he found them sleeping for sorrow, and said unto Peter, Simon, sleepest thou ? Couldst not thou watch with me one hour ? Watch and pray, lest ye enter into temptation : the spirit indeed is willing, but the flesh is weak.

Again the second time he went away, and prayed, saying, O my Father, if this cup may not pass away from me, except I drink it, thy will be done. And he came and found them asleep again : for their eyes were heavy, neither wist they what to answer him.

Dr. Jackson adds another from Thuanus." Voltaire, speaking of Charles IX. of France, in his "Universal History," says : " He died in his thirty-fifth year. His disorder was of a very remarkable kind ; the blood oozed out of all his pores. This malady, of which there have been no other instances, was owing to either excessive fear, or violent agitation, or to a feverish and melancholy temperament." " I can see no reason to doubt that this description is to be taken literally ; that our Lord's mental agony so acted upon his physical frame as to produce, not only a perspiration, but one which was discolored by the exudation of blood. It was thus not drops of blood, nor mere drops of perspiration, but drops of a bloody perspiration. Mr. Stroud ("Physical Cause of Christ's Death") has shown that in certain cases of great mental conflict the palpitation of the heart is so greatly increased, and the circulation of the blood so accelerated, that the pressure becomes very great on the blood-vessels, and results, sometimes in a hemorrhage, and sometimes in an exuding of the blood, which mingles with and discolours the perspiration. There are only a few such cases on record ; but they are enough to show that the bloody sweat experienced in the garden of Gethsemane was not an impossible, nor even a miraculous phenomenon, and to throw light upon it as an indication of the degree of the agony experienced."—Abbott.

Sleeping for sorrow.—Dr. Rush says : " There is a symptom of grief which is not often noticed, and that is profound sleep. I have often witnessed it even in mothers, immediately after the death of a child. Criminals, we are told by Mr. Akerman, the Keeper of the Newgate, in London, often sleep soundly the night before their execution. The son of General Custine slept

Matt. 26 : 44-50 ; Mark 14 : 41-45 ; Luke 22 : 47, 48.

And he left them, and went away again, and prayed the third time, saying the same words. Then cometh he the third time to his disciples, and saith unto them, Sleep on now, and take your rest. It is enough, the hour is come ! Behold, the Son of man is betrayed into the hands of sinners. Rise up, let us go ; lo, he that betrayeth me is at hand.

And Judas, which betrayed him, knew the place : for Jesus oftentimes resorted thither with his disciples. And immediately while he yet spake, Judas (having ^{Jesus Betrayed} received a band of men and officers from ^{and} made Prisoner. the chief priests and Pharisees,) cometh thither, and with him a great multitude with swords and staves, and lanterns, and torches. Now he that betrayed him, had given them a sign, saying, Whomsoever I shall kiss, that same is he ; take him, hold him fast, and lead him away safely. And as soon as he was come, he goeth straightway to Jesus, and said, Hail, Master ; and kissed him. And Jesus said nine hours the night before he was led to the guillotine in Paris."—"Diseases of the Mind," p. 319.

Sleep on now. . . . Rise up, let us go.—There we have two subjects of contemplation distinctly marked out for us : the irreparable past, the available future.—F. W. Robertson. See his sermon on this text.

A band of men.—This band was probably those Roman soldiers given by the governor for the defense of the temple ; and the officers were those who belonged to the Sanhedrin.

With lanterns and torches.—"With these they had intended to search the corners and caverns, provided Christ had hidden himself ; for they could not have needed them for any other purpose, it being now the fourteenth day of the moon, in the month Nisan, and consequently she appeared full and bright."—Greswell.

Hail ! Master, and kissed him.—"A kiss was an ordinary mode of salutation among the ancient Jews, as appears from Luke 7 : 45. But the original word here used (which is used also in Luke 7 : 45 ; 15 : 20 ; Acts 20 : 37) denotes that Judas kissed his Master with a more than ordinary show of earnest-unto him, Friend, wherefore art thou come ? Betrayest thou the Son of man with a kiss ? Jesus therefore, knowing all things that should come upon him, went forth, and said unto them, Whom seek ye ?

Matt. 26 : 50, 51 ; Mark 14 : 46, 47 ; Luke 22 : 48-51 ; John 18 : 10.

They answered him, Jesus of Nazareth.

Jesus saith unto them, I am he.

And Judas also, which betrayed him, stood with them. As soon then as he had said unto them, I am he, they went backward, and fell to the ground.

Then asked he them again, Whom seek ye ?

And they said, Jesus of Nazareth.

Jesus answered, I have told you that I am he. If therefore ye seek me, let these go their way: that the saying might be fulfilled which he spake, Of them which thou gavest me, have I lost none.

Then came they, and laid their hands on Jesus, and took him.

When they which were about him saw what would follow, they said unto him, Lord, shall we smite with the sword ? Then Simon Peter, having a sword, drew it, and smote the high priest's servant, and cut off his right ear. The servant's name was Malchus. And Jesus answered and said, Suffer ye thus far. And he touched his ear, and healed him.

ness and affection. Compare 2 Samuel 20 : 9, 10, where a similar instance of treachery is recorded."—Lonsdale and Hale.

Friend.—Rather, companion or comrade.—The same word is used in Matthew 20 : 13, to the guest who had not on the wedding-garment, and in the parable of the marriage feast (Matt. 22 : 12). It was a common form of address, marking courteous distance and strangeness. It here conveys reproach.

Whom seek ye ?—"When men sought to make him a king he fled : now, when they seek to put him to death, he goes forth to meet them."—Stier.

They went backward and fell to the ground.—This may be regarded as either a result produced by the will of Jesus,

Matt. 26 : 52-56 ; Mark 14 : 48-52 ; Luke 22 : 52, 53 ; John 18 : 11.

Then said Jesus unto Peter, Put up again thy sword into the sheath : for all they that take the sword, shall perish with the sword. The cup which my Father hath given me, shall I not drink it ? Thinkest thou that I cannot now pray to my Father, and he shall presently give me more than twelve legions of angels ? But how then shall the scriptures be fulfilled, that thus it must be ?

Then Jesus said unto the chief priests, and captains of the temple, and the elders, which were come to him, Are ye come out as against a thief with swords and staves ? I was daily with you teaching in the temple, and ye stretched forth no hands against me ; but this is your hour, and the power of darkness. But all this was done, that the scriptures of the prophets might be fulfilled.

Then all the disciples forsook him, and fled. And there followed him a certain young man, having a linen cloth cast about his naked body ; and the young men laid hold on him. And he left the linen cloth, and fled from them naked.

or the effect of the simple majesty and dignity of his mien upon his enemies. It was more probably the latter.

Put up again thy sword.—"What is here said to Peter does, indeed, prohibit the use of the sword, but not in a cause of self-defense. For here there was no necessity for Peter's defending himself, since Christ had said, ' Let these go their way, that the saying might be fulfilled which he spake, Of them which thou gavest me I have lost none ; ' nor for his defending Christ, who was unwilling to be defended. Peter, therefore, being a man of irascible temper, was urged on here with a mind of revenging, not of defending, his master."—Grotius.

They all forsook him and fled.—Thus, at once verifying our Lord's prediction, and showing on how weak a foundation their professions of faithfulness had been built. This statement of the desertion of Jesus by " all the disciples " is one of the most remarkable instances of that honesty which led the Evangelists to record facts, though to their own dishonor.

A certain young man.—Greswell says : " I conjecture the young man alluded to was St. Mark the Evangelist ; though

Matt. 26 : 57, 58 ; Mark 14 : 53, 54 ; Luke 22 : 54 ;
John 18 : 12, 13, 15.

Then the band, and the captain, and officers of the Jews took Jesus, and bound him, and led him away to Annas first, (for he was father-in-law to Caiaphas, which was the high priest that ^{Christ} before Annas and Caiaphas. same year.) Now Caiaphas was he which gave counsel to the Jews, that it was expedient that one man should die for the people. And then they that had laid hold on Jesus, led him away, unto the house of Caiaphas the high priest, where were assembled all the chief priests, and the elders and the scribes.

And Simon Peter followed Jesus, afar off, and so did not yet a convert to the gospel. For on no principle, except that of the personal connection of this anecdote with the history of the writer, can we conceive a reason sufficient to have caused its introduction into the body of a narrative with which it would otherwise have absolutely nothing to do. . . . He calls this individual [by a Greek] term which implies that he was under thirty, but more than twenty years of age ; and so, five-and-twenty years, or more, before the first Epistle of St. Peter was written, St. Mark, we might reasonably suppose, would be."—Vol. I. Diss. 2., p. 99.

Simon Peter followed Jesus afar off.—"It was only during that hurried march from the garden to the judgment-hall that Jesus was left literally and absolutely alone ; not one friendly eye upon him, not one friendly arm within his reach. But this temporary solitude, was it not the type of the inner, deeper solitude in which his whole earthly work was carried on ? Not the solitude of the hermit or the monk—he lived ever with and among his fellow-men ; not the solitude of pride, sullenly refusing all sympathy and aid ; not the solitude of selfishness, creating around its icy center a cold, bleak, barren wilderness ; not the solitude of sickly sentimentality, forever crying out that it can find no one to understand or appreciate. No ; but the solitude of a pure, holy, heavenly spirit, into all whose deeper thoughts there was not a single human being near him or around him who could enter ; with all whose deeper feelings there was not one who could sympathize ; whose truest, deepest motives, ends, and objects, in living and dying as he did, not one could comprehend."—Hanna. "From Peter's

Matt. 26 : 58, 69, 71 ; Mark 14 : 54, 66-69 ; Luke 22 : 54-58 ;
John 18 : 15-18, 25.

another disciple. That disciple was known unto the high priest, and went in with Jesus, into the palace of the high priest. But Peter stood Peter's denial. at the door without. Then went out that other disciple which was known unto the high priest, and spake unto her that kept the door, and brought in Peter.

And the servants and officers stood there, and when they had kindled a fire of coals, in the midst of the hall, (for it was cold) they sat down together and warmed themselves: and Peter warmed himself at the fire, and sat down among the servants to see the end.

And as Peter was beneath in the palace, there cometh one of the maids of the high priest: the damsel that kept the door. And when she saw Peter warming himself, she looked upon him earnestly, and said, This man was also with him; and unto Peter, Art not thou also one of this man's disciples? But he denied before them all, saying, Woman, I know him not, neither understand I what thou sayest.

And he went out into the porch, and the cock crew.

And after a little while, when he was gone out into the porch, another maid saw him, and said unto them that were there, This fellow was also with Jesus of Nazareth.

'following afar off' we see that fear and shame had begun to work; when he got to the palace, instead of manfully following his master up to the council-room, to stand as witness in his defense, he stood loitering at the gate below."—Cecil.

Her that kept the door.—This office, though it was among the Greeks and Romans confined to men, was, in the greater simplicity of Jewish manners, chiefly exercised by maidservants.

Palace.—More correctly, court.—The open space in the center of the palace.

The porch.—The entrance, or the small apartment between the outer door and the large hall in the center of the building.—

Matt. 26 : 72-75 ; Mark 14 : 70-72 ; Luke 22 : 58-62 ;
John 18 : 25-27, 19-22.

They said therefore unto him, Art not thou also one of his disciples? And again he denied with an oath, and said, I am not. I do not know the man.

And about the space of one hour after, one of the servants of the high priest (being his kinsman whose ear Peter cut off) saith, Did not I see thee in the garden with him? And another confidently affirmed, saying, Of a truth this fellow also was with him; for he is a Galilean. And they that stood by said again to Peter, Surely thou art one of them: for thou art a Galilean, and thy speech agreeth thereto. Then began he to curse and to swear, saying, Man, I know not what thou sayest,—I know not this man of whom ye speak. And immediately, while he yet spake, the cock crew the second time.

And the Lord turned, and looked upon Peter. And Peter called to mind the word of the Lord, how he had said unto him, Before the cock crow twice, thou shalt deny me thrice. And when he thought thereon, he went out and wept bitterly.

The high priest then asked Jesus of his disciples, and of his doctrine. Jesus answered him, I spake openly to the world; I ever taught in the synagogue, Caiaphas questions Jesus. and in the temple, whither the Jews always resort; and in secret have I said nothing. Why askest

Peter was embarrassed and confused by the question, and went away from the fire into the porch, where he expected to be unobserved. But by the very movement to avoid detection he came into contact with another who knew him, and repeated the charge. How clearly does it prove that our Lord was omniscient, that all these things were foreseen.

The Lord turned and looked upon Peter.—“They whom Jesus looks on mourn their misdeeds. St. Peter at first denied, yet wept not; for the Lord had not looked on him. St. Peter a second time denied, yet wept not; for the Lord hitherto had

Matt. 26 : 59-65 ; Mark 14 : 55-63 ; Luke 22 : 63 ;
John 18 : 23, 24.

thou me? ask them which heard me, what I have said unto them: behold, they know what I said.

And when he had thus spoken, one of the officers which stood by, struck Jesus with the palm of his hand, saying, Answerest thou the high priest so?

Jesus answered him, If I have spoken evil, bear witness of the evil: but if well, why smitest thou me? (Now, Annas had sent him bound unto Caiaphas the high priest.)

And the chief priests and all the council, sought false witness against Jesus, to put him to death; but found none: yea, though many false witnesses came, yet found they none. For many bare false witness against him, but their witness agreed not together. At the last came two false witnesses, saying, We have heard him say, I will destroy this temple that is made with hands, and within three days I will build another made without hands. But neither so did their witness agree together.

And the high priest stood up in the midst, and asked Jesus, saying, Answerest thou nothing? what is it which these witness against thee?

But Jesus held his peace, and answered nothing.

Again the high priest said unto him, I adjure thee by not looked on him. He denied a third time, and Jesus looked on him; and, then, he wept most bitterly."—Ambrose.

One of the officers struck Jesus with the palm of his hand.—"Affronts and indignities which the world thinks it right never to pardon, the Son of God endures with a divine meekness! Let us cast at the feet of Jesus Christ, thus unworthily treated by his creatures, that false honor, that quick sense of affronts, that mischievous refinement which is punctilious about a trifle, which exaggerates everything and pardons nothing, and, above all, that devilish determination in resenting injuries. The more he is abased for us the more we ought to adore him."—Quesnel.

Matt. 26 : 65-68 ; Mark 14 : 64, 65 ; Luke 22 : 67-71 ; 63-65.

the living God, that thou tell us whether thou be the Christ the Son of God. Jesus saith unto him, I am : and, I say unto you, Hereafter shall ye see the Son of man sitting on the right hand of power, and coming in the clouds of heaven.

Then the high priest rent his clothes, saying, He hath spoken blasphemy ; what further need have we of witnesses ? behold, now ye have heard his blasphemy. What think ye ?

They answered and said, He is guilty of death ; and they all condemned him to be guilty of death.

Then the men that held Jesus mocked him, and smote him. And some began to spit on him, and buffet him, and the servants did strike him with the palms of their hands. And when they had blindfolded him, they struck him on the face, and asked him, saying, Prophecy unto us thou Christ who is he that smote thee ? And many other things blasphemously spake they against him.

And as soon as it was day, all the chief priests with the elders of the people and the scribes, and the whole council came together and held a consultation against Jesus to put him to death, and led him into their council, saying, Art thou the Christ ? tell us.

Jesus before the Sanhedrin.

And as soon as it was day.—From Matt. 26 : 59 it is evident that they had begun this consultation the preceding evening. But, as it was contrary to all forms of law, and expressly forbidden in their own canons, to spend the night in judging of a capital cause, or to proceed against a person's life by night, they seem to have separated for a few hours, and then, at the break of day, to have come together again, pretending to conduct the business according to the forms of law.

Held a consultation.—"Their objects were, to obtain the confirmation of their sentence from Pilate ; and, by charges of sedition, to engage the Roman governor to carry into effect the Roman method of execution by crucifixion."--R. Watson.

And he said unto them, If I tell you, ye will not believe. And if I also ask you, ye will not answer me, nor let me go. Hereafter shall the Son of man sit on the right hand of the power of God.

Then said they all, Art thou then the Son of God? And he said unto them, Ye say that I am. And they said, What need we any further witness? for we ourselves have heard of his own mouth.

Then Judas, which had betrayed him, when he saw Judas repents that he was condemned, repented himself, ^{and} hangs himself. and brought again the thirty pieces of silver to the chief priests and elders, saying, I have sinned in that I have betrayed the innocent blood.

And they said, What is that to us? see thou to that.

And he cast down the pieces of silver in the temple, and departed, and went and hanged himself, and falling head-long, he burst asunder in the midst and all his bowels gushed out. And it was known unto all the dwellers at Jerusalem. And the chief priests took the silver pieces, and said, It is not lawful for to put them into the treasury, because it is the price of blood. And they took counsel,

Cast down the . . . silver in the temple.—"Properly signifies the sanctuary or temple, round which the courts were built; a place into which Judas, not being a priest, could not enter. The words translated "in the temple" must, therefore, either signify, near the temple, by the temple door, where the boxes stood to receive the free-will offerings of the people, for the support and repairs of the sacred edifice; or, that part of the temple where the Sanhedrin assembled, and where it was at that time. Josephus uses the same word to signify one of the courts of the temple."—Bloomfield.

The treasury.—According to Josephus, there were several chests fixed in the courts of the temple to receive the free-will offerings of the people for the service of the temple. The unlawfulness of putting the thirty shekels into these repositories arose from the circumstance that they contained the treasure consecrated to God, and that they were prohibited by the law

Chap. XLII.

Matt. 27 : 9, 10.

J.C. 34.

and bought with them the potter's field, to bury strangers in. Wherefore, that field is called in their proper tongue, Aceldama, that is to say, The Field of Blood. Then was fulfilled that which was spoken by Jeremy the prophet, saying,

And they took the thirty pieces of silver,
The price of him that was valued,
Whom they of the children of Israel did value ;
And gave them for the potter's field, as the Lord appointed me.

And when they had bound Jesus, the whole multitude to deposit in the sacred treasury any money arising from base or unlawful gains ; so they interpreted the precept (see Deut. 23 : 18). By so doing, however, they condemned themselves, since they execrated that in the seller, of which they were themselves the buyers.

The field of blood.—The field purchased by the price of blood.—The name by which this field was called was Aceldama (Acts 1 : 19). Modern travelers inform us that this piece of ground is to this day distinctly marked out—that it is about thirty yards long, and fifteen broad ; one-half of which is taken up by a fabric, built for a charnel-house, which is twelve yards in height. Into this building dead bodies are let down from the top, there being five holes left open for that purpose, through which they may be seen under several degrees of decay. From the veneration this piece of land has obtained among Christians it is called the Holy Field.

Jeremy the prophet.—The words here quoted are not found in Jeremiah, but in Zech. 11 : 12. Among the various conjectures which have been formed upon this subject, it has been supposed that we ought either to admit that a trivial error had crept into the text (for a change of a single letter, according to the abbreviated manner in which names are written in the old mss., would suffice to occasion the mistake) ; or, that the Evangelist wrote only the prophet, without naming him. and that some person at an early period inserted, by mistake, in his manuscript, the name of Jeremiah instead of Zechariah, which mistake was afterward generally inserted in the text.

As the Lord appointed me.—That is, commanded me.—"The meaning of the place in Zechariah is this : He was directed to go to the Jews as a prophet—a pastor of the people. They treated him, as they had done others, with great con-

Matt. 27 : 1, 2 ; Mark 15 : 1 ; Luke 23 : 1 ; John 18 : 28.

of them arose, and led him from Caiaphas unto the hall of judgment : and delivered him to Pontius Pilate the governor ; and it was early, and

Jesus before Pilate.

tempt. He asks them to give him his price—i. e., the price which they thought he and his pastoral labors were worth, or to show their estimate of his office. If they thought it of value, they were to pay him accordingly ; if not, they were to ‘forbear’—that is, to give nothing. To show their great contempt of him and his office, and of God who had sent him, they gave him thirty pieces of silver, the price of a slave. This God commanded or appointed him to give to the potter, or to throw into the pottery—to throw away. So in the time of Jesus the same thing was substantially repeated. Jesus came as the Messiah. They hated and rejected him. To show their contempt of him and his cause they valued him at the price of a slave. This was thrown down in the temple, taken by the priests, and appropriated to the purchase of a field owned by a potter, worn out, and of little or no value ; all showing at how low a price, through the whole transaction, the Son of God was estimated. Though the words quoted here are not precisely like those in Zechariah, yet the sense and general structure are the same.”—Barnes.

Pilate the governor.—“The title is a general one. the office held by Pilate was that of Roman ‘procurator,’ whose chief business it was to collect the revenues, and in certain cases to administer justice. Palestine had been thus governed since the banishment of Archelaus (A.D. 6), and Pilate was the sixth procurator, holding the office for ten years under the Emperor Tiberius (probably from A.D. 27–36). The usual residence of the procurator was in Cesarea (Acts 23 : 33 ; 25 : 1, 4, 6, 13), but during the great festivals he was generally at Jerusalem, to preserve order and to uphold the supremacy of the Roman power, perhaps also to administer justice.”—Schaff. “The name indicates that he was connected by descent or adoption with the gens (or clan) of the Pontii, first conspicuous in Roman history in the person of Caius Pontius Telesinus, the great Samnite general. He was the sixth Roman Procurator of Judea, and under him our Lord Jesus Christ worked, suffered, and died, as we learn not only from the scriptural authorities, but from Tacitus. He was appointed A.D. 25–26, in the twelfth year of Tiberius. One of his first acts was to remove the headquarters of the army from Cesarea to Jerusalem. The soldiers of course took with them their standards, bearing the image of the emperor, into the holy city. No previous governor had ventured on such an outrage.

The people poured down in crowds to Cesarea, where the procurator was then residing, and besought him to remove the images. After five days of discussion he gave the signal to some concealed soldiers to surround the petitioners, and put them to death unless they ceased to trouble him; but this only strengthened their determination, and they declared themselves ready rather to submit to death than forego their resistance to an idolatrous innovation. Pilate then yielded, and the standards were by his order brought down to Cesarea. On two other occasions he nearly drove the Jews to insurrection: the first when he hung up in his palace at Jerusalem some gilt shields inscribed with the names of deities, which were only removed by an order from Tiberius; the second, when he appropriated the revenue from the redemption of vows (Corban) to the construction of an aqueduct. This order led to a riot, which he suppressed by sending among the crowd soldiers with concealed daggers, who massacred a great number not only of rioters, but of casual spectators. To these specimens of his administration from profane authors, we must add the slaughter of certain Galileans, which was told to our Lord as a piece of news (Luke 13 : 1), and on which he founded some remarks on the connection of sin and calamity. It must have occurred at some feast at Jerusalem, in the outer court of the Temple. It was the custom for the procurators to reside at Jerusalem during the great feasts, to preserve order, and accordingly, at the time of our Lord's last passover, Pilate was occupying his official residence in Herod's palace. . . . We learn from Josephus that his anxiety to avoid giving offense to Cæsar did not save him from political disaster. The Samaritans were unquiet and rebellious. Pilate led his troops against them and defeated them easily enough. The Samaritans complained to Vitellius, now president of Syria, and he sent Pilate to Rome to answer their accusations before the emperor. When he reached it he found Tiberius dead, and Caius (Caligula) on the throne, A.D. 36. Eusebius adds that soon afterwards, 'wearied with misfortunes,' he killed himself. As to the scene of his death there are various traditions. One is that he was banished to Vienna Allabrogum (Vienne on the Rhone), where a singular monument—a pyramid on a quadrangular base, fifty-two feet high—is called Pontius Pilate's tomb. Another is, that he sought to hide his sorrows on the mountain by the Lake of Lucerne, now called Mount Pilatus; and there, after spending years in its recesses, in remorse and despair rather than penitence, plunged into the dismal lake which occupies its summit. We learn from Justin Martyr, Tertullian, Eusebius, etc., that Pilate made an official report to Tiberius of our Lord's trial and condemnation; and in a homily ascribed to Chrysostom, certain they themselves went not into the judgment-hall, lest they should be defiled; but that they might eat the pass-over. Pilate then went out unto them, and said, What accusation bring ye against this man? They answered and said unto him, If he were not a malefactor, we would not have delivered him unto thee. Then said Pilate unto them, Take ye him, and judge him according to your law. The Jews therefore said unto him, It is not lawful for us to put any man to death: that the saying of Jesus might be fulfilled, which he spake, signifying what death he should die.

Matt. 27 : 11 ; Mark 15 : 2 ; Luke 23 : 2, 3 ; John 18 : 28-35.

And they began to accuse him, saying, We found this fellow perverting the nation, and forbidding to give tribute to Cæsar, saying, that he himself is Christ, a King.

Then Pilate entered into the judgment-hall again, and called Jesus, and said unto him, Art thou the King of the Jews?

Jesus answered him, Sayest thou this thing of thyself, or did others tell it thee of me?

memoranda are spoken of as well-known documents in common circulation."—Smith's Bible Dictionary.

Lest they should be defiled.—The prætor's hall was full of Roman soldiers, and a legal pollution was contracted by the Jews, by their being present among Gentiles, especially on occasions of peculiar purity, such as was the passover.

That they might eat the passover.—This defilement produced by contact with a Gentile, they considered as equivalent to that of the contact of a dead body, etc. (Lev. 22 : 4-6 ; Num. 5 : 1, 2) ; and as disqualifying them from taking the passover in a proper manner ; which proves that the Jewish passover was not yet celebrated.

If he were not a malefactor.—They did not want to make Pilate the judge, but the executor of the sentence which they had already illegally passed.

We found this fellow perverting the nation.—"This charge was intended to represent the result of their previous judgment (we found) ; whereas in fact no such matter had been

Matt. 27 : 11-13 ; Mark 15 : 2-4 ; Luke 23 : 3 ; John 18 : 35-38.

Pilate answered, Am I a Jew ? Thine own nation, and the chief priests, have delivered thee unto me. What hast thou done ?

Jesus answered, My kingdom is not of this world : if my kingdom were of this world, then would my servants fight, that I should not be delivered to the Jews : but now is my kingdom not from hence.

Pilate therefore said unto him, Art thou a king then ?

Jesus answered, Thou sayest that I am a king. To this end was I born, and for this cause came I into the world, that I should bear witness unto the truth. Every one that is of the truth, heareth my voice.

Pilate saith unto him, What is truth ? And when he had said this, he went out again unto the Jews, and saith unto them, I find in him no fault at all.

And the chief priests and elders, accused him of many before them : but they falsely allege it before Pilate, knowing that it was the point on which his judgment was likely to be most severe. The words themselves are not so false as the spirit and impression which they convey.—Alford.

Am I a Jew ?—"The full sense is well expressed by Kuionel in the following paraphrase : 'No ; I have not asked thee of my own thought : I have found nothing hitherto in thee which would afford any color to such a charge as thine enemies advance ; but it does not hence follow that thou art innocent. Of thee and thy case I know nothing. I am not a Jew, to know or care about such things. It is on the representations of thy countrymen and the chief priests that I examine thee. What hast thou done to afford ground for this accusation ?'"—Bloomfield.

What is truth ?—"It should rather seem that by this question, 'What is truth ?' he meant to say (with a reference to the endless disputations of philosophers on the subject). 'Ay, but what is truth ? Define it ; that is the great point.' That Pilate was indifferent about the answer which our Lord might give to this question, may be inferred from his going out immediately afterwards, and not waiting to hear what our Lord would say."—Greswell.

Matt. 27 : 13-14 ; Mark 15 : 4, 5 ; Luke 23 : 4-8.

things: but he answered nothing. And Pilate asked him again, saying, Hearest thou not how many things they witness against thee? Answerest thou nothing? But Jesus answered him to never a word; insomuch that the governor marveled greatly. Then said Pilate to the chief priests, and to the people, I find no fault in this man. And they were the more fierce, saying, He stirreth up the people, teaching throughout all Jewry, beginning from Galilee to this place.

When Pilate heard of Galilee, he asked whether the man were a Galilean. And as soon as he knew that he belonged unto Herod's jurisdiction, he ^{Jesus} before Herod. sent him to Herod, who himself was also at Jerusalem at that time.

And when Herod saw Jesus, he was exceeding glad:

But he answered nothing.—"There is a dignity in silence which, though we must not assume it for our own sakes, we may prudently preserve for our cause's sake. And let me add, that there is scarcely any more salutary exercise of self-denial than to suppress that very thing which on ground of feeling we should be eager to send abroad."—Alexander Knox. "Under false accusations be silent, and leave your actions to shame your adversaries."—Bishop Medley. "That we may not betray ourselves, it is necessary to learn the art of silence. He who knows not how to be silent knows not how to speak."—Zoroaster.

Herod's jurisdiction.—Palestine was divided into different provinces under different governors; Herod was tetrarch of Galilee. Under the Roman law, the prisoner might be tried before the governor of the province or district where he belonged, or of that where the offense was committed. Pilate seems to have sent Christ to Herod, partly as an act of royal courtesy, partly to relieve himself of responsibility. Herod's palace was situated in the upper city, or Mount Sion. The trial of Jesus before Pilate took place, probably, at the tower of Antonia, on Mount Moriah. A bridge, the remains of which are still standing, spanned the ravine which separated these two hills. It is surmised that Herod was at Jerusalem for the purpose of attending the paschal feast.

When Herod saw Jesus he was exceeding glad.—"The Chap. XLII.

Luke 23 : 8-15.

J.C. 34.

for he was desirous to see him of a long season, because he had heard many things of him; and he hoped to have seen some miracle done by him. Then he questioned with him in many words; but he answered him nothing. And the chief priests and scribes stood and vehemently accused him. And Herod with his men of war set him at naught, and mocked him, and arrayed him in a gorgeous robe, and sent him again to Pilate.

And the same day Pilate and Herod were made friends together; for before they were at enmity between themselves.

And Pilate, when he had called together the chief priests, and the rulers, and the people, said unto them, Ye have brought this man unto me, as one that perverteth the people: and behold, I, having examined him before you, have found no fault in this man, touching those things whereof ye accuse him. No, nor again before Pilate.

Jesus

fame of Jesus had reached the ears of Herod long before (Matt. 14 : 1; Luke 13 : 31). Observe (1) Herod's desire: to see Christ; (2) its cause: curiosity; (3) his position: an inquirer; (4) his treatment: Christ answered him nothing. Is there not in this an explanation of the reason why Christ often treats with silence those who seem to be earnestly seeking to see and learn of him; and a lesson for those who, in the church or out of it, manifest a desire for the presence of Christ, not because they want his spiritual inspiration, but because they are curious to see or ambitious to share in the manifestation of his mighty works. No words could have so utterly rebuked the murderer of John the Baptist as did silence. Contrast Christ's treatment of Pilate in his honest perplexity (John 18 : 33-37). The result here—'Herod set him at naught and mocked him'—shows how little in earnest he was in his seeking. This mockery is not mentioned by the other Evangelists, nor is the mockery before Pilate mentioned by Luke. The gorgeous robe is not to be confounded with the scarlet robe afterward put upon him by Pilate's soldiers (Matt. 27 : 28). The original Greek word indicates a white dress; the same word is translated bright in Acts 10 : 30, white in Rev. 15 : 6; 19 : 8, and clear in Rev. 22 : 1.

Matt. 27 : 15-23 ; Mark 15 : 6-14 ; Luke 23 : 15-22 :
John 18 : 39, 40.

yet Herod : for I sent you to him ; and lo, nothing worthy of death is done unto him : I will therefore chastise him, and release him. For ye have a custom that I should release unto you at the passover one prisoner, whomsoever ye desire. Will ye therefore that I release unto you the King of the Jews. (For he knew that the chief priests had delivered him for envy.)

And they had then a notable prisoner, called Barabbas, which lay bound with them that had made insurrection with him, who had committed murder in the insurrection. And the chief priests and elders persuaded the multitude that they should ask Barabbas, and destroy Jesus. And they cried out all at once, saying, Away with this man, and release unto us Barabbas. Now Barabbas was a robber. And Pilate answered, and said again unto them, What will ye then that I shall do unto him whom ye call the King of the Jews ? And they cried out, Crucify him ! Then Pilate said unto them, Why, what evil hath he done ? And they cried out the more exceedingly, Crucify him !

Calvin, on the mockery by Herod's retinue, suggests that ' the honor which is due to God is seldom rendered to him in the courts of kings.'—Abbott.

No, nor yet Herod.—Pilate's language indicates that Herod sent an unreported message of acquittal. Done unto him is a mistranslation for done by him.

Ye have a custom.—It is impossible to ascertain with any certainty at what time, or by whom, this custom originated. Livy acquaints us that in Rome, on some certain holidays, the prisoners were freed from their chains. It is probable that Augustus might commission the governors of Judea to exercise this custom which came from Rome. It was designed to add to the solemnity of the festival, and to express the respect of the Romans for it. This custom was followed afterwards by some of the Christian emperors at Easter. As Barabbas was a noted criminal, Pilate doubtless concluded that the people would unanimously prefer Jesus to him.

Matt. 27 : 19. 25, 25 ; Mark 15 : 11-14 ; Luke 23 : 22, 23.

When he was set down on the judgment seat, his wife sent unto him, saying, Have thou nothing to do with that just man : for I have suffered many things this day in a dream because of him. Pilate therefore, willing to release Jesus, spake again to them. But they cried, saying, Crucify him, crucify him. And he said unto them the third time, Why, what evil hath he done ? I have found no cause of death in him : I will therefore chastise him, and let him go. And they were instant with loud voices, requiring that he might be crucified : and the voices of them and of the chief priests prevailed.

When Pilate saw that he could prevail nothing, but that rather a tumult was made, he took water, and washed

In the judgment seat.—An elevated seat or throne erected in the operair, in a place called "the Pavement," adjoining to the judgment hall in which Pilate had examined Jesus. "This was a pavement formed of pieces of marble or stone of various colors ; such as were called vermiculata, and tessellata—a sort of luxury which had arisen in the time of Sylla, and had extended even to the most remote provinces. Julius Cæsar (as we learn from Sueton., 'Vit.' 46) carried about with him in his expeditions such pieces of sawn marble and variegated stone with which to adorn his prætorium, on which the throne was placed. The fashion seems to have been brought from the East at the Roman conquests in Asia. It had probably long been in use there."—Bloomfield.

His wife.—Her name was Claudia Procula. Grotius observes that this circumstance marks the time of the event, and affords an incidental proof of the veracity of the evangelist ; for it was only in the reign of Tiberius that the wives of governors obtained permission to attend them in the provinces. Perhaps she was afraid that the vengeance of heaven would follow her husband and family if he condemned the innocent.

That just man.—She might have been satisfied of his innocence from other sources, as well as from the dream. Dreams were occasionally considered as indications of the divine will. Great reliance was placed on them.

He took water, etc.—The washing of the hands to betoken innocence from blood-guiltiness is prescribed, Deut. 21 : 6-9 : and alluded to Ps. 26 : 6 ; and Pilate uses it here as intelligible

Matt. 27 : 26-30 ; Mark 15 : 15-19 ; Luke 23 : 24, 25 ;
John 19 : 1-8.

his hands before the multitude, saying, I am innocent of the blood of this just person: see ye to it. Then answered all the people, and said, His blood be on us, and on our children.

Then Pilate, willing to content the people, gave sentence that it should be as they required. And he released unto them Barabbas that for sedition and murder was cast into prison; but he delivered Jesus to their will.

Pilate therefore took Jesus, and scourged him. And the soldiers of the governor led him away into the common hall, called Pretorium; and they called together the whole band; and stripped him, Jesus scourged and mocked. and put on him a purple robe; and when they had platted a crown of thorns, they put it on his head, and a reed in his right hand: and they bowed the knee before him, and mocked him, saying, Hail, King of the Jews! And they spit upon him, and took the reed, and smote him on the head.

Pilate therefore went forth again, and saith unto them, Behold, I bring him forth to you, that ye may know that to the Jews. It was also the custom among the heathens, when they had shed blood, to wash their hands in water to purify themselves. So, also, a judge on passing sentence upon a criminal, usually raised his hands towards heaven, and testified that he was guiltless of the blood of the person condemned.

Took Jesus and scourged him.—Matt. 27 : 26. Among the Romans scourging was always inflicted previously to crucifixion, as appears from several passages in their writings. The Jews used a whip of three cords, and limited the number of stripes to thirty-nine (2 Cor. 11 : 24); but the Romans' most usual way of scourging was with such rods or wands as the lictors carried in a bundle before the chief magistrates; and this scourging was exceedingly cruel, tearing the flesh to the veins and arteries. They also used a scourge which consisted of several chains or thongs of leather with pieces of metal or bone affixed to them, which cut into the flesh.

Matt. 27 : 31, 32 ; Mark 15 : 20, 21 ; Luke 23 : 26, 27 ;
John 19 : 8-17.

I find no fault in him. Then came Jesus forth, wearing the crown of thorns, and the purple robe. And Pilate saith unto them, Behold the man ! When the chief priests therefore and officers saw him, they cried out, saying, Crucify him, crucify him. Pilate saith unto them, Take ye him, and crucify him : for I find no fault in him. The Jews answered him, We have a law, and by our law he ought to die, because he made himself the Son of God.

When Pilate therefore heard that saying, he was the more afraid ; and went again into the judgment-hall, and saith unto Jesus, Whence art thou ? But Jesus gave him no answer. Then saith Pilate unto him, Speakest thou not unto me ? knowest thou not, that I have power to crucify thee, and have power to release thee ?

Jesus answered, Thou couldest have no power at all against me, except it were given thee from above ; therefore he that delivered me unto thee hath the greater sin.

And from thenceforth Pilate sought to release him : but the Jews cried out, saying, If thou let this man go, thou art not Cæsar's friend. Whosoever maketh himself a king, speaketh against Cæsar. When Pilate therefore heard that saying, he brought Jesus forth, and sat down in the judgment-seat, in a place that is called the Pavement, but in the Hebrew, Gabbatha. And it was the preparation of the passover, and about the sixth hour ; and he saith unto the Jews, Behold your King ! But they cried out, Away with him, away with him, crucify him. Pilate saith unto them, Shall I crucify your King ? The chief priests answered, We have no king but Cæsar. And he delivered Jesus unto them to be crucified.

And after that they had mocked him, they took off the purple robe from him, and put his own clothes on him, and led him out to crucify him. And he went forth bearing his cross. And as they ^{Jesus led to Crucifixion.} came out, they found and laid hold upon one Simon a Cyrenian, the father of Alexander and Rufus, who passed by, coming out of the country, and on him they laid the cross, and compelled him to bear it after Jesus. And there followed him a great company of people, and of women, which also bewailed and lamented him. But Jesus turning unto them, said, Daughters of Jerusalem, weep not for me, but weep for yourselves, and for your children. For behold, the days are coming, in the which they shall say, Blessed are the barren, and the wombs that never bare, and the paps which never gave suck. Then shall they begin to say to the mountains, Fall on us; and

A great company of people and of women.—"Not his disciples, but such a crowd as curiosity would gather in a great city to witness such a procession. That the women were not those subsequently described as standing before the cross (ver. 49) is evident, because they were Galileans, while these are described as 'daughters of Jerusalem.' It appears from Rabbinical writings that an association of women was formed at Jerusalem to alleviate the sufferings of those condemned to die; they accompanied the accused to the place of execution, and administered a drink of acid wine mixed with myrrh, which acted as an anodyne. This fact probably explains the incident mentioned in Matt. 27 : 34; and these may have been the women there referred to. It is, at all events, a reasonable surmise that, seeing the inscription borne before the cross, 'Jesus of Nazareth, King of the Jews,' and knowing little or nothing of the trial before the Sanhedrin, which had taken place secretly about daybreak, they lamented what they regarded as a new indignity inflicted upon their nation. The original indicates that their lamenting was of a vehement sort, according to the Jewish fashion, including beating upon their breasts and loud wailing."—Abbott.

Then shall they begin to say.—This is cited from Hosea 10 : 8, and was partially fulfilled in the destruction of Jerusalem, when, toward the end of the siege, multitudes of the Jews

Matt. 27 : 33, 35, 38 ; Mark 15 : 22, 23, 25, 27 ; Luke 23 : 32, 33 ;
John 19 : 17, 18.

to the hills, Cover us. For if they do these things in a green tree, what shall be done in the dry ?

And there were also two others, malefactors, led with him to be put to death.

And they come to the place called Calvary, in the Hebrew, Golgotha: that is, being interpreted, The place of a skull. And they gave him to drink wine mingled with myrrh; and when he had tasted thereof, The Crucifixion.

sought to escape death by hiding in the subterranean passages and sewers under the city. Those who recognize the truth that history is itself prophetic, and that the judgment of God against the Jewish nation in the destruction of Jerusalem is itself a prophecy of the final judgment of all nations, will recognize in these words here, as elsewhere in scripture (Isaiah 2 : 10 ; 19 : 21 ; Rev. 6 : 16), a reference to the last judgment.

If they do these things in the green tree, what shall be done in the dry?—"That is, if the Jewish rulers and the Roman government, conspiring together, crucify the Messiah of the nation and of the world, as the beginning of their work, what will they bring upon the nation in its consummation? If this is the leaf and blossom of the springtime of their malice, what will be the autumn end? This appears to me better than the ordinary interpretation of what is a confessedly difficult proverb."—Abbott.

When they were come; i. e., Jesus and the two malefactors, bearing their crosses, with the soldiers and the crowds. It was drawing towards 9 o'clock, Friday morning, the usual hour of the morning sacrifice. The crucifixion was ended at 3 o'clock, the hour of the evening sacrifice.

Calvary.—Called Golgotha in Matthew and Mark. Golgotha is Hebrew, and Calvary Latin; both meaning the same thing—a skull. Why it was so called is not known. It may conceivably have been a well-known place of execution; or possibly, the name may imply a bare, rounded, scalp-like elevation. It is constantly called the "hill of Golgotha," or of Calvary; but the Gospels merely call it "a place," and not a hill (Matt. 27 : 33 ; Mark 15 : 22). Respecting its site, volumes have been written, but nothing is known. It is far better for the purity of the Christian religion that this be so, lest such places be regarded as special means of holiness, when all true holiness is spiritual, in the heart.

Matt. 27 : 38 ; Mark 15 : 27 ; Luke 23 : 33 ; John 19 : 18.

he would not drink. There they crucified him, and with Crucified him.—"It had been the custom of wealthy ladies in Jerusalem to provide a draught of wine medicated with some powerful opiate as a stupefying potion, at their own expense. It was probably taken freely by the two malefactors ; but, when they offered it to Jesus, he would not take it. The refusal was an act of sublimest heroism. The effect of the draught was to dull the nerves, to cloud the intellect, to provide an anæsthetic against some part, at least, of the lingering agonies of that dreadful death. But He whom some modern skeptics have been base enough to accuse of feminine feebleness and cowardly despair preferred rather 'to look death in the face,' to meet the king of terrors without striving to deaden the force of one agonizing anticipation, or to still the throbbing of one lacerated nerve. The three crosses were laid on the ground ; that of Jesus, which was doubtless taller than the other two, being placed, in bitter scorn, in the midst. Perhaps the cross-beam was now nailed to the upright ; and certainly the title, which had either been borne by Jesus, fastened round his neck, or carried by one of the soldiers in front of him, was now nailed to the summit of his cross. Then he was stripped naked of all his clothes, and then followed the most awful moment of all. He was laid down upon the implement of torture. His arms were stretched along the cross-beams, and at the center of the open palms the point of a huge iron nail was placed, which, by the blow of a mallet, was driven home into the wood. Then through either foot separately, or possibly through both together, as they were placed one over the other, another huge nail tore its way through the quivering flesh. Whether the sufferer was also bound to the cross, we do not know ; but, to prevent the hands and feet being torn away by the weight of the body, which could not 'rest upon nothing but four great wounds,' there was, about the center of the cross, a wooden projection strong enough to support, at least in part, a human body, which soon became a weight of agony. It was probably at this moment of inconceivable horror that the voice of the Son of man was heard calmly praying in divine compassion for his brutal and pitiless murderers—ay, and for all who in their sinful ignorance crucify him afresh forever,—'FATHER, FORGIVE THEM, FOR THEY KNOW NOT WHAT THEY DO.' And then the accursed tree—with its living human burden hanging upon it in helpless agony, and suffering fresh tortures as every movement irritated the fresh rents in hands and feet—was slowly heaved up by strong arms, and the end of it fixed firmly in a hole dug deep in the ground for that purpose. The feet were but a little raised above him the two malefactors; one on the right hand, and the other on the left.

Matt. 27 : 35 ; Mark 15 : 28, 24 ; Luke 23 : 34 ; John 19 : 23, 24.

And the scripture was fulfilled, which saith,

And he was numbered with the transgressors.

And it was the third hour. Then said Jesus, Father, forgive them: for they know not what they do.

Then the soldiers, when they had crucified Jesus, took his garments, and made four parts, to every soldier a part; and also his coat: now the coat was without seam, woven from the top throughout. They said therefore among themselves, Let us not rend it, but cast lots for it whose the earth. The victim was in full reach of every hand that might choose to strike, in close proximity to every gesture of insult and hatred. A death by crucifixion seems to include all that pain and death can have of the horrible and ghastly—dizziness, cramp, thirst, starvation, sleeplessness, traumatic fever, tetanus, publicity of shame, long continuance of torment, horror of anticipation, mortification of untended wounds—all intensified just up to the point at which they can be endured at all, but all stopping just short of the point which would give to the sufferer the relief of unconsciousness. . . . And, while each variety of misery went on gradually increasing, there was added to them the intolerable pang of a burning and raging thirst. Such was the death to which Christ was doomed.”—Farrar.

And the malefactors.—“Two brigands and rebels of the lowest stamp.”—Farrar. “This, let it be noted, was a literal fulfillment of Isaiah’s prophecy, that Messiah was to be ‘numbered with the transgressors’ (Isaiah 53 : 12).”—Ryle.

Father, forgive them.—“These words were probably spoken while our Lord was being nailed to the cross, or as soon as the cross was reared up on end. It is worthy of remark, that as soon as the blood of the great Sacrifice began to flow, the great High Priest began to intercede.”—Ryle.

They know not what they do.—“Our Lord’s meaning in the words before us appears to be that those who crucified him did not at the time know the full amount of the wickedness they were committing. They knew that they were crucifying one whom they regarded as an impostor. They did not know that they were actually crucifying their own Messiah,

Matt. 27 : 36, 37 ; Mark 15 : 26 ; Luke 23 : 38 ; John 19 : 19, 20.

it shall be: that the scripture might be fulfilled, which saith,

They parted my raiment among them,
And for my vesture they did cast lots.

These things therefore the soldiers did. And sitting down, they watched him there: and set up over his head, on the cross, his accusation which Pilate wrote. And the writing was, JESUS OF NAZARETH, THE KING OF THE JEWS. This title then read many of the Jews: for the place where Jesus was crucified was nigh to the city: and it was written in Hebrew, and Greek, and Latin.

the Son of God. The question naturally arises, 'Who were those for whom our Lord prayed?' I cannot, as some do, confine his prayer to the Roman soldiers who nailed him to the cross: I rather regard it as applying to the great bulk of the Jewish people who were standing by, and aiding and abetting his crucifixion."—Ryle.

Parted his raiment, and cast lots.—"The execution was carried out, and the cross watched by a guard of four soldiers, with a centurion; and the garments of the sufferers were their perquisite. Four parts being made, there remained the upper robe, woven throughout without a seam, the type of Christ's perfect righteousness, and the source of healing to many who had touched it. As it would have been spoiled by dividing it, the soldiers decided to cast lots for it, thus fulfilling another prophecy: 'They parted my raiment among them, and for my vesture they did cast lots' (Ps. 22 : 18). This has given occasion to the remark that Christians have, in their party divisions, paid less respect to their Master than the heathen soldiers did."—Smith.

His accusation.—"On the projecting upright beam of the cross. This custom of writing up the culprit's crime on a scroll above his head gave Pilate another opportunity of mortifying the Jews, while bearing unconscious witness to the truth."—Smith.

Greek . . . Latin . . . Hebrew.—"All careful readers of the Bible must have observed that the superscription placed over our Lord's head on the cross is variously given by the

Matt. 27 : 39-43 ; Mark 15 : 29-32 ; Luke 23, 35, 36 ;
John 19 : 20-22.

Then said the chief priests of the Jews to Pilate, Write not, The King of the Jews; but that he said, I am King of the Jews. Pilate answered, What I have written, I have written.

And they that passed by, railed on him, wagging their heads, and saying, Ah, thou that destroyest the temple, and buildest it in three days, save thyself. If thou be the Son of God, come down Jesus mocked on the Cross. from the cross. Likewise also the chief priests mocking said among themselves, with the scribes and elders, He Gospel-writers. Each one reports it in a manner slightly different from the other three. This apparent discrepancy has given rise to various explanations. In order to solve the difficulty, we must remember that the superscription was written in three different languages. Greek was the language best known in the world at the time when our Lord was crucified; and there was a Greek superscription, for the benefit of strangers from foreign parts. Latin was the language of the Romans; and there was a Latin superscription, because the sentence on our Lord was passed by a Latin judge, and executed by Latin soldiers. Hebrew was the language of the Jews; and there was a superscription in the Hebrew tongue, because Jesus was crucified as a Jew, that all Jews might see it. But, for anything we know, the superscription in each language may have slightly varied from the superscription in other languages. Matthew may have recorded it as it was in Hebrew; Mark, as it was in Latin; Luke, as it was in Greek."—Ryle. "That John's was the exact form may be safely inferred from St. John's presence at the cross, where the words were before his eyes for all that memorable six hours, and from his care to specify the languages in which it was written."—Smith.

The king of the Jews.—"Let it be observed that our Lord was crucified at last as a king. He came to set up a spiritual kingdom, and as a king he died."—Ryle.

"The chief priests and members of the Sanhedrin. They were not ashamed to disgrace their gray hairs by such reproaches."—Alford.

Matt. 27 : 34 ; Mark 15 : 32 ; Luke 23 : 37-39.

saved others ; himself he cannot save. If he be the King of Israel, let him now come down from the cross, that we may see and believe. He trusted in God ; let him deliver him now if he will have him : for he said, I am the Son of God. And the soldiers also mocked him, coming to him, and offering him vinegar, and saying, If thou be the King of the Jews, save thyself. The malefactors also which were crucified with him, cast the same in his teeth. And one of them railed on him, saying, If thou be Christ, save thyself and us. But the other answering, rebuked him, saying, Dost not thou fear God, seeing thou art in the same condemnation ? And we indeed justly ; for we receive the due reward of our deeds : but this man hath Himself he cannot save.—"This is the true test miracle, they imply : if he can be crucified, he is not the Christ. This argument, derived from the rulers, satisfies the people."

—Whedon.

Offering him vinegar.—"Not the medicated potion offered just before crucifixion, but the pasca, or sour wine, which was their common drink. It was about the time of their noon meal ; and they may, in mockery, have asked him to join in it."
—Peloubet.

One of the malefactors.—Matthew and Mark speak of the malefactors as deriding him, speaking in general of them as reviling, without noting from which one the railing came. Farar thinks that at first the other faintly joined in the reproaches.

Save thyself and us.—He could not see how one could be the Messiah, and have the power to save himself, and not do it. But Jesus soon showed him what his salvation meant, in his words to the other malefactor.

Dost not thou fear God ?—"The silence of the penitent is broken by the us of the other, compromising him in the scoff."
—Alford.

Same condemnation.—"That is, not for the same offense, but condemned to the same punishment."
—Jacobus.

Due reward of our deeds.—"The proper punishment for our crimes. They had been highwaymen, and it was just that they should die."
—Barnes.

Chap. XLII.

Luke 23 : 39-43.

J.C. 34.

done nothing amiss. And he said unto Jesus, Lord, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom. And Amiss.—"Literally, unseemly. This is a remarkable testimony to the innocence of Jesus, from one who was probably executed for his share in those very tumults which he was accused of having excited."—Alford.

Lord, remember me.—"This short prayer contained a very large and long creed, the articles whereof are these: (1) He believed that the soul died not with the body of man; (2) that there is a world to come, for rewarding the pious and penitent, and for punishing the impious and impenitent; (3) that Christ, though now under crucifying and killing tortures, yet had right to a kingdom; (4) that this kingdom was in a better world than the present evil world; (5) that Christ would not keep this kingdom all to himself; (6) that he would bestow a part and portion thereof on those that are truly penitent; (7) that the key of this kingdom did hang at Christ's girdle, though he now hung dying on the cross; (8) that he does roll his whole soul for eternal salvation upon a dying Saviour."—Ness.

"Comest into thy kingdom; rather, in thy kingdom, 'at thy coming in thy kingdom.' The thief had heard of the popular rumor of his kingdom. His faith lays hold on the truth that this is the king of the Jews in a higher and immortal sense. There is nothing so astounding in this man's faith dogmatically considered, as has been thought; he merely joins the common belief of the Jews of a Messianic kingdom, with the conviction that Jesus is the Messiah. What is really astounding is the power and strength of that faith, which amidst shame and pain and mockery could thus lift itself to the apprehension of the crucified as this king. The thief would fill a conspicuous place in a list of the triumphs of faith supplemental to Heb. II."—Alford. "Of the two thieves that were crucified together with our Lord, the one blasphemed; the other had, at that time, the greatest piety in the world. . . . He showed an incomparable modesty, asking for a remembrance only; he knew himself so sinful, he durst ask no more; he reprov'd the other thief for blasphemy; he confessed the world to come, and owned Christ publicly; he prayed to him, he hoped in him, and pitied him, showing an excellent patience in this sad condition. And in this I consider that, besides the excellency of some of these acts and the goodness of all, the like occasion for so exemplary faith can never occur; and until all these things shall, in these circumstances, meet in any one man, he must not hope for so safe an exit, after an evil life, upon the confidence of this ex-

Matt. 27 : 45, 45, 46 ; Mark 15 : 33, 34 ; Luke 23 : 44, 45 ;
John 19 : 25-27.

Jesus said unto him, Verily I say unto thee, To-day shalt thou be with me in paradise.

Now there stood by the cross of Jesus, his mother, and his mother's sister, Mary the wife of Cleophas, and Mary Magdalene. When Jesus therefore saw his mother, and the disciple standing by whom he loved, he saith unto his mother, Woman, behold thy son ! Then saith he to the disciple, Behold thy mother ! And from that hour that disciple took her unto his own home.

ample."—Jeremy Taylor. The quaint and eloquent bishop evidently has small belief in the probability of "death-bed repentances."

To-day.—"The attempt to join this with 'I say unto thee' ('Verily I say unto thee this day'), considering that it not only violates common sense, but destroys the force of our Lord's promise, is something worse than silly. This work of the Lord I believe to have been accomplished on the instant of his death, and the penitent to have followed him at his death—some little time after—into the paradise of God."—Alford.

With me in paradise.—"What is this paradise ? The word is used of the Garden of Eden by the Septuagint (Gen. 2 : 8, etc.), and subsequently became, in the Jewish theology, the name for that part of Hades, the abode of the dead, where the souls of the righteous await the resurrection. It was also the name for a supernal or heavenly abode. See 2 Cor. 12 : 4 ; Rev. 2 : 7 ; which are the only other places in which it occurs in the New Testament. That this is not fullness of glory as yet, is evident, for the glorified body is not yet joined to their spirits ; but it is a degree of bliss compared to which their former degree was but an imprisonment."—Alford. "This much, then—neither more nor less—do we learn from the word Paradise itself as interpreted by biblical usage : a state of peace, security, holiness, satisfaction, blessedness, where the presence of God is more immediately manifested. . . . But while each departing saint, his personality unchanged, his spiritual vitality untouched by death, enters with an exalted consciousness into a blissful fellowship with Christ in Paradise—there will remain some more glorious consummation at the resurrection of the dead. . . . The period between our departure and that day will be for us an intermediate state, but a Paradise of in-

Matt. 27 : 46-50 ; Mark 15 : 34-36 ; Luke 23 : 44-46 ;
John 19 : 28-30.

And when the sixth hour was come, there was darkness over all the land until the ninth hour; and the sun was darkened. And about the ninth hour Jesus cried with a loud voice, saying, Eli, Eli, lama sabachthani? which is, being interpreted, My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me? And some of them that stood by, when they heard it, said, Behold, he calleth for Elias.

After this, Jesus knowing that all things were now ac-tense delights and of conscious nearness and fellowship with Christ."—Theology of Christ, J. P. Thompson.

The sixth hour.—Twelve o'clock, noon.

Darkness.—"It could have been no darkness of any natural eclipse, for the paschal moon was at the full; but it was one of those 'signs from heaven' for which, during the ministry of Jesus, the Pharisees had so often clamored in vain. The early fathers appealed to Pagan authorities--the historian Phallus, the chronicler Phlegon--for such a darkness; but we have no means of testing the accuracy of these references, and it is quite possible that the darkness was a local gloom, which hung densely over the guilty city and its immediate neighborhood."—Farrar. A thick darkness is often the precursor of an earthquake. "The sun also had a vail upon his face, and taught us to draw a curtain before the Passion, which would be the most artificial expression of its greatness; whilst by silence and wonder we confess it great beyond our expression, or, which is all one, great as the burden and baseness of our sins. And with this veil drawn before the face of Jesus, let us suppose him at the gates of Paradise, calling with his last words, in a loud voice, to have them opened, that 'the King of Glory might come in.'"—Jeremy Taylor.

Till the ninth hour.—Three o'clock in the afternoon, when he died.

Cried with a loud voice.—The Eli, Eli, etc., of Matt. 27 : 46; or the "It is finished," John 19 : 30. "And now the end was come. Once more, in the words of the sweet Psalmist of Israel (Ps. 31 : 5), but adding to them that title of trustful love which, through him, is permitted to the use of all mankind, 'Father,' he said, 'into thy hands I commend my spirit.' Then with one more great effort he uttered the last cry,—the one victorious word, 'It is finished.'"—Farrar.

Matt. 27 : 51, 52 ; Mark 15 : 38 ; Luke 23 : 45.

complished, that the scripture might be fulfilled, saith, I thirst.

Now there was set a vessel full of vinegar: and one of them ran, and filled a sponge with vinegar, and put it upon a reed, and gave him to drink. The rest said, Let be, let us see whether Elias will come to save him.

When Jesus therefore had received the vinegar, he said, It is finished; and when Jesus expires. he had cried again with a loud voice, he said, Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit: and having said thus, he bowed his head, and yielded up the ghost.

And behold, the vail of the temple was rent in twain in

Gave up the ghost.—"Actually died. The form implying, though perhaps not alluding to, the dying exclamation. The interval between the agonized cry: 'My God,' etc., and the actual death in triumph and confidence, was very brief. The intervening expression of human want ('I thirst') seems to have been uttered, to show that one of our race was suffering there, and at the same time to obtain the physical support needed to proclaim the victory won by that One of our race for us. After the victory came the Spirit's rest in the Eternal Father. More than victory is rest in God. It has been urged with much force that the physical cause of our Lord's death was 'a broken heart.' This view accounts for the discharge of water and blood mentioned by John (19 : 34). Rupture of the heart is followed by an effusion of blood into the pericardium, where it quickly separates into its solid and liquid constituents, technically termed crassamentum and serum, but in ordinary language 'blood and water.'"—Schaff.

The vail of the temple.—There were two vails of the temple; one at the entrance into the holy place, the other between the holy place and the sanctuary, called "the inner vail:" and it is called (Heb. 9 : 3), "the second vail," to distinguish it from a curtain which was hung at the entrance of the holy place. It is particularly described (Ex. 26 : 31-33), and is the vail here intended. It was of the strongest contexture, the richest materials, and the finest workmanship.

Was rent.—"Into two parts. This took place just at his death. Thus 'the way into the holiest of all was (now) made manifest,' and laid open to all nations. The sacred ceremonies of the midst from the top to the bottom : and the earth did quake, and the rocks rent ; and the graves were opened, and many bodies of the saints which slept, arose, and came out of the graves after his resurrection, and went into the holy city, and appeared unto many.

Matt. 27 : 52-56 ; Mark 15 : 39-41 ; Luke 23 : 47-49.

Now when the centurion, and they that were with him watching Jesus, saw the earthquake and those things that the day of atonement, when the high priest entered into the most holy place, were now to be dispensed with. Believers have boldness to enter into the holiest by a new and living way which he hath consecrated for us through the vail ; that is to say, his flesh. The priest was probably burning incense in the holy place at this hour of the evening sacrifice."—Jacobus.

The earth did quake.—This is thought by some to have been the very great earthquake, which happened in the reign of Tiberius Cæsar, by which twelve cities in Asia were destroyed. "But miraculous power is most probable. This was a token of the greatness of the death of Christ, a sign, too, of the influence of his death upon the destiny of the earth itself."—Schaff.

And the rocks were rent.—"The effect of the earthquake, splitting the foundations of the holy city. A sign of wrath, but more than this. Travelers still point to extraordinary rents and fissures in the rocks in the neighborhood."—Schaff. About one yard and a half distant from the hole in which tradition says the foot of our Saviour's cross was fixed, is to be seen a fissure in the rock, which tradition affirms was made by the earthquake which happened at the crucifixion. This cleft is about a span wide, at its upper part, and two deep, after which it closes ; but it opens again below (as may be seen in a chapel contiguous to the site of what is called Calvary), and runs down to an unknown depth in the earth. That this fissure was made by the earthquake that happened at our Lord's passion, there is only tradition to prove : but that it is a natural and genuine breach, and not counterfeited by any art, is very evident ; for the sides of it fit like two tallies to each other : and yet it runs in such intricate windings as could not well be counterfeited by art, or produced by any instruments.

And the graves were opened.—"This account, given by Matthew only, some, as Norton, have rejected as an interpolation. There is, however, no doubt as to the genuineness of the text."—Andrews.

Chap. XLII.

John 19, 31-37.

J.C. 34.

were done, they feared greatly, and glorified God, saying, Truly this man was the Son of God.

And all the people that came together to that sight, beholding the things which were done, smote their breasts and returned.

And all his acquaintance stood afar off beholding these things, and many women were there which followed Jesus from Galilee, ministering unto him: among whom was Mary Magdalene, and Mary the mother of James the less, and of Joses, and Salome, the mother of Zebedee's children,—who also, when he was in Galilee, followed him, and ministered unto him; and many other women which came up with him unto Jerusalem.

The Jews therefore because it was the preparation, (that is, the day before the sabbath,) that the bodies should not remain upon the cross on the sabbath-day, (for that sabbath-day was an high day,) The Body taken down and Buried.
 besought Pilate that their legs might be broken, and that Truly this was the (a) Son of God (Matt 27 : 54). . . .

 Certainly this was a righteous man (Luke 23 : 46).—"The general sense is, 'Truly this man was innocent;' and if innocent (nay, more, just, truthful), he was the Son of God, for he had asserted it."—Alford. "A son of a God, according to the notions of the pagans, say some; but could the officer and soldiers who crucified Christ be ignorant that he was put to death, for averring himself to be 'the Son of God?' Surely, then, this supposed crime was referred to. He is condemned to death as a blasphemer, for saying, 'I am the Son of God;' 'The centurion could not fail to know the alleged blasphemy for which our Saviour suffered; and had he intended, in heathen phraseology, to merely express his admiration of our Saviour's conduct, he would not have used this expression.'"—Bishop Middleton.

The preparation.—The afternoon of the day, on which the passover was eaten in the evening.

An high day.—"A very solemn festival;" being not only an ordinary Sabbath, but the extraordinary one on the 15th of

Matt. 27 : 57, 58 ; Mark 15 : 42-44 ; Luke 23 : 54, 50-52 ;
John 19 : 38.

they might be taken away. Then came the soldiers, and brake the legs of the first, and of the other which was crucified with him. But when they came to Jesus, and saw that he was dead already, they brake not his legs ; but one of the soldiers with a spear pierced his side, and forthwith came thereout blood and water. And he that saw it, bare record, and his record is true : and he knoweth that he saith true, that ye might believe. For these things were done, that the scripture should be fulfilled,

A bone of him shall not be broken.

And again another scripture saith,

They shall look on him whom they pierced.

And now, when the even was come, there came a rich man, Joseph of Arimathea, a city of the Jews ; (being a disciple of Jesus, but secretly for fear of the Jews,) an honorable counselor, a good man, and a just, (the same

Nisan, from whence they reckoned the weeks to Pentecost ; and also the day for presenting and offering the sheaf of new corn : so that it had a treble solemnity.

Their legs might be broken.—It was a common custom to break the legs or other bones of criminals on the cross ; and this appears to have been a kind of coup de grace, the sooner to put them out of pain.

Forthwith came thereout blood and water.—The piercing appears to have taken place because his legs were not broken ; and, as the law in this case stated that the criminals were to continue on the cross till they died, the side of our Lord was pierced to secure the accomplishment of the law ; and the issuing of the blood and water appears to be only a natural effect of the above cause, and probably nothing mystical or spiritual was intended by it. However, it affords the fullest proof that Jesus had died.

When the even was come.—The first evening before sundown, at which time the bodies must be removed (Deut. 21 : 23). Our Lord's death took place at three in the afternoon.

There came a rich man.—"Probably, to the company of

Matt. 27 : 58-61 ; Mark 15 : 44-47 ; Luke 23 : 53, 55, 56 ;
John 19 : 38-42.

had not consented to the counsel and deed of them :) who also himself waited for the kingdom of God, and went in boldly unto Pilate, and besought him that he might take away the body of Jesus. And Pilate marveled if he were already dead: and calling unto him the centurion, he asked him whether he had been any while dead. And when he knew it of the centurion, he gave him leave, and commanded the body to be delivered to Joseph. He came therefore and took down the body of Jesus.

And there came also Nicodemus (which at the first women standing on Golgotha. His going to Pilate is mentioned afterwards. The fact of his being a 'rich man' is mentioned here, in allusion to Isaiah, 53 : 9 : 'With the rich in his death.'"—Schaff.

Of Arimathea.—Either Ramah in Benjamin (Josh. 18 : 25 ; comp. Matt. 2 : 18) or Ramah (Ramathaim) in Ephraim, the birth-place of Samuel (1 Sam 1 : 19). The form favors the latter view; the addition of Luke: "a city of the Jews," the former.

Went in boldly unto Pilate.—Rather, "taking courage." The word translated "boldly," seems to be added with reference to his previous conduct, who was, according to John. 19 : 38, "A disciple of Jesus, but secretly for fear of the Jews." The disciples of Jesus had fled, and if they had not, they had no influence with Pilate. Unless there had been a special application to Pilate, in behalf of Jesus, his body would have been buried that night in the common grave with the malefactors: for it was a law of the Jews that the body of an executed man should not remain on the cross on the Sabbath.

Besought . . . the body of Jesus.—Malefactors were buried ignominiously; but at the request of relatives or friends, permission was given to inter an executed criminal in the regular way. Cicero reckons it among the greatest crimes of Verres, that when in Sicily, he sold this permission for gold; and Tacitus counts it among the cruelties of the last years of Tiberius, that he refused burial to those who were executed by his orders.

Pilate marveled.—Wondered if he was dead; or wondered that he was so soon dead. It was not usual for persons crucified to expire under two or three days, sometimes not until the sixth or seventh.

Chap. XLII. Matt. 27 : 62-66 ; Luke 23 : 55, 56.

J.C. 34.

came to Jesus by night) and brought a mixture of myrrh and aloes, about an hundred pound weight.

Then took they the body of Jesus, and wound it in fine, clean linen clothes which Joseph bought with the spices, as the manner of the Jews is to bury. And Joseph laid it in his own new tomb, which he had hewn out in the rock ; wherein never man before was laid. And the sepulcher was in the garden nigh at hand to the place where he was crucified. There laid they Jesus therefore, because that day was the Jews' preparation, and the sabbath drew on.

And he rolled a great stone to the door of the sepulcher, and departed.

And there was Mary Magdalene, and Mary the mother of Joses, which came with him from Galilee, followed after, and sitting over against the sepulcher, beheld how his body was laid. And they returned, and prepared spices and ointments ; and rested the sabbath-day according to the commandment.

Now the next day that followed the day of the preparation, the chief priests and Pharisees came together unto Pilate, saying, Sir, we remember that that deceiver said, while he was yet alive, After

The Sepulcher sealed and guarded.

Myrrh and aloes.—The best commentators are agreed that we are not to suppose the myrrh and aloes to have been in a liquid state, but the wood of those trees, dried and pulverized. This appears by the great weight of the spices (100 lbs.). The body could not have been regularly embalmed, since there was not time sufficient for that ; but spices and unguents were brought to wash and anoint the body, and to envelop it in aromatic drugs.

Sitting over against the sepulcher.—It was usual for the nearest relative to visit the grave of the deceased, and to weep there. This custom prevails at this day in Egypt, and many parts of the East.

Chap. XLII.

Matt. 27 : 62-66.

J.C. 34.

three days I will rise again. Command therefore that the sepulcher be made sure until the third day, lest his disciples come by night, and steal him away, and say unto the people, He is risen from the dead : so the last error shall be worse than the first. Pilate said unto them, Ye have a watch : go your way, make it as sure as ye can. So they went and made the sepulcher sure, sealing the stone, and setting a watch.

Ye have a watch.—This alludes to the guard of Roman soldiers which was at this time allowed the Jewish rulers, for the purpose of quelling tumults and preserving the public peace. We learn from Josephus, that the tower of Antonia, which overlooked the temple, was always garrisoned by a legion of Roman soldiers ; and that, on the side where it joined to the porticos of the temple, there were stairs reaching to each portico, by which a company, band, or detachment descended, and kept guard in these porticos, to prevent any tumults at the great festivals. It was a detachment of these soldiers that Pilate gave the Jews leave to employ to watch the tomb.

Sealing the stone, and setting a watch.—They set Pilate's signet, or the public seal of the Sanhedrin, upon a fastening which they put on the stone. "A string was stretched across the stone, and sealed to the rock at either end, with wax or sealing-clay. After these precautions, the body could not disappear, except through the miracle of the resurrection."—Schaff.

CHAPTER XLIII.

CHRIST'S RESURRECTION AND ASCENSION.

AND when the sabbath was past, very early in the morning, as it began to dawn toward the first day of the week,

The resurrection.—"In the various narratives of this most wonderful and mysterious period of forty days, dealing with facts that transcend all ordinary Christian experience, we might expect, if anywhere, differences of statement. The difficulty in harmonizing the narratives satisfactorily in every particular, arises naturally from our want of knowledge of all the details in the precise order of their occurrence. Indeed, minor differences, with substantial agreement, confirm the main facts, far more than a literal agreement would. The gospel witnesses suggest no suspicion of a previous understanding and mutual dependence."—Schaff. "The confusion which confessedly exists in this part of the gospel narrative, and the consequent difficulty of reducing it to one continuous account, is not the fault of the historians, but the natural effect of the events themselves, as impressed upon the senses and the memory of different witnesses."—J. A. Alexander.

And when the sabbath was past, very early in the morning.—"Let us now attempt to frame a continuous narrative from the accounts of the several Evangelists. Very early in the morning the women from Galilee, to the number of five or more, who had been present at the crucifixion and burial, start for the sepulcher to embalm the body. Whether all went from one place, and at the same moment, is uncertain; but under the circumstances it is more probable that they came from different parts of the city, and met by agreement. Perhaps Mary Magdalene alone, or with the other Mary and Salome, may have a little preceded the others. They knew, for some at least were eye-witnesses, that a great stone had been rolled to the door of the sepulcher, and it was therefore a question with them how they could roll it away. But they did not know of the sealing of the stone, and the setting of the watch, which took place at the eve of the Sabbath. As they approach the sepulcher they see that the stone is rolled away; and Mary Magdalene, who naturally inferred that the Jews had removed the body, in deep excitement runs to inform the two chief apostles, Peter and John, of this fact. The other women continue to approach the sepulcher. That the angel was not now sitting upon the stone, and visible to them, and that the guards were not lying as dead men before the door, seem most prob-there came unto the sepulcher, Mary Magdalene, and Mary the mother of James, and Salome, and certain others with them, bringing the sweet spices which they had bought and prepared, that they might come and anoint him. The Resurrection.

Matt. 28 : 1 ; Mark 16 : 24 ; Luke 24 : 1, 2 ; John 20 : 1, 2.

And they said among themselves, Who shall roll us away the stone from the door of the sepulcher ? for it was very great. And when they looked, they saw that the stone was rolled away :

For, behold, there was a great earthquake : and the angel of the Lord descended from heaven, and came and rolled back the stone from the door, and sat upon it.

His countenance was like lightning, and his raiment white as snow.

And for fear of him the keepers did shake, and became as dead men.

able, as otherwise their fears would have deterred them from advancing. Seeing nothing, they enter the sepulcher, or its vestibule. An angel now appears to them, and, after bidding them not be afraid, shows them the empty niche where the body was laid, and gently reproves them for coming to find the Lord there, the living with the dead. He proceeds to announce to them that He is risen, and will meet the disciples in Galilee, as He had said to them while He was with them there. Greatly agitated by what they had seen and heard, fear contending with joy, they leave the sepulcher. Soon after their departure—but how soon is uncertain, as we do not know where Mary Magdalene found Peter and John—the two apostles come running with all speed to determine the truth of her account. John, who reaches the tomb first, only looks in, but Peter enters, and is followed by John. The body is gone ; but, examining carefully, they see the grave clothes arranged in order, and the napkin lying by itself. John is convinced, by all that he sees, that the Lord is indeed risen ; but Peter only marvels. They seem to have departed very quickly again, perhaps to inform the other disciples that the body was truly gone ; or perhaps they were afraid lest they should be found by their enemies at the tomb. Mary Magdalene, who had followed them back to the sepulcher, did not depart with them, but

John 20 : 2 ; Matt 28 : 5, 6 ; Mark 16 : 5, 6 ; Luke 24 : 3-6.

And Mary Magdalene when she seeth the stone taken away from the sepulchre runneth, and cometh to Simon Peter, and to the other disciple whom Jesus loved, and saith unto them, They have taken away the Lord out of the sepulchre, and we know not where they have laid him.

And the women entered in, and found not the body of the Lord Jesus. And it came to pass, as they were much perplexed thereabout, behold, two men stood by them clothed in long, white, shining garments. The women at the Sepulchre. And as they were afraid, and bowed down their faces to the earth, one of the angels said unto the women, Fear not ye: for I know that ye seek Jesus of Nazareth, which was crucified. Why seek ye the living among the dead? He is not here, but is risen, as he said. Remember how he spake unto you when he was yet in remained standing without, weeping. It is plain from the whole narrative that she was under the power of most intense grief, believing that the body of her Lord had been borne away by His enemies. Whilst weeping, she stoops down to look in, as if a faint hope still lingered that she should see Him there. She sees two angels sitting, one at the head and one at the feet, where the body had lain. Unlike the other women, who had been greatly terrified at the angelic apparition, she seems scarce to have noticed them; and to their question, 'Woman, why weepest thou?' she answers in words showing how wholly her heart was filled with her one great sorrow. Lifting her head, for she was now looking into the tomb, she sees Jesus, but does not recognize Him. He addresses her with the inquiry, 'Woman, why weepest thou?' Supposing Him to be the gardener, probably because it was natural that he should be there, and thinking that he might possibly have taken away the body, she asks Him, in words full of passionate earnestness. The Lord's reply, 'Mary,' spoken in His own familiar voice, recalls her to herself. She recognizes Him, and, prostrating herself, would hold Him by the feet to worship Him. He forbids her to touch Him, and gives her a message to His brethren. She departs, and tells the disciples, but they believe not. Thus Matt. 28 : 7, 8 ; Mark 16 : 7, 8 ; John 20 : 3-9 ; Luke 24 : 12.

Galilee, saying, The Son of man must be delivered into the hands of sinful men, and be crucified, and the third day rise again. Come, see the place where the Lord lay; and go, quickly, and tell his disciples, and Peter, that he is risen from the dead, and behold, he goeth before you into Galilee; there shall ye see him, as he said unto you. Lo, I have told you. And they remembered his words.

And they went out quickly, and fled from the sepulchre; for they trembled, and were amazed, with fear and great joy; neither said they any thing to any man; and did run to bring his disciples word.

Peter therefore went forth, and that other disciple, and came to the sepulchre. So they ran both together: and the other disciple did outrun Peter, and came first to the sepulchre. And he stooping down, and ^{Peter and John} looking in, saw the linen clothes lying; yet ^{at the} Sepulchre. went he not in. Then cometh Simon Peter following him, and went into the sepulchre, and beheld the linen clothes laid by themselves; and the napkin that was about his head, not lying with the linen clothes, but wrapped together in a place by itself. Then went in also that other disciple which came first to the sepulchre, and he saw, and believed. For as yet they knew not the scripture, that he

we find most probable that there were two visions of angels, the first to the women, the second to Mary Magdalene; and one appearance of the Lord, that to Mary Magdalene; all closely following each other. As yet, these supernatural manifestations were vouchsafed only to the women. Peter and John saw at the sepulchre neither angels nor the Lord. They found, indeed, the sepulchre open and the body gone; but the fact that He had risen rested solely on the testimony of the women. It is not, in one point of view, at all strange that all their words should have seemed to the disciples as idle tales; for it is plain that, notwithstanding His most explicit declarations that He must rise again from the dead. Then the disciples departed and went away again unto their own home ; Peter wondering in himself at that which was come to pass.

Chap. XLIII.

John 20 : 10-15.

April, J.C. 34.

But Mary stood without at the sepulcher weeping : and as she wept she stooped down and looked into the Jesus appears to Mary Magdalene. sepulcher, and seeth two angels in white, sitting, the one at the head, and the other at the feet, where the body of Jesus had lain. And they say unto her, Woman, why weepest thou ?

She saith unto them, Because they have taken away my Lord, and I know not where they have laid him. And when she had thus said, she turned herself back, and saw Jesus standing, and knew not that it was Jesus.

Jesus saith unto her, Woman, why weepest thou ? whom seekest thou ?

She, supposing him to be the gardener, saith unto him, Sir, if thou have borne him hence, tell me where thou hast laid him, and I will take him away.

would rise on the third day, none were expecting, or even hoping for, His resurrection. The women went to the grave to anoint the body, and Mary Magdalene's grief was caused by the thought that she could not show it the last sad tokens of regard. She does not once allude to His resurrection as if it were possible. Perhaps the fact that He had not appeared to any of the apostles, had something to do with the incredulity of the latter, for it was natural to suppose that He would first manifest Himself to them (Mark 16 : 11). Accordingly, we find that it was the testimony of Peter that he had seen Him, that convinced them, (Luke 24 : 34), though even then they seemed to have doubts whether it was a real resurrection."—Andrews.

Why weepest thou?—The finest natural truthfulness underlies the narrative. The other women (Mark 16 : 5 ; Luke 24 : 5), were afraid at the vision ; but now Mary, having but one thought or desire, to recover the lost body of her Lord, feels no fear.

Sir.—The appellation of courtesy to an unknown person.

John 20 : 16, 17 ; Mark 16 : 9 ; Matt. 28 : 9, 10.

Jesus saith unto her, Mary.

She turned herself, and saith unto him, Rabboni, which is to say, Master.

Jesus saith unto her, Touch me not : for I am not yet ascended to my Father : but go to my brethren, and say unto them, I ascend unto my Father and your Father, and to my God and your God. Thus when Jesus was risen, he appeared first to Mary Magdalene, out of whom he had cast seven devils.

And as they [the other women] went to tell his disciples, behold, Jesus met them, saying, All hail. And they came, and held him by the

Jesus meets the other women.

Mary.—With one word, and that word her name, the Lord awakens all the consciousness of his presence, calling her in that tone which to her was so familiar.

Rabboni.—"Oh, my Master!" "She gives way to no impassioned exclamations, but pours out her satisfaction and joy in this one word, according to the deepest psychological truth."—Alford.

Touch me not.—"The verb signifies 'to embrace,' 'clasp the knees,' 'fall at the feet.' 'Forbear to touch me;' in other words, "Let me go; waste not the time in expressing your joy, but tell the brethren this comforting message—in a little time I shall ascend," etc. The knees were embraced in the East as a mark of profound respect."—Bloomfield.

But go to my brethren.—"Thus does he intimate in the strongest manner the forgiveness of their fault, even without ever mentioning it. These exquisite touches, which everywhere abound in the evangelical writings, show how perfectly Christ knew our frame. I ascend. He anticipates in his thoughts, and so speaks of it as a thing already present. Unto my Father, and your Father; and to my God and your God. This uncommon expression shows, that the only begotten Son has all kind of fellowship with God. And a fellowship with God the Father, some way resembling his own, he bestows upon his brethren. Yet he does not say, our God—for no creature can be raised to an equality with him; but my God and your God; intimating that the Father is his in a singular and incommunicable manner, and ours through him in such a kind as a creature is capable of."—Wesley.

Matt. 28 : 10-15 ; Luke 24 : 9 ; John 20 : 18, 19 ; Mark 16 : 10.

feet, and worshiped him. Then said Jesus unto them, Be not afraid: go tell my brethren, that they go into Galilee, and there shall they see me.

And Joanna, and Mary the mother of James, and other women that were with them, returned from the sepulchre, and told all these things unto the eleven, and to all the rest. And their words seemed to them as idle tales, and they believed them not.

And Mary Magdalene came and told the disciples as they mourned and wept, that she had seen the Lord, and that he had spoken these things unto her. And they, when they had heard that he was alive, and had been seen of her, believed not.

Now when they were going, behold some of the watch came into the city, and shewed unto the chief priests all the things that were done. And when they were assem-

Report of the watch.

bled with the elders, and had taken counsel, they gave large money unto the soldiers, saying, Say ye, His disciples came by night, and stole him away while we slept. And if this come to the gov-

Stole him away while we slept.—"This was a falsehood that confuted itself, and was the most effectual acknowledgment of the obstinacy and malice of those who invented it that can be imagined. Had all the soldiers been asleep, they could not have known anything which passed ; if some were awake, why did they not alarm the others? Moreover, if they had slept, they would not have dared to mention it, as it was death for a Roman guard to be found off his watch, as appears from the following passage in Josephus, 'Bell. Jud.' 3 : 5. 7, where he says, 'the Roman laws punish with death not only such as quit their ranks, but also such as are guilty of small neglects of duty;' and had this neglect of duty been discovered, the Jewish rulers would certainly have done their utmost to bring them to condign punishment. If there had been also the least shadow of probability in the accusation, they would assuredly have prosecuted the apostles with the most unrelenting vengeance. For, their credit and authority were very deeply ernor's ears, we will persuade him, and secure you. So they took the money, and did as they were taught : and this saying is commonly reported among the Jews until this day.

Matt. 28 : 15 ; 1 Cor. 15 : 5 ; Mark 16 : 12.

And he was seen of Cephas. After that, he appeared in another form unto two of them, that same day, as they concerned ; so that this single omission was a full demonstration that they did not believe one word of the report which they so industriously circulated. It was also improbable in the extreme, that the intimidated apostles should attempt such an action, which would have been excessively rash even in the most experienced soldiers ; it was still more improbable that they should succeed ; and if they had, reproach, torture, and death were the whole recompense, which they could possibly have expected. The Jewish rulers were determined not to confess the truth ; therefore, not knowing what to say, they were reduced to the distressing necessity of circulating one of the most senseless lies that ever was fabricated."—Greswell.

He appeared in another form.—"It is necessary to bear constantly in mind that the Lord now appears under new physical conditions. Up to his death he had been under the usual limitations of our humanity. Now he is the Risen One. Without entering into any inquiries as to the nature of his body after the resurrection, it is certain that it was in many respects unlike what it had been before. During this period of forty days, he came and went, appeared and disappeared, in a most mysterious and inscrutable manner. He passes, seemingly in an instant, from place to place ; he is seen by his disciples, and converses with them, and yet is not recognized : he enters the room where they are assembled while the doors are shut. Hence, in examining the narrative of his various appearances during this period, we must remember that he is no more under the ordinary laws of nature ; and that we are in the highest sense in the region of the supernatural."—Andrews. "On earth he had no longer any local residence ; his body required neither food for its subsistence, nor a lodging for its shelter and repose : he was become the inhabitant of another region, from which he came occasionally to converse with his disciples ; his visible Ascension, at the expiration of the forty days, being not the necessary means of his removal, but a token to his disciples that this was the last visit,—an evidence to them that 'the heavens had now received him,' and that he walked and went to a village called Emmaus, which was from Jerusalem about threescore furlongs. And they talked together of all these things which had happened. And it came to pass, that, while they communed together, and reasoned, Jesus himself drew near and went with them.

Chap. XLIII.

Luke 24 : 13-15.

April, J.C. 34.

Jesus is seen by Peter at Jerusalem;
by two disciples
on the way to Emmaus.

was to be seen no more on earth with the corporeal eye, 'till the restitution of all things.'—Bishop Horsley. This is the common view, but I do not assent to it. Christ's own language (Luke 24 : 39, 40) seems to me inconsistent with it.—L. A.

Two of them.—"That is, of the company named, not of the apostles. Mark merely mentions the fact of this appearing, without giving the particulars (ch. 16 : 12), according to his object, which was rather to note the fact that the belief in Christ's resurrection was most slowly received, and not until the proof was irresistible."—Jacobus.

That same day.—The same day of the resurrection ; the day of the Christian sabbath.

Emmaus (hot springs).—The opinion has prevailed among Christian writers, that the Emmaus of Luke was identical with the Emmaus on the border of the plain of Philistia, afterward called Nicopolis, and which was about twenty miles from Jerusalem. A tradition of the 14th century identifies Emmaus with Kubeibeh, about three miles west of ancient Mizpeh, and nine from Jerusalem. Dr. Thomson ("The Land and the Book," vol. ii., p. 540) is inclined, with others, to locate Emmaus at Kuriet el Aineb, which he says "would be the proper distance from Jerusalem." All is mere conjecture.

They talked together.—"They seem to have given up all for lost, and to have come to the conclusion that Jesus was not the Messiah. Their master had been crucified, contrary to their expectation ; their hopes dashed, their anticipation disappointed ; and they were now returning in sadness, and very naturally conversed, on the way, of the things which had happened in Jerusalem."—Barnes. "Their conversation can be imagined from what they say to the Lord."—Jacobus.

Communed and reasoned.—Exchanged views and feelings, weighing afresh all the facts.

Jesus himself drew near—"From behind ; see verse 18, whence they take him for an inhabitant of Jerusalem."—Alford.

Chap. XLIII.

Luke 24 : 16, 19.

April, J.C. 34.

But their eyes were holden. that they should not know him. And he said unto them, What manner of communications are these that ye have one to another, as ye walk, and are sad? And the one of them, whose name was Cleopas, answering, said unto him, Art thou only a stranger in Jerusalem, and hast not known the things which are come to pass there in these days? And he said unto them, What things? And they said unto him, Concerning Jesus of Nazareth, which was a prophet mighty

But their eyes were holden.—“Restrained. The facts that they were not expecting him, that they were not his intimate disciples, and therefore not very familiar with his looks or voice, that they were so earnest in talking as not to take special pains to examine closely, will account largely for the holding of their eyes.”—Barnes.

That they should not know him.—“He did not discover himself to them as he did to Mary, but addressed them as a stranger. He aimed by this only to draw them out.”—Jacobus.

What manner of communications?—“The words imply the earnest discussion that had appeared in their manner.”—Jamieson. “He had apparently been walking with them some little time before this was said. The term used by our Lord implies that they had been disputing with some earnestness; but there is no blame implied in the word. Possibly, though both were sad, they may have taken different views, and in the answer of Cleopas we have that of the one who was most disposed to abandon all hope.”—Alford.

Cleopas.—This is different from the name in John 19 : 25, and is shortened from Cleopatros, according to Alford and Olskausen. Lightfoot makes it the same name as Alpheus, whose son was the apostle James (Matt. 10 : 3).

A stranger.—The term here used means rather sojourner than stranger. Alford reads, “Dost thou lodge alone at Jerusalem?” They took him for one who had been there at the feast, from a distance. We had rather read, “Dost thou alone sojourn at Jerusalem, and not know the things,” etc. “That is, Art thou the only one of all the sojourners there, who does not know?”—Jacobus. “As if feeling it a relief to have some one to unburden his thoughts and feelings to, this disciple goes over the main facts in his own desponding style; and this was just what our Lord wished.”—Jamieson.

Concerning Jesus of Nazareth.—“Now the stream of their

Chap. XLIII.

Luke 24: 20, 23.

J.C. 34.

in deed and word before God, and all the people: and how the chief priests and our rulers delivered him to be condemned to death, and have crucified him. But we trusted that it had been he which should have redeemed Israel: and besides all this, to-day is the third day since these things were done. Yea, and certain women also of our company made us astonished, which were early at the sepulcher. And when they found not his body, they lamentations over their disappointed expectations breaks loose. Their anguish of heart is especially remarkable, since it showed what the Lord was in their eyes, and remained, even in the moment when they had seen their dearest hopes vanish. The official name, Christ, they do not now take upon their lips; but, respecting the name Jesus of Nazareth, they presuppose that it is sufficiently familiar to every one in and out of Jerusalem. That he, although he had been reckoned among the transgressors, was a prophet and extraordinary messenger of God, such as, with the exception of John, had not appeared in Israel for centuries before,—this admitted of no doubt. As such he had attested himself by word and deed, not only in the eyes of the people, but also before the face of God; and even after his death it is impossible for them to mention the name otherwise than with reverence and love.”—Lange.

We trusted.—“We had hoped, is the idea. The trust is spoken of as past. We see in this opening of their views, the wise method of our Lord for the important object of drawing from them a familiar and plain declaration of their thoughts, and, besides, to obtain this testimony to the whole transaction.”—Jacobus.

He which should have redeemed Israel.—“The exact kind of redemption expected by the disciples, we are left to conjecture; but it is clear, that like most Jews, they looked much more for a temporal redeemer than a spiritual one. They looked for a redemption like that of their forefathers out of Egypt. Hence their excessive perplexity and amazement when he who they thought would prove the redeemer was crucified.”—Ryle.

The third day.—“They doubtless here refer to the three days so often mentioned as connected with his death and burial. The period had passed, but the world was not renewed.”—Wheeler.

Found not his body.—This does not refer to the first

Chap. XLIII.

Luke 24 : 23, 27.

J.C. 34.

came, saying, that they had also seen a vision of angels, which said that he was alive. And certain of them which were with us, went to the sepulcher, and found it even so as the women had said: but him they saw not.

Then he said unto them, O fools, and slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken! Ought not Christ to have suffered these things, and to enter into his glory? And beginning at Moses, and all the prophets, return of Mary, on seeing the stone rolled away; for a vision of angels is spoken of, and it is also hinted in the last clause of verse 24, that they reported having seen Christ."—Jacobus.

Certain of them which were with us.—Apostles. The visits of Peter and John are referred to. See John 20: 2-9.

O fools.—"The word rendered fools is more properly, without understanding."—Alford. "Unbelief is not a mark of wisdom: it is a mark of folly. Unbelievers in the New Testament are often spoken of as without understanding (see Gal. 3: 1), 'their mind and conscience defiled' (Tit. 1: 16). Sin has impaired the understanding so that natural reason blunders and stumbles at the plainest truths of God's word."—Jacobus.

"Slow of heart; sluggish—in disposition—to believe. These were both shown in their not having apprehended, from the sufferings and death of Christ, the sequel of that death,—the fulfillment of the resurrection."—Alford.

All that the prophets have spoken.—All the prophecies uttered in Old Testament times in regard to Christ's coming and death.

Ought not Christ—"the Christ," the Messiah—to suffer . . . and enter; i. e., through the gate of suffering (and suffering "these things," or such a death), to enter into his glory. "Ye believe in the glory; but these very sufferings are the predicted gate of entrance into it."—Jamieson. "The Lord speaks of a necessity that was grounded in this truth, namely, that all these things had been foretold. That which had been a matter of offense to them had been for this very reason, according to a higher order of things, inevitable; and they could not possibly have been so driven hither and thither, if they had given such heed as they ought to the prophetic annunciations respecting the suffering Messiah. What had seemed to them incompatible with the glory of the Messiah was precisely the appointed way thereto."—Lange.

Beginning.—"Beginning belongs to both the following

Chap. XLIII.

Luke 24 : 27, 30.

J.C. 34.

he expounded unto them in all the scriptures the things concerning himself.

And they drew nigh unto the village whether they went: and he made as though he would have gone further. But they constrained him, saying, Abide with us: for it is toward evening, and the day is far spent. And he went in to tarry with them. And it came to pass, as he sat at meat with them, he took bread, and blessed it, and brake, clauses. A similar expression is found in Acts 3 : 24. He began with Moses first: he began with each as he came to them."—Alford.

He expounded.—He explained or interpreted it to them. Probably he showed them that their notions of the Messiah were not according to the scriptures.

In all the scriptures.—In all the writings of the Old Testament. They were called scriptures, because they were written,—the art of printing being then unknown.

The things concerning himself.—"Concerning the Messiah. He showed what the scriptures foretold; and they saw that these things applied to Jesus of Nazareth, and began to be satisfied that he was the Messiah."—Barnes. "I take the things concerning himself, to mean something very different from mere prophetic passages. The whole scriptures are a testimony to him; the whole history of the chosen people, with its types, and its law, and its prophecies, is a showing forth of him; and it was here the whole. Observe the testimony which this verse gives to the divine authority, and the Christian interpretation of the Old Testament scriptures; so that the denial of the references to Christ's death and glory in the Old Testament is henceforth nothing less than a denial of his own teaching."—Alford.

Made as though.—Rather acted as though; moved on his course, not in dissimulation, for he would have gone on his way, if they had not detained him with loving violence.

Constrained him.—"Let it be noted that we have several instances of expressions like this in Scripture. Abraham (Gen. 32 : 26), Gideon (Judg. 6 : 18), Manoah (Judg. 13 : 15), all show that God loves to be entreated of his people, and that those who would have much must ask much, and even use a holy violence."—Ryle.

He took bread . . . blessed . . . brake . . . gave.—"The action mentioned here has occasioned much differ-and gave to them. And their eyes were opened, and they knew him : and he vanished out of their sight. And they said one to another, Did not our heart burn within us while he talked with us by the way, and while he opened to us the scriptures ?

Luke 24 : 31-37 ; John 20, 19 ; Mark 16 : 14.

And they rose up the same hour, and returned to Jerusalem, and found the eleven gathered together, and them that were with them, saying, The Lord is risen indeed, and hath appeared to Simon. And they told unto the residue what things were done in the way, and how he was known of them in breaking of bread : neither believed they them.

And as they thus spake, the same day at evening, being the first day of the week, as they sat at meat, when the doors were shut where the disciples were assembled for fear of the Jews, came Jesus and stood in the midst, and saith unto them, Peace be unto you. But they were terrified and affrighted, and sup- Jesus appears to the Apostles.

ence of opinion. (1) Some think that no particular sense is to be attached to the expression, and that it means that Jesus was recognized at the time when he brake bread. (2) Some think there was something peculiar in our Lord's manner and demeanor at breaking of bread, which was well known to the disciples. Among these is Alford."—Ryle.

And their eyes were opened.—It was as "he gave to them," that their eyes were opened. It is in his work of grace that he still reveals himself to us. It is as he gives to us himself in the broken body on the tree, that our eyes are opened. We do not know him till we see him in the very act of love to us sinners."—Jacobus, Vanished.—This also showed that it was he,--Bengel.

Did not our heart burn within us ?—"These words would be more literally rendered, 'Was not our heart burning within us ?' It is a strong expression to indicate the warmth and delight of their feelings while they listened to our Lord's exposition of scripture. See Ps. 30 : 4 ; Jer. 20 : 9."—Ryle.

Chap. XLIII. Luke 24 : 38-43 ; John 20 : 20.

posed that they had seen a spirit. And he upbraided them with their unbelief, and hardness of heart, because they believed not them which had seen him after he was risen. And he said unto them, Why are ye troubled? and why do thoughts arise in your hearts? Behold my hands and my feet, that it is I myself: handle me, and see; for a spirit hath not flesh and bones, as ye see me have. And when he had thus spoken, he shewed them his hands and his feet and his side. And while they yet believed not for joy, and wondered, he said unto them, Have ye here any meat? And they gave him a piece of a broiled fish, and of an honeycomb. And he took it, and did eat before

A spirit.—A ghost or specter, an appearance of the dead to the living.

Thoughts.—Not merely 'thoughts,' but questionings, reasonings.

A spirit hath not flesh and bones, as ye see me have.—"He showed them the print of the nails in his hands, and the sword-thrust in his side. This throws some light on the subsequent language of Thomas (John 20 : 25); he desired the same evidence which had been vouchsafed to his co-disciples. Christ's language here shows clearly that his body after the resurrection was his natural earthly body. I believe that he retained it until the ascension, when it was changed 'in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye,' and the corruptible put on incorruption, and the mortal put on immortality."—Abbott.

Believed not for joy.—"This is sometimes the case on the occurrence of events very felicitous, which happen suddenly and unexpectedly. We think the news too good to be believed, and fancy we are dreaming."—Greswell.

Honeycomb.—Luke 24 : 42. Honey abounded in Palestine, and was a very common article of food. Bees lived in caves of the rocks; in the hollows of trees; and were also kept as with us. The disciples gave probably just what was their own common fare, and what was ready at the time.

And he took it and did eat before them.—"Another evidence of his bodily resurrection. If his were a spiritual body this eating would have been but a pretense."—Abbott. "To commend to them the truth of his resurrection, he vouchsafed both to be handled, and to eat before his disciples, lest they should think

Chap. XLIII.

Luke 24 : 44, 45.

April, J.C. 34.

them. Then were the disciples glad when they saw the Lord.

And he said unto them, These are the words which I spake unto you, while I was yet with you, that all things must be fulfilled which were written in the law of Moses, and in the prophets, and in the psalms, concerning me. Then opened he their understanding, that they might unthat he appeared not solidly, but imaginarily. But he did this out of power, not out of necessity, even as the sun sucketh up the water out of power, whereas the earth doth it out of want, being dry and thirsty."—Bede.

These are the words.—"Or, this is the fulfillment of what I before told you respecting my death (see Luke 18 : 33 ; Mark 10 : 33)."—Barnes. "Doubtless he had often said things to them on these matters, which have not been recorded for us."—Alford.

The law of Moses.—"The five books of Moses, called the Pentateuch. This was the first division of the Old Testament among the Jews, and was called the Law. When our Lord speaks of the things in the 'law of Moses' concerning himself, there can be little doubt that he points to all the types and figures which were emblems of himself, and specially to the sacrifices."—Ryle.

In the prophets.—"This was the second division, and included Joshua, Judges, the four books of Kings, and the prophets, except Daniel."

In the psalms.—"This was the third, and was called Hagiography, or holy writings. It contained the Psalms, and all the rest of the canonical books,—Daniel, Esther, Ezra, and Nehemiah being reckoned as one book, and the Chronicles closing the canon."—Alford. "This division of the Old Testament was in use long before the time of Christ, and was what he referred to here ; and he meant to say that in each of these divisions of the Old Testament there were prophecies respecting himself. The particular subject before them was his resurrection from the dead. A most striking prediction of this is contained in Ps. 16 : 9-11 : compare it with Acts 2 : 24-32 ; 13 : 35-37."—Barnes.

Then opened he their understanding.—"He did not open their understanding without the Scripture : he sends them thither. He knows that Scripture would not give them a sufficient knowledge of the things of God, without the influence and illumination of his Spirit. They are truly taught by God, who are taught by his Spirit to understand the Scriptures. Christ gives great

Chap. XLIII.

Luke 24 : 46-48.

J.C. 34.

derstand the scriptures, and said unto them, Thus it is written, and thus it behooved Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead the third day: and that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem. And ye are witnesses of these things.

honor to the Scriptures. The devil cheats those whom he persuades to cast away the Scriptures in expectation of a teaching by the Spirit. The Spirit teaches by, not without, not contrary to, the Holy Scriptures."—Poole.

Thus it behooved.—Was necessary and proper,—because it had been so written. It was the fulfillment of the Old Testament; and therefore he was the true Messiah, seeing he fulfilled the Scriptures.

Repentance and remission of sins (forgiveness).—"The substance of the preaching of the gospel literally corresponded to the description (see Acts 2 : 38). 'Repent and be baptized' were the words of the first sermon preached at Jerusalem."—Alford.

Among all nations.—" (1) This is the command of Christ. The church cannot be obedient, and let one nation be without the Gospel. (2) Every nation needs the Gospel as much as ours needs it. (3) It is the nature of a living Christianity to be missionary. Max Müller says that of all religions, only the missionary religions are living. That church is dead which is not anxious to preach the gospel to every creature. (4) This is the only way the church will keep pure. Nothing without this can keep the doctrine or life pure; organization, creeds, persecutions, all have failed. But any church which seeks to save souls will keep pure, because it cannot do its work without the great main doctrines of Christianity. (5) The true broad church cares for the world; the narrow church is the one that cares chiefly for itself. (6) The church at home is built up faster by its working for the heathen. (7) The grandeur of this work exalts the individual Christians who give and labor. (8) It is blessed to have part in the final triumph of the Gospel. Some may think the sun of righteousness is slow in rising; but let those who believe the times are out of joint understand that they are doing dishonor to the Holy Ghost. Four fifths of the human race now have the Bible in their own tongue. Religious toleration prevails in every civilized nation. The Roman Church may never grow out of her greed of power, but the day of her despotisms is over. Infidelity is no longer a masculine

And behold, I send the promise of my Father upon you: but tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem, until ye be factor in human affairs, as it was, for instance, in the days when the Roman amphitheater ran with the blood of the Christians. Bible study over the world is settling beyond disturbance the fundamental Christian truths. There never has been a time when the missionary spirit was more active than now. It is impossible to enumerate the occasions of special encouragement to missions. In short, as the old English preacher said, 'The Lord has been coming ever since he went away.'—Rev. Dr. Withrow.

Ye are witnesses of these things.—The apostles were witnesses of the resurrection of the Lord Jesus. In this consisted their especial office and work. Others besides them had been companions of our Lord; but peculiar grace and power was given to them, by which they gave forth their testimony (Acts 4 : 33). And what this testimony included, we learn from the conditions of apostleship propounded by Peter himself (Acts 1 : 21, 22); that, in order to its being properly given, an apostle must have been an eye and ear witness of what had happened from the baptism of John until the ascension; i.e., during the whole official life of our Lord. And we are consequently justified in assuming that the substance of the teaching of the apostles consisted of their testimony to such facts, given in the Holy Ghost and with power. I believe, then, that the apostles, in virtue not merely of their having been eye and ear witnesses of the evangelic history, but especially of their office, gave to the various churches their testimony in a narrative of facts, such narrative being modified in each case by the individual mind of the apostle himself, and his sense of what was requisite for the particular community to which he was ministering."—Alford. "The word 'witnesses' afterwards meant 'martyrs' (which is, in fact, the Greek word itself); for Christ's witnesses died to support their testimony."—M. B. Riddle.

I send the promise of my Father.—"The promise of the gift of another Comforter, contained in Christ's last conversation with the eleven (John 14 : 16-20, 26; 15 : 26, 27; 16 : 13, 14). This was the promise of the Father, made in the Old Testament (Isa. 44 : 3; Ezek. 36 : 27; Joel 2 : 28-32), recalled to the remembrance of the nation by John the Baptist (Matt. 3 : 11), and renewed by the Son."—Abbott. "John's mission was accomplished in baptizing with water; so now the great end of his own mission, the baptism with the Holy Ghost, was on the point of being accomplished. It was the beginning of a new period

Chap. XLIII.

John 20 : 24.

J.C. 34.

endued with power from on high. Then said Jesus to them again, Peace be unto you: as my Father hath sent me, even so send I you. And when he had said this, he breathed on them, and saith unto them, Receive ye the Holy Ghost. Whosoever sins ye remit, they are remitted unto them; and whosoever sins ye retain, they are retained.

But Thomas, one of the twelve, called Didymus, was not with them when Jesus came. The other disciples therefore said unto him, We have seen the Lord. But he said unto them, Except I shall see in his hands the of spiritual influence, totally unlike any which had preceded. See Acts 2 : 17."—Alford.

Endued with power.—Compare Luke 24 : 49 ; Rom. 15 : 13, 19 ; 1 Cor. 2 : 4 ; 2 Cor. 12 : 9 ; Phil. 3 : 10 ; 1 Thess. 1 : 5. These references will give the student an idea of the meaning of Christ's promise.

Whosoever sins ye remit, they are remitted, etc.—"I read in this language of Christ the bestowal of a twofold spiritual power—one of salvation, one of judgment. The disciple is sent into the world, like him to become a teacher of divine truth, an example to others, a manifestation of the divine character, a bearer in his own person of the sins of others. See Ch. 1 : 18. But also like him he is to be a judge. The Master's favor is to be in his hand. He who has power to proclaim salvation has also authority to pronounce condemnation. And the one declaration, no less than the other, when uttered under the influence of the Holy Spirit of God, is uttered with divine authority. Instances of this judgment against willful and determined sin are afforded by Christ's denunciation of the Pharisees; by Peter's condemnation of Ananias and Sapphira; by Paul's judgment of the offender in the Church of Corinth. Illustrations of perversions of this power are afforded by the anathemas of the Church of the middle ages, and perhaps by some of the severe denunciations of the Puritans."—Abbott.

Thomas . . . was not with them.—Perhaps he had abandoned hope; the strong evidence of his senses having finally convinced him that the pierced side and wounded hand betokened such a death that revivification was impossible.

Except I shall see.—That is, the mark or impression made

Chap. XLIII.

John 20 : 26-28.

J.C. 34.

print of the nails, and put my finger into the print of the nails, and thrust my hand into his side, I will not believe.

And after eight days again his disciples were within, and Thomas with them : then came Jesus, Jesus appears to Thomas. the doors being shut, and stood in the midst, and said, Peace be unto you.

Then saith he to Thomas, Reach hither thy finger, and behold my hands ; and reach hither thy hand, and thrust it into my side ; and be not faithless, but believing.

by the nails. He means to say, that " unless he have the testimony of both sight and touch as to the identity and real bodily presence of Jesus." For Thomas did not so much call in question the veracity of the disciples, as he supposed they had been deceived by some spirit. " We are too prone to carry our faith, with Thomas, at our fingers' ends, and trust God no further than our hand of sense can reach."—Gurnall.

Reach hither thy finger, and behold my hands.—" Our Lord did not reprove Thomas for being a despondent doubter, beset by caution even when he most longed to believe. He graciously granted the extremest test which his hopeless nature required—he suffered him to put his finger in the print of the nails and to examine the wounded side ; and there is but a tender shadow of a reproof in what he said : ' Thomas, because thou has seen me, thou hast believed ; blessed are they that have not seen and yet have believed.' In our day there are many disciples of Thomas, loving doubters, who would give their heart's blood to fully believe in this risen Jesus ; they would willingly put their hands in the print of the nails ; and for them the Master has a spiritual presence and a convincing nearness, if they will but seek it."—H. B. Stowe.

Be not faithless, but believing.—" The soul grows great and useful and happy, not by what it denies, but by what it cordially affirms and loves. Distrust is the death of the soul, belief is its life. The just shall live by faith. Infidelity is the abandonment of life, a suicide of the spirit."—David Swing. " The result of my own meditations is, that the evidence of the gospel, taken as a total, is as great for the Christians of the nineteenth century as for those of the Apostolic age. I should not be startled if I were told it were greater. But it does not follow that this holds equally good of each component part. An evidence of the most cogent clearness unknown to the prin-

Chap XLIII. Matt. 28 : 16 ; John 21 : 1-7.

J.C. 34.

And Thomas answered and said unto him, My Lord and my God.

Jesus saith unto him, Thomas, because thou hast seen me, thou hast believed: blessed are they that have not seen, and yet have believed.

Then the eleven disciples went away into Galilee; after these things Jesus shewed himself again to the disciples at the sea of Tiberias: and on this wise shewed he himself. There were together Simon Peter, and Jesus appears to seven at the sea of Galilee. Thomas called Didymus, and Nathanael of Cana in Galilee, and the sons of Zebedee, and two other of his disciples. Simon Peter saith unto them, I go a fishing. They say unto him, We also go with thee. They went forth, and entered into a ship immediately; and that night they caught nothing.

But when the morning was now come, Jesus stood on the shore; but the disciples knew not that it was Jesus. Then Jesus saith unto them, Children, have ye any meat? They answered him, No. And he said unto them, Cast the net on the right side of the ship, and ye shall find. They cast therefore, and now they were not able to draw it for the multitude of fishes. Therefore that disciple whom Jesus loved said unto Peter, It is the Lord. Now when Simon Peter heard that it was the Lord, he itive Christians may compensate for the evanescence of some evidence which they enjoyed. Evidences comparatively dim have waxed into noonday splendor; and the comparative wane of others, once effulgent, is more than indemnified by the synopsis τοῦ παντός, which we enjoy, and by the standing miracle of a Christendom commensurate with and almost synonymous with the civilized world."—S. T. Coleridge. "As in the candle I know there is both light and heat, but put out the candle, and they are both gone—one remains not without the other—so it is with faith and works."—Selden.

girt his fisher's coat unto him, (for he was naked) and did cast himself into the sea. And the other disciples came in a little ship (for they were not far from land, but as it were two hundred cubits) dragging the net with fishes.

As soon then as they were come to land, they saw a fire of coals there, and fish laid thereon, and bread. Jesus saith unto them, Bring of the fish which ye have now caught. Simon Peter went up, and drew the net to land full of great fishes, an hundred and fifty and three : and for all there were so many, yet was not the net broken.

Fisher's coat.—The original word does not mean any particular dress worn by fishermen, but simply an upper garment.

He was naked.—He was only in his vest ; naked is often used to signify the absence of this upper garment only.

They saw a fire.—"This might, indeed, be accounted for without supposing miraculous agency ; but from the air of the passage it should rather seem that the fire and food were not only provided by Christ, but provided miraculously, as the draught of fishes had been a little before. Both of the miracles being probably intended to teach them, by symbolical actions, that their Lord could, and would, abundantly supply the temporal as well as spiritual necessities of his disciples."—Bloomfield. "There is much depth and richness of meaning in this whole narrative. The Lord appears to his disciples, busied about their occupation for their daily bread ; speaks and acts in a manner wonderfully similar to his words and actions on a former memorable occasion, when we know that by their toiling long and taking nothing, but at his word enclosing a multitude of fishes, was set forth what should happen to them as 'fishers of men.' Can we miss that application at this far more important epoch of their apostolic mission ? Besides, He graciously provides for their present wants, and invites them to be his guests. Why, but to show them that in their work hereafter they should never want, but He would provide ? And, as connected with the parable, Matt. 13 : 47, has this net, enclosing "a great multitude," "and yet not broken," no meaning ? Any one who recognizes the teaching character of the acts of our Lord, can hardly cast all such applications from him ; and those who do not, have yet the first rudiments of the gospel to learn."—Alford.

Chap. XLIII.

John 20 : 12-19.

J.C. 34.

Jesus saith unto them, Come and dine. And none of the disciples durst ask him, Who art thou? knowing that it was the Lord. Jesus then cometh, and taketh bread, and giveth them, and fish likewise. This is now the third time that Jesus shewed himself to his disciples, after that he was risen from the dead.

So when they had dined, Jesus saith to Simon Peter, Simon son of Jonas, lovest thou me more than these? He saith unto him, Yea, Lord: thou knowest that I love thee. He saith unto him, Feed my lambs. He saith to him again the second time, Simon son of Jonas, lovest thou me? He saith unto him, Yea, Lord: thou knowest that I love thee. He saith unto him, Feed my sheep. He saith unto him the third time, Simon son of Jonas, lovest thou me? Peter was grieved because he said unto him the third time, Lovest thou me? And he said unto him, Lord, thou knowest all things; thou knowest that I love thee. Jesus saith unto him, Feed my sheep. Verily, verily, I say unto thee, When thou wast young, thou girdedst thyself, and walkedst whither thou wouldest: but when thou shalt be old, thou shalt stretch forth thy hands, and another shall gird thee, and carry thee whither thou wouldest not: This spake he, signify-

Thou girdest thyself.—The Jews, in walking or running, girded their outer garments around them, that they might not be impeded. The expression here denotes freedom. He did as he pleased; he girded himself or not—he went or remained, as he chose.

Carry thee.—"In the lifting up after the fastening to the cross. This is a prophecy of the manner of Peter's death, which is said to have taken place by crucifixion at Rome. St. Peter is reported to have been fixed to the cross with his head downwards at his own request; as though he were not worthy even to suffer in the same manner as his Lord. The words are descriptive of the practice mentioned by ancient authors, of ing by what death he should glorify God. And when he had spoken this, he saith unto him, Follow me.

John 21 : 19-23 ; 1 Cor. 15 : 6 ; Matt. 28 : 16-18.

Then Peter, turning about, seeth the disciple whom Jesus loved, following ; (which also leaned on his breast at supper, and said, Lord, which is he that betrayeth thee?) Peter seeing him, saith to Jesus, Lord, and what shall this man do ? Jesus saith unto him, If I will that he tarry till I come, what is that to thee ? Follow thou me. Then went this saying abroad among the brethren, that that disciple should not die : yet Jesus said not unto him, He shall not die ; but, If I will that he tarry till I come, what is that to thee ?

Then after that the eleven disciples went into a mountain where Jesus had appointed them, and he was seen of above five hundred brethren at once ; of Jesus appears to above five hundred. whom the greater part remain unto this present, but some are fallen asleep. And when they saw him, they worshiped him : but some doubted.

And Jesus came, and spake to them, saying, All power stretching out the hands of criminals upon the two extremities of a yoke placed across the neck, and so carrying them out to crucifixion. There appears to be a reference to this prophecy in 2 Peter, 1 : 14."—Greswell. "When all looks fair about, and thou seest not a cloud, so big as a hand, to threaten thee, forget not the wheel of things : think of sudden vicissitudes, but beat not thy brains to foreknow them. Be armed against such obscurities rather by submission than by foreknowledge. The knowledge of future evils mortifies present felicities ; and there is more content in the uncertainty or ignorance of them. This favor our Saviour vouchsafed unto Peter when he foretold not his death in plain terms, and so by an ambiguous and cloudy delivery damped not the spirits of his disciples."—Sir T. Browne.

Till I come.—"At the destruction of Jerusalem began that mighty series of events of which the Apocalypse is the prophetic record, and which is in the complex known as the 'coming of the Lord.'"—Alford.

Matt. 28 : 18-20 ; Mark 16 : 15-18 ; Acts 1 : 3-8 ; 1 Cor. 15 : 7.

is given me in heaven and in earth. And he said unto the disciples, Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized, shall be saved ; but he that believeth not, shall be damned. And these signs shall follow them that believe : In my name shall they cast out devils ; they shall speak with new tongues ; they shall take up serpents ; and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them ; they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover. Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost ; teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you ; and lo I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world. Amen.

After that, he was seen of James ; then of all the apostles. To whom also he shewed himself alive after his passion, by many infallible proofs, being seen of them Jesus again seen by the Apostles. forty days, and speaking of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God : and being assembled together with them, commanded them that they should not depart from Jerusalem, but wait for the promise of the Father, which, saith he, ye have heard of me. For John truly baptized with water ; but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost not many days hence.

When they therefore were come together, they asked of him, saying, Lord, wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel ?

And he said unto them, It is not for you to know the times or the seasons which the Father hath put in his own power. But ye shall receive power after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you : and ye shall be witnesses unto me, both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth.

Mark 16 : 19 , Luke 24 : 50-53 ; Acts 1 : 9-11 ; John 20 : 31.

So then, after the Lord had spoken unto them, these things, he led them out as far as to Bethany : and he lifted up his hands, and blessed them. And it came to pass, while he blessed them, he was parted from them, and while they beheld, he was taken up ; and a cloud received him out of their sight, and he was received up into heaven, and sat on the right hand of God. And while they looked steadfastly toward heaven as he went up, behold, two men stood by them in white apparel ; which also said,

The Ascension.

Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into Heaven ? This same Jesus which is taken up from you into Heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into Heaven.

And many other signs truly did Jesus in the presence of his disciples, which are not written in this book. But these are written, that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God ; and that believing ye might have life through his name.

THE END.

INDEX.

A

AARON, Elisabeth, a daughter of, 28.
 Abel, blood of, laid to the Jews, 422, 654.
 Abia, course of, 28.
 Abiathar and the shewbread, 153.
 Abraham, God's covenant with, fulfilled in birth of Jesus, 35.
 being descendants of, boasted of, 365.
 many from all parts shall sit down with, 367.
 rejoiced to see the day of Christ, 209.
 Lazarus in the bosom of, 517.
 Abundance of the heart causes the mouth to speak, 231, 199.
 Acceptable year of the Lord, the, 128.
 Accusation, false, prohibited, 71.
 sought against Jesus, 158, 361.
 of Jesus over the cross, 760.
 Adulteries proceed from the heart, 310.
 Adultery in the heart, what is, 178.
 a woman taken in, brought to Jesus, 360.
 what amounts to, 552.
 See Adulteries.
 Advent. See Second Coming.
 Adversaries to be conciliated, 176, 177, 446.
 Affliction predicted in the last days, 670.

Alms, not to give, ostentatiously, 186.
 the giving of, enjoined, 418, 439.
 Alpheus, father of Matthew, 153. of James, 164.
 Altar of incense, Zacharias at the, 29, 422.
 self-examination on going to the, 177.
 as to swearing by the, 650.
 Ambition of James and John, 574.
 See Humility.
 Andrew follows Jesus, 82.
 brings Peter to Jesus, 83.
 call of, 82.
 fishing, 139.
 one of the Twelve, 162, 279, 293.
 tells Jesus of the lad with five loaves, etc., 293.
 Greeks desiring to see him, 636.
 consults Jesus as to the destruction of Jerusalem, 662.
 Angel, an, appears to Zacharias, 29.
 to Mary, 36.
 to Joseph, 52.
 to shepherds near Bethlehem, 44.
 moving the waters of Bethesda, 114.
 rolls back the stone of the sepulchre, 774.
 See Gabriel.
 Angels minister unto Jesus, 78.
 will ascend and descend on the Son of Man, 85.

- Angels at the last day, 325, 683.
 of little children, 342.
 rejoice at the sinner's repentance, 496.
 in the resurrection, we shall be like, 630.
 Anger of Jesus, 159.
 without cause, condemned, 176.
 Anisé tithed by the Pharisees, 651.
 Anna the prophetess, 47.
 Annas, one of the high-priests, 65.
 Anointing head and feet, 590.
 the sick with oil, 285.
 a blind man's eyes with clay, 370.
 Annunciations of the birth of John the Baptist and of Jesus, Ch. I., Apostles, ordination of the, 162, 279.
 sent out to preach, etc., 279, 397.
 23.
 return to Jesus, 289.
 See Disciples, Andrew, etc.
 Appearances of Jesus after his resurrection :
 to the women at the sepulchre, 778.
 to Mary Magdalene, 777.
 to two disciples going to Emmaus, 781.
 to Simon, 780.
 to the disciples, 786.
 and Thomas, 792.
 at the sea of Tiberias, 793.
 to all the apostles, 799.
 Archelaus succeeds Herod, 54.
 Ashamed of Jesus, those who are, will be disowned, 325.
 Ashes, 220.
 Asher (Aser), Anna, of tribe of, 48.
 Ask, direction to, 413.
 Asleep, Jesus in a storm. 257.
 Augustus Cæsar decrees taxation, 40.
 Authority, Jesus teaching as one having, 141, 203.
 given to Jesus, to execute judgment, 119.
 of Jesus questioned, 612.
 See Power.
 Ax laid unto the root of the trees, 69.

B

- BABE in the manger, 44, 45.
 Babes, revelation to, 221, 462, 606.
 Bag, contents of, borne by Judas, 590.
 carried by Judas, 590.
 Baptism by John in Jordan, 68. of John at Ænon, 100.
 of repentance, 67.
 that of water, 71.
 God justified in, 218.
 whether from heaven or of men, 613.
 by Jesus, 100.
 with which Jesus to be baptized, 442.
 Barley loaves miraculously increased, 292.
 Bartimeus, blind, 586.
 Baskets of fragments, 209, 313.
 Beam and mote in the eye, 198.
 Beatitudes in the sermon on the mount, 166-171.
 See Blessing.
 Bed let down through a roof, 151.
 direction to carry, 116, 152.
 candle not to be put under a, 246.
 Beds, the sick brought to Jesus on, 231, 298.
 Beelzebub, Jesus accused of working by, 283.
 "Behold the man," 755.
 Belief and salvation, 118, 302.
 of Mary praised, 36.
 in Jesus, 300.
 of Nathanael, 85.
 of the disciples at Cana, 88.
 of many on the feast day, 96.
 of the men of Sychar, 111.
 of a nobleman at Capernaum, 113.
 the measure of benefit, 210.
 of many Jews, 365. of several rulers, 657.
 to follow belief in God, 657.
 in scripture, of the disciples, 120.
 resulting from sight, 113.
 Bethabara, 81.

- Bethany, Jesus goes to, 593, 588, 606.
 Bethesda, pool of, 114.
 Bethlehem, Joseph and Mary go to, 42.
 Christ's prophesied birthplace, 51, 359.
 Bethsaida, the city of Philip, 84.
 upbraided for unbelief, 220, 399.
 Jesus retires to a desert place near, 290.
 goes to, 290.
 Betrayal, foretold, 334, 591, 697, 707.
 plotted, 592.
 of Jesus' disciples foretold, 671.
 Bewailing at death of ruler's daughter, 271.
 Binding on earth and in heaven by the
 disciples, 323, 346.
 Birds of the air have nests, 256.
 Birth of John Baptist, 38.
 foretold, 31.
 of Jesus, 42.
 foretold, 33.
 revealed to the shepherds, 45.
 the new, necessary, 97.
 of water and of the Spirit, 98.
 of the flesh and of the Spirit, 98.
 Blasphemy, Jesus charged with, 472. against the Holy Ghost, not forgiven, 232.
 proceeds from the heart, 310.
 Blessing on the hearing of God's word, 416. of Jesus on the loaves, 293.
 on children 558.
 Blind, the, Jesus sent to recover sight
 to, 129.
 at the pool of Bethesda, 114.
 leading the blind, 198, 309.
 healed, 216, 230, 266, 369.
 entertaining the, true hospitality, 479.
 Blood, of the prophets required of the Jews, 422, 653.
 woman with an issue of, healed, 274.
 of the Son of Man to be drunk, 303.
 Boanerges, 163.
 Boats, the people follow Jesus in, 299.
 Body, the temple of Christ's, 95.
 the eye the light of the, 192, 415.
 those that only kill the, not to be feared, 284.
 Bondage, the Jews deny being in, 365.
 Bottles, old, and new wine, 269.
 Branches strewed in Jesus' way, 597.
 Brass, the Twelve not to provide, 280.
 Brazen vessels, tradition as to washing, 307.
 Bread, Jesus tempted to turn stones into, 76.
 man lives not alone by, 76.
 a stone not given for, 413.
 the true, from heaven, 300.
 of God, 299.
 the living, 300, 303.
 of life, 299, 301.
 the children's, not to be cast to dogs, 311.
 the disciples forget to take, 316.
 Brethren of Jesus go with him to Caper-naum, 88.
 come to him while teaching, 237.
 the true, 238.
 urge him to go to Jerusalem, 350.
 Bridechamber, the children of, 269.
 Bridegroom at Cana, 87.
 voice of the, 101-269.
 Broken-hearted, Jesus sent to heal the,
 128, 177.
 Bruised, Jesus sent to set at liberty the, 129.
 reed not broken, 161.
 Builders, the stone rejected by the, 619.
 Burdens laid on men by the law, 420.
 Burial of a father, not to postpone following Jesus, 256.
 Jesus anointed in view of, 591.
 Bushel, a candle not put under, 173, 246, 415.

C

CÆSAR AUGUSTUS decrees taxation, 41.
 as to giving tribute to, 626.

- Cæsar Augustus, Jesus accused of speaking against, 748.
 Cæsarea Philippi, Jesus goes to, 319.
 Caiaphas, one of the high-priests, 60, 539.
 consultation at palace of, against Jesus, 697.
 Jesus tried before, 741.
 Calming of the storm, 259.
 Camel swallowed, and gnat strained at, 652.
 Camel's hair, raiment of, 66.
 Cana, marriage at, 85.
 Jesus returns to, 112.
 Canaan, the woman of, 310.
 Candle to give light, 246, 273, 414.
 Capernaum, Jesus goes to, 88, 133, 135, 141, 150, 205.
 nobleman's son healed at, 113.
 upbraided for unbelief, 220, 400.
 Jesus teaches at, 299-303.
 Captives, Jesus to preach deliverance to, 129.
 Cares of this world choke the word, 246.
 of life not to be an over-burden, 687.
 Carpenter, Jesus despised as a, 277.
 Cast himself from the pinnacle, Jesus tempted to, 76.
 Casting out. See Devils, Spirits.
 Cast out, darkness, 209.
 those that come to Jesus not, 301.
 to be cast out, 173.
 Cave, the grave of Lazarus, 535.
 Centurion, servant of a, healed, 210.
 Chaff to be burnt up, 72.
 Chains broken by a demoniac, 262.
 Changers of money driven out of the temple, 94.
 Charger, John Baptist's head brought in a, 287.
 Child. a, as an example of humility, 338.
 Children of Bethlehem slain by Herod, 53.
 Rachel weeping for her, 53.
 in the market-place, the Jews likened to, 209, 218.
 of the bridechamber, 269.
 Children to be opposed to their parents, 283, 285, 445.
 bread of, not to be cast to dogs, 311, of God to be gathered in one, 540.
 and of the resurrection, 630.
 of this world and of light, 511.
 blessed by Jesus, 558.
 praise Jesus in the Temple, 598.
 Chorazin upbraided for unbelief, 220, 399.
 Christ the Lord, announced by the angel to the shepherds, 45.
 whether John Baptist was, 80.
 John Baptist disclaims being, 80, 101.
 the Messiah, 83.
 Jesus acknowledged to be, 83, 111, 145, 320, 531.
 proclaims himself to be, 108, 379.
 expulsion from the synagogue for acknowledgment of Jesus as, 378.
 Christs, false, predicted, 664, 680.
 Church, the rock foundation of the, 322.
 the offending brother to be reported to the, 345.
 Chuza, Herod's steward, 229.
 Circuit of Jesus through Galilee, 228.
 Circumcision on the Sabbath day, 354.
 Cities upbraided for unbelief, 220.
 City of David, Bethlehem, 45.
 devil takes Jesus up into the holy, 76.
 upon a hill, 173.
 of the great king, Jerusalem, 180.
 Clay, a blind man's eyes anointed with, 371.
 Cleansing of a leper, 148, 543.
 of ten lepers, 543.
 Climbing over into the sheepfold, 383.
 Cloth, new, in an old garment, 269.
 Cloud at the transfiguration, 329.
 Coat taken, cloak to be offered, 182.
 Coats, two, not to be taken by the twelve, 280.
 Colt, foal of an ass, Jesus riding on, 596.
 Comfort to mourners, 167.
 Comforter, the, promised, 722.

- Commandment to Jesus to lay down his life, 389.
 Commandments, breaking of, condemned, 175.
 superseded by traditions, 308.
 must be kept to obtain life, 262.
 the first and second great, 632.
 Commission to the disciples to preach, 280.
 Compassion of Jesus, 211, 266, 279, 291, 313, 387.
 Condemn, Jesus not come to, 99.
 Condemnation, those who believe in Christ have not, 118.
 by thy words, 234.
 Confession of sins at John's baptism, 68.
 by Jesus of those who confess him, 284.
 of Christ, expulsion for, 375, 428.
 Conscience, conviction of the, 362.
 Consolation received by the rich in this world, 171.
 Conversion necessary to salvation, 338.
 Conviction of sin of the Pharisees, 366.
 Jesus challenges, 366.
 Corban, 308.
 Cords, scourge of, Temple purged with, 94.
 Corn, disciples pluck, on the Sabbath, 154.
 of wheat must die before it produce fruit, 637.
 Corners of the streets, praying in, 187.
 Corpse of John Baptist placed in a tomb, 287.
 Council, in danger of, 176.
 of chief priests and Pharisees, 539.
 Councils, disciples to be delivered up to, 282, 668.
 Counsel taken to put Jesus to death, 159.
 Country, a prophet in his own, not honored, 112, 131, 278.
 Course of Abia, 28.
 Covetousness, condemned, 431.
 proceeds from the heart, 310.
 Cross to be taken up by Jesus' disciples, 285, 487.
 Cross of Jesus, borne by him, 325, 563.
 Crucifixion of Jesus, 734.
 foretold, 573, 654.
 Crumbs asked for by Lazarus, 516.
 eaten by dogs under children's table, 311.
 Cry in the streets, Jesus not to, 161.
 Cummin tithed, 650.
 Cup, outside of, cleansed by Pharisees, 418, 652.
 of water to a disciple rewarded, 285, 340.
 the, as to disciples' drinking of, 574.
 Cups, tradition as to washing, 307.
 Cursing father or mother prohibited, 308.
 Custom, Matthew sitting at receipt of, 153.
 of Jesus, to read in the synagogue, 126.
 Cyrenius, governor of Syria, 40.
- D
- DALMANUTHA, Jesus goes to, 314.
 Damnation, the resurrection of, 119.
 eternal, to blasphemers of Holy Ghost, 233.
 Dancing of Herodias' daughter, 286.
 Daughter of Jairus raised from death, 270.
 of Herodias, 286.
 of a Syrophenician woman healed, 310.
 David, Joseph of the house of, 40, 42.
 Bethlehem, the city of, 45.
 his eating of the shewbread quoted, 155.
 the Christ to be of the seed of, 359.
 son of, Jesus called, 230, 310, 586, 642.
 Dayspring from on high, 40.
 Dead, the, raised by the Father, 117.
 will hear Jesus' voice, 118.
 raised by Jesus, 213, 257.
 Death, faith in Christ overcoming, 118, 367.
 in sin, the result of unbelief, 364.

- Death, parents to be given up to, 283.
 of John Baptist, 289.
 foretold, 324, 572.
 discussed at the transfiguration, 328.
 compassed by the chief priests and Pharisees, 540.
 determined upon, 539.
 of Lazarus, 527.
- Debtors, the, for five hundred pence and fifty, 225.
- Decapolis, multitudes from, follow Jesus, 146.
 fame of Jesus spread through, 266.
- Deceit proceeds from the heart, 310.
- Deep, devils ask not to be sent into the, 263.
- Defilement by eating with unwashen hands, 306.
 that which produces, 307, 309.
- Delay in Christ's coming no excuse for presumption, 442.
- Deliverance to captives preached by Jesus, 129.
- Demoniac healed, 230-261, 276, 311, 331.
- Den of thieves, the Temple made a, 605.
- Denial of Jesus, denial by him, 284, 428.
 by Peter, 740.
 foretold, 712.
- Denunciation of Scribes and Pharisees, 648. of the rich, 171.
 of the full, 171.
 of those that laugh, 172.
 of those that men praise, 172.
 of the Sadducees and Pharisees, 172.
 of lawyers, 420.
 of the world, 341.
- Departure of Jesus asked for by Gada-renes, 266.
- Desert places, Jesus retires to, 145, 149, 289.
- Desert, John Baptist in the, 40.
- Desolation of Jerusalem foretold, 655.
 the abomination of, 675.
- Destroy the law, Christ not come to, 174.
- Destruction of Jerusalem foretold, 601, 675.
- Devil, the, tempts Jesus, 75-78.
 children of, 250, 366.
 a, cast out, 145, 229.
 Jesus accused of having, 354.
- Devils cast out by Jesus, 143, 145, 261, 276. power to cast out, given, 458, 461.
 acknowledge Jesus as Christ, 161.
 casting out, no guaranty of heaven, 203.
 Jesus accused of casting out, by Beelzebub, 231.
- Disciple not above his Lord, 198.
- Disciples of the Pharisees used to fast, 269.
 of John Baptist, two of, follow Jesus, 82.
 question about purifying, 101.
 sent to Jesus to make inquiries 216. used to fast, 269.
 bury John Baptist, 287.
 go to Jesus, 287.
- of Jesus called to the wedding at Cana, 86.
 believe on him, 88.
 go to fetch meat at Sychar, 107.
 pluck ears of corn on Sabbath, 154.
 come to him in the mountain, 166.
 distribute bread miraculously increased, 293, 313.
 offended at Jesus' doctrine, 304.
 some of, go back, 304.
 forget to provide bread, 316.
 acknowledge Jesus as Christ, 329.
 fail to cure a demoniac, 331.
- accompany Jesus to a marriage at Cana, 86.
 to Capernaum, 88.
 to Judæa, 100, 350.
 to the sea, 160.
 to Nain, 210.
 across the sea, 258.
 to Jairus' house, 270.

- Disciples accompany Jesus to Ephraim, 540.
 consult Jesus on the parable of the sower, 241.
 as to defilement, 310.
 their failing to cure a demoniac, 330.
 a form of prayer, 408.
 marriage, 557.
 ask Jesus to send away the Syrophenician women, 311.
 to increase their faith, 430, 522.
 warned against hypocrisy, 424.
 instructed not to premeditate when accused, 283, 428.
 awaken Jesus in a storm, 258.
 sent over the sea in a ship, 294.
 informed of his coming passion, 324.
 sent to fetch the ass and colt, 595.
 with unwashed hands, 310.
 must deny themselves, 486, 565.
 Diseased miraculously healed, 145.
 cured at Bethesda, 114.
 Disfigurement of face in fasting condemned, 192.
 Distress of nations foretold, 678.
 Ditch, the blind leading the blind into, 309.
 Divider, Jesus declines to be a, 430.
 Division on Jesus' account amongst the people, 359.
 Divorce, Jesus concerning, 179, 556.
 Doctors of the law come to hear Jesus, 150.
 Doctrine of Jesus, astonishment at, 134, 203.
 that of the Father, 352.
 of the Pharisees and Sadducees, warning against, 317.
 Dogs, holy things not to be given to, 198.
 the children's bread not to be cast to, 311.
 Dove, the Holy Ghost in form of a, 73, 82.
 Doves offered by Mary and Joseph, 46.
 sellers of, driven from the Temple, 604.
 Doves, the disciples to be harmless as, 282.
 Draught of fishes, the miraculous, 138.
 Dream, angel appearing in, 52, 54.
 Drinking of Jesus' blood necessary to life, 303.
 Dumb, Zacharias, 32.
 and blind devil cast out, 230.
 Dust to be shaken off against unbelieving cities, 281.
- E
- EAGLES gathered together, 518, 681.
 Ears of corn eaten by disciples, 154.
 of the Jews dull, 218.
 Earth, the meek to inherit the, 168.
 not to be sworn by, 180.
 Earthquakes predicted, 667.
 East, wise men from the, visit Jesus, 48. and west, etc., many to come from, to the kingdom of heaven, 209.
 star in the, seen by wise men, 49.
 Eating with publicans, etc., Jesus blamed for, 268, 290.
 with unwashed hands, 309.
 flesh of Jesus necessary to life, 303.
 and drinking in Christ's presence no guaranty of salvation, 480.
 Egg, a scorpion not given for an, 413.
 Egypt, Joseph and Mary warned into, 52.
 their return from, 54.
 Elders ask Jesus to heal a centurion's servant, 206.
 tradition of, as to washing, 306, 307.
 persecution of Jesus by, foretold, 324.
 question Jesus' authority, 277, 355.
 Elect, God will avenge his, 530.
 gathering together of the, 679, 683.
 Elijah (Elias), as to John Baptist being, 80, 218.
 and the widow of Zarephath (Sarepta) quoted, 131.
 Jesus supposed to be, 286.
 at the transfiguration, 328.

- Elisabeth, wife of Zacharias, 28. promised a son, 30.
 conception of, 32.
 told to Mary, 35.
 visited by Mary and blesses her, 35.
 birth of her son "John," 38.
 Emmanuel, "God with us," 38.
 End, endurance to the, promised salvation, 254, 674.
 Endurance commanded, 283.
 Enemies to be loved, 184.
 Enon, John baptised at, 100.
 "Ephphatha," 312.
 Ephraim, city of, Jesus goes to, 540.
 Esaias, the prophet cited by John Baptist, 80.
 read by Jesus in the synagogue, 128.
 Estates, chief, of Galilee, entertained, 286.
 Eternal damnation for sin against Holy Ghost, 233.
 Eunuchs, 558.
 Evil, damnation to doers of, 119.
 of each day sufficient for that day, 196.
 spirits cured by Jesus, 230.
 thoughts proceed from the heart, 310.
 eye proceeds from the heart, 310.
 Executioner sent to behead John Baptist, 287.
 Extortion prohibited, 70.
 Scribes and Pharisees accused of, 652.
 Eye to be plucked out, 179, 342.
 for an eye, 180.
 the light of the body, 192.
 Eyes of the Jews closed, 301, 656.
 seeing Jesus' works, blessed, 464.

F

- FACE not to be disfigured in fasting, 192.
 of God beheld by angels of children, 343.
 Faith commended, 209, 274, 311.

- Faith, want of, commented on, 195, 297, 301, 316, 331.
 reprov'd, 227, 258.
 of Martha, 528.
 many Jews at the raising of Lazarus, 539.
 the work of God, 300.
 resulting in everlasting life, 301.
 is faith in God, 611.
 power of, 275, 276, 311, 332, 544, 587.
 prayed for, by the Apostles, 522.
 on earth at Christ's second coming, 550.
 disregarded by Pharisees, 651.
 Faithfulness in little and in much, 513.
 False prophets spoken well of, 172.
 predicted in last days, 673, 680.
 witness proceeds from the heart, 310 Fame of Jesus spread abroad, 143, 276.
 reaches Herod, 277, 286.
 Famine in parable of prodigal son, 499.
 Famines in the last days predicted, 667.
 Fan to purge his floor, in Jesus' hand, 71.
 Fasting of Anna, 48.
 of disciples of John and of Pharisees, 269.
 to be in secret, 192.
 a devil which would only go out by, 330.
 Father, the. See God the Father.
 one only, 366.
 and mother, as to honoring, 308.
 of the prodigal son, 504.
 Fathers turned against their sons, 285, 445. to deliver up their children to death, 285.
 Fear of shepherds at Bethlchem, 44.
 of multitude at healing of the paralytic, 153.
 of all at raising of the dead, 214.
 of Herod of John Baptist, 286.
 Gadarenes, 265.
 disciples, on Jesus walking on water, 296.
 at the transfiguration, 329.

- Fear of Peter when walking on water, 297.
 not of mere destroyers of body, 283, 284, 424.
 Fearfulness reproved, 258.
 Feast of the passover. See Passover. of tabernacles, Jesus goes to, 349.
 the dedication, 465.
 the Jews, Jesus goes up to a, 114.
 day, many believe on Jesus on the, 96.
 Feeding of five thousand miraculously, 289.
 of four thousand, 313.
 Feet of Jesus anointed, 224.
 Fetters broken by demoniacs, 262.
 Fever, a nobleman's son cured of, 113.
 Simon's wife's mother cured of, 144.
 Field of blood, 745.
 Fig-tree, Nathanael under the, 84.
 the barren, parable of, 449.
 withered, 603-610.
 Fire, unfruitful trees cast into, 70.
 Jesus to baptize with, 71.
 unquenchable, 72, 341.
 on the earth, Jesus come to bring, 442.
 the wicked cast into a furnace of, 252.
 demoniac cast into, 331.
 all to be salted with, 342.
 John and James desire to call down, 395.
 Firkins, 86.
 First to be last, 337, 566.
 Fish, the, with tribute money, 336.
 a serpent not given for a, 199, 411.
 Fishes miraculously increased, 292, 313.
 Five thousand miraculously fed, 289.
 loaves miraculously increased, 292.
 Flax, smoking, not quenched, 161.
 Flesh, all, to see the salvation of God, 67 that born of flesh is, 98.
 profiteth nothing, 304.
 judgment after the, 363.
 of Jesus given for life of the world, 303.
 Flesh of Jesus, eating of, necessary to life, 303.
 Fold, Christ's, one, 389.
 Folk, impotent, at Bethesda, 114.
 Followers of Jesus, 291.
 their duty, 256, 285, 325.
 "Fool," improper term for a brother, 176.
 Foolishness proceeds from the heart, 310.
 Fools, Pharisees called, 418.
 Foot, trodden under, 173.
 the offending, to be cut off, 342.
 Footstool of God, the earth, 180.
 Forgiveness of debt, 225.
 sins to a palsied man, 151.
 of Mary Magdalene, 227.
 of trespasses enjoined, 191, 197, 345, 611.
 blasphemies, except against Holy Ghost, 233, 428.
 Fornication only cause for divorce, 179, 557.
 the Jews claim not to be born of, 366.
 Fornications proceed from the heart, 310.
 Forsaking all for Christ's sake, 565.
 Forswearing, commandment against, 179.
 Fowls of the air, God's care for, 194, 242.
 Fox, Herod called a, 458.
 Foxes have holes, etc., 255.
 Fragments directed to be saved, 293.
 Frankincense presented by wise men, 51.
 Freedom given by the Son, 308, 365.
 Friend of the bridegroom, 101.
 borrowing bread at midnight, 411.
 Friends of Jesus not to be invited for recompense, 479.
 Fulfilment of Scripture, 596.
 concerning Jesus' sufferings, 573.
 concerning the birth of Emmanuel, 38.
 concerning Jesus in Egypt, 52.

Fulfilment of Scripture concerning slaughter of the children, 53.
concerning Nazareth, 54.
Jesus proclaims, 120.
of law and prophets, Jesus came for, 174.

Full, woe to the, 171.

G

GABRIEL sent to Zacharias, 29.

to Mary, 32.

foretells the birth of Jesus, 33.

Gadarenes, Jesus goes to country of, 260.

ask Jesus to depart, 265, 266.

Galileans receive Jesus, 112.

slain by Pilate, 447.

Galilee. See Nazareth.

Herod tetrach of, 65, 286.

entertains chief men of, 286.

Jesus going forth into, 84.

returns to, 112, 122.

walks in, 305.

passes through, 228, 333.

despised as coming from, 359, 602.

fulfilment of prophecies, concerning, 134, 600.

multitudes from, follow Jesus, 146,
160.

Pharisees, etc., from, go to hear
Jesus, 150.

Garment, old, not mended with new cloth, 269.

hem of Jesus', touched for healing,
274, 298.

Garments spread in Jesus' way, 596.

Garner, the wheat to be gathered into,
72.

Gate, the sheep, near Bethesda, 114.
strait, leading to life, 454.

Gates of hell not to prevail against the church, 316, 322.

Genealogy of Jesus Christ, 25.

Generation, this, 218.

of vipers, 69, 233.

Gennesaret, land of, Jesus goes to, 297.

Gentiles, Jesus a light to the, 47.

to trust in Jesus, 161.

seek after the things of this life, 196.

Apostles not to go to the, at first,
280.

persecution of disciples, testimony against the, 282.

to tread down Jerusalem, 678.

Gift to altar, reconciliation to precede, 176.

goods being a, excuse for not supporting parents, 308.

Gifts by the wise men to Jesus, 51.

Girdle of John Baptist, 66.

Give, direction to, 183, 280.

Glory of the Lord shining round shepherds, 44.

the Father, Jesus seeking, 353.

the Son, 637, 695.

the kingdoms of the world offered
Jesus, 77.

God's, death of Lazarus for, 524.

caused by good works, 174.

Christ to come in, 325.

at the transfiguration, 329.

ascribed to God, 543, 587, 598.

Gluttonous, Jesus accused of being, 219.

Gnashing of teeth, 210, 252, 457, 685.

Gnat strained at and camel swallowed,
652.

Goats and sheep, parable of, 695.

God, identity of Jesus with, 297.

the pure in heart shall see, 169.

children of, peacemakers, 170.

John Baptist sent from, 28.

the gift of, 107.

power, 472, 564.

greatness, 472.

house, not a house of merchandise, 94.

knowledge of our needs, 189, 196.

forgiveness of those who forgive, 191.

- God, care for the birds, etc., 194-284.
 work, faith, 300.
 bread, 299.
 commandments disregarded for tradition, 263.
 testimony to Jesus, 302, 352.
 Son. See Son. is a Spirit, 108.
 pure in heart will see, 109.
 and mammon not served together, 193, 514.
 equality of Jesus with, complained of, 117.
 the Father, 299.
 his love to the Son, 117, 389.
 true worship and worshippers, 108.
 self-existence, 118.
 committeth all judgment to the Son, 118.
 testimony to Jesus, 120.
 will, doers of, to enter heaven, 202, 238.
 Spirit speaking in Apostles, 283.
 face beheld by angels of children, 342.
 worketh with the Son, 117, 302.
 sent the Son, 99, 302.
 seeketh spiritual worshippers, 108.
 confessors of Jesus confessed before, 284.
 sealed the Son, 299.
 revealed to Peter, 320.
 knowledge of, by knowledge of Jesus, 302.
 Gold given by the wise men to Jesus, 51.
 not to be provided, 280.
 Gomorrha and the unbelieving cities, 281.
 Good, doers of, salvation to, 119.
 Samaritan, parable of, 403.
 part chosen by Mary, 466.
 shepherd, the, 387.
 tidings, brought to the shepherds, 44.
 Gospel preached by Jesus, 124, 147, 278.
 preached by the Apostles, 282.
 Gospel, salvation for loss of life for sake of, 275.
 to be a witness to all nations, 674.
 Governor of the feast, at Cana, 87.
 Governors, Apostles to be accused before, 282.
 Grain of mustard seed, parable of, 249, 522.
 Grass, God's care for, 195, 438.
 the multitude sit on, 293.
 Grave of Lazarus, 527.
 Graveclothes of Lazarus, 537.
 Graves, all in the, to hear Christ's voice, 119.
 unseen, hypocrites likened to, 419.
 Greatest, dispute who should be, 337.
 Greeks seek to see Jesus, 636.
 Grief of Jesus at hardness of hearts, 159.
 Gross, the people's heart, 244.
 Guides, blind, 650.
 Guile, Nathanael without, 84.
- ## II
- HAIRS of the head numbered, 284, 427.
 Halt, the, at Bethesda, 114.
 Hand of the Lord with John Baptist, 39.
 withered, restored, 159.
 the offending, to be cut off, 179, 341.
 Handmaid of the Lord, Mary, 315.
 Hands, unwashen, eating with, condemned, 306-310.
 Hard saying, disciples complain of a, 304.
 Harlots enter heaven before Pharisees, etc., 615.
 Harmless as doves, Jesus' disciples to be, 282.
 Harvest, the fields white to, 110.
 typifying end of the world, 249.
 plenteous, but laborers few, 279, 397.
 Hatred of enemies forbidden, 184.
 of all men to Jesus' disciples, 283.
 the world to Jesus, 351.

- Hatred of the world to Jesus' disciples, 671.
 Head not to be sworn by, 180.
 of John Baptist given to Herodias' daughter, 287.
 Heart, hardness of, 291.
 grief of Jesus for, 159.
 Jesus upbraids disciples for, 317.
 will be with treasure, 192, 440.
 mouth speaks out of the, 233.
 the word received into an honest, 246 defilement proceeding from, 309.
 Heathen, vain repetitions in prayers of, 188.
 the implacable brother to be as a, 345.
 Heaven shall be seen opened, 85.
 no man has ascended up to, 98.
 Jesus came from, 98, 302.
 reward in, for persecution, 171.
 not to be sworn by, 180.
 sign from, demanded, 315.
 bread from, 300-302.
 Heavenly host in fields at Bethlehem, 45.
 Hell fire, those in danger of, 175, 176.
 sacrifice of members to escape, 101, 341.
 Capernaum to be cast down to, 221, 400.
 he that can cast into, to be feared, 284.
 gates of, not to prevail against the church, 322.
 Herod, king of Judæa, 28.
 and the wise men, 50, 51.
 slays children of Bethlehem, 53.
 death of, 54.
 Herod, the tetrarch, of Galilee, 65, 286.
 imprisons John Baptist, 122, 286.
 marries Herodias, 122.
 fears John Baptist, 123.
 Chuza, steward of, 229.
 entertains his officers, 286.
 hears of Jesus, 286.
 warned against, 457.
 Herod, Jesus taken before, 750.
 reconciled to Pilate, 751.
 Herodians consulted as to destroying Jesus, 159.
 go to Jesus as spies, 625.
 Herodias quarrels with John Baptist, 123. daughter of, dances before Herod, 286.
 asks for John Baptist's head, 286.
 Hill country of Judæa, Mary goes to, 35.
 a city set on a, not hid, 173.
 Hire, the laborer worthy of his, 399.
 Hireling does not protect the sheep, 388.
 Holy one of God, Jesus called, 142.
 Holy Ghost in John Baptist, 30.
 in Zacharias, 39.
 upon Mary, 35.
 in Elisabeth, 35.
 upon Simeon, 46.
 in Jesus before temptation, 75.
 descends on Jesus at baptism, 73.
 blasphemy against, 232, 247.
 given to those who ask, 414.
 the Comforter, promised, 670.
 Honey, food of John Baptist, 66.
 Honor to be given to the Son, 118.
 to Jesus, not from men, 120.
 not to prophet in own country, 172, 278.
 to parents, 308.
 of the Son by the father, 366.
 Hook used to catch fish, 336.
 Horn of salvation, 39.
 "Hosanna to the Son of David," 598.
 House of God, not of merchandise, 94.
 zeal of, 94.
 the place of prayer, 605.
 of Simon, etc., Jesus goes to, 143.
 Israel, lost sheep of, 280, 311.
 Jesus teaches in a, 150.
 built on rock and sand, 203.
 divided against itself, 231, 445.
 restored demoniac sent back to his, 230.

Household, foes in the, 285.
 Householder, an instructed scribe like
 a, 254.
 Houses of widows devoured, 649.
 Housetop, a man let down through, 151.
 the gospel to be preached on the,
 284.
 those on, at desolation of Jerusalem, 547, 677.
 Humility necessary to attain heaven, 339.
 enjoined, 478, 523, 560, 576.
 commended, 649, 702.
 Hundred sheep, parable of, 343.
 Hunger of Jesus after fasting, 76.
 of the disciples on the Sabbath, 154.
 on the road to Jerusalem, 602.
 after righteousness, 168.
 Husband, woman of Samaria sent for her, 108.
 Husbandmen and the vineyard, parable of, 616.
 Husks desired by the prodigal, 500.
 Hypocrisy, warned against, 416, 652.
 Hypocrites, almsgiving by, 186.
 Pharisees denounced as, 308, 315,
 419, 445, 626.

I

Idle words, men to account for, 234.
 Idumea, multitudes from, follow Jesus, 160.
 Impediment of speech cured, 312.
 Impotent folk at Bethesda, 114.
 man cured by Jesus, 116.
 Incense burnt by Zacharias, 29.
 Indignation at Jesus' being anointed with spikenard, 590.
 Infirmities healed by Jesus, 145.
 Infirmity, a woman with, cured, 451.
 Iniquity, workers of, at the last day, 457.
 to abound in the last days, 673.
 Inn at Bethlehem, 42.
 in parable of good Samaritan, 405.

Interpretation of parable of sower, 241.
 wheat and the tares, 247.
 Isaiah, Jesus reads, in synagogue, 128.
 Israel, land of, Joseph and Mary return
 to, 54.
 tribes of, to be judged by Apostles, 565 lost sheep of, Jesus' first care, 280, 311.
 works like Jesus' not before seen in, 276.
 the King of, 85.
 Issue of blood healed, 274.
 Iturea, Philip tetrarch of, 65.

J

JACOB, the ground given to Joseph by, 105.
 his well, 106.
 Jairus, daughter of, raised from death,
 270.
 James (son of Zebedee), called, 139.
 accompanies Jesus into Jairus
 house, 271.
 to Gethsemane, 760.
 present at the transfiguration, 327.
 asks as to destruction of Jerusalem, 662.
 James (son of Alphaeus), one of the Twelve, 163.
 James (brother of Jesus), 277.
 Jeremiah (Jeremias), Jesus supposed to be, 319.
 See Fulfilment.
 Jeremy the prophet foretells the slaughter of the children, 54.
 Jericho, the man going to, who fell among thieves, 403.
 Jesus goes to, 585.
 Jerusalem, Joseph and Mary go to, 56.
 return to, to search for Jesus, 57.
 inhabitants of, go out to John Baptist, 67.
 where the Jews worship, 128.
 multitudes from, follow Jesus, 146,
 160, 165.

- Jerusalem, Pharisees, etc., from, go to Jesus, 150, 306.
 Scribes come down from, 306.
 not to be sworn by, 180.
 the city of the Great King, 180.
 desolation of, foretold, 601.
 Jesus taken to, by the devil, 78.
 goes to, to the Passover, 90.
 to a feast of the Jews, 114.
 up to, for last time, 453, 541.
 agitated at report of Christ's birth, 51.
 Jesus comes to, 393.
 persecution of Jesus at, foretold, 324.
 the death of Jesus at, spoken of,
 328.
 Jesus, his birth foretold, 33.
 named by the angel, 33, 37.
 circumcision and naming of, 45.
 presentation in the temple, 46.
 visited by the wise men, 57.
 removal to Egypt, 52.
 return from Egypt, 52.
 lives in Nazareth, 54.
 goes up to Jerusalem, 55.
 found in the temple, 57.
 returns to Nazareth, 57.
 increased in wisdom, etc., 50.
 baptism, 73.
 temptation, 75-78.
 transfiguration, 328.
 public entry into Jerusalem, 588, 597.
 agony in Gethsemane, 735.
 betrayal, 592, 573.
 trial before Caiaphas, 739.
 Pilate, 746.
 scourging, etc., 754.
 condemnation, 754.
 crucifixion, 756.
 death, 766.
 burial, 768.
 resurrection, 773.
 ascension, 798.
 commissions to the disciples, 322, 346, 797.
- Jesus' disciples. See Disciples, Apostles, Peter, etc.
 miracles. See Miracles.
 parables. See Parables.
 preaching. See Preaching.
 teaching. See Teaching.
 denunciation. See Denunciation. prayers. See Prayer.
 prophecies. See Prophecy. going of, to Egypt, 52.
 Nazareth. See Nazareth.
 Jordan, 73.
 Jerusalem. See Jerusalem, 571.
 Cana, 85.
 Capernaum. See Capernaum.
 Judæa. See Judæa.
 Galilee. See Galilee.
 Sychar, 107.
 cornfields, 152.
 a mountain. See Mountain.
 a plain. See Plain.
 Nain, 210.
 a Pharisee's house. See Pharisee.
 synagogue. See Synagogue.
 Gadara, 260.
 Levi's house, 268.
 Tyre and Sidon, 310.
 Decapolis, 255, 312.
 Magdala and Dalmanutha, 314.
 Bethsaida, 220-290, 318.
 Cæsarea Philippi, 319.
 Bethany, 588, 593, 606.
 Ephraim, 540.
 Jericho, 576.
 Mount of Olives, 660, 732. See Olives, 593, 606.
 Gethsemane, 732.
 discourse of, on the working of the Father and the Son, 117.
 Sermon on the Mount, 166.
 forgiveness of sins, 227, 521.
 signs, 235.
 fasting, 298.
 the bread of life, 299, 303.
 defilement, 308, 419.
 humility, 337, 523, 551, 576.

- Jesus' sermon on offences, 343.
 forgiveness, 227, 345, 522, 611.
 the true sons of God, 365.
 prayer, 408, 551.
 the true sheep, 385.
 self-exaltation, 477.
 discourse of, as to true hospitality, 479.
 the coming of the kingdom, 399, 547.
 divorce, 177, 556.
 riches, 432, 563.
 the resurrection, 529.
 unbelief, 535, 656.
 love, 366.
 visited by wise men from the East, 51.
 Nicodemus, 97.
 and doctors in the temple, 57.
 testimony of John Baptist to, 81, 82.
 attends a marriage, 85.
 drives traders out of the temple, 94, 604.
 baptizes, 100.
 begins to preach, 134.
 rejected by the Gadarenes, 266.
 rejected at Nazareth, 132, 276.
 sends out the Twelve, 279.
 Seventy, 396.
 questions as to Christ, 319, 367.
 laments over Jerusalem, 600, 655.
 Jews send to John Baptist, 69.
 ask Jesus for a sign, 95, 300.
 question about purifying, 101.
 have no dealings with Samaritans, 107.
 salvation is of the, 109.
 Jesus attends a feast of, 114, 469.
 reprove for carrying bed on Sabbath, 116.
 persecute Jesus for healing on Sabbath, 117, 451.
 elders of. See Elders.
 murmur at Jesus, 278, 302.
 strife of, on Jesus' claiming to be
 the bread of life, 302, 303.
- Jews, tradition of, as to washing, 308.
 seek Jesus at feast of tabernacles, 352.
 accuse Jesus of being a Samaritan, and having a devil, 366.
 agree to expel disciples from synagogue, 354.
 division amongst, as to Jesus, 365, 389.
 ask Jesus to declare whether he be Christ, 475, 526.
 attempt to stone Jesus, 368, 472.
 with Martha and Mary at Lazarus'
 death, 588.
 ask Pilate to break Jesus' legs, 358.
 Joanna, wife of Chuza, ministers to
 Jesus, 229.
 John, the Apostle, called by Jesus, 139.
 one of the Twelve, 162.
 accompanies Jesus into Jairus'
 house, 271.
 present at transfiguration, 327.
 rebukes one for casting out devils, 339.
 John the Baptist a witness of the light, 28.
 forbidden wine and strong drink, 30.
 to come in spirit of Elijah (Elias), 30. mission of, 30, 36.
 birth of, 38.
 foretold, 31.
 circumcision and naming of, 38, 39.
 the prophet of the Highest, 40.
 baptism and preaching of, 66, 67.
 fulfilment of prophecies concerning, 67.
 his raiment and meat, 66.
 his teaching, 69.
 prophecies of Jesus, 71.
 baptizes Jesus, 73.
 sees Holy Ghost descend on Jesus, 74.
 his disciples. See Disciples.

- John the Baptist asked who he is, and his replies, 80, 215.
 points out Jesus as Lamb of God, 81, 82.
 baptizes at Enon, 100.
 further testimony to Jesus, 81, 101.
 imprisoned by Herod, 122.
 reproves Herod, 122.
 his testimony quoted by Jesus, 119.
 testimony of Jesus concerning, 119, 215.
 head of, demanded by Herodias' daughter, 287.
 executed by Herod, 287.
 Jesus supposed to be, 286, 319.
 Jesus refers to, as Elijah (Elias), 217, 319, 330.
 testimony of, concerning Jesus, acknowledged to be true, 474.
- Jona, father of Peter, 83.
- Jonah (Jonas), sign of prophet, 235, 316, 414.
- Jonas. See Jonah.
- Jordan, preaching by John Baptist near, 67.
 baptism by John Baptist in, 68.
 Jesus goes to, to be baptized, 73.
 from beyond, multitudes follow Jesus, 146, 160, 474.
 Jesus goes beyond, 407, 474.
 the farther side of, 407.
- Joseph proposes to put away Mary, 37.
 an angel appears to, 37, 45.
 marries Mary, 38.
 goes to Bethlehem to be taxed, 42.
 warned to go, and goes into Egypt, 52.
 returns to land of Israel, 54.
 retires to Nazareth, 54.
 goes up to Jerusalem, 55.
 search for Jesus, 56.
 returns to Nazareth, 57.
 Jesus despised as son of, 130, 302.
- Joses, brother of Jesus, 277.
- Jot of the law not to fail, 174.
- Journey, provision for, not to be made, 280.
- Joy promised to Zacharias, 30.
- Juda, brother of Jesus, 277.
- Judas Iscariot, one of the Twelve, 164.
 spoken of by Jesus as a devil, 305.
 complains of Mary anointing Jesus, 590.
 a thief, 590.
 offers to betray Jesus, 592. influenced by Satan, 592.
 son of Simon, 590.
 betrays Jesus, 697.
 returns the betrayal money, 744.
 hangs himself, 744.
- Judea, Pontius Pilate governor of, 64.
 inhabitants of, go out to John Baptist, 67.
 multitudes from, follow Jesus, 146, 160, 165.
 Pharisees, etc., from, go to hear Jesus, 150.
 fame of Jesus spread through, 214.
 brethren of Jesus advise his going to, 350.
 Jesus comes to coast of, 407, 525.
- Judge, parable of the unjust, 549.
- Judgment committed to the Son, 118.
 of the Son just, 119.
 those in danger of, 176.
 of one another forbidden, 196.
 according to appearances, forbidden, 355.
 day, idle words accounted for, in, 234.
 condemnation of unbelieving cities in, 221, 281.
- Justification by words, 234.

K

- KEYS of the kingdom of heaven, 322.
- Kin of a prophet do not honor him, 278.
- King of the Jews, wise men seek, 41.
 of Israel, Jesus called the, 85.
- Kingdom of Heaven, to the poor in Spirit, 167.
 to the persecuted for righteousness' sake, 170.

Kingdom of Heaven, many from east and west to sit down in, 209, 457.
 the Father's pleasure to give the, 439.
 parables illustrating, 247, 250.
 the keys of, 322.
 conversion necessary to enter, 339.
 of God new birth necessary for, 97.
 preached by Jesus, 228, 399.
 the Twelve, 279.
 the Seventy, 399.
 to be first object of life, 196, 439.
 to be seen by some of disciples, 326.
 as to coming of, 298, 545.
 difficult for the rich to enter, 563.
 publicans and harlots enter before Scribes and Pharisees, 612.
 Kingdoms of the world offered to Jesus, 77.
 to rise against one another, 666.
 Kings, disciples to be brought before, 282.
 desired to see what disciples saw, 464.
 "Knock and it shall be opened," 413.
 Knowledge, key of, taken away, 423.
 of the Father, 125, 356, 464. of Jesus and of the Father, 353, 537.

L

LABOR, those that, invited by Jesus, 222.
 not for things that perish, 299.
 Laborer worthy of his hire, 281, 399.
 Laborers in the harvest, 279, 397.
 in the vineyard, parable of, 567.
 Lake of Gennesaret, storm on the, 257.
 Lamb of God, Jesus the, 81.
 Lame, inviting the, true hospitality, 479.
 Lamentation of Jesus over Jerusalem, 600.

Lasciviousness proceeds from the heart, 310.
 Last day, resurrection of the, 302.
 the first shall be, 337, 566.
 Latchet of Jesus' shoes, John Baptist not worthy to unloose, 71, 81.
 Laugh, woe to them that, 171.
 Laughed to scorn, Jesus, in Jairus' house, 272.
 Law, the, given by Moses, 354.
 come to fulfil, 174.
 doctors of, go to hear Jesus, 150.
 prophesied until John, 218. cannot fail, 515.
 the foundation of, 634.
 Lawyer, rejecting, 218.
 tempting Jesus, 400, 632.
 Lawyers denounced by Jesus, 420.
 questioned as to healing on the Sabbath, 470.
 Lazarus of Bethany, his sickness, 524. raised from death, 588.
 at supper in Simon's house, 589.
 and the rich man, parable of, 516.
 Leathern girdle, John Baptist's, 66.
 Leaven of Pharisees, warning against, 316.
 the kingdom of heaven like, 250.
 Legion of devils, the man with the, 263.
 Lending enjoined, 183, 185.
 Leper, a, cleansed by Jesus, 148.
 Lepers, ten, cleansed by Jesus, 543.
 Letters, surprise at Jesus' knowing, 352.
 Levite in parable of good Samaritan, 404.
 Levites sent to John Baptist, 80.
 Liar, the devil a, 366.
 Liberty to the bruised, Jesus to give, 129.
 Life eternal to believers in Jesus, 99, 111, 118, 302, 638, 697.
 Jesus asked what necessary for, 561.
 everlasting, to be labored for, 299.
 to believers in Jesus, 299, 302.

- Life, everlasting, to those who make sacrifices here, 325.
 in the Father and the Son, 118, 302.
 the resurrection of, 119, 530.
 carefulness for, not necessary, 194.
 will result in its loss, 285, 326, 547.
 given to the world by Jesus, 299, 302.
 Jesus the bread of, 299, 301.
 of world, Jesus' flesh given for, 299.
 of good Shepherd given for sheep, 388.
 of Jesus laid down, not taken away, 389.
 words of Jesus, spirit and, 299, 304.
- Light, the true, 23.
 John Baptist, a shining, 119.
 of the world, the disciples, 173.
 Jesus, 362, 390.
 of body, the eye, 192.
 gospel to be preached in, 284.
 raiment of Jesus like, 328.
 children of, less wise than of darkness, 511, exhortation to be, 641.
- Lightning, Christ's second coming as, 547, 681.
- Lilies, an example of God's care, 195, 438.
- Living bread, Jesus the, 303.
- Loaves miraculously increased, 293, 313.
 the friend borrowing, at night, 411.
- Locusts, John Baptist's food, 66.
- Lord, title applied by Elizabeth to the future child of Mary, 36.
- "Lord, Lord," not sufficient to have said, 202, 456.
- Lord's prayer, the, 189, 409.
- Lords of Galilee entertained by Herod, 286.
- Loss of life to those who seek to save it, 285.
- Lost sheep of Israel Jesus' first care, 280, 311.
- Lot, at Christ's second coming to be as in days of, 547.
- Lot's wife a warning, 547.
- Love of God first duty of man, 401, 633.
 of Jesus to Martha, Mary, and Lazarus, 524.
 to parents to give place to service of Christ, 285.
 to enemies enjoined, 184.
 to neighbor, second great commandment, 562.
 to one another enjoined, 562, 724.
- Lunatic persons healed, 331.
- Lust amounting to adultery, 178.
- Lusts choke the word, 246.
 of devil done by his children, 366.
- Lysanias, tetrarch of Abilene, 65.

M

- MAGDALA, Jesus goes to, 314.
- Maimed, inviting, true hospitality, 479.
- Mammon not to be served, 193, 514.
 of unrighteousness, friends of, 511.
- Manger, Jesus laid in a, 42.
- Manna eaten in the desert, 300.
- Market, the sheep, 114.
 greetings in the, 419.
- Market-place, children in the, 218, 568.
- Marriage at Cana, 85.
 supper, parable of, 621.
- Martha cumbered with much serving, 466.
 meets Jesus after Lazarus' death, 524.
 at the supper at Bethany, 589.
- Mary, mother of Jesus, Gabriel sent to, 32.
 a virgin, espoused to Joseph, 33.
 birth of Jesus foretold, 33.
 goes to visit Elizabeth, 35.
 her return home, 36.
 conception, 37.
 goes to Bethlehem, 42.

- Mary, birth of Jesus, 42.
 visited by shepherds, 45.
 kept events in her heart, 45, 59.
 her purification, 46.
 presents Jesus in temple, 46.
 mother of Jesus and Simeon, 47. visited by wise men, 50.
 warned into Egypt, 52.
 her return to land of Israel, 54.
 goes to Nazareth in Galilee, 54.
 to Jerusalem, 55.
 searches for Jesus, and chides him for staying behind, 57.
 return to Nazareth, 57.
 at the marriage at Cana, 85.
 goes to Capernaum with Jesus, 88.
 Jesus despised as son of, 277, 302.
 Mary, of Bethany, at Jesus' feet, 466. comes to Jesus after Lazarus'
 death, 524.
 anoints Jesus' head and feet, 589.
 Mary Magdalene ministers to Jesus, 224. seven devils cast out of, 229.
 Mary, mother of James, goes to sepulchre, 283.
 Master, a, of Israel, Nicodemus, 98.
 Jesus called, 110, 137.
 the disciple not above his, 198.
 one, Christ, 647.
 Masters, two cannot be served, 193, 514.
 Matthew (Levi), a publican, called, 153, 267.
 one of the Twelve, 163.
 makes Jesus a feast, 267.
 Measure, good, enjoined, 197, 247.
 Meat, John Baptist's, 66. to be divided with the needy, 70.
 disciples go to buy, 107.
 of Jesus to do will of God, 110.
 not so important as life, 194, 437.
 indeed, Jesus' flesh, 299.
 Meek, the, blessed, 168.
 Jesus, 222.
 Merchantman seeking goodly pearls,
 252.
 Merciful, the, blessed, 169.
 Mercy shown to those that fear God, 36.
 preferred to sacrifice, 156, 268.
 enjoined, 185.
 commended, 405.
 disregarded by Pharisees, 651.
 Messenger, John Baptist a, 217.
 Messengers sent by John Baptist to Jesus, 216.
 sent forward through Samaria, 394.
 Messiah. See Christ, Woman of Samaria.
 Millstone round the neck, 341, 521.
 Minister in the synagogue, 130.
 Mint tithed by Pharisees, 419, 650.
 Miracles of Jesus, causing belief. 96.
 referred to by Nicodemus, 97.
 power to perform, given to disciples, 284.
 performed by Jesus :
 water made wine at Cana, 87.
 at Jerusalem, 96.
 healing of a nobleman's son, 113.
 miraculous draught of fishes, 138.
 unclean devil cast out, 143, 144.
 several sick and diseased healed, 145, 298.
 devils cast out, 145, 165, 265.
 persons lunatic and palsied healed, 146.
 leper cleansed, 146, 148.
 impotent man cured, 116.
 withered hand restored, 159.
 centurion's servant healed, 110.
 dead man at Nain raised to life, 213.
 demoniacs at Gadara restored and devils sent into swine, 261, 265.
 woman with issue of blood healed, 274.
 Jairus' daughter raised to life,
 270.
 Lazarus raised to life, 537.
 sight of two blind men restored, 586.
 dumb man with devil cured, 276.
 five thousand miraculously fed,
 293.

Miracles performed by Jesus :

- Jesus walking on the water, 296.
 - by touch of Jesus' garments, 274, 298.
 - daughter of Syrophenician woman cured, 310.
 - man, deaf, etc., healed, 312.
 - four thousand miraculously fed, 306, 313.
 - demoniac healed, 331.
 - tribute money found in fish's mouth, 336.
 - ten lepers cleansed, 543.
 - woman bowed together cured, 451.
 - man with dropsy healed, 476.
 - sight of one blind man restored, 370.
 - blind and lame healed in temple, 605.
- Mocking of Jesus, 573.
- Money, changers of, driven out of temple, 94, 604.
- found in fish's mouth, 336.
- Morning, early, Jesus retires to pray in, 145.
- Morrow, not to be careful for the, 196.
- Moses the giver of the law, 354.
- wrote of Jesus, 84.
 - lifting up of serpent by, 99.
 - his commandment as to lepers observed, 149.
 - accuses Jews by his writings, 121.
 - wrote of Jesus, 121.
 - appears at transfiguration, 328.
- Mote and beam in the eye, 198.
- Mother of Jesus. See Mary, mother of Jesus.
- set against the daughter 285.
 - See Parents.
- Mountain, Jesus taken to high, by devil, 77.
- where Samaritans worship, 108.
 - to pray, 162, 296, 312, 327.
 - to preach, 166.
 - with his disciples, 291.
 - to be removed by faith, 333, 611.

- Mountains, demoniacs in the, 262.
- Mourning of children in market-place, 219.
- blessed, 167-170.
- Mouth, not that which goeth into, defiles, 309.
- Moving of waters of Bethesda, 114.
- Much required of those who receive much, 442.
- Multitude praying in the temple, 29.

 - of heavenly host praising God, 45.
 - of impotent folk at Bethesda, 114.
 - go out to John Baptist, 67.
 - resort to Jesus, 239, 312.
 - ask for Barabbas instead of Jesus, 350.

- Multitudes follow Jesus, 146, 149, 151, 153, 160, 165, 166, 260, 271.
- glorify God, 152.
- sent away by Jesus, 312.
- compassion of Jesus on the, 279, 291, 313.
- Murderer, the devil a, 366.
- Murders proceed from the heart, 310.
- Murmuring at Jesus' teaching, 302.

 - among people concerning Jesus, 351.
 - at Jesus going to house of Zachæus, 579.

- Mustard seed, kingdom of heaven like, 249.
- Myrrh given to Jesus by wise men, 51.

N

- NAAMAN referred to, 132.
- Nain, a dead man raised at, 213.
- Name of God, holy, 36.

 - devils cast out in Jesus', 263, 460.
 - given by good Shepherd, 384.

- Names of the twelve apostles, 162.
- Naphtali (Nephthalim), Jesus goes to coasts of, 134.

Napkin, Lazarus' head bound with, 537.

Nathanael (Bartholomew) brought by Philip to Jesus, 84.

an Israelite without guile, 84.

his confession of Christ, 85.

one of the Twelve, 163.

See Apostles, Disciples.

Nation, alarm lest Romans should take away, 539.

to rise against nation, 666.

Nazarene, Jesus to be called a, 54.

Nazareth, a city of Galilee, 32.

Joseph and Mary reside at, 54.

quit to go to Bethlehem, 42.

return to, 54.

Jesus goes to, 57, 126, 276.

quits, 73, 132, 135.

"Can any good thing come out
of," 84.

Neighbor to be loved, 402, 562.

who is, 402, 633.

Net, the kingdom of heaven like a, 253.

Nets, Simon Peter and Andrew washing their, 136.

broken by a draught of fishes, 138.

James, John, and Zebedee mending, 138.

New cloth on old garment, 269.

wine and old bottles, 269.

Nicodemus a Pharisee and Ruler, 96.

consults Jesus by night, 97.

defends Jesus in Council, 339.

Night, Jesus in prayer a whole, 162.

the, when no man can work, 370.

See Darkness.

Ninevites, Jonah a sign to, 236, 414.

shall judge present generation, 236, 414.

Noah (Noe), at second coming world to be as in days of, 547, 685.

Nobleman, son of a, healed, 113.

who went to receive a kingdom, 583.

O

OATH of Herod to Herodias' daughter, 287.

Oaths to be performed, 179.

See Swearing.

Offence by Jesus to his own country, 278.
to least of Christ's disciples denounced, 341, 671.

Offences to be purged, 252.

world denounced because of, 341.

he causing, denounced, 521.

must come, 521.

Officers sent to take Jesus, 359.

Oil, anointing the sick with, 285.

and wine administered by good Samaritan, 404.

Ointment, Jesus' feet anointed with, 224.

and head, 589.

Old wine preferred to new, 269.

See New.

Olives, Mount of, Jesus goes to, 360.

arrives at, on way to Jerusalem, 592.

Oxen, those that sold, driven out of temple, 94.

P

PALM branches spread in Jesus' way, 597.

Palsy cured, 146, 152, 206.

See Miracles.

Parables, reason for speaking in, 240, 243.

blind leading the blind, 309.

mote and beam in the eye, 198.

wise and foolish builders, 202.

city or house divided against itself, 231.

strong man keeping his palace, 230, 231.

proposed to enlarge his barns, 433.

barren fig-tree, 449.

- Parables, the sower, 241.
 interpretation of, 245.
 wheat and tares, 247.
 interpretation of, 245, 250.
 seed cast into ground, 242.
 grain of mustard-seed, 249, 453.
 leaven, 250.
 hid treasure, 252.
 pearl of great price, 252.
 drag-net, 253.
 new cloth and old garment, and new wine and old bottles, 269.
 that which goeth into mouth not defiling, 309.
 interpretation of, 309.
 the hundred sheep and one lost, 343, 491.
 servant and his fellow-servant, 347.
 man borrowing loaves at midnight, 411.
 sheep, sheepfold, and good Shepherd, 384.
 those bidden to a wedding, 477.
 the great supper, 481.
 builder of the tower, 488.
 king with ten thousand, 488.
 woman with ten pieces of silver and one lost, 495.
 prodigal son, 497.
 unjust steward, 509.
 rich man and Lazarus, 516.
 master and his servant returning from ploughing, 522.
 unjust judge, 549.
 Pharisee and publican, 403, 551.
 the laborers in vineyard, 567.
 ten pounds, 583.
 two sons, 614.
 vineyard let out to husbandmen, 616.
 marriage feast, 621.
 fig-tree and other trees in spring, 683 .
 servants left in charge, 686.
 ten virgins, 688.
 talents, 691.
 sheep and goats, 695.
- Parents to be put to death by children, 285.
 Parents of man born blind referred to by the Pharisees, 375.
 Partners, James, John, Peter, Andrew,
 136.
 Passover, Joseph, Mary, and Jesus go
 to, 55.
 Jesus goes to Jerusalem to, 90, 541.
 meets a multitude going to, 291, 541. preparation for, 697.
 Patience, bearing fruit with, 245.
 enjoined, 673.
 Peace, a woman directed to go in, 275.
 Jesus not come to give, 285, 442.
 commanded to the sea, 259.
 salutation of, directed, 281, 398.
 enjoined, 342.
 Peacemakers blessed, 169.
 Pearls, the merchantman seeking goodly, 252.
 Pence, 225.
 People taught by Jesus out of a ship, 137.
 seek after Jesus, 145.
 the common, hear Jesus gladly, 606.
 Perfect, command to be, 185.
 Persecution for righteousness's sake, rejoicing at, 170.
 offence caused by, 246.
 conduct of disciples under, 283.
 of Jesus' disciples foretold, 421, 566, 668.
 Persecutors to be prayed for, 184.
 Peter, Simon, brought to Jesus by Andrew, 83, 293.
 named by Jesus Cephas, 83.
 a fisher, 136.
 Jesus teaches from ship of, 136.
 called as a disciple, 137.
 one of the Twelve, 162, 279.
 his wife's mother healed by Jesus, 142.
 asks to let him walk on water, 296.
 wonders at Jesus asking who touched him, 275.

- Peter accompanies Jesus into Jairus' house, 271.
 at transfiguration, 327.
 confesses Jesus as Christ, 305, 319.
 rebukes Jesus, 324.
 and is rebuked by him, 324.
 proposes tabernacles at transfiguration, 329.
 finds tribute-money in fish's mouth, 336.
- Phannuel, father of Anna, 48.
- Pharisee, a, asks Jesus to dinner, 223, 417.
 Jesus goes to eat bread with, 475.
- Pharisees warned by John Baptist, 69.
 boast of being Abraham's children, 69.
 inquire of John Baptist as to who he was, 80.
 Nicodemus one of the, 96.
 come to hear Jesus, 150, 306.
 complain of disciples eating corn on Sabbath, 154.
 watch Jesus to accuse him, 157.
 filled with madness against Jesus, 159.
 righteousness of, insufficient, 175.
 rejected God's counsel, 218.
 accuse Jesus of working by Beelzebub, 231.
 ask Jesus for a sign, 235.
 denounced as hypocrites, 172, 296, 308, 419.
 and for injustice and pride, 452.
 leaven of, warned against 316.
 complain of Jesus' eating with publicans and sinners, 268.
 disciples of used to fast 269.
 traditions of, as to washing, 306.
 offended at Jesus, 307, 423.
 question with Jesus, 315, 381.
 send officers to take Jesus, 359.
 bring to Jesus woman taken in adultery, 360.
 blame Jesus for bearing record to himself, 362.
 man born blind brought to, 373.
- Pharisees inquire as to his restoration of sight, 374.
 refuse to admit evidence of miracles, 374.
 told of raising of Lazarus, 539.
 warn Jesus that Herod would kill him, 457.
 accuse Jesus of receiving publicans and sinners, 490.
 deride Jesus, 514.
 tempt Jesus, 556.
 command to deliver up Jesus, 542.
 consternation of, at Jesus' miracles, 539, 599.
 seek to lay hands on Jesus, 473, 621.
 to entangle Jesus in his talk, 545, 625.
- Philip, brother of Herod, tetrarch of Iturea, 65, 286.
 his wife Herodias married to Herod 122, 286.
- Philip, the Apostle, called, 84.
 brings Nathanael to Jesus, 84.
 one of the Twelve, 163.
 questioned as to feeding multitude, 292.
 Greeks asks to see Jesus, 636.
- Phylacteries of scribes and Pharisees, 645.
- "Physician, heal thyself," 130.
- Physician not required by the whole, 268.
- Pigeons, offering of, on purification, 46.
- Pilate, Pontius, governor of Judea, 64.
 mingles blood of Galileans with sacrifices, 447.
 Jesus delivered to, 746.
 intercedes for Jesus, 748.
 wife of, sends message about Jesus, 753.
- Pillow, Jesus sleeping on a, in a storm, 258.
- Pinnacle of temple, Jesus set on a, 76.
- Piping, children, in market-place, 219.
- Pit, cattle fallen into, on Sabbath, 158.
- Plagues cured by Jesus, 160.

- Plain, Jesus on a, 164.
 Plant not planted by God rooted up, 309.
 Plow, he who puts hand to, not to look back, 257.
 Pool of Bethesda, 114.
 of Siloam, 371.
 Poor, the, Jesus sent to preach to, 128.
 in spirit blessed, 166, 216.
 inviting, true hospitality, 479.
 charity to, enjoined, 563.
 Porch, Solomon's, Jesus in, 469.
 Porches of Bethesda, 114.
 Possessed. See Demoniac, Devils, Miracles, Spirits.
 Pots, washing of, traditions concerning, 307.
 Power, word of Jesus with, 134, 141.
 to heal, etc., given to Apostles, 279, 461.
 of Jesus to lay down and retake his life, 389.
 of faith, 332.
 Prayer, Jesus in, 145, 149, 296, 327.
 for persecutors, 184.
 not to be made for show, 187.
 with vain repetitions, 188.
 to be made in secret, 187.
 with faith, 611.
 the Lord's, 189.
 temple, the house of, 605.
 of publican and of Pharisee, 551.
 enjoined, 687.
 in Jesus' name heard, 729.
 Preach, the disciples sent forth to, 256, 280, 284.
 Preaching of John Baptist, 67.
 of Jesus, 134, 145, 147, 150, 228, 278, 285.
 the Twelve, 280-284.
 See Sermon, Teaching.
 Preparation of ways of the Lord, 69.
 Pride proceeds from the heart, 310.
 Priest, Zacharias a, 28.
 Priests sent to John Baptist, 80.
 chief, 51.
 Priests, chief, persecution of Jesus by, foretold, 324.
 send to take Jesus, 359, 542.
 conspire against Jesus, 542, 589.
 furnish Judas with men to take Jesus, 592, 697.
 Prince of this world cast out, 640.
 of devils, Jesus accused of working by the, 276.
 See Beelzebub, Devil.
 Prison, John Baptist put in, 215.
 Profession of faith, 301.
 Prophecy of John Baptist's birth, 30.
 of Jesus' birth, 33.
 sufferings, 330, 591, 572, 697. concerning John Baptist, 40.
 of Simeon as to Jesus, 47.
 Caiaphas as to Jesus' dying for people, 540.
 desolation of Jerusalem, 600.
 destruction of the temple, 650.
 troubles, etc., in last days, 665.
 See Fulfilment.
 Prophesying in Christ's name no guaranty of heaven, 202.
 Prophet, John Baptist asked whether he was that, 80.
 Jesus acknowledged as a, 108, 214, 602.
 a, not honored in his own country, 112, 131, 278.
 receiving a, to bring reward, 285.
 Prophets, the, wrote of Jesus, 302.
 were persecuted, 171.
 false, men praised, 172.
 not destroyed by Jesus, 174.
 sepulchres of, built, 653.
 desired to see things seen by disciples, 244, 464.
 Jesus supposed to be one of, 214, 294, 319.
 greater than, 359.
 expounded by Jesus, 174.
 injunction to beware of false, 673.
 Publican, Levi (Matthew) a, 153, 163, 268.
 implacable brother to be as a, 345.

Publican, prayer of a penitent, 554.
 See Matthew, Zaccheus.
 Publicans baptized by and consult John Baptist, 70.
 justified God in John's baptism, 218.
 Jesus eats with, 268.
 preferred to chief priests, etc., 614.
 Pure in heart, the, blessed, 169.
 Purging of his floor by Jesus, 71.
 Purification, questions as to, 101.
 Purses not to be provided, 280, 398.

Q

QUEEN of the South, and Solomon, 236.
 her judgment of that generation 236, 414.
 Question about purifying, 101.
 Questioning with Jesus, 327.
 between disciples as to resurrection 330, 534.
 of scribes with disciples as to a demoniac, 331.

R

"RABBI," Jesus addressed as, 82, 85, 97, 299.
 John Baptist addressed as, 101.
 disciples not to be called, 647.
 "Raca," 176.
 Rachel weeping for her children, 54.
 Raiment of John Baptist, 217.
 carefulness for, not necessary, 194, 437.
 of Jesus shining at transfiguration, 328.
 See Garments.
 Rain descended, 203.
 Raising of dead man at Nain, 121.
 of Lazarus, 524.
 See Resurrection.
 Rama, voice of lamentation in, 54.
 Ravens, God's care of, 438.
 Rebuking of storm, 142.
 of unclean spirit, 143.

Receiving Christ and God in disciples, 280, 285.
 of a child in Christ's name receiving Christ, 285, 339.
 Reconciliation enjoined, 177.
 Record of John Baptist of himself, 79.
 of Jesus to himself blamed, 362.
 See Testimony, Witness.
 Redemption, signs of coming 683.
 Reed, shaken, 217.
 a bruised, not broken, 161.
 Rejection of Jesus foretold, 324, 547.
 Rejoicing at John Baptist's birth, 33.
 of wise men on seeing star, 51.
 at bridegroom's voice, 101.
 of sowers and reapers, 111.
 of disciples of Jesus, for a while, in John, 119.
 for persecution, 171.
 on finding lost sheep, 343.
 Repentance preached by John Baptist, 67.
 fruits worthy of, enjoined, 69.
 John's baptism unto, 71.
 preached by Jesus, 124.
 sinners, not righteous, called to, 268.
 preached by the Twelve, 285.
 Resistance forbidden, 181.
 Rest promised to weary, 222.
 Jesus advises the Twelve to take, 289.
 Restoration made by Zaccheus, 580.
 Resurrection of life and of damnation, 118, 119.
 Jesus questioned as to, 629.
 Christ is the, 529.
 of Jesus, 573.
 foretold by him, 334, 524.
 referred to by him, 330.
 Return of the Seventy, 460.
 Reviling for Christ's sake, blessed, 170.
 Reward in heaven for persecution, 171.
 for receiving Christ's disciples, 283.
 Rich, the, woe unto, 171.
 the, man who proposed to enlarge his barns, 432.

- Rich, the, man, and Lazarus, parable of, 517.
- Riches, deceitfulness of, chokes word, 246.
a hindrance to kingdom of God, 563.
- Right hand of God, Jesus at, 574, 643.
- Righteous, men have desired to see, 244.
Jesus not come to call, 268.
man received, reward will follow, 252, 285.
- Righteousness of Zacharias and Elisabeth, 28.
Jesus to fulfil all, 73.
hunger and thirst after, blessed, 168
those persecuted for, blessed, 170.
must exceed that of scribes and Pharisees, 175.
not to be done to be seen of men, 185.
to be first sought after, 196.
- Riotous living of prodigal, 499.
- Robbers, those climb into sheepfold, 383.
- Rock, man that built on a, 202.
foundation of church, 321.
- Romans feared by Jews because of Jesus, 539.
- Roof, sick man let down through, 151.
- Rue tithed by the Pharisees, 419.
- Ruler, of the feast, at Cana, 87.
watchful servant will be made, 685.
of synagogue, 270.
rich young, 561.
belief of, 657.
See Jairus, Elders.
- S
- Sabbath, Jesus teaches on, 154, 157, 276.
Jesus heals on, 116, 451.
eats bread with Pharisee on the, 475.
accused of breaking, 355.
disciples accused of breaking, 154.
profanation of by priests, 155.
was made for man, 156.
Jesus Lord of, 157.
circumcision on, 354.
- Sacrifice, mercy preferred to, 156, 268.
- Sadducees warned by John Baptist, 69. dispute with Jesus, 315, 316.
leaven of, warned against, 316.
question Jesus as to marriage of seven brethren, 629.
See Elders, Jews.
- Salim near Enon, 100.
- Salt of earth, disciples, 172.
to have, in one's self, 342.
losing its savor, 173, 489.
- Salvation promised to him that endureth to end, 283, 674.
Jesus sent for, 386.
by strict observance of law, 396.
by Jesus only, 367, 658.
whether few attain, 454.
declared to Zaccheus, 581.
- Samaria, Jesus passes through, 105, 542.
woman of, 107.
- Samaritan, the tenth leper cleansed, 543.
the good, parable of, 403.
- Samaritans, Jews have no dealings with, 107.
believe in Jesus, 111.
the Twelve not to go to, at first, 280.
Jesus rejected at village of, 394.
- Sand, house built upon, 203.
- Sandals, the Twelve shod with, 280.
- Satan tempts Jesus, 77.
rebuked by Jesus, 77.
is divided, if he cast out Satan, 231.
Peter addressed as, by Jesus, 325. fell from heaven, as lightning, 461.
entered into Judas Iscariot, 592.
See Beelzebub, Devil.
- Sarepta, famine in, alluded to by Jesus, 131.
- Saviour, Jesus a, 45.
of world, Jesus acknowledged as, 111.
- Scorpion not given for egg, 413.
- Scorpions, power given to tread on, 461.
- Scourge, temple purged with, 94.

- Scourging of disciples foretold, 282.
 of Jesus, 573.
- Scribe, the instructed, 254.
 offers to follow Jesus, 255.
- Scribes called together by Herod, 51.
 Jesus' teaching not like that of, 119, 141.
 object to Jesus' forgiving sins, 154.
 righteousness of, insufficient, 175.
 accuse Jesus of working by Beelzebub, 231.
 denounced, 419, 644.
 censure Jesus, 605.
 rejection of Christ by, foretold, 324.
 bring to Jesus woman taken in adultery, 360.
 seek to betray Jesus, 697.
 question Jesus' authority, 612.
 See Elders, Jews, Pharisees.
- Scrip not to be provided, 280, 398.
- Scriptures, the, testify of Jesus, 120.
- Sea of Galilee, 135.
 Jesus returns to the, 153, 160, 239.
 crosses, 290.
 walks upon, 296.
 of Tiberias, 289.
- Sealed, the Son of man, 299.
- Seaside, Jesus at, 239.
- Seats, uppermost, sought after, 419.
- Second coming of Jesus foretold, 545, 680.
- Secrecy sought by Jesus, 350, 351.
- Secret, alms, etc., to be in, 186.
- Seed, kingdom of heaven like, 249.
 of David, Christ to be of, 359.
- Sending forth of the Twelve, 285.
- Sepulchres of the prophets built, 421, 652.
- Serpents, direction to be wise as, 282.
 power given to tread on, 461.
 Pharisees and scribes denounced as, 653.
 not to hurt Apostles, 461.
- Servant, the faithful, 442, 685.
 not above his lord, 283.
 of centurion healed, 210.
- Servants, at Cana, commanded to obey
 Jesus, 86.
- Service of two masters impossible, 514.
- Seven loaves miraculously increased, 313.
- Seventy, the, 460.
- Sheep, those that sold in temple driven out, 94.
 market, 114.
 having no shepherd, multitude
 like, 279, 291.
 lost, of house of Israel, 280, 311.
 in midst of wolves, the Twelve
 like, 282.
 one lost, out of a hundred, 343, 491.
- Sheepfold, Jesus door of, 383.
- Shepherd, Jesus the good, 383, 387.
- Shepherds of Bethlehem, 43-45.
- Shewbread, David and the, 154.
- Shining garments, light shine, 173.
- Ship, Jesus teaches from a, 137, 160, 239.
 Jesus crosses lake in, 257, 286.
 sends disciples away in, 294.
- Shipping, 299.
- Shoe's latchet, 71, 81.
 not to be provided, 280, 398.
- Sick need physician, not the whole, 268.
- Sickness of Lazarus, 524.
- Sidon, multitudes from, follow Jesus, 160, 165.
 compared with unbelieving cities, 220.
 Jesus goes near to, 310, 399.
- Sighing of Jesus, 315, 535.
- Sight to blind, Jesus sent to recover, 129, 216, 587.
- Sign given to shepherds at Bethlehem, 45.
 Jesus a, 47.
 a, asked for, of Jesus, 95, 235, 314, 414.
 the, of Christ's coming, 662.
 of the last day, 664, 668, 681.
- Signs, faith only on seeing, 113.
 of the time, 315.
- Siloam, falling of Tower of, 448.
 pool of, 371.
- Silver not to be provided, 280.
 ten pieces of, parable of, 495.

- Simeon, prophecy of, in temple, 46.
 Simon, brother of Jesus, 277.
 Simon the leper, 589.
 Simon the Pharisee, 225, 226.
 Simon Zelotes the Canaanite, one of the Twelve, 164.
 See Apostles, Disciples.
 Sin of the world taken away by Jesus, 80.
 warning against, 117, 365.
 conviction of, 361.
 sinner servant of, 365.
 Jesus challenges conviction of, 366.
 unacknowledged, remains, 370, 382.
 Single eye, the, 192.
 Sinner, joy in heaven over repenting, 494.
 Jesus accused of being guest of, 579.
 Sinners, Jesus eating with, 268.
 come to save, 268.
 blamed for receiving, 490.
 Sins forgiven by Jesus, 151.
 Jews to die in their, 364.
 Sisters of Jesus, 277.
 Sky, signs of, discerned, 315, 445.
 Slay, the Jews seek to, Jesus, 117.
 Sleep of disciples, 328.
 of Lazarus, 526.
 Smoking flax not quenched, 161.
 Sodom compared with unbelieving cities, 221, 280, 399.
 Soldiers instructed by John Baptist, 71.
 Solomon not arrayed like a lily, 795.
 Jesus greater than, 414.
 Solomon's porch, 469.
 Son of God, the only begotten, 24, 67.
 Jesus the, 35, 74, 76, 85, 161, 297, 531.
 self-existent, 118.
 voice of, to be heard by the dead, 118.
 of man, angels ascending and descending upon, 85.
 came down from heaven, 98.
 to be lifted up, 99, 364.
 Lord of the Sabbath, 157.
 second coming of, 326, 685.
 revelation of, 464.
 Son of God, the loved of the Father, 74, 118, 329.
 the identity of, with the Father, 114.
 his knowledge of the Father, 222.
 Sorrow of disciples, 334.
 Soul, he who can destroy, only to be feared, 284.
 value of, 325.
 South, Queen of the, and Solomon, 236, 414.
 Sower, parable of the, 241.
 Sparrows, God's care of, 284, 427.
 Speech, impediment of, healed, 172, 312.
 Spikenard, ointment of, 589.
 Spirit of Elijah (Elias), John Baptist endured with, 30.
 of God descends on Jesus at his baptism, 73.
 of the Lord upon Jesus, 128, 161.
 poor in, blessed, 166.
 Jesus supposed to be, 296.
 Jesus into wilderness, 75.
 birth of, 98.
 Jesus casting out devils by, 214, 232.
 speaking in the Twelve, 282.
 quickeneth, 304.
 See Holy Ghost.
 Spirits, unclean, cast out, 142, 145, 161, 165, 233, 263, 279.
 See Demoniac, Devils, Miracles.
 Spitting in Jesus' Face, 573.
 Staff not to be taken by the Twelve, 280.
 Star seen by wise men, 43.
 Steward, the faithful, 442.
 Stillness of tempest, 257.
 Stone over grave of Lazarus, 535.
 the, rejected by builders, 619.
 Stones, raising up children to Abraham of, 69.
 Jesus tempted to turn, into bread, 76.
 would cry out if Jesus' disciples were silenced, 599.

Stones ornamenting temple, 660.
 Storm of wind stilled, 257.
 Strait gate, 454.
 Stranger, sheep will not hear, 384.
 Streets, hypocrites giving alms publicly in, 187.
 sick laid in, to be healed, 298.
 Stripes, few and many, 442.
 Strive, Jesus not to, 161.
 Strong drink forbidden to John Baptist, 30.
 Sufferings of Jesus foretold, 324, 330, 547.
 of disciples foretold, 654.
 Sun, the righteous to shine as the, 252.
 Jesus' face like, at transfiguration, 338.
 darkening of, foretold, 681.
 Supper, the great, parable of, 475.
 the Lord's, 698, 714.
 Susanna, 229.
 Swaddling clothes, Jesus wrapped in, 42.
 Swearing forbidden, 180.
 as to, 650.
 Swine, herd of, possessed by devils and drowned, 264.
 fed by prodigal, 500.
 Sword to pierce through Mary's soul, 47.
 Jesus come to send, on earth, 285.
 Sycamore, Zaccheus climbs into, 578.
 Sychar, 105.
 Synagogue, a, built by centurion, 207.
 Synagogues, Jesus teaches in, 126, 141, 157, 276.
 preaches in, 278, 299.
 chief seats in, sought out, 419, 647.
 disciples to be scourged in, 282.
 Syria, fame of Jesus spread through, 146.
 Syrophenician woman, daughter of, healed, 310.

T

TABERNACLES proposed at transfiguration, 329.
 Feast of, 349.

Tables of money-changers overthrown, 94.
 tradition as to washing, 307.
 Talents, parable of the, 347, 692.
 "Talitha cumi," 273.
 Tares and wheat, parable of, 247.
 Taught of Jesus, 291, 364.
 Taxing, decree for, 41.
 Teacher from God, Jesus a, 97.
 Teaching of Jesus, 126, 141, 356, 556.
 in synagogues, 157, 276, 299.
 in a mountain, 166.
 in temple, 351, 360, 605, 612.
 in a house, 150.
 by the seaside, 153.
 See Parables, Preaching.
 Teeth, gnashing of, 252.
 Tempest, stilling of a, 257.
 Temple, Zacharias officiating in, 28, 29, 422.
 presentation of Jesus in, 46.
 Jesus placed on pinnacle of, 76.
 purges, 94.
 greater than, 155.
 in the, 116, 352, 360, 469.
 foretells destruction of, 660.
 as to swearing by, 650.
 Temptation of Jesus by devil, 75-78.
 by scribes and Pharisees, 361.
 by a lawyer, 400.
 direction to pray against, 411.
 Tempting God forbidden, 77.
 Testimony of John Baptist to Jesus, 71, 81, 82, 102.
 of God to Jesus, 120.
 Jesus to John Baptist, 215.
 of works of Jesus, 120, 599.
 of Scriptures, 120.
 against unbelieving cities, 281.
 by persecution of disciples, 282, 669.
 Tetrarch of Galilee, Herod, 286.
 Thanks before meat, 299, 313.
 Thanksgiving to the Father, 221, 536, 543, 551.
 Thefts proceed from heart, 310.

- Thief guarded against when foreseen, 440, 685.
he who enters not by door, 383.
- Thieves, the man who fell among, 403.
temple made den of, 605.
- Thirst after righteousness, 168.
- Thomas, one of the Twelve, 163.
proposes to follow Jesus to Jerusalem, 527.
- Thorns, seed that fell among, 246.
- Thought, anxious, unnecessary, 193, 283, 437.
- Thoughts perceived by Jesus, 152, 157.
- Throne of David, Jesus to have,
of God, heaven, 180.
of glory, Son of man on, 565, 695.
- Thunder, James and John, sons of, 183.
- Tiberias, sea of, 299.
- Tiberius Cæsar, fifteenth year, 63.
- Tidings, good, 44.
- Time, signs of the, 445.
Jesus' and the world's not the same, 351.
- Tithing mint, etc., 419.
- Titlle of the law not to fail, 174.
- Tomb, John Baptist laid in, 287.
See Sepulchre.
- Tombs, demoniacs living in, 261.
of prophets built, 652.
- Tooth for a tooth, 181.
- Touch, healing by, 148, 160, 165, 274, 298, 312.
- Tower, builder of, parable of, 488, 616.
- Towns, preaching of Apostles in, 281.
- Trachonitis, 65.
- Tradition as to washings, 307.
of men preferred to God's commandments, 308.
- Transfiguration, the, 327.
- Treasure, hid, parable of, 252.
- Treasures to be in heaven, not upon earth, 433, 440, 563.
- Treasury, Jesus in, 364.
Jesus watching gifts to, 635.
- Trees, ax laid to root of, 39.
unproductive, destroyed, 70.
known by their fruits, 233.
- Trees, men like, to a blind man, 318.
- Trespasses to be forgiven, 345, 411, 521.
- Trial of Jesus, 739.
- Tribes of Israel to be judged by Apostles, 565.
- Tribulation predicted, 678.
- Tribute paid by Jesus, 336.
to Cæsar, as to giving, 626.
- Trouble of Jesus, 533.
- Troubling of waters of Bethesda, 114.
- True bread, Jesus the, 300.
- Trumpet sounded in giving alms, 186.
- Trust in riches condemned, 513.
See Faith.
- Truth of God known to Jesus' disciples, 356, 365.
- Turtledoves offered on purification,
416.
- Tyre, a multitude from, follow Jesus, 160, 165.
compared with unbelieving cities,
220, 339.
Jesus goes to coast of, 310.
- U
- UNBELIEF preventing mighty works, 278. of Jews, 399.
- Unbelievers, portion of, 399, 442.
- Understanding, disciples' want of, 309.
- Unjust steward, parable of, 509.
- Unrighteousness, mammon of, 511.
- Uppermost seats sought after, 419.
- V
- VESSELS not to be carried through temple, 604.
the true, 723.
- Vineyard, laborers in, parable of, 567.
- Violence prohibited by John Baptist, 70.
- Violent taking the kingdom of Heaven, 218.
- Vipers, generation of, 69, 233.

Virgins, parable of ten, 688.
 Virtues, healing, emanating from Jesus, 275.
 Visitation of Mary to Elisabeth, 35.
 Voice in wilderness, John Baptista, 67, 80.
 from heaven heard, 74, 329, 639.
 of Christ to be heard by dead, 118, 119.
 Jesus not heard in street, 161.
 good Shepherd known by his sheep, 384.

W

WAGES, soldiers to be content with their, 72.
 Wailing. See Gnashing.
 Waiting for the moving of the water, 114.
 Walking on water, 296.
 Wars, and rumors of, predicted, 665.
 Washing Jesus feet with tears, 224.
 omitting, blamed, 417.
 in Siloam directed to a blind man, 371.
 of disciples' feet by Jesus, 704.
 Watch, servants who, blessed, 440.
 direction to, 440, 687.
 the, set on Jesus' sepulchre, 687.
 Water made wine, 87.
 man must be born of, 98.
 at Enon for baptism, 100.
 living, 107.
 of Bethesda, moving of, 114.
 Jesus and Peter walking on, 296.
 demoniac cast into, 331.
 cup of, given to disciples rewarded, 285.
 Waterpots, 86, 110.
 Way of the Lord, John to prepare the, 31, 40, 80.
 John urges preparation of, 67.
 of Jesus, 364.
 Weeping in Rama, 170.
 and gnashing of teeth, 209.
 at Lazarus' grave, 531, 533.
 Well at Sychar, 106.
 Wheat will be gathered in, 72.
 and tares, parable of, 247.
 White raiment, 328.
 Wickedness proceeds from the heart, 310.
 Widow, Anna, 48. of Nain, 210.
 a, giving two mites, 635.
 Wife, as to putting away, 179, 515, 556.
 of seven brothers, 629.
 of wild beasts, with Jesus in wilderness, 76.
 Wilderness, John Baptist in, 66.
 Jesus tempted in, 75-78.
 retires to, 149.
 demoniacs in, 262.
 manna eaten in, 300
 Will of God, 353.
 performance of, by Jesus, 119, 302.
 doers of, to enter kingdom, 202.
 Weariness of Jesus, 106.
 Wind blew, 203.
 those born of the Spirit like, 98.
 storm of, 257, 296.
 Wine forbidden to John Baptist, 30, 219.
 water turned into, 87.
 new and old bottles, 269.
 new and old, 269.
 given by good Samaritan, 404.
 Winter, 677.
 Wisdom, Jesus filled with, 51.
 justified of all her children, 219.
 to be given to disciples, 670.
 things hidden from, 462.
 men sent by Jesus to Jews, 653.
 Withered, the, at Bethesda, 114.
 hand restored, 159.
 fig-tree, 603.
 Witness, John Baptist a, 28.
 of Jesus not received, 98.
 of Jews against themselves, 421.
 of the Father to Jesus, 363.
 Witnesses to be taken in disputes, 345.
 to Jesus, Apostles, 599.
 See False.
 Wolf, sheep not protected from, by hireling, 388.

Wolves in sheep's clothing, 201.
 disciples as sheep and lambs among, 282, 398.

Woman of Samaria, 107.
 with issue of blood, 274.
 taken in adultery, 362.
 with ten pieces of silver, 495.

Women follow Jesus and minister to him, 229.

Wonders required before belief, 113.

Word of God comes to John Baptist, 65. man lives by, 76.
 spirit and life, 299.
 every idle, to be accounted for, 234.

Work of God, faith the, 299.

Workman worthy of his meat, 280.
 See Laborer.

Works of Jesus, testimony of, 118, 120, 471.
 Jews wonder at, 277. works of God, 472.
 good, to glorify God, 174.
 mighty, prevented by unbelief, 277, 399.
 justification by, 326.
 of world denounced, 351.
 of scribes and Pharisees condemned, 645.

World, decree to tax, 41.
 the kingdoms of, offered to Jesus, 77.
 sin of, taken away by Jesus, 81.
 love of God to, 99.
 Christ's disciples, the light of, 173.
 cares of, choke word, 246.
 life of, Jesus' flesh given for, 300, 302.
 denounced for offences, 341.
 Jesus urged to show himself unto, 350.
 hatred of Jesus for his denunciations of it, 351.
 Jesus light of, 362, 370, 658.
 See Earth.

Worm, the undying, 341.

Worship wise men offer, to Jesus, 51.
 asked of Jesus by Satan, 77.
 due only to God, 77.
 in Samaria or at Jerusalem, 108.
 of the Father to be in spirit and truth, 109.
 of Jesus, 247, 262, 379, 574.

Worthy, laborer, of his hire, 280.
 disciples to visit the, 281.
 of Christ, those not, who do not forsake all for him, 285, 688.

Wrath of Herod, 53.
 to come, the, 69, 678.
 of people of Nazareth against Jesus, 134.

Writing table asked for by Zacharias, 39.
 of Jesus on ground, 361.

Writings of Moses, 556.

Y

YEA, yea, Nay, nay, sufficient without swearing, 180.

Year of the Lord, acceptable, 130.

Yoke, Jesus', easy, 222.

Young ruler, rich, 562.

Z

ZACCHEUS the publican, 577.

Zachariah (Zacharias), son of Barachiah, blood of, 422, 654.

Zacharias. See Zachariah.

Zacharias, father of John Baptist, 28.
 vision to, in temple, and dumbness of, 29.
 restoration of speech, and prophesying, 39.

Zeal of God's house, 94.

Zebedee, father of James and John, 139, 163.
 See James, John.

Zebulon (Zabulon), borders of, 134.

CHRONOLOGICAL INDEX.

		PAGE
An angel appears to Zacharias.....	2 B.C.	28
An angel appears to Mary.....	2 "	32
Mary visits Elizabeth.....	1 "	35
Birth of John the Baptist.....	1 "	38
Birth of Jesus.....	1 J.C.	42
The circumcision of Jesus.....	1 "	45
The visit of the Magi.....	1 "	48
The flight into Egypt.....	1 "	52
The return from Egypt.....	"	54
Jesus goes with his parents to the Passover.....	12 "	55
Preaching of John the Baptist.....	30 "	66
The baptism of Jesus.....	31 "	73
The temptation of Jesus.....	31 "	75
Testimony of John the Baptist to Jesus.....	Jan.-Feb., 31 "	79
The first disciple.....	Jan.-Feb., 31 "	82
The marriage at Cana of Galilee.....	Jan.-Feb., 31 "	85
Jesus drives the traders from the temple.....	April 11-18, 31 "	89
Jesus discourses with Nicodemus.....	April 11-18, 31 "	96
The first Judean ministry.....	April-Dec., 31 "	100
Jesus departs to Galilee.....	April-Dec., 31 "	103
Jesus talks with the Samaritan woman.....	April-Dec., 31 "	107
At Cana heals the nobleman's servant of Capernaum.....	April-Dec., 31 "	113
Heals the impotent man at Jerusalem.....	Mar. 30-April 5, 32 "	114
John the Baptist cast into prison.....	Mar. 30-April 5, 32 "	122
Jesus goes again to Galilee and begins to preach publicly.....	April, 32 "	124
Rejected at Nazareth.....	April, 32 "	132
Makes His residence at Capernaum.....	April, 32 "	134
The call of Simon and Andrew, James and John, with the miraculous draught of fishes.....	March-April, 32 "	136
Healing of a demoniac in synagogue.....	March-April, 32 "	141
Healing of Peter's wife's mother.....	March-April, 32 "	144
A circuit throughout Galilee.....	March-April, 32 "	145
Healing of a leper.....	Summer, 32 "	147
Healing of a paralytic at Capernaum.....	Summer, 32 "	151
The call of Matthew.....	Summer, 32 "	153
The disciples pluck the ears of corn.....	Summer, 32 "	154
The healing of the withered hand.....	Summer, 32 "	157
A call of the Twelve Apostles.....	Summer, 32 "	162
The Sermon on the Mount.....	Summer, 32 "	164
Heals the centurion's servant.....	Summer, 32 "	205
The raising of the widow's son.....	Summer, 32 "	210
John in prison sends disciples to Jesus.....	Summer, 32 "	215
Jesus anointed by a woman who was a sinner.....	Summer, 32 "	223
A second circuit in Galilee.....	Autumn, 32 "	228
Heals blind and dumb demoniac.....	Autumn, 32 "	230
The Pharisees seek a sign.....	Autumn, 32 "	235
The seven parables.....	Autumn, 32 "	239
Jesus visits Decapolis.....	Autumn, 32 "	255

			PAGE
Stills the tempest...	Autumn, 32	J.C.	257
The two demoniacs at Gadara.....	Autumn, 32	"	260
Levi's feast.....	Autumn, 32	"	267
The raising of the daughter of Jairus.....	Autumn, 32	"	270
The healing of an infirm woman.....	Autumn, 32	"	274
Two blind men healed.....	Autumn, 32	"	275
Second visit to Nazareth.....	Winter, 33	"	276
Sending of the Twelve.....	Winter, 33	"	279
Death of Baptist; Jesus returns to Capernaum.....	Winter, 33	"	286
Crossing of the sea, and feeding of the 5000; return to Capernaum.....	Spring, 33	"	290
Discourse at Capernaum respecting the bread of life.	April, 33	"	299
Jesus visits the coasts of Tyre and Sidon; heals the daughter of Syro-Phœnician woman; visits the region of Decapolis; heals one with an impediment in his speech; feeds the 4000.....	Summer, 33	"	306
Jesus returns to Capernaum; is tempted by the Pharisees; reproves their hypocrisy; again crosses the sea; heals blind man at Bethsaida.....	Summer, 33	"	314
Peter's confession that He is the Christ; He announces His approaching death and resurrection.	Summer, 33	"	319
The transfiguration.....	Summer, 33	"	327
Healing of lunatic child.....	Summer, 33	"	331
Jesus journeys through Galilee, teaching the disciples; at Capernaum pays the tribute money....	Autumn, 33	"	333
Goes up to Feast of Tabernacles.....	Autumn, 33	"	349
He teaches in the temple; efforts to arrest him.....	Oct., 33	"	352
An adulteress is brought before him; attempt to stone Him.....	Oct., 33	"	360
Healing of a man blind from birth; return to Galilee.....	Oct., 33	"	369
Final departure from Galilee; is rejected at Samaria; sending of the Seventy, whom He follows.....	Nov., 33	"	393
Jesus is attended by great multitudes; parable of the good Samaritan.....	Nov., 33	"	400
Dining with a Pharisee.....	Nov.-Dec., 33	"	417
Jesus rebukes hypocrisy.....	Nov.-Dec., 33	"	424
Parable of the rich fool.....	Nov.-Dec., 33	"	431
Jesus is told of the murder of the Galileans by Pilate; parable of the fig-tree; healing of a woman 18 years sick; is warned against Herod.	Nov.-Dec., 33	"	447
Feast of Dedication; visit to Mary and Martha; the Jews at Jerusalem attempt to stone Him; He goes beyond Jordan.....	Dec., 33	"	465
Jesus dines with a Pharisee, and heals a man with dropsy; parables of the great supper, of the lost sheep, of the lost piece of silver, of the unjust steward, of the rich man and Lazarus.....	Dec., 33	"	476
Resurrection of Lazarus; counsel of the Jews to put Him to death; He retires to Ephraim.....	Jan.-Feb., 34	"	524
Sojourn in Ephraim till Passover at hand; journeys on the border of Samaria and Galilee; healing of ten lepers; parables of the unjust judge, and of Pharisee and publican.....	Feb.-March, 34	"	541
Teaching respecting divorce; blessing of children; the young ruler, and parable of laborers in the vineyard.....	Feb.-March, 34	"	556
Jesus again announces His death; ambition of James and John.....	March, 34	"	571
Healing of blind men at Jericho; Zaccheus; parable of the pounds; departure to Bethany.....	March, 34	"	577
Supper at Bethany, and anointing of Jesus by Mary.	Sat., April 1, 34	"	588

Entry into Jerusalem ; visit to the temple, and return to Bethany.....	Sund., April 2, 34	J.-C.	593
Cursing of the fig-tree ; second purification of the temple ; return to Bethany.....	Mond., April 3, 34	"	602
Teaching in the temple ; parable of the two sons, of the wicked husbandmen, of the king's son ; attempts of His enemies to entangle Him ; the poor widow ; the Greeks who desire to see Him ; a voice heard from heaven ; departure from the temple to the Mount of Olives ; discourse respecting the end of the world ; return to Bethany ; agreement of Judas with the priests to betray Him.....	Tues., April 4, 34	"	610-659
Jesus seeks retirement at Bethany.....	Wed., April 5, 34	"	660
Sending of Peter and John to prepare the Passover ; the paschal supper.....	Thurs., April 6, 34	"	698
Events at paschal supper.....	Thurs. eve., April 6, 34	"	699
After supper Jesus foretells the denials of Peter ; speaks of the coming of the Comforter, and ends with prayer.....	Thurs. eve., April 6, 34	"	712
Jesus in the garden of Gethsemane.....	Thurs. eve., April 6, 34	"	732
Jesus is led to the house of Annas, and thence to the palace of Caiaphas ; is condemned for blasphemy.....	Friday, 1-5 A.M., April 7, 34	"	739
Taken before Pilate.....	Friday, 5-6 A.M., April 7, 34	"	749
Charge of sedition ; Pilate finds no fault with Him, and attempts to release Him, but is forced to scourge Him, and give Him up to be crucified.	Friday, 6-9 A.M., April 7, 34	"	751
Jesus is crucified at Golgotha.....	Friday, 9-12 A.M., April 7, 34	"	757
Upon the cross is reviled by His enemies ; commends His mother to John ; darkness covers the land ; He dies ; the earth shakes, and rocks are rent.	Friday, 12 A.M.-3 P.M., April 7, 34	"	759
His body taken down and given to Joseph, and laid in his sepulchre.....	Friday, 3-6 P.M., April 7, 34	"	768
Resurrection of Jesus, and appearance to Mary Magdalene.....	Sunday, A.M., April 9, 34	"	773
Appearance to the two disciples at Emmaus ; to Peter and to the Eleven at Jerusalem.	Sunday, P.M., April 9, 34	"	780
Appearance to the apostles and Thomas.....	Sunday, April 16, 34	"	792
Appearance to seven disciples at sea of Tiberias, and to 500 at mountain in Galilee.....	April-May, 34	"	793
Final appearance to the disciples at Jerusalem, and ascension to heaven	Thursday, May 18, 34	"	797

INDEX

TO PASSAGES OF SCRIPTURE REFERRED TO IN THE GOSPEL HISTORY.

MATTHEW.
	PAGE
i. 1-17.....	26-27
i. 18-25.....	36-38
ii. 1-23.....	48-54
iii. 1-4.....	66
iii. 2-6.....	67-68
iii. 11.....	71
iii. 13-17.....	73-74
iv. 1-11.....	75-78
iv. 12.....	122
iv. 13.....	135
iv. 13-17.....	134
iv. 19-22.....	139-140
iv. 23-25.....	146
v. 1-48.....	166-185
vi. 2-34.....	186-196
vii. 1-29.....	196-204
viii. 5-6.....	205-206
viii. 8-13.....	208-210
viii. 15-17.....	144-145
viii. 18-23.....	255-257
viii. 25-29.....	258-262
viii. 32-34.....	264-265
ix. 1.....	266
ix. 2.....	150
ix. 4.....	152
ix. 8-9.....	152-153
ix. 10-23.....	267-271
ix. 22.....	275
ix. 26.....	273
ix. 27-34.....	276
ix. 35-38.....	278-279
x. 1.....	279
x. 2-4.....	162-164
x. 5-42.....	279-285
xi. 1.....	285
xi. 2-30.....	215-222
xii. 1-8.....	154-157
xii. 11-12.....	158
xii. 15.....	160
xii. 17-21.....	161
xii. 22-50.....	230-238
xiii. 1-2.....	239-241
xiii. 4-53.....	242-255
xiii. 11.....	669

	PAGE
xiii. 56.....	277
xiii. 58.....	278
xiv. 1-2.....	285-286
xiv. 3-4.....	122-123
xiv. 6.....	286
xiv. 8-12.....	286-287
xiv. 13-36.....	291-298
xv. 1-3.....	306-307
xv. 3-6.....	308
xv. 7-8.....	307-308
xv. 10-29.....	309-311
xv. 32-39.....	313-314
xvi. 1-28.....	314-326
xvii. 1-18.....	327-331
xvii. 19-27.....	333-336
xviii. 1-3.....	337-339
xviii. 7-35.....	340-348
xix. 1-2.....	407
xix. 3-30.....	556-566
xx. 1-16.....	567-570
xx. 17-28.....	572-576
xx. 29-34.....	585-587
xxi. 1-9.....	593-598
xxi. 11-17.....	601-607
xxi. 20-46.....	610-621
xxii. 1-40.....	621-634
xxii. 41-46.....	642-643
xxiii. 1-5.....	643-645
xxiii. 6-39.....	647-656
xxiv. 1-4.....	660-663
xxiv. 5-8.....	665-668
xxiv. 15.....	664
xxiv. 9-51.....	670-687
xxv. 1-46.....	688-697
xxvi. 1-5.....	697
xxvi. 6-16.....	589-592
xxvi. 17-20.....	698-699
xxvi. 21-25.....	707-708
xxvi. 26-29.....	714-715
xxvi. 30-58.....	731-740
xxvi. 59-68.....	742-743
xxvi. 69-75.....	740-741
xxvii. 1-2.....	746
xxvii. 3-10.....	744-745
xxvii. 11-14.....	748-750

	PAGE
xxvii. 15-23.....	752
xxvii. 19-32.....	753-755
xxvii. 33.....	757
xxvii. 34.....	762
xxvii. 35.....	757
xxvii. 36-37.....	760
xxvii. 38.....	757
xxvii. 39-43.....	761
xxvii. 45-56.....	764-767
xxvii. 57-66.....	769-772
xxviii. 1.....	774
xxviii. 5-8.....	775-776
xxviii. 9-15.....	778-780
xxviii. 16.....	793
xxviii. 16-20.....	796-797

MARK.

i. 2.....	67
i. 9.....	73
i. 13.....	75-76
i. 14-15.....	124
i. 15.....	134
i. 19-32.....	139-145
i. 35-39.....	145-146
i. 41-45.....	148-149
ii. 1-3.....	150
ii. 5-14.....	151-153
ii. 15-22.....	267-269
ii. 26-27.....	155-156
iii. 1.....	157
iii. 4-6.....	158-159
iii. 11-12.....	161
iii. 14-15.....	162
iii. 17.....	163
iii. 22-23.....	231
iii. 27-29.....	232-233
iii. 31-35.....	237-238
iv. 1-22.....	239-246
iv. 24-25.....	247
iv. 30-32.....	249
iv. 26-34.....	250-251
iv. 35.....	255
iv. 36-41.....	257-259
v. 1-2.....	259-260

	PAGE
v. 3-13	262-264
v. 16	266
v. 18-20	266
v. 22-24	270-271
v. 24-30	273-274
v. 32-34	275
v. 36	271
v. 38-42	271-273
vi. 1-7	276-279
vi. 8-9	280-281
vi. 11	281
vi. 12-13	285
vi. 17	286
vi. 17-20	123
vi. 21-29	286-287
vi. 30-56	289-298
vii. 1-37	306-312
vii. 30-31	312
viii. 26	258
viii. 1-29	313-320
viii. 30-33	323-326
ix. 1-3	326-328
ix. 5-33	329-334
ix. 33-50	337-342
x. 1	407
x. 2-31	556-566
x. 32-45	571-576
x. 46-52	585-587
xi. 1-10	593-598
xi. 11-19	601-606
xi. 20-33	610-614
xii. 1-11	616-619
xii. 7-11	160
xii. 12	621
xii. 13-34	625-634
xii. 35-39	642-647
xii. 41-44	635
xii. 49	649
xiii. 1-10	660-668
xiii. 12	671
xiii. 13	671-673
xiii. 14-32	675-684
xiii. 33-37	688
xiv. 3-11	589-592
xiv. 10-17	697-699
xiv. 18-21	707
xiv. 22-25	714-715
xiv. 26-30	731-732
xiv. 32-54	733-740
xiv. 55-65	742-743
xiv. 66-72	740-741
xv. 1-5	746-750
xv. 6-21	752-755
xv. 22-28	757-760
xv. 29-32	761-762
xv. 33-36	764-765
xv. 38-41	766-767
xv. 42-47	769-770
xvi. 1-8	773-776
xvi. 9-10	778-779
xvi. 12	780
xvi. 14	786

	PAGE
xvi. 15-19	797-798

LUKE.

i. 5-56	28-36
i. 57-80	38-40
ii. 1-38	41-48
ii. 40-52	54-61
iii. 1-18	63-72
iii. 21-23	73-74
iii. 23-28	25
iv. 1-2	75-76
iv. 5-6	77
iv. 9-10	76-77
iv. 13	78
iv. 16-32	126-134
iv. 31-33	141-142
iv. 35-36	143
iv. 38-43	144-146
v. 1-11	135-140
v. 12	147-148
v. 15-20	149-151
v. 26-28	153
v. 29-39	267-270
vi. 1	154
vi. 6-9	157-158
vi. 11	159
vi. 12-13	162
vi. 17-19	165
vi. 22-26	171-172
vi. 29-30	182-183
vi. 31	199
vi. 27-32	184
vi. 34-36	185
vi. 37-42	197-198
vi. 44-49	201-203
vii. 1-9	205-209
vii. 12-35	210-219
vii. 36-50	222-227
viii. 1-3	228-230
viii. 19-21	238
viii. 22-23	257-258
viii. 25	259
viii. 28-29	262
viii. 31	263
viii. 34-37	265-266
viii. 41-42	270-271
viii. 44-48	274-275
viii. 49-56	271-273
ix. 2	279
ix. 6-9	285-286
ix. 10-14	289-294
ix. 18-20	318-320
ix. 21-22	323
ix. 23-34	325-329
ix. 37	330
ix. 39-49	331-334
ix. 46	336-337
ix. 48-49	339
ix. 51-56	393-396
ix. 60-63	256-257

	PAGE
x. 11	281
x. 1-16	296-400
x. 17-24	460-464
x. 25-37	400-406
x. 38-42	465-467
xi. 1-54	408-423
xii. 1-59	424-446
xiii. 1-33	447-459
xiv. 1-35	475-489
xv. 1-32	490-508
xvi. 1-31	509-520
xvii. 1-10	521-523
xvii. 11-37	542-548
xviii. 1-14	518-555
xviii. 15-30	558-566
xviii. 31-34	572-573
xviii. 36-43	586-587
xix. 1-28	576-585
xix. 29-44	593-601
xix. 45-48	604-606
xx. 1-8	612-614
xx. 9-18	616-620
xx. 20-40	625-631
xx. 41-46	642-647
xx. 47	649
xxi. 1-4	635
xxi. 3-6	592
xxi. 5-11	660-667
xxi. 13-19	668-673
xxi. 20-24	675-678
xxi. 25-33	681-684
xxi. 34-36	687-688
xxi. 37-38	606-607
xxii. 7-18	698-701
xxii. 19-20	714-715
xxii. 21-23	707
xxii. 24-30	701-703
xxii. 31-38	711-713
xxii. 39	731
xxii. 34-71	732-743
xxiii. 1-49	746-767
xxiii. 50-56	769-771
xxiv. 1-6	774-775
xxiv. 12	776
xxiv. 13-49	781-789
xxiv. 50-53	790

JOHN.

i. 1-5	23
i. 6-8	28
i. 9-14	24
i. 15	28
i. 16	24
i. 18	24
i. 19-51	79-85
ii. 1-25	85-96
iii. 1-36	96-102
iv. 1-54	103-113
v. 1-47	114-121
vi. 1-21	290-297

	PAGE
vi. 10.....	294
vi. 22-71....	299-305
vii. 1.....	305
vii. 2-53....	349-360
viii. 2-59....	361-368
ix. 1-41....	369-382
x. 1-21....	382-391
x. 22-42....	468-474
xi. 1-57....	524-542
xii. 3-8....	590-592
xii. 1-11....	588-589
xii. 12-13....	596-598
xii. 16-19....	599
xii. 20-36....	636-642
xii. 36-50....	656-659
xiii. 1-38....	703-712
xiv. 1-30....	716-723

	PAGE
xv. 1-27....	723-725
xvi. 1-33....	725-728
xvii. 1-26....	728-731
xviii. 1.....	731-733
xviii. 10-13....	738-739
xviii. 15-18....	739-740
xviii. 19-24 ..	741-742
xviii. 25-27....	741
xviii. 28-38....	746-749
xviii. 39-40....	752
xix. 1-17....	754-755
xix. 17-18....	757-758
xix. 19-22 ..	760-761
xix. 23-24....	759
xix. 25-30....	764-766
xix. 31-42....	768-770
xx. 1-19....	774-779

	PAGE
xx. 19-20....	786-787
xx. 24.....	791
xx. 26-28	792
xx. 31.....	798
xxi. 1-23....	793-796

ACTS.

i. 3-11....	797-708
-------------	---------

1 CORINTHIANS.

xv. 5.....	780
xv. 6.....	796
xv. 7.....	797

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS

IN REGARD TO THE BOOK ON THIS SUBJECT BY EDMUND KIRKE
(J. R. GILMORE).

WE select from many notices of "The Life of Jesus, according to HIS ORIGINAL BIOGRAPHERS," the following :

"This we pronounce a most excellent book. We commend it."—Western Missionary, Dayton, O.

"Mr. Kirke, in this little volume, brings his rare powers to the task of presenting, in the words of the Evangelists, blended into a single text, the true Jesus, divested of that unreality to the mind produced by the plurality of authors, by antiquated translations, and by the arbitrary laceration into chapters and verses. We have before the mind's eye almost a new Jesus ; yet, in truth, the former, brought out into clearer light and more palpable reality."—Methodist Quarterly Review.

"It adds new beauty to the life of Jesus to read it in this chronological order, assisted by the brief notes that are printed at the foot of the page."—Christian Advocate, Pittsburgh.

"The notes always help to an understanding of the text."—Monthly Religious Magazine, Boston.

"The foot-notes are copious, but very interesting. They manifest extensive reading, but no desire to dictate, or ambition to present anything novel."—Times, Chicago, Illinois.

"The Evangelists, read in this way, afford the only true history of Christ."—Presbyterian, Philadelphia.

"We are not aware of anything of this kind in the market, and can heartily commend this life of Jesus, practically without note or comment, in the very language of the Evangelists, as being as far beyond any paraphrase, or reviews, or studies, as God's word is beyond man's. We hope it will have a large circulation."—Christian Advocate and Journal, New York.

"It is attractive from its straight-forwardness, and will be found of very great use as a clear compilation of the gospel narratives."—Protestant Churchman, N. Y.

"It is a transcript aiming to be more synoptical than either of the gospels alone, and succeeding."—Round Table, New York.

"The book is a desideratum to Bible readers, and we think it will meet with a ready and extensive sale."—Press, Providence, R. I.

"We commend it to all students of biblical history, as likely to be of much service in aiding them to arrange and harmonize the often disconnected impressions derived from the perusal of the four Gospels."—Press, Portland, Me.

"He has well executed his work."—Religious Herald, Hartford, Conn.

"Worthy of a place among the best literature of the age."—Telegraph, Gloucester, Mass.

"It is exceedingly well adapted for the purpose designed by the author, and the notes cannot but be useful to the student of the Bible."—Argus, Portland.

"We think it will prove a valuable aid to a right understanding of the daily life of the Saviour."—Transcript, Portland.

"It will be of value to all students of the gospel."—Tribune, New York.

"The volume is useful as presenting the gospel narrative in graceful language and connected form."—Monthly Journal, Boston.

"This, it appears to us, would be an admirable volume for young people in schools, as well as for home perusal."—Press, Philadelphia.

"We are decidedly pleased with the book."—National Baptist, Philadelphia.

"Many will be surprised at how interesting the narrative in this form is. . . . The compiler has added some brief, judicious notes at the bottom of the pages."—Western Christian Advocate, Cincinnati.

"This volume is a valuable contribution to sacred literature."—Christian Herald, Cincinnati.

"It is an excellent idea, well calculated to facilitate the study of Jesus, and his wonderful gospels."—Free Nation, Cincinnati.

"Each event is related but once, and in its chronological order, as found in the narrative of the four Evangelists. The idea is a good one, and has been skilfully carried out by the compiler. The book will be found an admirable help to all who desire the clearest possible conception of the life and teachings of Jesus Christ."—Democrat, Concord, N. H.

WORKS PUBLISHED BY
FORDS, HOWARD, & HULBERT,
27 Park Place, New York.

Books for Home Reading or for S. S. Libraries.

John Howard Raymond: His Life and Letters. Edited by his Eldest Daughter. 1 vol., 8vo, 744 pp. With Steel Portrait. Cloth, beveled, $2.50.

To those who were fortunate enough to know the late President RAYMOND, of Vassar College, the fact that this volume contains the story of his life—his early associations, training, college-education, law-reading, conversion, theological study, and subsequent career as an educator in Madison University at Hamilton, in the University of Rochester, in the Brooklyn Polytechnic, and at Vassar—and that largely in his own words, will be sufficient guarantee of its attractiveness and value.

All thoughtful readers, who love to look into the interior of noble lives, to learn the secret of successful men, to be refreshed by contact with pure and lofty souls, will enjoy this record of a modest, unassuming, but thoroughly efficient and admirable life.

Contributed papers from various distinguished professional men throw light upon the causes of his success, and the high esteem in which his rare character and marked ability were held.

"Dr. Raymond's services in the cause of women's education have given lasting interest to his active life and useful work."—New York Tribune.

Sir Philip Sidney: His Life and Times. A Memorial of one whose name is a Synonym for every Manly Virtue. By Mrs. S. M. HENRY DAVIS. Illustrated with Three Steel Plates: Portrait of Sidney; View of Penshurst Castle; Fac-Simile of Sidney's Manuscript. 12mo. Cloth, beveled, stamped in ink and gold with Sidney's Coat-of-Arms, $1.50.

"Worthy of place as an English Classic."—Pittsburgh Commercial.

"There is scarcely any satisfactory memoir of him accessible to the general reader, and the author of this book has done a good service."—Phila. Inquirer.

"Compels the reader's attention, and leaves upon his mind impressions more distinct and lasting than the greatest historians are in the habit of making. . . . We long to see the story of Sidney's life take its proper place in the hearts of American youth."—Christian Union.

William Cullen Bryant's "Family Library of Poetry and Song." MEMORIAL EDITION. Being over 2000 Selections from more than 600 of the Best Poets—English, Scottish, Irish, and American—including Translations from Ancient and Modern Languages. Carefully Revised, and handsomely printed from entirely new plates. With an Introductory Treatise by Mr. BRYANT on the "Poets and Poetry of the English Language." Including JAMES GRANT WILSON's new Biography of Bryant. 8vo, 1065 pp. With full indexes of the Poems by Authors and by First Lines, and an elaborate Index of Quotations, containing above 12,000 references, by which any poetical quotation, of which the volume contains all that are recognized as famous, can be readily found. Illustrated with a New Steel Portrait of Mr. BRYANT, many Autographic Fac-Similes of Celebrated Poets, and Sixteen Full-page Wood Engravings—views of the HOMES OF AMERICAN POETS, and scenes illustrative of Poems in the book. Cloth, gilt, $5; library leather, $6; half morocco gilt, $7.50; turkey morocco, $10. (Subscription.)

"We know of no similar collection in the English language which, in copiousness and felicity of selection and arrangement, can at all compare with it."—N. Y. Times.

Bismarck: His Authentic Biography. Giving many of his Private Letters and Memoranda. From the German of J. G. HEZEKIEL. Historical Introduction by BAYARD TAYLOR, late U. S. Minister to Germany. Profusely Illustrated. 8vo, cloth, $3.50.

"Noteworthy for the fullness of its details and the great variety of hitherto unknown facts and incidents that are recorded in it."—N. Y. Sun.

"If, as is alleged, 'history is biography with the brains knocked out,' this portly volume may be appropriately called a chapter of history with the brains inserted, for the history of Prince Bismarck is really the modern history of Germany, and the key to that of modern Europe."—Detroit Post.

A Concise History of the American People. By Prof. JACOB HARRIS PATTON. Illustrated with Portraits, Maps, and Charts; and containing Marginal Dates, Statistical References, and a full Analytical Index. 1018 pp., 8vo, cloth, sprinkled edges, $3.75; half russia, $5.

"Mr. Patton's style is deserving of unqualified praise. It is pure, simple, strong, free from mannerism, and singularly easy and graceful. We anticipate for the work a cordial reception and extensive popularity among those who know how to prize the best books."—North American Review.

"Our wonder is that so much of American history could be comprised in one octavo volume; at the same time, it is graphically written, in clear, unostentatious style; our frequent use of it convinces us of its great accuracy."—N. Y. Observer.

HARRIET BEECHER STOWE.

DOMESTIC TALES.

My Wife and I; or, Harry Henderson's History. A Novel. Illustrated. 12mo, cloth, $1.50.

"Always bright, piquant, and entertaining, with an occasional touch of tenderness, strong because subtle, keen in sarcasm, full of womanly logic directed against unwomanly tendencies."—Boston Journal.

We and Our Neighbors: The Records of an Unfashionable Street. A Novel. Illustrated. 12mo, cloth, $1.50.

"Mrs. Stowe's style is picturesque, piquant, with just enough vivacity and vim to give the romance edge; and throughout there are delicious sketches of scenes, with bits of dry humor peculiar to her writings."—Pittsburgh (Pa.) Commercial.

Poganuc People: Their Loves and Lives. A Novel. Illustrated. 12mo, cloth, $1 50. (Recent.) In Mrs. Stowe's early inimitable style of New England scene and character.

"A fertile, ingenious, and rarely gifted writer of the purely American type, doing for the traditions of New England, and its salient social features, the same sort of service that Scott rendered to the Scotch and the history and scenery of his native land; that Dickens performed for London and its lights and shadows, its chronic abuses of every sort; the same service that Victor Hugo has done for Paris, in all its social state. Mrs. Stowe still keeps the field, and her harvests ever grow."—Titusville (Pa.) Herald.

The New Housekeeper's Manual and Handy Cook-Book.
A Guide to Economy and Enjoyment in Home Life.
(Gives nearly 500 choice and well-tested receipts.) By CATHARINE E. BEECHER and HARRIET BEECHER STOWE.
Nearly 600 pp., 8vo. Handsomely Illustrated. Cloth, $3.

"Considering the great variety of subjects over which it ranges, one is astonished to find, when he tests it by reference to any question on which he is personally well informed, how accurate is its teaching, and how trustworthy its authority."—Independent.

RELIGIOUS BOOKS.

Footsteps of the Master: Studies in the Life of Christ. With Illustrations and Illuminated Titles. 12mo. Choicely bound, Cloth, $1.50.

"A very sweet book of wholesome religious thought."—Evening Post.

"A congenial field for the exercise of her choice literary gifts and poetic tastes, her ripe religious experience, and her fervent Christian faith. A book of exceptional beauty and substantial worth."—Congregationalist (Boston).

Bible Heroines: Narrative Biographies of Prominent Hebrew Women in the Patriarchal, National and Christian Eras. Imperial Octavo. Richly Illustrated in Oil Colors. Elegantly bound. Cloth, $2.75; cloth, gilt edges, $3.25.

"The fine penetration, quick insight, sympathetic nature, and glowing narrative, which have marked Mrs. Stowe's previous works, are found in these pages, and the whole work is one which readily captivates equally the cultivated and the religious fervent nature."—Boston Commonwealth.

RAYMOND'S SUNDAY-SCHOOL CHRISTMAS STORIES And Other Good Things.

The Merry-Go-Round : Stories for Boys and Girls. By R. W. RAYMOND, Author of "The Man in the Moon," etc. Small 4to. Illustrated. Most of these stories were written for the Christmas celebrations of Plymouth Church Sunday-School, Brooklyn, of which Mr. Raymond was Superintendent for years. Cloth, gold back and side, $1.50.

"Amid the flood of holiday picture-books, the sizable boys and girls will be delighted to find one good old-fashioned, genuine story-book, with its full share of outside decoration and of spirited and artistic illustration, but the main attraction of which is its stories. Mr. Raymond's genius for story-telling is well known."—Brooklyn Union-Argus.

"It has, beside the interest of the stories that constitute its substance, a certain playful familiarity of tone which will go far to make its fortune with the young folk, who value good-fellowship above any other quality."—N. Y. Evening Post.

Camp and Cabin : Sketches of Life and Travel in the West. Little Classic style, red edges. Frontispiece. $1.

"Dr. Raymond's ten years as United States Mining Commissioner gave him free range among peaks and canyons, valleys and 'slopes,' from the Rocky Mountains to the Pacific, and his keen eye and witty pen have made brilliant use of this opportunity."—Cleveland (O.) Leader.

"Cannot fail to interest even a fastidious reader."—N. Y. Times.

Brave Hearts. An American Novel. Illustrations by Darley, Stephens, F. Beard, and Kendrick. 12mo, cloth, $1.

"A successful experiment. It is a tale of two regions—alternations between the quiet scenes of New England and the rough, boisterous, and dangerous life of an extempore Californian."—Philadelphia Evening Herald.

"A really good American novel. . . . The purpose of the book is indicated by its title. It is a representation of courage, in various forms of individual character."—Boston Globe.

"ATTRACTIVE AND WHOLESOME."

Unto the Third and Fourth Generation. A Study. By HELEN CAMPBELL, author of "The Ainslee Series," "His Grandmothers," etc. 16mo. Extra cloth, beveled boards, ink and gold stamping, $1.

"A work of thought and of dramatic power, and intended to teach a great lesson, but it does this in a way as mysterious as it is fascinating. It shows how the sin of the father haunted the mother and the son with a strange impression, and became the burden and blight of their lives. . . . At last a forced change of association brings relief from this self-imposed burden. Hope springs up and gives nerve to manly Christian effort, and the history, so shaded at its opening, closes in sunshine, serenity, and peace."—Baltimore Episcopal Methodist.

"The course of the tale is a pleasant surprise, for every one connects the title with the words of the commandment, that the sins of the father shall be visited upon the children. But with a sweeter and equally true philosophy the book aims to show that 'human love and God's love hold, and will hold, not alone to the third and fourth, but to all generations.'"—N. Y. Evening Mail.

BS2420.2.G48

The Gospel history : being a complete

Princeton Theological Seminary-Speer Library

1 1012 00053 0388